lambing in Keoldale and Balnakill should we get that portion. It is my opinion that they could do well without it.

29,362. Is it not the fact that the crofters in Durness have 10,000 acres of grazings?—No, they cannot have that.

29,363. The Chairman.—How often do your cows have calves?—They don't calve till they are about four years, sometimes; very few at the age of three.

29,364. They begin at the age of four, and during the life of the animal, what is its rate of having calves?—Very few of them have calves yearly; two or three years is more like it.

29,365. A calf yearly is uncommon?—Very uncommon.

29,366. And the average is two and three years?—Two and three.

JAMES SUTHERLAND, Crofter, Sangomore (63)—examined.

29,367. The Chairman.—What is the number of your lot?—Fifty-two.

29,368. I see the area is 3 acres 0 roods 29 poles arable, 1 acre 2 roods 36 poles outrun, and share in the common of 3200 acres. Former rent, £3, 13s. 3d.; fair rent, £3, 6s. Have you a share in Rispond?—Yes.

29,369. What do you pay for that?—16s. 6d.

29,370. Have you a statement?—Yes. The parish of Durness is a very wide one, extending from Moine House on the east to Gualainn House, and Sandwood Bay westwards. There are three large sheep farms, Eriboll, Balnakill, and Keoldale, with part of the sheep farm of Melness, and these, with a strip of crofters at the seaside at Laid and Durness, occupy the whole parish. The number of crofters is 86, and of cottars 6 to 12; some of whom have no land. The land in the possession of crofters is only a fraction of the land available for cultivation, the sheep farms having swallowed up the best portions of arable land, and the people evicted to the seaside to make room for the sheep. I am prepared from local knowledge of the parish to give the names of the townships on these sheep runs from which the people were driven to Durine and Sango and the seaside; the marks of their cultivation may yet be seen, and there is a strong desire on the part of the people of the parish to get back to those lands from which their ancestors were evicted. These evictions began nearly one hundred years ago, in Lord Reay's time, and the system of removing the people to the seaside continued till about the year 1840. We believe there is sufficient land in Durness for the people of Durness, as the Commissioners will see for themselves, when they go to inspect it; and we consider it a great hardship and injustice to be kept from the land, some of which is at our very doors.

29,371. You heard the evidence given by Donald Whyte, with regard to these lands of Balnakill and Keoldale and Eriboll?—Yes.

29,372. And do you concur in that evidence?—I do.

29,373. Is there anything further you would like to say besides his evidence and your own written statement?—No, nothing, unless I was questioned.

29,374. Mr Sutherland.—You mentioned that the evictions continued up till the year 1840?—Yes.

29,375. That is a later date than any other of the places in the county?—Well, I remember the time myself.

29,376. Do you remember the Durness riots?—I do, indeed, I was present at the time. I have been a boy at school following them when they were coming on to Durine.

29,377. And do you remember the circumstances that led up to them?—Oh, fine.

29,378. I have no desire to go into that now, nor, I suppose, have you?—No desire.

29,379. But I simply mention it in order to show the circumstances in which these places we saw here came to be in the position they are. You know Laid, Loch Eriboll, do you?—I know Laid fine.

29,380. Do you know where the majority of the people there came from?—They came from several places.

29,381. But the greater part of them?—A good many of them came from the Island and from Ceann-na-Beinne and these places, and some from Durine here, and some from Sango.

29,382. You would not remember, I suppose, the making of Rispond farm, do you?—No, I could not say that I do remember it properly. I remember the people being settled in these townships, but I can scarcely remember anything else.

29,383. Has it been a farm always within your memory, Rispond?—Yes, I may say it was.

29,384. It would have been formed then shortly before you were born?—No, it was not formed for sheep until somewhere about the year 1841, or thereabouts.

29,385. Then referring for a moment to that, was it not the attempt to clear out Sangobeg and Leirin that caused the riot?—Certainly.

29,386. The work was tried to be carried farther and the people objected, was that it?—Yes, that is it.

29,387. And they had to be left therefore?—Yes.

29,388. And was one of the reasons that the people would not consent to it that there were no holdings provided for them anywhere?—I can't say that; I don't remember that.

29,389. You did not hear that anything was offered to them, but Laid?—Some of them were sent to Leirin, and others to Sangobeg. There was some sort of place or other provided for them by the Duke.

29,390. Now what is your own opinion with regard to these places Sangobeg and Laid and these places; would it in your opinion be better to shift them out of there to better ground altogether?—Certainly, it would.

29,391. Do you think people never ought to have been planted there?—I think only a very few, one here and there.

29,392. Have you any means of comparing the old rent of Rispond with what is paid for it now?—No, that did not come under my consideration.

29,393. You don't know then how it stands?—No, I think it is quite as cheap now as it had been while let as a sheep farm.

29,394. That is independent of the great reductions of rent sheep farmers have got since?—Yes.

29,395. What was the old rental of Rispond, do you remember?—I think it was at the highest about £130; I am not exactly sure, but I think I am near the figure.

29,396. Then have you got the whole of Rispond, all the arable land and everything just as it stood before, with the farmer's house?—No.

29,397. But most of the valuable part of the farm: you have not got,—the house in the immediate neighbourhood, is that not so?—The house and lands in Rispond; Mr Jolly has the peninsula.

29,398. Do you know of your own knowledge all these places we have heard about along both sides of Eriboll and up Strathmore?—Yes, I have been two years living there.

29,399. And do you think that the land there is much better than the land down at Durness?—I am sure it is.

29,400. But the best land is in your own immediate neighbourhood, is that so?—Well, I would consider parts of the Balnakill and Keoldale land equally as good land as the Strathmore.

29,401. Can you explain to me why it is that the ordinary process is reversed in this neighbourhood? In other parts of the county, on the north coast, we find the people down on the shore; here we find them put up from the seashore; why is this? Why were they put up from the point instead of down to the point as at Strathy?—I am not prepared to answer that question.

29,402. Do you know Strathy Point?—Yes.

29,403. And do you know Far-out-head?—Yes.

29,404. Which is the better place?—Very near a comparison, very near equal.

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

James Sutherland.

29,405. And Balnakill?—Oh, Balnakill is a very good place.

29,406. Do you know why the ordinary rule was not followed here of putting the people down to the low places near the sea at Balnakill? Is it because the land was better in this place do you think?—I cannot say.

29,407. But it is there, isn't it?—The land is there for your inspection.

29,408. And in your opinion it is very good land?—I think it is very good.

29,409. Now with regard to the application that was spoken about here: I understand it is to the Crofters Commission the application was made?—Yes.

29,410. And this is not the Crofters Commission?—No, this is not the Crofters Commission.

29,411. Well, then, with regard to that application, you have no doubt it would be disposed of by the Crofters Commission in due course?—Well, if they would see proper.

29,412. But you don't want to mix the two Commissions, I suppose?—No.

29,413. You are of opinion that if the people got new holdings made, or the present farms of Balnakill and Keoldale added to their holdings, they would have no difficulty in putting stock on them?—What they have applied for at present to the Crofters Commission I am sure they would not be very long in stocking. I think they have overstocked already, and they only want grazing for their stock, so that their stock would be better off; it will soon deteriorate in price; and they have good sheep.

29,414. Have they much difficulty in managing the farm they got?—No, the committee manages it just on the same lines as any other sort of farm, as a club farm at any rate.

29,415. And do the committee do it to the general satisfaction?—Oh, to the general satisfaction, of course; they give fair play to everyone.

29,416. And you have no difficulty in agreeing among yourselves as to the way in which it should be done?—Not the slightest. Of course, there is always somebody who has some growl.

29,417. Mr Gordon.—You have a committee just now?—Yes.

29,418. That committee would be quite sufficient to manage the stock suppose it was under a club farm, would it not?—We elect a new committee every three years according to Act of Parliament.

29,419. The Chairman.—Do you know what the poor rates here are?—I pay in all £4, 2s. 6d., and I pay something about 8s. 1d. of rates between poor rates, registration, and so forth.

29,420. Do you know how much of that sum is poor rate?—It is not in my mind in the meantime. It is under 2s. in the £ at any rate. I pay 11d. per £.

29,421. How would you compare the number of paupers here with the number of paupers down at Laid?—I am not prepared to answer that question.

29,422. Mr Macaulay, Solicitor, Golspie.—I suppose you agree with the last witness as to the ground being somewhat overstocked in the meantime?—Certainly.

29,423. And if extensions of grazings were given, I suppose the tenants would be prepared to meet any matter in the way of rent or anything of that sort?—They have been doing so formerly. Durness has been a place that always paid its rent very well until of late, I don't know why. I think it is because our rent was not taken up exactly at the usual time, when of course the people through the winter and hard spring would need to use the money somehow or other; and that is the way the rent was not paid.

29,424. Then the rent is considerably behind in the meantime?—Only one year's rent; but there may be a few more in arrears, but very few.

29,425. But there will be another year's rent due at Martinmas?—Yes, two year's rents, meeting at Martinmas first.

29,426. Did it not occur to you and other tenants that it would be well to sell off some of this overstocking in order to pay these rents?—Certainly, but what could we do. There were no markets for our stock, and any stock that we could sell we have sold.

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

29,427. So that notwithstanding that you have sold considerably you are overstocked yet?—Certainly. We sold our wedder lambs and we sold the cast of the old sheep.

James Sutherland.

29,428. But why could you not sell this overstock?—Because we could not get any price for it. We are not overstocked very much in sheep, but we are overstocked in cattle, because we have no provender for them.

29,429. Is it not the fact that the large sheep farmers here turn off their sale cast whether the prices are up or down?—Certainly, and we have done the same. We sold our cast stock for 15s. 6d., while two or three years back we got 28s. 6d., for them. That is a great reduction.

29,430. The Chairman.—But you did sell?—Oh, yes.

29,431. Mr Macaulay.—But you did not sell sufficient to bring you down to the carrying power of your ground?—We could not get a market for them: we could get nobody to take them at any price this year.

29,432. The Chairman.—You tried to sell, but could not get a market?—We tried to sell, but could not get them sold.

ROBERT MACKAY, Crofter and Blacksmith, Sangomore (60)—examined.

Robert Mackay.

29,433. The Chairman.—I see your area is 3 acres 0 roods 22 poles arable, no outrun, share in the common of 3200 acres; old rent £3, 14s.; fair rent £3, exclusive of the enlargement?—Yes.

29,434. And with the enlargement it is £3, 16s. 6d.?—Yes.

29,435. You have a written statement I see?—Yes.

29,436. Kindly read it?—Sheriff Brand and gentlemen, I have been appointed delegate by a numerously attended meeting of the people of this parish to give evidence before your honours. Therefore, I have to state briefly that perhaps in all your travels in Sutherland you have not seen such an extent of low-lying land fit for cultivation as you can see in this parish, in the farms of Balnakill and Keoldale. A wide extent of the land now out of cultivation abounds with fine limestone beds covered with rich clay soil, and stretches from Balnakill southward, embracing a part of Keoldale farm up the Kyle side as far as the Big Bridge. On the east side of the Grudy river, and in proximity to the river on the west side you will see two fertile townships called Acharn and Grudy: all these places had at one time been populated. So there is a keen desire on the part of the people to get back to these lands, from which their forebears had been evicted, provided they can get the land on equitable terms.

29,437. Mr Sutherland.—Do you also agree with the evidence that has been given by Mr Sutherland and Mr Whyte?—Yes.

29,438. You have a local knowledge of the place, you belong to this place, don't you?—Well, I do belong to the place.

29,439. And you have a perfect knowledge of all the places to which they referred in their evidence?—Yes, I know the places well.

29,440. And you yourself gave additional evidence regarding the quality of the land in Keoldale and Balnakill?—Yes.

29,441. And you agree also with the evidence they have given as to the desirability of getting new holdings to relieve the congestion here, do you?—Yes.

29,442. And you think also, with them, that it could be done under circumstances that give a prospect of being successful?—Yes.

29,443. The Chairman.—Are the holdings which you and those whom you represent wish, self-sustaining holdings where the crofters could live without having to go and labour, or are they holdings where you would live partly by the holding and partly by wages?—I don't understand very well.

29,444. I will put it in another form. You have mentioned a desire on the part of the crofters whom you represent to get new holdings?—Yes.

29,445. Are these new holdings which you have in view, holdings where the occupant would live by his holding, or where he would live partly by his holding and partly by wages from labour or fishing? [No answer.]

29,445*a*. Do you mean holdings that would occupy the whole time of the tenant, or holdings where he would partly occupy his time on the holding, and partly earn wages outside?—Occupy part of his time on the holding and partly with wages.

29,446. Is that your idea?—Yes.

29,447. And is that the idea of those whom you represent?—Oh, I think so, unless they would get as much holding as would keep them going always that they could live on.

29,448. My question implies that. Are the new holdings you have in view, holdings large enough to enable them to live by the holdings, or would you rather have holdings small in size, but larger than what you have, and which would be aided by means of outside labour?—Most of them would rather have a holding that they could live on without wages.

29,449. Have you a good number of fishermen along this coast?—Most of them are fishermen, for it is by fishing they live; the crofts don't keep them.

29,450. Now, do some of these men wish new holdings for fishermen? Is there any desire for such holdings, that is to say fishermen's holdings of a very small size suitable for fishing, and where the occupant would live mainly by the sea?—It is my opinion that the whole of the fishermen would leave the fishing if they could get holdings that would keep them going.

29,451. And give up the fishing altogether?—And give up the fishing altogether.

29,452. Is this a dangerous coast for fishing?—It is at some times of the year.

29,453. And is there a want of harbour accommodation, or have you enough of it for fishing boats?—I don't think it the best place in the district for fishermen; there is only one right harbour in it, that is Rispond.

29,454. Is that the only suitable harbour?—Yes, for the fishermen along this side.

29,455. And is it a good harbour?—It is a good harbour if there were a good pier in it.

29,456. But there is no pier?—No pier.

29,457. Does it protect from all winds, or only from some?—It protects very much from the north wind.

29,458. Is that what is called Rispond Bay?—Yes.

29,459. Is there any pier there at present?—Yes.

29,460. But you think it is not a sufficient pier?—No.

29,461. And you would be in favour of something being done to make it a pier better adapted for the purpose in view?—Yes.

29,462. Mr Gordon.—If there was a pier erected at Rispond would that be a good place for fishermen's houses in the neighbourhood?—Well, I don't think so.

29,463. Then though you had a pier there the fishermen would have some distance to travel to it?—Yes, the nearest is about two miles I think.

ALEXANDER SUTHERLAND, Crofter's Son, Durine (32)—examined.

29,464. The Chairman.—Is your father the occupant of a holding?—My mother.

29,465. Is she Widow Barbara Sutherland?—Yes.

29,466. Her rent is £3, 6s. 2d.; is it the old rent?—Yes.

29,467. I see the acreage is 5 acres 1 rood 8 poles arable; and 2 acres 1 rood 1 pole outrun; old rent, £3, 6s. 2d.; fixed rent £3, 10s. Does that include Rispond?—No.

29,468. Then you pay 16s. 6d. for Rispond, making £4, 6s. 6d.?—Yes.

29,469. And you have a share of the 3200 acres?—Yes.

29,470. Were you appointed as a delegate?—Yes.

29,471. At a public meeting?—From the township of Durine.

29,472. Do you only represent that township, or do you represent it and some others. (No answer.)

29,473. You heard the evidence given by the previous witnesses, especially by Donald Whyte?—Yes.

29,474. And do you concur in that evidence?—Yes.

29,475. Does it set forth your views with sufficient fulness?—Oh, yes.

29,476. And have you any addition to make?—Very little except this. (Produces a statement.)

29,477. If you have a statement, read it please.—As a delegate appointed to appear before your Royal Commission, appointed to inquire whether any land is in this parish capable of being cultivated to profit for small tenants, there is enough of land on the neighbouring sheep farms which were formerly occupied by small tenants, and if added to the present crofts would be of profit to the crofters. An addition of our present holdings would enable the crofters to get thatching for their houses as no thatch grows on our present pasture.

29,478. Is there a great want of thatch?—There is; there is no thatch to be got.

29,479. How do you obtain such thatch as you get?—We get permission for rushes on some of the remotest parts of the farm, but there is plenty thatch growing, and we cannot get it.

29,480. On the farm of Keoldale?—Yes. Some get permission.

29,481. Do you get permission?—Yes.

29,482. And do you pay anything for it?—No.

29,483. You have just the cutting and carrying home?—Yes, and that same is enough from the places we have to get it.

29,484. How far have you to carry it?—About two miles on our back before we come to the road in some places.

29,485. And how far on the road?—About eight miles.

29,485A. Between nine and ten miles altogether?—Yes.

29,486. And how often do you require to go in a year to get the thatch?—We have to go every year for places, but if we could get bent we could go every two years.

29,487. Do some get bent?—Very few.

29,488. Is there plenty bent on Balnakill and Keoldale?—Yes.

29,489. A good deal of the land is sandy perhaps?—Yes, there is a portion sandy on the seaside.

29,490. There might be some danger in turning it up for being blown away?—It could not be turned up.

29,491. It is better as it is?—Yes.

29,492. And in the event of your getting land on these farms of that kind, would you leave it very much as it is?—No, there is plenty outside that.

29,493. But that kind of land is best as it is?—Yes.

29,494. For grazing purposes?—Yes, or thatching.

29,495. Mr Sutherland.—One question with regard to the thatch. This getting of thatch is a matter of favour?—Yes, it is a matter of favour, and great favour too.

29,496. And it is used in that way?—Yes.

29,497. And you complain of that?—Yes, there is a protest to the shops for going to the rushes.

29,498. Your general statement with regard to that, is that you are compelled to go far away for rushes which you have to carry on your backs, while bent that would be better thatch and quite adjacent to you, is made a matter of favour on the part of the farmer?—Yes.

29,499. Are you of opinion that you have a legal right to thatch?—I don't know.

29,500. You don't know the state of the law?—No.

29,501. As a matter of fact and usage, have you always been permitted to get the nearest thatch for your houses?—We used to get it at one time, but not now.

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

Alexander Sutherland.

29,502. Would there be any danger to the links from cutting the bent the way it is used for thatch?—Not the least; it would only grow the better.

29,503. You would not interfere with the roots at all?—No.

29,504. And it is the roots that are of use in binding the sand?—Yes.

29,505. And the cutting of it you say would only improve the bent?—Just improve the bent.

29,506. Make it stronger?—Yes.

29,507. Have you brought this matter of thatch before the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

29,508. And did they give any decision regarding it?—Not a thing, they left it as it was.

29,509. Did they make any statement with regard to it?—No.

29,510. Did they tell you they had no power to deal with it?—No, they did not.

29,511. So you don't know whether they have or not?—They kept us all on the quiet till they got out.

29,512. Did they give you any deliverance at all with regard to the thatch?—No.

29,513. The Chairman.—Was the application with regard to the thatch made in the fair rent applications?—Yes.

29,514. Was there any application presented to regulate the thatch, to make up a scheme for regulating the supply of thatch?—No.

29,515. Mr Macaulay.—In your opinion is that bent upon these links valuable during times of snow for sheep-feeding purposes?—I don't think so.

29,516. You are of opinion that it is not?—That it is not.

Roderick Campbell.

RODERICK CAMPBELL, Crofter's Son, Durine (46) —examined.

29,517. The Chairman.—Who is the crofter in your case?—Widow Mary Campbell.

29,518. The area is 4 acres 3 roods 1 pole arable, and 0 acres 2 roods 22 poles outrun; the old rent was £4, 11s. 1d., and the fixed rent seems to be the same, £4, 11s. 1d?—Yes.

29,519. You have a share of Rispond?—Yes.

29,520. And that falls to be added, 16s. 6d.?—Yes.

29,521. Making £5, 7s. 7d. altogether?—Yes.

29,522. Have you a written statement?—Yes.

29,523. We will be glad to hear it.—As a delegate from the township of Durine, one of our grievances is that owing to the smallness of our holdings we can give no rest to the land. You can easily see that there is abundance of what was once arable land in our neighbourhood which could easily be divided amongst us. Also we are greatly in need of a cow park; there are two parks adjoining our crofts which formerly belonged to the crofters and ought to be returned to them with as little delay as possible. All the land in the parish worth cultivating, and worth for pasture, is occupied by sheep farmers. It is true enough about the township of Durine that there is scarcity of milk in it for the want of pasture.

29,524. You are appearing here as a delegate?—Yes.

29,525. Along with Whyte and David Mackenzie?—Yes.

29,526. You have heard the evidence of the previous witnesses?—Yes.

29,527. Do you concur in that evidence?—Yes.

29,528. Now, you mentioned particularly the matter of giving no rest to the land?—Yes.

29,529. That, I think you said, was due to the smallness of the holdings?—Yes.

29,530. Have you tried to cultivate by rotation?—Yes, but it was too small to allow of that.

29,531. The area is too small?—Yes.

29,532. We have found in some quarters where the area was very small that rotation was followed out: have you tried rotation?—Yes.

29,533. But you found you could not manage it?—It was too small, I tried it every second year myself.

29,534. And you had to give it up, do you mean?—No, I am continuing it yet. Durness, Sutherlandshire.

29,535. Well, continuing it even on the size of holding you have, have you found it an advantage?—Yes, I find it an advantage; when it is two years out under clover I get a better crop off it. Roderick Campbell.

29,536. Even in your small holding it is more profitable to have rotation than go on cultivating every year?—Yes.

29,537. There is a perceptible difference on the value of the crop?—Yes.

29,538. Is rotation a common thing amongst you, or is it the exception?—The exception; there are two or three among us who work it.

29,539. Speaking for yourself individually, are you desirous of getting a new settlement, or an extension of grazing?—An extension.

29,540. In what form?—Arable and grazing.

25,541. And to remain in your present holding?—Yes.

29,542. Where would that extension in your judgment naturally come from?—From both Balnakill and Keoldale.

29,543. Do they both march with you?—Balnakill marches with us, and part of the pasture of Keoldale marches with us.

29,544. The central farm of Balnakill marches with you and part of the Keoldale pasture?—Yes.

29,545. Have you anything to add to what has already been laid before us, or do you rest content with concurring with the evidence given?—Yes.

29,546. Mr Sutherland.—You mentioned about a cow park?—Yes.

29,547. Where was that cow park?—On the Balnakill farm now; it was once the crofters, but it was taken from them.

29,548. About what time?—About forty-eight years ago, or thirty-eight, I am not exactly sure.

29,549. And had they got that cow park for a long time before then?—Yes, they had it until it was forced from them.

29,550. And added to the large farm of Balnakill?—Yes.

29,551. What is the size of the park?—It was a very large park.

29,552. Is it 10 acres?—More than that. I am sure it is over 80 acres.

29,553. And you say that down to forty-eight years ago the crofters had that?—Yes.

29,554. Did you ever hear that their rent was taken down when the park was taken?—Never, we pay for that cow park to this very day: we never received any reduction.

29,555. What use is it put to by the Balnakill farmer, is it being cultivated?—No, grazing.

29,556. It was taken, you say, from the small tenants and given to the big farm of Balnakill?—Yes.

29,557. And would it be of great use to the village of Durine if they got it?—It would be the best thing they could get. The cows have to travel every day through the summer eight miles, four going and four coming, before they can get anything that is worth eating.

29,558. And it is adjoining the holdings of the people?—Yes.

29,559. You could show us that park?—I will show you every inch of it.

29,560. The Chairman.—You say your cows travel four miles?—Yes.

29,561. Where do they travel to?—Over the other side of Loch Meadaidh.

29,562. You mean to the south side of Loch Meadaidh?—Yes.

29,563. There is good grazing there?—Pretty fair.

29,564. How many cows go there during the grazing season?—I cannot say how many go.

29,565. A large number?—Oh, yes, the whole of the Durine crofters' cows go there.

29,566. They don't travel that every day?—Every day they go out there.

29,567. And are they going there now?—No, not now.

29,568. Up to what time this year do the cows go there?—During the summer months, three or four months in summer.

29,569. And is that the only cow grazing you have?—That is the only good grazing we have.

29,570. What extent of grazing have you there?—Just the hill side.

29,571. It is at a low level?—Yes.

29,572 Round the fringe of the Loch?—Just so.

29,573. Now you mentioned a park; is that park immediately to the south of Balnakill steading?—Yes, just there.

29,574. Between Loch Crois-a'-phuill and the township of Durine?—Yes.

29,575. There is a road through the middle of it, is there?—Yes.

29,576. That is the direct road from the Balnakill steading to the village of Durness?—Yes.

29,577. And do you say it is 80 acres in extent?—I am certain sure it is all that.

29,578. Does the corner of that park, the south-east corner, march with the township lands of Durine?—Yes.

29,579. Mr Gordon.—Does this park lie between Balnakill and the glebe?—No.

29,580. The Chairman.—It is to the north of the manse? [Mr Maciver.—To the east of the manse.]

29,581. Mr Forsyth.—Are there some Highland cows in it just now?—Yes.

29,582. Mr Gordon.—It is on the west side of the Laxford road?—Yes.

29,583. What is the park used for just now?—For pasture.

29,584. Is it used for any special purpose, such as a ram park, or just a cattle park?—Just a cattle park.

29,585. Mr Macaulay, Solicitor, Golspie.—Do you know who was tenant of Balnakill at the time this park was added to that farm?—Dunlop, I think it was.

29,586. And do you happen to know the circumstances under which that addition was made?—It was taken from them; they were bound to let it go: it was taken from them by force.

29,587. Did the crofters get anything in return for it?—Nothing.

29,588. You are certain of that?—I am certain of that.

Kenneth Sutherland, Cottar, Sangomore (73). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

29,589. The Chairman—Do you pay any rent?—I pay rent out of the house, but I gave it up.

29,590. Gave up the house, or gave up the rent-paying?—The rent; I stopped paying rent for the house.

29,591. How long is it since you stopped paying rent for the house?—Two years.

29,592. What was the rent when you paid a rent?—10s. When the Commission was here they asked me if I paid rent, and I told them that I had heretofore, but that I was now going to stop it as I was paying two rents.

29,593. How many cottars are in Sangomore?—In the village of Sangomore I know of none except another and myself.

29,594. Have you any land at all?—I have none except a small bit that I have from my brother. My father was evicted out of Durine to a common pasture, and they reclaimed so much of that common pasture. As soon as I trenched it I got married, and my younger brother got that land that I reclaimed, and I was the oldest in the family.

29,595. Are you anxious to get a new holding?—Yes, indeed, very much, and I need it badly.

29,596. Mr Sutherland.—Would you be ready to take a new holding if you got it?—Money makes money, and I should certainly do my duty.

29,597. You would be quite prepared to undertake the labour of making another home?—Yes, to-morrow.

29,598. And where do you think a good holding could be got which you would like to occupy?—Yes, certainly, a very good idea to get a piece of Nubeg on the Keoldale farm where my ancestors were.

29,599. Where is Nubeg?—On the Keoldale farm.

George Campbell, Fisherman, Laid (52). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

29,600. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—The croft is in my mother's name.

29,601. What is her name?—Widow Donald Campbell.

29,602. Did your father die recently?—Yes.

29,603. And now the croft is in your mother's name?—Yes.

29,604. What is her full name?—Widow Margaret Swanson or Campbell.

29,605. The area is 2 acres 0 roods 20 poles arable, and 155 acres 3 roods 22 poles of outrun, the common pasture is 2300 acres; the old rent was £1, and the fixed rent is £1, 5s.?—Yes.

29,606. Did you get additional grazing?—No.

29,607. Have you a written statement?—I would rather speak in Gaelic.

29,608. Did you bring a paper with you?—No.

29,609. Were you appointed at a meeting of the crofters to come here as a delegate?—Yes, as one delegate.

29,610. And was Thomas Mackay another?—Thomas Mackay is the other.

29,611. Are the Laid crofters overcrowded?—Yes, and the place in which they are is not worth.

29,612. Would they be willing, if some of them were removed to better holdings, for the remainder to occupy additions from the crofts vacated?—I suppose so, but very few indeed would remain.

29,613. Would they like all to be shifted together?—Yes, that is what their opinion is.

29,614. Is that because the land they occupy at present is exceedingly poor?—Yes, because it is worth nothing at all, not worth labouring.

29,615. Does it consist almost exclusively of moss?—Moss, and very hard rocky stones, no clay at all in the place.

29,616. I gather from your evidence that the people have no attachment to the place?—No, and never had. Those who came there first were evicted from the Strath as far away as Strathnaver.

29,617. Where, in your opinion, could new settlements be got?—Strathmore is altogether vacant, and the townships on Eriboll farm from which the crofters have been in the past evicted.

29,618. What were the names of these townships?—Badlehamhish, Heilem, Achlochy, Arnaboll, Badmheon. A man has told me to-day, who knew, that there were three times as many people on Strathmore as was told you at Tongue.

29,619. At any rate the land there, in your opinion, is very much more suitable than the land you have got?—Yes, much better.

29,620. Are the soil and the climate both better?—The climate is much the same, but the land is certainly better.

29,621. Suppose there was enough of accommodation in Strathmore for the whole of the crofters of Laid, would they be willing to go bodily to Strathmore?—I am sure they would, on a fair rent; that is their opinion and desire.

29,622. What stock have you yourself?—Six head of cattle and eight sheep, that is all.

29,623. I must ask you this question, how do you make your livelihood?—We are working at the fishing, such as can fish; away at the herring fishing on the east coast.

29,624. Do you depend more upon fishing and labour than upon your small holding?—It is the fishing that has been keeping us alive, and lobster fishing. The children and women work at whelks.

29,625. Mr Sutherland.—Would you go over these old townships again?—Badlehamhish, Heilim, Ach-

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

George Campbell.

lochy, Arnabol, Badmheain, Achgharasaid, Achavuillin, Strathbeg, Polla, Eilean-a'-Choirie. That is the land we are seeking.

29,626. Why are you building such a fine fence down there?—There was really no use in us labouring that land at all unless we protect it from the cattle.

29,627. Are you not of opinion that the dyke is much more valuable than the land?—I know that bit that I erected there is worth three times the value of the land.

29,628. Would you yourself be willing to go to a good holding?—Oh, yes, indeed.

29,629. And you are speaking also for your neighbours?—Yes, the people are not lazy who would create such improvements in such a place.

29,630. Were you born in Laid yourself?—Yes.

29,631. Where did your parents come from?—My father was born in Strathnaver and my mother on Nubeg on Keoldale.

29,632. Do you know the name of the township of Strathnaver your father came from?—Skail.

29,633. Do you know Skail yourself?—I never saw it.

29,634. Do you remember about what time Laid was formed as a township?—About forty-eight years ago.

29,635. Were there any houses, do you know, there at all before?—There was a man told me to-day that a man came there from Strathmore, and that the ground was so poor that no objections were taken to his remaining there, and for years he occupied that place without any interference.

29,636. And do you think it was for the improvement of the condition of the people that they were sent to Laid?—It is a very wrong thing to say that the people were removed from the straths to the seashore to better their circumstances; and the best proof of that statement is for people to go and examine the land of Laid, and to compare it with the land of the straths from which they came.

29,637. And you think that, in the face of these facts, there is no use of arguing the question?—Anything that I can say here will be very weak indeed unless you gentlemen will go and see the land that we occupy and compare it with Strathnaver.

29,639. Do you work at white fishing at all?—No.

29,640. Are there any men in your township who carry on the trade of fishermen throughout the whole year?—No.

29,641. Have you boats that would suit for the white fishing?—No, to enable us to go outside.

29,642. Are there any men in your township who would be inclined to follow the profession of fishermen if they had boats?—I don't think it; they are getting tired of fishing.

29,643. Would that not be in consequence of their not being able to go outside to the best fishing ground?—No, I don't think so; my impression is that there are six times as many engaged in the fishing as ought to be.

29,644. The moving of any members of the township to a proper harbour would not be what the people would like?—No, that is not their desire.

29,645. Suppose that a part of them were moved over to the opposite side of the loch to Heilem, where there is a good harbour, would they be inclined to carry on and prosecute the profession of fishermen there?—No, I don't think so.

29,646. They don't care for fishing as a trade?—No, there is no market here for fishing.

29,647. They would rather have crofts?—Yes.

29,648. The Chairman.—Can you tell me how many paupers there are in Laid?—I cannot tell.

29,649. Are there a number?—Yes, and I suppose they will soon be all paupers if left there.

29,650. Is this the state of matters that owing to the poverty of the township, the crofters have very often to help each other: one with a little more food feels obliged to give assistance to another with less?—Yes, at times.

29,651. Mr Macaulay.—Would these tenants of Laid, if moved up to Strathmore and given holdings there, be able to put up buildings and fences?—I don't think that many of them would be able to do so.

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

George Campbell.

THOMAS MACKAY, Fisherman, Laid (48)—examined.

Thomas Mackay.

29,652. The Chairman.—Who holds the croft?—My mother-in-law.

29,653. What is her name?—Widow Isabel Sutherland or Mackintosh.

29,654. The area is 2 acres 1 rood 23 poles arable, and 16 acres 3 roods 3 poles of outrun; the old rent was £1, 0s. 6d., and the fixed rent is £1, 5s.?—Yes.

29,655. Have you a written statement?—I have not.

29,656. You heard the evidence given by Campbell?—Yes.

29,657. And do you concur in that evidence?—I do. I was specially appointed by the people of Laid to explain their grievance from the beginning of the township.

29,658. You wish to make a statement?—I wish to say a few words if your honours allow it.

29,659. Yes, certainly.—Previous to the people settling down in Laid it was under sheep. The sheep pined and died, and they were forced to withdraw them at a considerable loss. Afterwards there was a practical forester consulted so that there might be a plantation put there. Well, it was the same agreement, that the ground was too cold and incapable of producing anything of that sort. That was also withdrawn, and the only remedy was to put crofters in it. Not a green patch on it whatever, only heather, and they began toiling a little bit, and they were going to get a recompense from the Duchess of Sutherland in the shape of oatmeal or money. Some of them got a boll of meal, some of them got half a boll, or as low as a stone of meal. Well, according to their work, certainly, they were paid. As they had made the improvements they got the promise of seven years' standing at one shilling of rent. Before this time expired they were raised to 14s., from 14s. to £1, from £1 to £1, 15s., against which they appealed and the 15s. was withdrawn. The only scheme for that was then that if the crofter died, the son coming into possession, the 15s. was clapped upon the son for entering into the rent-roll, and that continued till the Crofters Commission has taken it off some of them. One crofter still on Laid is paying the 15s. upon a house and a lot that cost not a penny to the Duke of Sutherland. The land of Laid is worthless; it goes away before the gales like chaff before the wind. By rain and westerly winds it is wasting away. I am about fifteen years on Laid, and I say the half of Laid has all vanished into Loch Eriboll. As to the statement about the straths and the available lands for crofters to settle in, I agree with the statements given by previous witnesses.

29,660. You are described to us as a fisherman. Do you carry on the occupation of a fisherman now?—I do.

29,661. What fishing do you mainly prosecute?—I go to the east coast, to the herring fishing. I am sometimes successful and other times not.

29,662. You go as a hired hand?—Yes.

29,663. You have no boat of your own?—No.

29,664. Have any of the Laid crofters boats?—Small boats not capable of going out of the Loch.

29,665. Catching fish round the doors?—Catching fish round the doors.

29,666. Have you been fairly successful in recent years as a fisherman?—The last two years pretty fair, but last year was a complete failure.

29,667. And how have you been this year?—This year it was a failure so far as I am concerned.

29,668. Then, do the crofters of Laid mainly depend on the sea for their means of livelihood?—On the sea entirely; there is no other labour convenient.

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

Thomas Mackay.

29,669. What crops are grown at Laid? Do they grow corn and potatoes?—Corn and potatoes and barley.

29,670. Any turnips?—A few turnips, very little, because the ground is so light, and the sun shines upon it when the turnip is planted into it, a gale of wind overturns the drill and it is all waste.

29,671. Many parts of the soil are sandy?—None whatever.

29,672. What are they?—White flint and moss. The water bursts in between the white flint and the moss; it bursts on the surface and overtakes the crop, taking the potatoes sometimes away down below.

29,673. And do you sometimes lose entire crops?—Parts of it.

29,674. Mr Sutherland.—Are you a native of the county?—I am.

29,675. And have you lived long in Laid?—About fifteen years.

29,676. You know all you are speaking of by personal knowledge and experience?—I do.

29,677. You have given a very interesting historical account of the rise and growth of this interesting settlement. You said that sheep pined and died, trees would not grow, so then it was planted with another crop?—Another crop.

29,678. Transferred from another place?—At no loss to the estate.

29,679. Have you any idea how much rental is extracted out of that miserable place?—£22, 19s. 6d., or something like that, from the eighteen crofters.

29,680. You have mentioned also a progressive rise of rental there?—I have.

29,681. Have you any idea yourself what you are paying £1, 5s. or £1, 15s. for?—I can't see it, only for peats and water.

29,682. Are you not rather inclined to think you ought to be paid for living there rather than anything else?—That is my opinion.

29,683. Did you apply for an extension of holdings from the Crofters Commission?—We have.

29,684. What did you ask for?—Eilean-a'-Choirie.

29,685. The green island near your holdings?—Yes.

29,686. And you did not get it?—Did not get it.

29,687. You mentioned with regard to the soil of your holdings that it was so light that the wind drifted it away?—That is the case.

29,688. And that it is a shallow peat moss resting upon flinty rock?—Yes.

29,689. Is that the reason why trees would not grow there?—No clay to subsist the roots.

29,690. Is that why the sheep would not thrive upon it?—That is the reason, only heather kept for grouse.

29,691. I need not ask you any further questions on the subject, because I suppose the planting of a colony there would be defended or justified by no person?—Oh, it is useless.

29,692. Mr Gordon.—You speak about the wind blowing away your turnips when you sowed them. Does the wind blow up and down the valley there?—It comes with blasts off the mountains into the lochs.

29,693. It does not blow either up or down?—Not as it does in low lands, squalls we call it. We are caught pretty often in the loch with them.

29,694. I was going to suggest that if it blew up and down the loch you could drill your turnips alongside the loch?—Not practicable, it would not work.

29,695. The light ground is against it?—Yes, because we may get westerly wind or easterly in a blast; the wind is all round the compass in two seconds.

29,696. A sort of whirlwind?—Whirlwind.

George Campbell.

GEORGE CAMPBELL, Crofter, Durine (61).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

29,697. The Chairman.—I see your area is 4 acres 1 rood 9 poles arable, and 1 acre 3 roods 17 poles of outrun, with a share in 3200 acres of hill?—Yes.

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

George Campbell

29,698. Your rent was £2, 14s. reduced to £2, 11s.?—Yes.

29,699. Have you a written statement?—No.

29,700. Did you hear the evidence given by Donald Whyte and David Mackenzie?—Yes.

29,701. And do you concur in their evidence?—I agree with them.

29,702. Does the evidence given by them fully set forth your own views on the matter in hand?—Yes, about that.

Evander Maciver.

EVANDER MACIVER, Factor, Scourie, (82)—examined.

29,703. The Chairman.—You are factor on the Scourie management of the Duke of Sutherland's Estates?—I am.

29,704. How long have you been factor?—I have been here since Whitsunday 1845.

29,705. Would you kindly read your statement.—

	Acres.	Acres.
The Parish of Durness by the Ordnance Survey contains in all about		140,000
Of which water foreshore is about	6,000
And there is in the Tongue Management about	29,000
		35,500
Leaving in the Scourie Management about		104,500

Which appear to be thus occupied:—

1. Sheep Farms,	75,000
2. Forest,	18,200
3. Crofters,	11,800

The rental of them in 1892 was:—

1. Sheep Farm,	£2,075
2. Forest,	865
3. Crofters,	287
		£3,227

The contents may thus be divided:—

	Farm.	Arable.	Outrun.	Moor Pasture.	Total.
1	Balnakeil,	120	700	24,180	25,000
2	Keoldale (in Durness),	90	640	21,770	22,500	and in Eddrachillis 6000 acres.
3	Eriboll,	150	70	27,280	27,500
4	Forest,	...	...	...	18,200

The rents of the Durness crofters were slightly under the present rent in 1845 when I came to Sutherland; the rents of the sheep farms were more than doubled up to 1872, but since 1882 there has been a large reduction, about 40 per cent. from what they rose to, and the tendency continues downward.

The Duke of Sutherland expended a considerable amount in reclaiming land about twenty years ago on Eriboll farm, 65 acres were reclaimed, but it turned out badly; it was a poor subject, but was beside the old arable on that farm; and although farmed well and richly, the crops produced are inferior.

His Grace also expended in reclamation at Keoldale, and at Lerin, Sangomore, and Durine, but the results in all these cases were disappointing.

The three farms of Balnakeil, Keoldale, and Eriboll afford a considerable amount of employment in Durness.

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

Evander Maciver.

The rates in Highland parishes are a serious burden to the landlord and tenants. In 1892 there was paid by the Duke of Sutherland no less an amount than £518, 16s. 7d. for poor and education, and county assessment in Durness. The population by last census was under 1000, but were it not for rates from the shootings, fishings, and forest, the rates would be higher on each tenant than they are.

The Crofters Commissioners visited Durness in 1890, and fixed fair rents for all the crofts in the parish. The result of their labours was the reduction of £2, 13s. on the rental. They cancelled £15, 17s. 9d. of arrears and ordered £30, 3s. 9d. to be paid, most of which is still due. Since their visit, I regret to say, the rents have been paid irregularly. There is now an arrear of £234, 14s., and the rent of the current year, for year to Whitsunday 1894, is due next month in addition.

The Parish of Eddrachillis by the Ordnance Survey is estimated exclusive of water, foreshore, &c. to contain 135,551 acres.

The parish is thus occupied :—

	Acres.
1. Sheep Farms, &c.,	27,551
2. Forests,	77,800
3. Crofters,	30,200
Total,	135,551

The rental of the above in 1892 was :—

1. Sheep Farms,	£371
2. Forests,	1,380
3. Crofters,	607
Total,	£2,358

The contents may be thus divided :—

	Farm.	Arable.	Outrun.	Moor Pasture.	Total.
		Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.
1	Duart Beg,	4	20	3,776	3,800
2	Scourie,	35	15	5,090	5,140
3	Sandwood,	8	10	1,922	1,940
4	Shegra,	10	28	1,262	1,300
5	Skercha,	...	...	4,470	4,470
6	Rhimichie,	10	8	1,902	1,920
7	Rhiconich,	2	2	1,517	1,521
8	Handa,	...	20	740	760
9	Keoldale,	...	...	6,760	6,700
					27,551

The population of Eddrachillis exceeds that of Durness. I find the rates for poor, education, and county assessment in 1892 amounted to £548, 19s. 4d., —on an assessable rental of £4600,—paid by the landlord and an equal sum paid by the tenants, a very serious deduction from the landlord's rent and a large addition to the rent of the tenants.

The Crofters Commissioners went over all the crofts in Eddrachillis in 1890, and fixed fair rents. The rents fixed were less in amount than they found them—by about 10 per cent. There are 160 crofters in Eddrachillis, and their yearly rent amounts to £648, 5s. 11d., excluding cottars and others. They cancelled £283, 15s., of the arrears and ordered £333, 6s. 5d. to be paid —a considerable portion of which has been paid, but there is a part of it still due.

The arrears of rent have increased since. I regret to say the amount now due amounts to £477, 7s. 9d., and a year's rent to Whitsunday 1894 falls due next month amounting to £648, 5s. 11d.

Statement as to Reay Forest.

In 1840 the first portion afforested was the beats of Aultaurynie and Gobernuisgach—the former situated in Eddrachillis, the latter in Durness. They had been previously occupied as a sheep farm, with a wedder stock of cheviot sheep, at a yearly rent of £180, by Mr Innes of Sandside.

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

Evander Maciver.

In 1849 Earl Grosvenor became tenant of 'Lone,' 'Arkle,' and 'Foinabhein.' with the angling of Loch Stack and the river Laxford. This ground was previously occupied as a sheep farm, with a stock of cheviot wedder sheep, by Mr John Paterson, at a rent of £170.

In 1860 the Earl of Dudley became tenant of all the above forest, to which was added 'Ben Hee' and 'Overscaig,' which had previously been occupied as a sheep farm, with cheviot wedder stock, by the Duke of Sutherland, the rent of which is believed to have been £125.

In 1871 there was added Badnabay and Stack, which had previously been occupied as a portion of Glendhu farm by Messrs. W. & J. Gunn, at a rent of £270, when the Duke of Westminster (who had previously held the shooting) became tenant of the whole forest at a rent of £2070.

In 1891 the wedder lands of Eriboll farm was added at a rent of £500 making his total rent £2575, of which £125 is payable to the Dunrobin management for the portion of 'Ben Hee' in the parish of Lairg.

The Duke of Westminister sublets the Gobernuisgach Beat and also the Ben Hee portion.

The area of the whole forest as above described is about 78,890 acres, of which 15,490 acres are in the parish of Lairg and in the Dunrobin Management, and the heights of the hills vary from 2000 to 3000 feet above the sea level. There is very little arable land over the whole of this forest, and, so far as is known, there never were crofters on any portion of it. The tradition is that previous to the introduction of sheep these hills were kept in the hands of the Reay family for their own sport, and that they gave permission to a few of their tenants on the coast to go with their cattle and horses to sheilings for a short time in the summer months.

There were neither roads nor paths leading to or from any portion of this forest till 1842 when a shooting lodge was built at Gobernuisgach, and a road was made to it from the public road leading through Strathmore, by which access to it was got from Aultnaharrow.

The Sutherland family acquired the Reay estates in 1829, and had constructed a road 61 miles in length along the coast from Kylesku by Scourie and Durness to Tongue, which is said to have cost upwards of £30,000. In 1848 the road from Lairg to Laxford was begun, and finished in 1851, which gave access to the forest on its southern and western sides, from Lairg on the east, and Scourie on the west. A shooting lodge was erected at Stack and another at Lochmore. Paths were then made along the Laxford river to several beats from these lodges. The expense of all which was paid for partly by the Duke of Sutherland and Lord Dudley, but principally by the Duke of Westminster. A road was made from Loch Merkland to the lodge of Gobernuisgach, at the joint expense of the Dukes of Sutherland and Westminster—and in 1871 when the Duke of Westminster became tenant of the forest he added largely to the Lochmore lodge and also to Stack; and, in the following years, built largely at Achfary and erected new houses for the foresters, and opened new paths in various portions of the forest at an enormous outlay.

The outlays made since 1840 when the forest was first commenced on all these improvements now amount to no less a sum than £40,000, a great portion of which was paid in wages to the crofters and natives of the country who performed much of the work. The yearly maintenance of these paths and other works now affords regular employment to the people of the district, and the outlay for servants and farm labour in connection is also very considerable.

Including rent, wages, and incidental expenses of every description the annual outlay in this forest is about £4500. There is no doubt that the formation of the Reay forest has been an immense benefit to the crofters in its vicinity, and that the large rental it produces tends much to keep down the assessments and rates now payable in equal proportions by landlords and tenants in the several parishes of which these forests form a part—namely, Eddrachillis, Durness, and Lairg.

Statement as to Glendhu Forest.

Glendhu forest is wholly in the parish of Eddrachillis, and is in extent about 35,000 acres. It rises abruptly from the sea at Lochs Glen-Coul and Glendhu, and the hills vary from 1000 to 2600 feet in height. There is very little arable land—barely 30 acres—over the whole extent of it. Being situated in a very hilly district, the rainfall is very heavy. No accurate account of it has been kept, but the annual rainfall cannot be less than 50 to 60 inches on the average. At Scourie where we keep a very correct account of the rainfall, the average for the last fifty years has been about 40 inches.

Before the introduction of sheep in the early part of this century there were some crofters at the sea side at Lochs Glen-Coul, Glendhu, and Kylestrome. It was let as a sheep farm to the Messrs. Gunn from 1832 to 1886. In that year no tenant could be got to take it as a sheep farm. It was occupied for a year by the Duke of Sutherland—to Whitsunday 1887—when the sheep were removed from it and it was afforested and let to the Duke of Westminster at a rent of £800, which was increased in 1892 to £900. Two portions of the sheep farm still remain under sheep, viz., Glen-Coul on the south, and Duartbeg on the north west.

The farm was let to Messrs. Gunn at a rent of £1395, but, when the prices of sheep and wool fell, this was reduced to £1085. And at the close of the lease, the farm was offered to Mr James Gunn, the sitting tenant, at a rent of £800; but he refused to take it, and the proprietor having two large farms in hand, in Assynt, in its vicinity, was compelled to remove the sheep and put it under deer—no tenant coming forward to offer for it.

Considerable outlays on houses, roads, and fences have been made by the Duke of Westminster since he became tenant of Glendhu forest, amounting to no less a sum than £3450, affording employment to the crofters and others in its vicinity, and, in addition to the regular staff of three foresters and farm servants at Kylestrome, a number of gillies and extra hands are employed during the shooting season. The annual outlay on rents, rates, and servants of all descriptions is about £1630. (Signed) E. Maciver.

29,706. You say that the farm rents have come down 40 per cent. and that the tendency is still downwards?—Yes, and there is considerable difficulty in letting a farm.

29,707. Would you infer from that that the large sheep farming system, judged by present circumstances, has been a failure?—It is a failure at present.

29,708. And has been a failure for some years past?—For the last few years.

29,709. And the outlook at present is gloomy?—It is.

29,710. What was the area of the farm of Balnakill when you became factor in 1845?—The very same that it is now, with the exception of one small park at the boundary of the Durine tenants, which was given to the inn. That, as far as I can recollect, is the only difference.

29,711. Was any part of what is now known as Balnakill farm taken from small tenants?—Not in my time.

29,712. Has any change been made in your time on the area of the Keoldale farm?—None.

29,713. It remains as it was in 1845?—Exactly.

29,714. And do you make the same observation with regard to Eriboll?—The same observation. I believe that this place of Laid was a portion of Eriboll, and that a very large rent was paid to Mr Clark for giving it up to the crofters. That took place some sixty years ago, perhaps about the year 1835 or 1836.

29,715. The settlement of crofters at Laid is not a matter that came within your management as factor?—Oh, no, it was long before I came, ten or fifteen years before.

29,716. But does the account we have heard of the settlement of crofters there agree in the main with your knowledge and information?—The report I always heard was that there was a great complaint of congestion in the parish of Durness, and to relieve that the factor of the day thought it would be a good thing to give them places up there, that being the only ground available at the time.

29,717. Some of the occupants of Laid seem to have come further than from Durness; one man tells us he came from Strathnaver. However, do many crofters at present in the parish of Durness obtain work on the estate?—These three large farms give a considerable amount of employment to the people in Durness.

29,718. Are you able to speak of that from personal knowledge, or is it an impression merely?—I hear of a number of them being so employed.

29,719. How many?—I cannot speak as to numbers, but I know that on large farms like these there is a considerable amount of labour and work throughout the year, and they must take it from the population that is near.

29,720. Do you know anything of the poor rates of the township of Laid?—No, but the inspector of the poor is in the room here, and he will be able to tell you; the rate has always been very considerable, that I know.

29,721. Do you know that the rates effeiring to that township or arising from poverty in that township are greater than elsewhere? Is there more pauperism in short in Laid than in any other township in the parish?—I think there is.

29,722. Do you attribute that to the character of the holdings?—It must partly proceed from that.

29,723. Then, would you be in favour of people in their unfortunate position being transferred to better holdings, if such holdings could be properly obtained?—Certainly.

29,724. Passing for a moment to the parish of Eddrachillis, you mentioned a number of the farms there, Duart-beg, Scourie, Sandwood, Shegra, Skercha, Rhimichie, Rhiconich, Handa, and part of Keoldale. Have all these been the same in area from the time you commenced your management, or have there been changes?—There have been considerable changes upon these farms during my time.

29,725. Take the farm of Duart-beg?—That was a portion of Glendhu.

29,726. You mean of Glendhu forest?—Of Glendhu farm before it was converted into a forest.

29,727. There was a Glendhu farm, part of which was made a forest, and the remainder turned into the farm of Duart-beg, is that the way of it?—Yes, but Duart is a farm of some 4000 acres, while Glendhu was a farm of about 40,000 or 50,000 acres.

29,728. Then comes Scourie farm, is that your own farm?—Yes.

29,729. Has it undergone any increase?—Yes, there were two little pieces outside of Loch Laxford added to it since I became occupant. The tenants of them wished to go out to America, and they marched very awkwardly with my farm, so after the tenants left the land was added to my farm.

29,730. Two crofters' holdings?—Yes.

29,731. On what part of the farm were these holdings?—On Loch Laxford.

29,732. Then, as to Sandwood farm, has it been altered in your time?—It has been a farm for a century, I suppose.

29,733. Of the same area?—Of the same area.

29,734. What do you say as to Shegra?—Shegra was occupied by crofters, but when the potato disease came upon us there was a very strong desire expressed by a number of the crofters to emigrate to America, and the Duke of Sutherland expended a very large amount in sending them there. This was about the years 1848 and 1849.

29,735. The potato famine in Scotland occurred, I think, in the year 1848?—Yes.

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

Evander Maciver.

29,736. Was that emigration a voluntary process?—Wholly, and there were strong petitions sent to the Duke begging him to assist them.

29,737. How many emigrated in that way?—The principal number went from Assynt, and a considerable number went from Eddrachillis.

29,738. And the whole of the farm of Shegra became vacated in that way?—Yes. I am not quite sure that all who were in Shegra went away, but there were a great many vacant lots in the district after the emigration, and those who did not go to America were provided with lots elsewhere.

29,739. All the crofters left what is now the farm of Shegra?—Every one, and it was let as a sheep farm.

29,740. It had been a very poor township?—Yes, with very sandy ground.

29,741. I suppose it had the same name, the township of Shegra?—Yes.

29,742. What do you say as to the next farm, Skercha?—It was a portion of that farm which Mr. Paterson held and which was converted into a forest. It was the low end of it, and not being required for the forest it was let as a sheep farm. There is not an acre of arable land in it.

29,743. When was it formed into a separate farm?—I think my statement mentions that.

29,744. A great many years ago at any rate?—A good many years ago.

29,745. Then you mentioned another farm, Rhimichie?—Yes. There were crofters there; some went to America, and others were disposed of in other ways.

29,746. Was it a farm formed out of crofters' land?—Out of crofters' land.

29,747. Entirely?—Entirely.

29,748. Do you remember the date of that?—1848 or 1849.

29,749. And that was a voluntary case, was it?—Entirely.

29,750. Rhiconich comes next with 1517 acres?—That has been for a long time occupied in connection with the hotel.

29,751. You mentioned the island of Handa?—I was tenant of it for a very great number of years, but when the Crofters Commission came to Scourie, Handa was given to the hotel-keeper, in return for which he gave up all his rights in the mainland of Scourie to the crofters.

29,752. And is it now held by the hotel-keeper?—Yes.

29,753. Then, lastly, I think you said that 6700 acres of Keoldale are in the parish of Eddrachillis?—Yes, along the coast to the west of Cape Wrath.

29,754. And has that land always formed part of that farm in your time?—Always, since I came to Sutherland.

29,755. You mentioned particularly that in 1891 the wedderlands of Eriboll farm were turned into forest?—Yes.

29,756. What part of the farm is that; is it on the loch?—No, it is up in the interior, far up in the interior. (Refers to Map). Wedder farming is a very unprofitable mode of occupying sheep land at present; Mr Clark was very willing to be quit of his wedderlands and there was no other way of occupying it than by converting it into a forest.

29,757. You mean that it was turned into a forest, because you could not continue it as wedderland?—Just so.

29,758. And was the rent £500?—The rent is £500.

29,759. Then, it is well suited for deer?—Yes, it is in the interior, without a morsel of arable land upon it, and it is very high. It is between Loch More on the one side and Gobanuisgeach on the other, immediately to the north-west of Loch More and right up to Gobanuisgeach. The south-west side of it was in the forest before, and that part which lay down to the north and east was Eriboll.

29,760. What reduction of rent did Mr Clark obtain for giving up that?—He took the rest of his farm form £500 of rent.

29,761. And what rent had he paid formerly?—£800.

29,762. The estate rather profited by the transaction then?—Yes, I think so.

29,763. In your judgment could these lands—I am referring particularly to the lands formerly occupied by crofters—be profitably occupied by crofters again?—I don't think that any land is profitably occupied by crofters.

29,764. But I mean suppose holdings of a considerably larger size than we are accustomed to see on this coast were to be made?—They might be let to one or two or three tenants; three or four tenants might be comfortable upon them, but if you put a large number such as were there before, they would just be miserable, their possessions would be too small.

29,765. What size of holdings do you have in view when you speak of three or four or five?—The rent of Shegra is about £50.

26,766. Such a rent as that?—Divided amongst three or four people.

29,767. Mr Gordon directs my attention to the following farms; can you give me the rents of them?—Duart-beg, £45; Sandwood, £35; Shegra, £45; Skercha, £60, but it was once let for £120; Rhimichie, £41; Rhiconich Inn, £45; Rhiconich Farm, £47; Handa, £35.

29,768. Are the rents of these farms regularly paid?—They are in arrear a little, but I can say with truth that they have very great difficulty in meeting their engagements, some of them.

29,769. But over all, are the arrears trifling?—They are not large.

29,770. And you look to the arrears being paid up, I suppose?—I think we may look upon them as sure.

29,771. Now you said that on the deer forests there was a sum of something like £4800 spent annually, and I gather that according to your information the expenditure is materially beneficial to neighbouring crofters?—A great deal of it is paid in the country as wages, to residents in the parish.

29,772. Does much of it go into the pockets of crofters?—Well, yes, they are employed in keeping the paths and roads in order, and they are employed as gillies; there is a good deal of employment, and there is a great deal of expenditure on farm management both at Loch More and Kylestrome.

29,773. Is it your opinion that that expenditure to a considerable extent finds its way directly to the pockets of crofters?—A good deal of it.

29,774. You cannot say what percentage?—No, but a great deal.

29,775. Are you in favour of the maintenance of these forests among other reasons on that account?—Certainly, I think they are a very great benefit to us. I think the making of the Reay forest was an immense blessing to the parish of Eddrachillis.

29,776. Just explain in your own way how.—In that there was no road through it, and the making of a road has benefited the people; there was very little expenditure on its account before, and now there is a large amount; and the landlord pockets a very great deal more than he did before: thus it benefits all parties.

29,777. Are the rates less?—Very much less in consequence of the rent which is paid from shootings and forests.

29,778. Then, in your opinion, is the rent got from this land as forest much higher than could be got by having it let for any other purpose?—Oh, yes, more than double.

29,779. Is any part of that forest suitable for occupation by crofters?—I don't think so.

29,780. Is that because of its being very high?—Just because there is no arable land upon it.

29,781. Is there no land capable of being made arable. None; Messrs. Gunn who had the farm of Glendhu were most anxious to have a little arable land for the purpose of growing clover and turnips, and Mr William Gunn and I went over the whole farm in the most minute manner, but we could see no land that could be made arable.

29,782. When was that?—Twenty or thirty years ago.

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

Evander Maciver.

29,783. You and Mr Gunn went in search of land?—In search of land, and the Duke of Sutherland was willing to give them money to improve it, if the tenant could find land and thought it desirable.

29,784. And did you and Mr Gunn both agree that no such land could be got?—In the most decided manner. It is such a rocky country, and there is so little land that could be improved.

29,785. Mr Sutherland.—Is there then within your management no land that in your opinion is fit for the purposes of our inquiry, such as could be profitably occupied by crofters or small tenants, or otherwise advantageously occupied?—Such spots could be got here and there, near the coast, but it is an invariable fixed rule in the management of hills that you must have high ground and low ground together; and if you take away the low ground from the high ground you render the high ground valueless.

29,786. But if they were both taken in proportion, do you think it could be made profitable for occupation to small tenants?—I don't think so.

29,787. Is a large farm not an aggregation of such small farms as I have referred to?—Yes, it is, some of them.

29,788. Where would the disadvantage come in, do you think, in the sub-division?—Just that there is so little land; you should not place men down anywhere where they cannot have arable land.

29,789. A very good rule, and one that I would have liked very much to have seen observed?—Since I have had anything to do with the management of the country I have always looked to that; I could not answer for what may have been done before my time.

29,790. Don't you think now, taking a large farm as at present—an entity in itself—and sub-dividing it proportionally, hill and low lying land, do you not think that it would be suitable and advantageous for all parties that it should be sub-divided?—Where are tenants to be got for it?

29,791. In this room, plenty of them, as you have heard to-day?—I am sorry to say that my experience leads me to an opposite conclusion.

29,792. That the tenants are unwilling to accept land?—Not unwilling, but unable.

29,793. Have you found any difficulty in filling up any vacancies that fell in crofts?—Often, and often have I offered a croft vacant to the neighbouring man, and he would not have it.

29,794. But to a man who had no land before?—We have been for some time going upon the system of consolidation, to benefit those we have.

29,795. But don't you see that it is a very good feeling on the part of the people that the man would not like to add to his own croft at the expense of a man who had no land? That feeling would come in, don't you think?—Sometimes.

29,796. And it is not a feeling to be condemned?—It is a natural feeling, no doubt.

29,797. Would that then not be an element in the conduct of people not wishing to consolidate? Don't you think it must be an element present in their minds?—I cannot say.

29,798. It is possible it might have been so?—I should think it is very doubtful whether it were so.

29,799. But supposing a policy were adopted of giving new holdings out of these tremendous holdings of 70,000 acres, do you think there would be the same disinclination on the part of the people to accept them?—I have no doubt the people would accept them, but would it be prudent on the part of a landlord to give an extent of land to people who could not stock it?

29,800. If you ask me with regard to that, my opinion is that it would be very advantageous to them in the end, judging from what they have done in the past.—If they had capital.

29,801. But I am sure you will admit that it was never inquired whether the people had capital when they were settled down here?—Look at the state of the rents in this same parish and in Edrachillis now; what does that exhibit?

29,802. Well, I wish to ask you a question with regard to the rents. There was some element of confusion in the rent paying during the last year?—Yes, the rent due at Martinmas last was not collected then for estate reasons.

29,803. Then that might perhaps have tended to cause the arrears?—I have no doubt that the arrears are larger on that account.

29,804. But, as a matter of fact, are not the rents on the Sutherland estate forehand rents to the extent of a half-year?—Yes, and I wish to state here publicly that there was no parish in my district in which the crofters paid their rents so well as in the parish of Durness. But since the Crofters Commission came the arrears have increased largely.

29,805. It is since the fixing of the Fair Rents by the Crofters Commission that the rents have not been so well paid?—Yes.

29,806. You are not, of course, saying who is responsible for that?—This is a very bad year and the prices of stock are very low; that may account for it to a certain extent.

29,807. The remarkable fact that you state as to the rents being well paid here is surely an argument in favour of giving the people an opportunity of cultivating more land?—Yes, but I know their circumstances. I have too often occasion to know their circumstances, and they have not the means of taking additional land.

29,808. But, as a matter of fact, has that ever been put to the test of experience?—Well, I never put it to the test of experience.

29,808*a*. I think you did in the case of Rispond?—Oh, we added that, because really and truly the grazings of the Durness people were not so extensive as they ought to have been.

29,809. But the result of that has been, as I understand, that the people are very well pleased with having got Rispond?—They have cause to be.

29,810. And they have stocked it?—I don't know about that.

29,811. They have even overstocked it; that is the complaint here to-day?—I suspect that they had that overstock before.

29,812. Is that not an indication that they would have very little difficulty in stocking a new holding?—It is an indication that they could stock that much, but it is not an indication that they could stock on a large scale. Take the low land farms of Balnakill and Keoldale. If they got them what would become of the moorland attached to these farms, you could not destroy these farms. You must have a graduated system of occupation on every estate; every prudent proprietor has that: he has large farms and small farms. As far as I understand the request of these people, they would go away with the whole of these farms.

29,813. But if the people took over these farms in toto, would that not meet the objection?—How could they take them in toto?

29,814. Arguing from what they have to what they might have?—It is impossible.

29,815. That is a contradictory method of reasoning. It does not apply to the crofter when he wants more land?—No.

29,816. But it applies to the large farmer when his holding is increased?—The large farmer is a man of capital and skill, and he is able to take what the poor man cannot out of the land.

29,817. Were the large farmers all men of capital when they got the large holdings in Sutherland, to your knowledge?—I was not in Sutherland then, and don't know what they were, but this I know that these large farmers for a great number of years had very prosperous times and made large fortunes.

29,818. And what added to that fortune? Was it not the superior nature of the Sutherland grazings?—I don't boast of the superior nature of the grazings in my district.

29,819. But, as a matter of fact, you have had tenants who made fortunes there; it is a matter of public knowledge?—Yes, some of them.

29,820. Now, you spoke about a Mr Paterson; was that Mr Paterson who was at Bighouse?—No.

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

Evander Maciver.

29,821. Was he a man of capital when he came to this county?—I believe he came a very poor man.

29,822. A shepherd?—So I am told.

29,823. And he made a fortune?—I believe he did; he left a lot of money when he died.

29,824. His sheep paid very well, and value was added to his land by the cultivation of the former tenants?—He was a skilful sheep farmer.

29,825. But there are plenty skilful farmers you will admit in Durness?—I don't admit that.

29,826. Have you not got shepherds on these farms?—Oh yes, but in the nature of things a crofter cannot be such a skilful farmer as a shepherd, because he attempts more than one profession; he is a fisherman as well. I have people living near me who have both lands and fishing, and actually when they go in spring to labour with the pick and the spade they just speak of it as if they were going to slavery.

29,827. But that may depend very much on the subject they have to work upon?—A man who is fishing loses the love and the power of working with pick and spade.

29,828. I don't suppose that the science of sheep farming is such an abstruse science that it requires more than the ordinary amount of intellect?—It requires a person to begin it young if he would learn it thoroughly. Many people think every man would make a farmer, but I assure you that it requires a great deal of industry, a great deal of acuteness, and a great deal of attention to make a farm pay.

29,829. Are all these characteristics you have mentioned the characteristics of the sheep tenant in Sutherland? Are they men of such superior ability and industry?—A good many of those that succeeded are.

29,830. But the modern ones?—We have very few of them.

29,831. You have a good many of non-resident ones; it is actually not even necessary for a sheep farmer to reside on his farm?—We have farms that were occupied before in our hands in Assynt.

29,832. Perhaps it does not happen to the same extent in your management, but we found it in the neighbouring management?—That is possible; I would not say it is the case in this district.

29,833. But, as a matter of fact, have not plenty of crofters got all the experience and skill necessary to take a grazing farm?—If they devoted themselves entirely to it they might acquire it.

29,834. But the shepherds have done so, have they not? Are not the farm managers principally natives?—No, the farm managers generally come from a distance.

29,835. They did at one time, but now, are they not native to a large extent?—I don't know that. We have one in Assynt who came from the east coast of Sutherland; that is the only manager I know who is in any sense a native.

29,836. Then you stated, with regard to these farms, that the rents had still a tendency downward, even although they have been reduced 40 per cent.?—Yes.

29,837. You also made a statement here showing that the tendency of the crofters' rents was not downward?—They did not require to go down for they had never been up.

29,838. But they came up from nothing to what they are now?—I have been forty-eight years here, and there is very little difference on them from the time I came here to this date.

29,839. Did you hear a statement made by a witness that he settled down in a certain place at 1s. of rental and that he now pays £1, 15s.?—I heard that statement. There might have been one case of that kind, I am not quite sure; but I did not believe the statement, although I did not think it worth while to contradict it.

29,840. Do you deny that he was speaking in bonâ fide?—Yes, I do, if he stated that the whole of the rents were in the same position.

29,841. No, he gave his own case?—Well, as I say, there might have been one such case.

29,842. But I think he went farther and said that all Laid was in the same way?—Exactly, but it is not so.

29,843. Might it have been materially different from the 1s. he stated?—It was considerably less, I think; generally, I think, very few of them were over £1.

29,844. But he spoke, I understand, of the time when he was sent there first of all?—I don't know what happened when they went there first, but what I always heard was that they were there for seven or eight or nine years without paying a farthing at all.

29,845. And now they are paying £1, 15s.?—There is a case of a man paying £1, 15s.

29,846. I find from the official document that is the average all over, or thereabouts?—I think, sir, that cannot be the case, but the facts speak for themselves.

29,847. The point I wish to ask you is this: in your opinion is the crofter not a far more profitable tenant to the landlord than the large grazier?—I don't think he is.

29,848. It is not the fact that on your own admission the tendency of the rents of the large farms is downward, while you stated to us, as a matter of pride (and I have no doubt justly so) that the Crofters Commission only reduced the whole crofter rental in your district by £2, 13s.?—Yes.

29,849. In other words, the only parties who maintain their rents are the crofters?—Because the crofters' rents had never been increased. You are forgetting that sheep farm rents rose to a very large extent. For instance, when I came to Scourie, the farm of Keoldale was rented at just £500; it afterwards reached £1200 a year, and now it is down to £775.

29,850. But take the cases. Here you have got a man planted down on a barren moor without any provision made for him: that land now pays so much rental. On the other hand you have a sheep farmer who entered into possession of land that the people formerly made valuable for him: his landlord built all the houses, made all the preparations, and yet his rent is going downwards. You surely do not compare the two classes?—Yes, I do.

29,851. Do you consider the comparison a fair one all round?—I think you are forgetting that the crofters' rents were never increased.

29,852. But if they are increased at all it is on their own labour and expenditure, whereas the sheep farmer improves nothing?—I beg your pardon, they do.

29,853. What does he do?—There is no sheep farmer but is continually at work making drains and other improvements for the benefit of his land.

29,854. But what are his improvements in proportion to his rental compared with the crofters?—He has a large subject that he cannot improve: he holds an immense extent of moorland.

29,855. But, as a matter of fact, he does not improve it to the same extent that the crofter does, and yet his rent comes down?—I don't think the crofter improves so much as that.

29,856. But have they not made the land what it is, such as it is?—I don't know what it was originally when they got it: it has been in their possession, a great deal of it, from time immemorial.

29,857. Sangobeg?—Yes.

29,858. And Leirin?—Sangobeg was a farm that Mr James Anderson, Lord Reay's factor, possessed, and these people at Sangobeg and Leirin were his subtenants. That eviction that was talked of to-day was carried out by Mr James Anderson without the knowledge, consent, or approval of the Duke of Sutherland.

29,859. Did he venture to do that?—Yes, he did.

29,860. What was done to him? Was he visited with the Duke's displeasure?—The Duke of Sutherland expressed to him his strong disapproval of the eviction and the whole thing, and it was stopped. [The Chairman.—I have heard of the same thing being done by a factor elsewhere.]

29,861. You made an interesting statement with regard to the expenditure on reclamation on the farm of Eriboll, and I think you stated that these reclamations turned out very disappointing?—Very disappointing. It was not done by me; the farm of Eriboll was in the Tongue management when the improvement was carried out, and I only saw the improvement after its completion.

29,862. Is it your general opinion that the disappointment arose more from the expenditure than from the result?—The disappointment arose from the inferiority of the subject.

29,863. That is the Eriboll farm which we see in passing along the road?—Yes, there were 50 or 60 acres of old arable land there that had been taken in by the Clarks and dyked; and this other piece was outside but close to it. Mr Crawford was the factor at Tongue at the time and he took the thing in hand and did it himself. Mr Clark had nothing to do with it, and it turned out a very unfortunate speculation, so much so that the Duke of Sutherland never got a farthing of rent for the whole thing.

29,864. I want, then, to contrast with that the expenditure that the crofters make on improving land themselves, which has yet been the means of increasing their rents?—I don't know how it has been the means of increasing their rents.

29,865. It is only that that would justify an increase of the rent at all; some expenditure of some kind?—That system was, that if a man had a farm for nineteen years and laid out money in improving it, at the end of the nineteen years he was recouped for what he did; the landlord was then entitled to the benefit of any improvement.

29,866. I can perfectly see how that would apply to a leaseholder: but the crofter was a tenant at will and could be turned out at any time: he had not security of tenure?—As a rule, the great majority of crofters had security of tenure far more than the big farmers.

29,867. De facto but not as a matter of stipulation?—The great majority of them were continued from father to son without ever being moved out at all, and if there was any expenditure in the way of improving land on the part of the forefathers it was their own children and successors who got the benefit of it.

29,868. Seeing that that is the case, how do you account for their not being where they were at first?—Where?

29,869. In Strathmore, and these other places we have heard of to-day?—That I cannot speak of, for you are going back to matters that took place before I was born.

29,870. But is that bitter lesson likely to have been forgotten by the people?—Perhaps not.

29,871. Would it not also have been an element in giving them the security of tenure they now possess?—They have got security of tenure.

29,872. Thanks to themselves. Well, then, what I wish to get from you, if you please, is whether the feeling of disappointment with regard to the result of the reclamation at Eriboll farm was due to the large expenditure or to the crops not being satisfactory?—It was due to a large expenditure upon an inferior subject.

29,873. That is quite a sufficient answer. But you would not be prepared to deny that the land was very much improved from what it was in a state of nature: it would be better fitted for grazing?—It would have been better if it had never been touched.

29,874. But for pasture?—Yes, it would have been far better for the farm if it had been left out, and not a farthing had been spent on it.

29,875. But we saw corn stacks on Eriboll?—Yes, there were 60 acres of arable there before.

29,876. But do you assert as your deliberate opinion that crops are failing upon the farm of Eriboll?—I do. From the information Mr Clark has always given me I have come to that opinion, and I consider Mr Clark a most respectable man, and one who would not say so if it were not the case.

29,877. But keeping in view that Mr Clark is the tenant and you are the factor, it would not perhaps be an unnatural thing for him to depreciate the value of his holding when making a bargain?—Every tenant, and every person—high and low, rich and poor, is the same in that respect.

29,878. Mr Clark not excepted. With regard to the rates that raises a very important question. You stated that the poor rate was high, and that the landlord paid one half and the tenant the other half?—Yes.

29,879. And is it, in your opinion, a fact that the poor rates are increasing?—They have been very stationary for a while.

29,880. But were they low when you came here first?—There were no poor laws when I came here.

29,881. I am about to ask you a question which is practically the same as one asked you by the Chairman. Do you think there is any connection between this system of huge holdings on the one hand and very small holdings on the other, and the increase in the poor rate? Do you think there is any necessary connection between them?—I said before that I think the bulk of the paupers upon the roll come from the crofting class.

29,882. And I have no doubt that is caused in the first place because there are more of them, and in the second place they are put in a position where it is impossible for them to support their relatives?—The children of the better class go away from the country and fight their battle in the world, but the crofters too often remain at home: the consequence is that there is a congestion on the crofts, and a tendency to an increase of pauperism.

29,883. You say it is not because their bounds are too restricted, but because they are less industrious than the large farmer; is this so?—I don't say that.

29,884. There must be some reason for it?—I think it is just for the reason that their holdings are so small, and acting as fishermen and landsmen too, they often go away to the east coast. A number of them came back from the east coast with little or no money.

29,885. Was that a matter of choice, or of necessity?—I suppose it was of necessity.

29,886. And is there any such necessity in the nature of things? Is there not plenty of land to enable them to support their relatives themselves?—There is land, no doubt, if they were able to take it and stock it.

29,887. But has it not been proved by the experiment in the case of Rispond that they are able?—I don't know any case except that.

29,888. And it has proved successful?—So far, it has.

29,889. Then with regard to the children of the crofters remaining here, do they do so more than the large farmer's children: do you assert that that is the case?—It is general now among the crofting people since the Education Act passed, and they have become better educated, that there is a desire to go away which did not exist before; that is the effect of the Education Act. When I came to the country there were in the parish of Assynt far more people that could speak Gaelic than English. Now, everybody speaks English. When the former went from home without being able to speak English they found themselves unable to speak to anybody, and that really prevented them from going. But they go now very much more readily.

29,890. They are indebted for that benefit to the public school?—I think so, to education.

29,891. But is it not a fact also, that if you really want to promote emigration, the greater knowledge the people have of the world, and the better circumstances they are in at home, the better is their preparation for it?—Certainly, the more they are prepared before they go out the better.

29,892. And even if you have no higher object than to send the people away, would it not be better to put them first in affluent circumstances before they go?—If it were possible.

29,893. But is it not possible?—I think in a great many cases it is not.

29,894. You stated that the land was given to the people of Laid, off the farm of Eriboll, and I think you treated the tenant of Eriboll very liberally in the transfer?—Yes, I think so; he would not give it up unless he got so much for it; it was thought desirable to lessen the congestion in the parish, and this was the only place available: that is what I hear.

29,895. But were you not struck with the liberality with which Mr Clark was treated as contrasted with the way the crofters were treated?—It was done for the benefit of the people by the Duke.

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

Evander Maciver.

29,896. In Laid?—It was a good intention to take them away from amongst the other congested population.

29,897. These people who came from these places to Laid,—I find in the year 1841 no fewer than nine families removed from these townships to Laid, Loch-Eriboll, in order to form a sheep farm,—I presume after the others had been settled there?—I don't know anything about that.

29,898. With regard to the forest of Reay, I think you said it was a blessing to the parish of Eddrachillis?—I certainly think so. The people of this parish had no way of going south unless they went to Tongue or to Lochinver. There was no direct road.

29,899. You stated that the Reay forest was formed in 1840?—It was begun then.

29,900. That is the modern afforestment, was it not? It has been called, as you know, the Reay forest from time immemorial?—Yes.

29,901. But in the olden times I presume it would not have been a forest in the sense of modern times?—I suppose not; the deer had the hills to themselves then.

29,902. The deer went along with the tenants' sheep and cattle, and there was a common right of shooting,—no one prevented it?—Well, I daresay there was a good deal of shooting.

29,903. So that that is the reason why it came to be called the Reay forest?—It was hunting ground of the Reay family.

29,904. And the Reay people?—Well, I daresay the people took as much as they could unknown to the owner.

29,905. But did he claim any right to a monopoly of it?—He was entitled to a monopoly, he was the proprietor.

29,906. He was the proprietor of the deer, was he?—He was the proprietor of the hills.

29,907. You surely would not go in the face of contemporary history. Allow me to read to you a passage from a Memoir of Rob Donn, the poet of Reay, by Dr Mackintosh Mackay, prefixed to the 1829 edition of his poems, p. xviii.

"After his marriage, Rob Donn first resided at the 'place of Bad-na-h-achlais, then probably forming 'a part of his late employer's tenure. He was known 'by this time as one of the most expert deer-hunters 'in the country, a pastime and source of profit to the 'tenantry of that period, and then scarce begun in any 'way to be interdicted. Known for this attainment 'and as a person the family of Reay desired to en-'courage, he was provided with a tenure of lands at 'a place called Alt-coire-freisgill, on the eastern shore 'of Loch Erribol, and employed to shoot such number 'of deer as Lord Reay's family might wish to have 'supplied."—Oh, he was a forester.

29,908. "This was an employment that well suited 'our bard's predilections." You see that the deer are here referred to as common both to Lord Reay and the tenantry and as a source of profit and amusement to both?—Amongst all the other qualifications of Rob Donn the tradition is that he was a great poacher.

29,909. That was a great shooter of deer?—Yes.

29,910. It points incontrovertibly to the conclusion that shooting the deer was not prohibited by any person at that time?—I daresay it would be very difficult to prevent poaching in those days.

29,911. But what I wish to make clear is that though it was called the Reay forest in the olden times it was by no means a deer forest, such as we understand now?—They are very different things.

29,912. Then you stated that you went along with Mr Gunn over the whole of the farm of Glendhu with the desire to get arable land, and did not find it?—Yes.

29,913. Did you go over the other farms within your factorate in the same way?—I was never asked by the tenants to do so. There is very little land I may tell you that is improveable in this district.

29,914. I am quite prepared to admit it with regard to Glendhu farm, but do you know Kylestrome?—Yes.

Durness, Sutherlandshire.

Evander Maciver

29,915. Is there any arable land there?—There are a few patches between rocks: go and see it for yourselves.

29,916. I know it well. But don't you see tenants elsewhere cultivating lands between rocks now where it was not green when they went there?—Oh, yes, with the cas-chrom and the spade; but there is no ploughable land in Glendhu.

29,917. So you cannot give us any assistance beyond what you have stated, as to finding such land as we are in search of: do you say anything as to Balnakill and Keoldale?—These farms have arable land, but they require it for their own purposes; and if you go and destroy the big farms on an estate, you injure the proprietor very seriously.

29,918. That is a matter of opinion: you hold one opinion, I hold another?—It is an opinion that will be felt by the landlord if his farms are spoilt.

29,919. But if his rental is increased and made secure without the chance of going down, by substituting new tenants whose rents would remain fixed, would not that be an improvement?—I don't think the rents are fixed permanently.

29,920. The Chairman.—You are by far the oldest factor on the Sutherland estates?—Yes.

29,921. And in the evidence you have given to-day you have spoken to the very best of your knowledge and great experience?—I have.

29,922. I have nothing more to ask you.

29,923. Mr Macaulay, Solicitor, Golspie.—Would you tell us the circumstances under which this 'black 'park' came to be added to the farm of Balnakill,—the cows' park I mean?—The farm of Balnakill was occupied by a Mr Dunlop, who was a very litigious man and very quarrelsome. He gave a great deal of trouble to his neighbours in the parish, and it so happened that the farm of Balnakill had a right of pasturage along with the crofters on their common pasture, which gave rise to constant quarrels and constant complaints to the proprietor. So troublesome did the matter become that at last the estate managers got the tenant of Balnakill and the crofters to agree to make an excambion, that they would be separate from each other, and would have no cause of quarrel. A regular reference was made to parties who went over the whole ground, and they decided that the crofters should give up the 'black park' to the tenant of Balnakill, and the tenant of Balnakill should give up his rights upon their common pasture. I have all the papers connected with the transaction in my office at Scourie, so that it is not a matter of hearsay or of doubt. Moreover, it is a very important park for the farm of Balnakill, for it is through it that the sheep come down from the hill, and go back to the hill, giving them access to the road without interfering with the crofters' grounds. If that park were taken from Balnakill, the sheep would have to go down by the road to the Inn, and along the road and through the crofters' ground: they would thus be jumping and trespassing on the crofters' ground, and this would doubtless cause a very great deal of annoyance.

29,924. Mr Sutherland.—You stated that it was an excambion?—Yes, a regular excambion.

29,925. And the result of the excambion was that the crofters were left with nothing?—They got the rights upon the pasture that the tenant of Balnakill had, which was valued and considered a quid pro quo.

29,926. Was it an equation?—An equation. A most business-like arrangement it was.

29,927. I would like to ask you one or two questions in regard to the matter as it has cropped up. What extent of pasture had the crofters of Durness at that time?—They had what they have now.

29,928. Minus Rispond?—Minus Rispond.

29,929. How much was that, then, 3200 acres?—Yes.

29,930. Among 69 crofters; or as much as would allow the grazings of 5 sheep to each man; and as against that they lost the grazing of a cow. Was that looked upon as a right quid pro quo?—Do you think the crofters did not lose a good deal by the transaction?—No, I think not: I think it was a transaction tending to peace and quietness, and putting an end to a good deal of annoyance.

29,931. Mr Gordon.—Can you put in the relative papers?—Yes, I think I can.

[ADJOURNED.]

THIRTIETH SITTING.

RHICONICH, SUTHERLANDSHIRE.

October 19, 1893.

Present:—

DAVID BRAND, Esq., Advocate, Sheriff of Ayr, and Chairman of the Crofters Commission, Chairman.
ANGUS SUTHERLAND, Esq., M.P.
JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq.
GEORGE GORDON, Esq.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

DONALD MORRISON, Crofter, Balchrieck (63)—examined.

29,932. The Chairman.—Was your croft dealt with by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

29,933. What was the former rent?—The old rent was £3, and the present rent is £2, 16s.

29,934. Have you a written statement?—Yes.

29,935. Kindly read it to us.—The parish of Eddrachillis is about 30 miles in length, from Keisgach Bay on the north to Glencoul on the south, and has a coast line of about 105 miles. Probably no other parish in the Highlands approaches it in ruggedness, for not only are the sea arms or lochs with which it abounds surrounded by barren rocky heights, but the interior is a chaos of bare-headed rocks, innumerable lakes, and brown valleys. On viewing it from Glasbhein, Foinabhein, Arkle, Stack or Ben Leod, one would be inclined to think that Eddrachillis was not fitted for the abode of mankind. And, indeed, excepting a few small places, the parish is not habitable except along the sea coast, on which the inhabitants combine agriculture with fishing.

Kinlochbervie quoad sacra parish is bounded on the north by a line drawn from Keisgeach burn in the vicinity of Cape Wrath to Meall Dearg and Gualin burn, thence to Strath Dionard, Ben Hee, and Loch Merkland, and on the south by Loch Merkland, Kinloch burn, Loch More, Achfary burn, Loch Stack, the river Laxford, and Laxford bay.

The population of the whole parish is approximately 1400, of which Kinlochbervie contains 900, and Scourie 500.

The valuation of the two districts is £4507, 17s. 2d., of which the Duke of Westminster alone is tenant of an area valued at £2380, and including shooting tenants in both districts, the valuation is Kinlochbervie £2221, and Scourie £2287, but excluding these the Kinlochbervie valuation is £1115, and that of Scourie £732, inclusive of inns, manses, &c., farms and teachers' dwellings.

As the arable land available is a mere fringe along the sea coast, much of it sandy, and the greater part steep and difficult of profitable cultivation, it is needless to add that the population could exist for four months of the year on the produce of the lands, independent of the fishing industries.

It is authoritatively stated that the average arable land in actual cultivation by each crofter is under two acres, and when it is borne in mind that there are nearly half as many cottars as there are crofters, irrespective of many crofters' sons and their families living on these holdings, is it a matter of surprise that the townships, notwithstanding the advantages of the Crofters Act, complain of congestion and poverty? In order to fully realize this state of overcrowding, it is necessary to state that Kinlochbervie parish contains 101 crofters (including 6 joint crofters) and 43 cottars, enumerated according to townships thus:—

Townships.	Crofters.	Cottars.
Droman,	5	5
Blairmore,	8	2
Polin,	3	3
Kinlochbervie,	14	5
Rhuvolt,	4	..
Achriesgill,	15	5
Ardmore,	6	2
Balchrick,	8	4
Drumnaguie,	6	4
Oldshoremore,	17	8
Badcall,	6	2
Inshegra,	1	1
Achlyness,	6	2
Portvalvorchie,	2	...
Total,	101	43

That there is sufficient land suitable for cultivation within the parish and on the sea coast may be understood from the fact that formerly and up to 1815 there were seven farms on the northern shore of Loch Sandwood and seven on the southern shore of the same loch, but owing to the inhospitable nature of the sea coast, the people, if settled there, would have to depend entirely on the land produce: hence three families on each side of the loch would utilize all the available land. It is, however, understood that Sandwood farm is not available during the life of the present tenant,—rent £35.

Shegra farm up to 1848 contained 18 farmers or 16 crofters, each of whom possessed three or four milk cows, three followers, and two dozen sheep. In that year it was given to Hugh Mackay, Kinlochbervie, tacksman of Sandwood, and it is now owned by Messrs. M'Callum and Munro at a yearly rental of £50. It would support six crofters in a comfortable condition. On the northern shore of Loch Inchard, between Achriesgill bridge and Rhiconich, four farmers formerly lived most comfortably. The land is attached to Rhiconich Inn. Formerly there lived in Rhimichie seven families; it would now be suitable for three families, and on the same farm Meal Bhan one, and Kin Saile four, now suitable for one and two respectively. Present rental paid by one tenant £41, 1s. 5d. Sgeir-a'-Chatha proper, now part of a sheep farm, owned by Mr. Scott, Balnakill, affords splendid wintering, as does the whole of Ceathramh-Garbh, and is well fitted for the abode of two farmers. Ardbeg, Clash-Inchairich, and Dalchrackin each contained a family, and each would now support a single family.

There is thus suitable land within the bounds of the quoad sacra parish of Kinlochbervie, for 27 farmers at least, the removal of whom would be a great relief, but in order to enable the crofters to improve their condition and to afford elbow scope, the migration of as many more is indispensable. However, it would not be advisable to break up the Reay Forest as the burden of taxation and rates would more than counterbalance profits without State aid in stocking the holdings.

To sum up, the crofters of Kinlochbervie complain that the lands assigned to them by the Crofters Act are unduly burdened by cottars who, as the signatures attached attest, are willing to migrate to the respective localities indicated above, or to any other suitable land outside this parish in the same county. The same statement applies to many of the crofters who would willingly remove to a more congenial soil under improved circumstances.

It is, therefore, the earnest prayer of the people of Kinlochbervie that the Royal Commissioners, now

Rhiconich, Sutherlandshire.

Donald Morrison.

inquiring into the social condition of the Highland population, will be graciously pleased to embody the record of Kinlochbervie people in their report, and to recommend the adoption of the suggestions contained in the foregoing statement with as little delay as is consistent with the time for carrying out the necessary arrangements.

In name and by appointment of the people, appointed delegates 16th October 1893.

(Signed) Donald Morrison, Baile-chruic.
Lachlan Ross, Achriesgill.

At a meeting held in the public school, Oldshoremore, on 18th October 1893, Mr. Angus Morrison, Droman, presiding, it was unanimously resolved to approach the Royal Commission with the view of expressing the desire of cottars and others residing in Oldshores to occupy land other than that now in possession of crofters, and in the event of suitable land not being available in the parish of Eddrachillis, the undersigned hope to procure land outside this parish, in the county of Sutherland.

29,936. Who wrote out this statement for you?—Our teacher, Mr Mackay.

29,937. Both Donald Morrison and Lachlan Ross appear as delegates?—Yes.

29,938. You were both appointed at a public meeting?—Yes.

29,939. And this paper sets forth the views and considerations you desire to submit to us on the matter?—Yes.

29,940. Mr Forsyth.—Your people live mostly by the fishing, do they not?—Partly by the fishing.

29,941. And your general wish is to get more holdings handy for the fishing; is that so?—We want to get more holdings of arable land that we can make a living by.

29,942. But if there is not arable land for you all, if there is not enough to be had, you would be content with smaller holdings close to the sea?—Certainly we would.

29,943. But do you wish that some of you should remove to larger holdings away from the sea, if these were to be had?—Yes.

29,944. Then, if room were found for the cottars, would that relieve the congestion much?—A great deal; and a great relief it would be to the poor crofters if there should be a place provided for the cottars, because the crofters are overcrowded with cottars. Each cottar, with a family, requires ground for peat; he requires grazing for perhaps a few sheep and a cow, and that is reducing the crofters to naught. Down here as you saw yourself yesterday, sir, the people are very much crowded on a rugged place; and were it not that the men brought up here are so smart and well up in sea-faring work as well as land work, the people from the interior of this country would never come to live here. Though they got it for the taking of it, they could not use the plough or the harrow, so we have to delve it with spades. Then, there is the inconvenience we have to undergo in spring to get manure for the patches of land we have. We are obliged to go from the place I let you see yesterday on the inside of Loch Laxford, a distance of I don't know how many miles, take the seaware into our small boats, and at the risk of our lives, carry it home through a dangerous sound where the wind and tide are sometimes like to swamp us. We have then to wade out up to the middle and take it out in creels. That is one inconvenience of living in that place. Besides that, the place is so overcrowded with crofters and cottars that there is hardly a crofter north of this but would willingly remove to a better soil if it were possible to get it.

Rhiconich, Sutherlandshire.

Donald Morrison.

29,945. Then, you have plenty of hill grazing, have you not?—The hill grazing is very scrimp now; some of the crofters have more than they ought to have, according to the estate regulations per £. Some of the cottars too are putting up stock.

29,946. Altogether, although the grazings are large you consider that they are now overstocked?—So they are. I do not often go through the hill, but those who have gone through it lately tell me that the hill pasture is quite bare, and that they are afraid how the few sheep some of them have can live in it through the coming winter.

29,947. Where do you live?—At Balchrick.

29,948. Where is that?—Below Achreisgill.

29,949. Have you a croft?—Yes.

29,950. What size is it?—Two and a half acres arable land.

29,951. And how many cattle have you?—I have two milk cows and two followers.

29,952. And a horse?—No.

29,953. Are there no horses down beside you?—Yes, a few with some of them.

29,954. The Achreisgill folks have horses?—Very few horses.

29,955. We saw some up on the valley as we came down, on the water side?—There are about six horses.

29,956. Where is the arable land that you could get?—Well, there is no arable land now, but Shegra is there, in which there were some tenants before.

29,957. Is that down near the sea?—Yes.

29,958. There are two Shegras apparently?—Only one Shegra; the other is Innis-Shegra.

29,959. Who is tenant of Shegra just now?—Messrs Maccallum and Munro.

29,960. Do they reside upon the place?—They do, at least, one of them does, and the other left. Maccallum and his son reside on it, but Munro is a shepherd on Melness farm, at the other side of Hope.

29,961. It is not a very big place, Shegra; I think there are about 20 acres of arable land on it?—As to the extent of arable land I cannot say.

29,962. How many families do you think could be put on Shegra?—I would put six families into that township to-day who would be far more comfortable than any in the parish. There were 16 crofters there in my young days. It is not so much the amount of arable land there is at present, but what could be taken in above the houses where they were.

29,963. Where else have you any arable land that could be available? Tell us about this place of Rhimichie.—It is down at the loch side here.

29,964. Are there two families there just now?—Only one.

29,965. And how many do you think it could take?—Three.

29,966. Now, where else are you thinking of?—At Milban one, and at Kinsale two.

29,967. Who lives at these places just now?—They are attached to Rhimichie.

29,968. What other place?—Going to Laxfordside there is Skercha.

29,969. Who is tenant of that?—That is owned by Mr. Scott, Balnakill, at present, as part of his sheep farm.

29,970. How many would you put in there?—I would put one there willingly.

29,971. Yes, but there is one there already; is not there a shepherd there?—None.

29,972. How does Mr Scott use the farm?—He has a shepherd in this township of Achlighness here.

29,973. Would you put one family in Skercha?—Yes.

29,974. Where next?—Laxford again, but there is one family there already.

29,975. There is no use putting out one man and putting in another?—There is a poor widow there; but the place is not now under cultivation, the Laxford river comes on it.

29,976. Is there any other place?—Down here again by this Loch Inchard side there is land that is attached to the hotel.

29,977. How many could be put on the hotel farm?—There were three families there before.

29,978. You said there were in all 101 crofters and 43 cottars: and without counting the widow's place at Laxford you have given us places for only 13; am I right there?—There is also Ardbeg.

29,979. Who is tenant of Rhimichie just now?—One Robert Ross. He belonged to the other end of the country though he came here and got this place. He was for sometime ground officer to the Duke of Sutherland at Lochinver, and he has now got some paths at Glendhuside and in the forest to repair.

29,980. That is all you can tell us, 13 places exclusive of the hotel?—Yes.

29,981. Is there anything in the forest or its neighbourhood?—There is plenty in the Reay forest.

29,982. Mr Sutherland.—Will you kindly tell us the names of the places in the Reay forest that you consider suitable for holdings?—Duartmore, Kylestrome, Maldie, Glendhu, Glencoul, these are all on that side, round by the Duke of Westminster's place. At Maldie there were a few tenants before my day.

29,983. Do you know the country down the way towards Lairg?—Yes.

29,984. Are there no places there where you could put people?—Yes, at Loch Merkland side there is a park that the forester has. The park was brought under cultivation since he went there.

29,985. Any other place?—What is it but one strath all along the way from Loch Shin.

29,986. How many people could be accommodated there?—It is more than I can estimate.

29,987. A hundred families?—A hundred would be pinched for arable land, but there is a good deal of land, and there is what was reclaimed by the Duke at Shinness.

29,988. Do you see land reclaimed at Lochmore lodge?—Yes.

29,989. What sort of crop is that bearing?—A very good crop: there is not much of it, though—

29,990. That is because much of it was not reclaimed?—No, much of it was not reclaimed.

29,991. You have told us of these places you have named; are there any other suitable places in the Reay forest?—There is Strathmore; where is there a more suitable place in the north for tenants

29,992. Any other place?—I am not so well acquainted with that country as here.

29,993. I wish to ask you now about the fishing. Do you think the greater number of the people of Kinlochbervie would take to fishing at all if they were not compelled by their circumstances to do so?—A good many would not.

29,994. Have they become fishers principally from the fact that they were driven down to land they could not live upon?—I could not say that; I don't think that.*

29,995. How long have they been fishing there?—Since my memory carries me back.

29,996. And how many families were there at the time they began fishing?—Not so many as there are now, because the population is increasing.

29,997. Is it the natural increase of the population, or did people come from outside?—It is partly owing to both; but mainly the natural increase of the natives.

* The delegate has since written answering this question in the affirmative.

29,998. You never heard that people were sent here from Durness, did you?—I don't know that. Rhiconich, Sutherlandshire.

29,999. There is no general desire, is there, on the part of the people to remain fishing if they could get as much land as would maintain their families in comfort?—No, of course not. Donald Morrison.

30,000. How do you dispose of your fish, as a rule?—We have no convenience here at all, on this coast, for getting it to market. A railway to Laxford would benefit the North Highlands and Lewis.

30,001. But take the case at present: there is fishing going on here just now; do you get 7s. a cran for your herring?—Sometimes.

30,002. How is the fish taken away when you do get a market for it?—The Stornoway curers send steamboats here; and in a few cases the big boats from Stornoway take the herring from some of our local boats. They were going over to Stornoway lately, and unluckily met with a bad passage, and had to cast overboard most of what they had, so the herring brought nothing. The first steamboat that came from Stornoway gave us as low as 3s. a cran.

30,003. And were the prices then lower than they are now; were they below 7s. a cran?—Oh, yes.

30,004. When the herring does come to Loch Inchard, how long does it remain, as a rule?—Perhaps to the new year.

30,005. And does it come every year regularly?—No, it does not.

30,006. It only comes in certain years. Was there herring in the loch last year?—No.

30,007. Was there the year before?—It is three or four years since they visited the loch.

30,008. And during those three or four years you could not carry on herring fishing at all?—Sometimes,—we were in Glendhu last year, and herring come to one or other of our lochs regularly.

30,009. Do you go away from here to the fishing in other places?—Yes.

30,010. You follow the fish right round?—Yes.

30,011. Where do you generally go?—To Fraserburgh.

30,012. If there were fish here you would not require to go to Fraserburgh?—No, if there was a curing station here we would not.

30,013. You would have to go out to the open sea, would you?—Of course.

30,014. The fish in the inner part of the loch here, in Loch Inchard, could not be relied upon continuously?—No.

30,015. And you only get a catch of fish, such as you have now, at very long intervals?—Yes, in Loch Inchard, but regularly in Loch Laxford or Glendhu.

30,016. After your fish get to Stornoway, what do the curers there do with it?—They cure it and send it away to the continent.

30,017. You stated that you had two cows and followers, but no horse?—No horse. I have one in my possession, an old mare that was left by a man who went to America; he was too careless to shoot it. But it will not live with me.

30,018. I find from the map that you share in a grazing of 18,130 acres, and you stated that there are 101 crofters and 43 cottars, and that some of the cottars have stock?—Yes.

30,019. And graze them on the crofters' land, I suppose?—Yes.

30,020. That makes 144 people, who thus have a grazing of 124 acres each; according to the usual rule that gives each of you grazing for ten or twelve sheep; I am taking the rule that applies to the large farms. Now, have they all got some sheep stock?—Most of them, less or more.

30,021. Then you stated about Achlyness over here, that Mr Scott, the tenant of Balnakill, has got the farm of Balnakill, which is over 25,000 acres, that he has also the farm of Skercha, which is 5470 acres, and yet he is a crofter in Achlyness?—Yes.

30,022. How many crofters are there in Achlyness?—Five.

Rhiconich, Sutherland-shire.

Donald Morrison.

30,023. When did Mr Scott come to have Skercha farm?—I could not say.

30,024. Was it a small tenant who had it before him?—It was the late Mr Swanson, Rispond.

30,025. And do you know if there was any attempt made to get a tenant for it in this neighbourhood, in Kinlochbervie itself?—Mr Mackay, Kinlochbervie, had it for a short time.

30,026. Mr Mackay of the mill?—No, the tacksman of Sandwood.

30,027. And after he had it, was there an attempt made to let it to a crofter, do you know?—I could not say; I do not remember.

30,028. You did not hear of any?—No. They got tired of speaking about it by that time, and did not apply again.

30,029. But you did not hear that it was advertised, or that the people knew it was to let; because it seems to me to be a farm that a successful crofter could easily take. Do you think there were crofters about Kinlochbervie who would be in a position to take Skercha as a sheep farm if it were offered?—I don't know.

30,030. But you did not hear that the offer was given to any one?—No, I did not.

30,031. When you were giving us evidence about available land, I saw that you confined your attention to the parish of Eddrachillis?—Oh, not at all.

30,032. The places you named were all in the parish of Eddrachillis?—Yes.

30,033. But you see no reason why the people of Eddrachillis, if they got good holdings, would not take them wherever they would be found?—Certainly, they would go to Strathnaver, or Strathmore, or Strathbrora, or any place they could get.

30,034. Now, would an extension of your present grazings help you?—An extension of more arable land would suit us better.

30,035. It would enable you to have more comfortable houses, and to winter your stock?—Yes.

30,036. But you were not at all expressing the opinion that the people of Eddrachillis wanted to stay in Kinlochbervie?—No, of course, that could not be; they told us, at the last meeting, that they would willingly go miles away from it if they got suitable holdings.

30,037. Do you know the position of the people in Ceathramh-Garbh?—There are not many people there.

30,038. There is Ardmore?—Well, I can hardly tell you their condition: I know that they have rugged crofts down below their houses, which are not of much extent: and were it not that they are at Loch Laxford, where they can take to seafaring, they would be poorly off.

30,039. And yet the farms of Skercha and Rhimichie are near?—Yes.

30,040. How long has Rhimichie been of its present size?—For forty-five years.

30,041. The Chairman.—The Duke of Sutherland is not represented at this meeting, as we had not an opportunity of giving him notice; and, therefore, I want to ask you this: are the Kinlochbervie crofters in arrear with their fair rents, speaking generally, or are they well paid up?—Well, I suppose the Kinlochbervie tenants, as far as I know, have been about as clear with their rents as any on the estate.

30,042. On the whole they are pretty clear, are they?—Well, I cannot say they are very clear, the whole of them; but there are two rents now coming due. A good many of the crofters at the last rent time were provided with that year's rent, but owing to the dispute between the present Duke and the Duchess Dowager the rents were not collected. I had my rent at that time.

30,043. Ready to pay?—Ready to pay, but after that I was not sorry it was not paid, because I had to expend it for meal. I have not a large family, having been left a widower with four children, but I was obliged to buy 14 bolls of meal, as the croft was not sufficient.

30,044. Does it come to this, that if the rent collection had been fixed at the usual time a great number of the rents then due would have been paid?—Certainly, they would, then.

Rhiconich, Sutherland-shire.

Donald Morrison.

30,045. And yours among the rest?—Yes, but I was glad afterwards that it was not paid then.

30,046. You had to expend it for the necessary purposes of your family?—Yes.

30,047. Now, you mentioned land on the banks of Loch Merkland, and also on Loch Glendhu?—Yes.

30,048. May I take it that there is land for our consideration along the shores of Loch More, Loch Merkland, and Loch Shin?—So there is at Loch Merkland, on that side where this forester has a park. I have been in the habit of passing the place every year, for nearly thirty years back, in going down to Brora, to Gordonbush farm, and I see as good a crop off that park as I see in the country. A poor man going there could not get on without being assisted.

30,049. Is there no road there?—Of course, there is a principal road.

30,050. But to undertake a holding there, you would require assistance?—Yes, a poor crofter would not be fit to take it otherwise.

30,051. Then, do you ask our attention to any land on the banks of Loch Shin, or do you not know about that?—I am not acquainted there.

30,052. You make this statement 'However, it 'would not be advisable to break up the Reay forest, 'as the burden of taxation and rates would more than 'counterbalance profits without state aid in stocking 'the holdings.' Was that the reason why in your statement you did not make any reference to land in the Reay forest?—Well, of course, we include the Reay forest, the Glendhu side. It was other two men appointed at our meeting who gave the writer this statement. But there is Duartbeg where the sheep farmer is at present,—he is a stranger to this country,—that is a place that would be suitable for one. The tenant sits there as a shepherd and a farmer; he herds for himself.

30,053. Are you, as representing the meeting that appointed you a delegate, against any land being considered by us which is within the Reay forest? You are against the Reay forest being broken up, I understand?—Yes, if we would think that it would overburden us with rates.

30,054. The rental derived from the Reay forest is, in your opinion, valuable in keeping down the rates?—Yes, of course, it is. But on the other hand I know perfectly well Duartmore is down at the shore side, and a place where there were a few crofters before could be inhabited by a few again. The same is the case with Kylestrome where there is a forester now: there were families there before, though I don't know how many; and Maldie again.

30,055. I have noted that. Is this your view then, that you would be in favour of our considering land inside the forest if we thought it could be dealt with without breaking up the forest?—Yes, of course, without breaking up the forest.

30,056. But you are against our doing anything that would have the effect of breaking up the forest?—Certainly, because it would overburden us with taxation.

30,057. Mr. Sutherland.—How would it tax you? First of all, who are the men you say that are against the breaking up of the deer forest?—There are none against breaking up the deer forest if we could get land in the deer forest at a reasonable rent, and valued by the Commissioners. These places to the Glendhu side would be very suitable for a few crofters.

30,058. You know the way that taxation is levied, don't you; it is not on the subject but on the rent of the subject that it is levied?—Yes.

30,059. And would it matter to you, as a ratepayer, whether the rent is paid by yourselves or by the Duke of Westminster? Would not the taxation be the same?—No, if it would not put more taxation on it.

30,060. I want to know in what way you thought it would increase your taxation?—The heavy rental paid for this deer forest.

30,061. How much is it?—Well, I do not know. I think it is £2380.

30,062. Do you think they pay as much per acre as you do?—No, I don't think so.

30,063. Then, it would only take down your taxation if you only pay the same rent, you see? If you got the same land as the present tenant of the deer forest, and if you were to pay the same rent per acre as you pay now for your own holdings, you would pay just as much as the present tenant of the deer forest: so where would the increase of taxation be then?—No, I daresay not.

30,064. But you have already stated in answer to his lordship that if that were the case you would see no objection to breaking up the forest?—No, I would not on that ground.

Lachlan Ross. Lachlan Ross, Crofter, Achreisgill (60)—examined.

30,065. The Chairman.—You are a crofter at Achreisgill?—Yes.

30,066. Was your case dealt with by the Commission?—Yes.

30,067. What rent are you paying now?—£3, 10s.

30,068. Do you remember what your old rent was?—£2; my father was paying £2.

30,069. Was your father the tenant at the date when the Crofters Commission were here?—No; he died twenty years ago.

30,070. What rent were you paying when the Commission were here?—£3. My rent was raised by them 10s.

30,071. Do you agree with the evidence given by Mr Morrison?—I cannot say.

30,072. Tell us what you would like to say.—In reference to the Reay forest, Mr Morrison stated the whole between Glencoul and Foinaven as the Reay forest. The Glendhu farm, however, was never the Reay forest till a few years ago. The Reay forest does not cross the road that leads from Laxford to Lairg; it is on the north side of it altogether, between Foinaven and Ben Hee. Now, there is enough land at Kylestrome farm that could be made available between Scourie and Kylesen which is not the Reay forest, although it is under deer just now.

30,073. Not the old Reay forest?—Not the old Reay forest. That is how it comes to be put down in our statement. There is very little in the Reay forest that would be of use to the people here; only a bit about Loch More, that is the whole. But there is plenty between Kylestrome and Scourie, near the sea, where people could live comfortably here and there, and could prosecute the fishing at any time of the year.

30,074. And would you be in favour of new holdings being formed on land between Scourie and Kylestrome?—I would.

30,075. For fishermen?—Yes.

30,076. Now, what size of holding would you propose for fishermen situated between Scourie and Kylestrome?—It would be impossible to give them large holdings there: any person who would like to get a holding of an acre or two to help him, taking his liberty to fish anywhere he liked, could be settled there. When there is not so much land as would do for every one a man would be pleased with two or three acres, or three or four acres, or so, with the help of his fishing.

30,077. And would he depend more upon the fishing than upon the land, for his livelihood?—Well, sometimes.

30,078. Or both?—Sometimes.

30,079. But you are in favour, as I understand, of settlements between Scourie and Kylestrome, where occupants would depend partly on their crofts and partly on the fishing?—Decidedly.

30,080. And there is land between these two points suitable for such settlements?—Yes.

30,081. Can you tell us precisely what lands recently within your recollection have been added to the Reay forest in this district?—The whole of Glendhu farm. (Mr Watson, Surveyor—From Loch More to Kylesku.)

30,082. Then besides Glendhu farm there is this land you say between Scourie and Kylestrome?—Yes. Rhiconich, Sutherlandshire.

30,083. That land is at present occupied as forest. How was it occupied before it was afforested?—There were tenants. Lachlan Ross.

30,084. Small tenants?—Yes, small tenants, but I cannot tell how many were in each place.

30,085. Do the crofters whom you represent depend mainly on the fishing for their livelihood?—Oh, no; partly on the fishing and partly on the land.

30,086. And are those whom you represent in favour of that system?—Decidedly. If a man could get as much land in another place as would do, if he would get ten acres of land in any other place, I think he could live somewhat comfortably; but there is not that amount of land in our parish here for that purpose. But there is any amount of land in the parish of Durness. I was last year up in the forest there working at Strathmore. I went several times down Strathmore purposely to look at it, and I think any man would live better there if he had ten acres of land than he would do here by fishing, on the small lots they have.

30,087. Then, you are in favour, as I understand, of the establishment of holdings, both for fishermen who live partly by the sea and partly by their crofts, and also of holdings where the man would live entirely by his holding?—Yes.

30,088. Both these systems?—Yes.

30,089. And if it could be done you could relieve the whole of the Kinlochbervie crofters by taking away the cottars and migrating them elsewhere?—Well, it would be a great burden removed.

30,090. It would be a great advantage to the crofters and a great improvement to the cottars?—Yes, indeed.

30,091. Are the cottars at present living very much upon the crofters?—So they are.

30,092. And do these cottars pay rents just now?—No, they don't pay rents to us, but they pay 10s. for the site of their houses.

30,093. And have some of them stock upon the crofters' lands?—Yes.

30,094. Do they pay anything for that?—No.

30,095. They just get that by permission from the crofters?—Yes.

30,096. Have they a good deal of stock?—Some of them have. Some of them have as good stock as the crofters, and others nothing at all.

30,097. I don't want to ask names, but give us the case of a cottar with a good deal of stock?—There is not a cottar that has a great deal of stock, but there are crofters who have no stock at all.

30,098. But some cottars are better off than the crofters?—Than some of the crofters.

30,099. Have some of the cottars as many as two or three cows?—Oh, no, none of the cottars have that.

30,100. What sort of stock have they?—Some of them have a cow, others perhaps six or seven sheep.

30,101. Have any of them a horse?—No.

30,102. But they feed their stock, such as it is, on the crofters' lands?—Yes.

30,103. Mr Gordon.—How do you account for some of the cottars being better off than the crofters? Are they workmen?—They work at the fishing, and any other work they get to do: there are cottars here as poor as any crofter in the parish.

30,104. But the cottars who work at the fishing or at any other work they can get are on the whole well off, are they?—No: they might do well at the fishing one year and make nothing next year.

30,105. But I thought you said they followed the fish?—They do follow it, but perhaps they will not catch it. There is plenty fishing in Loch Inchard just now, but none since six years ago.

30,106. You say you were over in Strathmore last year working, and you looked down the strath and saw a lot of land. Now, how many people do you suppose you could place in Strathmore with ten acres of land each?—I daresay there is more than 200 acres of land there that could be taken in; there is a great deal of it that was arable land before.

30,107. Whereabouts is that? I would like you to Rhiconich, Sutherlandshire.

Lachlan Ross.

be a little more specific. Where is the land in Strathmore that you saw which would extend to 200 acres that either was arable or could be reclaimed?—I think from Gobernuis-geach to the end of the loch.

30,108. To Mussal?—Down a bit farther than that, to the end of Loch Hope.

30,109. We came down that way the other day, and I must say I did not see anything like that extent of land, nor anything approaching the half of it.—There is one bit at the upper end of Loch Hope that was never taken in.

30,110. Was that upon the farm of Eriboll?—Yes, and I am sure there are 100 acres in that one place.

30,111. Well, I am sure there are not 30 acres, but you and I might not be very good judges. I think there are just about 30; the upper haugh is all heather?—I might have miscalculated it, indeed, but I thought it was bigger than Achreisgill where I live.

30,112. There may be about 30 acres there; but taking the whole of that strath I don't suppose that you could locate more than six or eight people upon land that either was formerly arable or is of a nature that is reclaimable. Now, have you any other place to mention except what Morrison told us?—On this side of Kylestrome again, there is the isle of Handa, where there were eight families.

30,113. Where else?—The south side of Loch Laxford; there is one township there with only one tenant, Inver Clashfearn, at the sea.

30,114. Is there land there that could be reclaimed?—Yes, a very good bit of land.

30,115. It is not old arable land?—It could be made, a good bit.

30,116. How many families do you think could be placed there?—Only one family; it is in the factor's farm just now.

30,117. All the land that you and Mr Morrison have told us of, the land that is presently or has ever been arable, would only afford relief to about 20 families out of 144—I am going carefully by what you and he stated. Now, is there any number of the inhabitants of this district who would be willing to take small lots of an acre or half an acre at the seaside, and devote their whole time to fishing?—If they would get an acre or two no doubt they would be very willing to go there: I am sure it would be better for them to be there with two acres or even one acre than to be where they are without an acre at all.

30,118. And that they would take to fishing as a profession?—Well, if they were forced to do that.

30,119. But the difficulty here you see is that there is not land enough?—We must admit that the majority here depend more upon the land than upon the fishing, although the fishing does a great deal of good sometimes.

30,120. The difficulty that stares us in the face is that after all that you have been able to do traversing the whole county here, you have only been able to point out a very few places that are suitable for cultivation, and that would only be sufficient for a very few families?—Certainly, but many of us are quite willing to go elsewhere altogether, if holdings could be got. This Reay forest comes down to the sea.

30,121. But is there any arable land in the Reay forest?—No doubt there are bits. There is Badnabea first of all. But I think there is more arable land in Glendhu than in the Reay forest.

30,122. Either you or Mr Morrison mentioned the land at Loch More. Now that has been afforested for forty years?—Yes, but we mentioned Loch Merkland.

30,123. Is that not in the centre of the old forest?—So it is, but it does not belong to the old forest.

30,124. Mr Sutherland.—I asked Mr Morrison a question about how the people came to be there, and he said that perhaps you might know more about it. What do you know of Achreisgill for instance?—My grandfather was, shall I say, evicted to it because he was only a servant to Forbes. He was sent down from Tongue to Achreisgill.

30,125. What sort of place did he come to in Achreisgill?—He lived in Achreisgill after I was born.

30,126. Did he get a house ready to go into, and arable land to cultivate?—No, he did not get a house, and he did not get a bit of land either; only it was 'go there and live if you can in it.'

30,127. How did that holding get on? Is that the same place you are in now?—I told you that he did not get a bit of land at all.

30,128. I beg your pardon, I did not catch that?—My grandfather, on my father's side, Robert Ross, was living at Scourie, and—

30,129. I will make it short for you. My point is this, when your people were sent there, did they get a holding ready made for them?—No, they just made it themselves.

30,130. Out of what sort of land?—Out of the worst you ever saw.

30,131. Now, I want you to fix that sort of land in your mind for a moment, the land your grandfather got when he went there, and to tell me how much of that quality of land is in the Reay forest?—There is a good deal.

30,132. Are there 100,000 acres, or almost the whole of it?—Well, the most of the forest except what is opposite the road leading from Laxford to Lairg; you knew there are some bits of good soil there.

30,133. But is it of as good soil as your grandfather got when he went to Achreisgill?—It is moss altogether in the forest, except Loch More.

30,134. What sort of land was this you got at Achreisgill?—Stony land, and good soil in it when you made it. There could be very good land made at Loch More, at Achfary.

30,135. Keeping that in your mind, do you think there is the slightest difficulty of getting hundreds of acres of that sort of land for the people of Kinlochbervie?—There is no difficulty there.

30,136. You talked about land between Scourie and Kylesku?—Yes.

30,137. Is the land that you pointed out there as good land or worse than the land at Achreisgill was?—Some of it is better.

30,138. You also said that you were in favour of forming holdings for settlers who would be both crofters and fishermen?—Yes.

30,139. Is that of choice? Do you believe from your own experience at Kinlochbervie that that is a form of holding that ought to be encouraged?—Some of them would not like to give over the practice of fishing.

30,140. Why?—Because sometimes it pays very well. They would not like to be driven from that without getting 20 or 30 acres of land to live on.

30,141. But you are shutting out of your mind the possibility of getting that?—We could not get it here.

30,142. If an offer were made of 20 or 30 acres of arable land with suitable pasture attached, would the majority of the people of Kinlochbervie take such holdings and leave the fishing?—How could they take it?

30,143. Would they, if they got the chance, take it and leave the fishing?—Yes, if they could work such a holding; but their poverty would not allow them to work it.

30,144. But if they got the chance of taking a holding of 20 or 30 acres of arable land with the pasture attached, would they take it, or would they stick to the fishing?—I am sure if they were able to take it they would do so and drop the fishing; I would do it myself.

30,145. Have you had much experience of the fishing?—I have been prosecuting the fishing ever since I remember.

30,146. And have you upon the whole been successful? Has it helped you much?—Sometimes it would help me, and sometimes not. Sometimes it would be better than anything, and at other times it would be better for me not to touch it at all.

30,147. Balancing the one against the other, do you think you had wages for your labour out of it?—Well, sometimes.

30,148. But putting the good and bad together?—Taking it on the average, it would not pay my labour. But there are some here who live almost entirely by it; a good many cottars live by the fishing altogether.

iconich, therland-ire.

chlan Ross.

30,149. Because they have no land?—They have no land, and they must try their best there; but if I could get land I would never run after the fish.

30,150. With regard to land at Strathmore, you were asked a question as to the amount of arable land there, and you said 200 acres?—I meant what could be taken in.

30,151. I thought there was some difference about that. But it would depend very much, would it not, upon the standard of arable land you had in your mind: if you were to include such land as you had at Achreisgill, you think a great deal more would be capable of being made arable?—I am sure of it.

30,152. The Chairman.—Are you, yourself, very much attached to the occupation of a fisherman as a business?—My days are gone now, and I think I might not care, although I would not make much more out of the sea in my life, for I am an old man now, and my family are all away in different parts of the world, but I would like to try the fishing sometimes yet.

30,153. When the chance occurs?—When I had the chance.

30,154. Are a great number of the Kinlochbervie crofters attached to the fishing?—Oh, yes, no doubt: they must do the best they can.

30,155. But if they got holdings where they could live without going to sea?—A good many would prefer it.

30,156. And what about the rest?—Some would be inclined for fishing, and others partly for fishing, and partly for land.

30,157. In your opinion, is there a large portion of the old Reay forest unsuitable for crofter occupation?—There is a great deal of the Reay forest unsuitable for cultivation,—most of it, except what is round Loch More up there. Beyond what is in that strip there is nothing fit for cultivation in the Reay forest.

30,158. Mr Sutherland.—Did you know a James Campbell?—Yes, I did.

30,159. He is dead now, I presume?—He is dead long ago.

30,160. Do you know that that man was sent to Kinlochbervie when Rispond was cleared?—About that time, I think, he came from Loch Eribol, and he had come from Strathnaver to Loch Eribol. They sent him from Grumbeg or Grummore in Strathnaver.

30,161. Then, do you know a John Mackay?—Where was he from?

30,162. From a place called Port-Chamail on Loch Eriboll?—Yes, he was in Kinlochbervie.

30,163. And did you know a Murdo Morrison?—I know one Murdo Morrison, Badcall.

30,164. Do you know where he came from?—His ancestors were removed from Strathnaver.

30,165. But that was not the natural increase of the population when all these men were sent here from other places?—It increased them at the time.

30,166. But that is not a natural process,—the process of eviction?—Oh, no.

30,167. It was stated that the township was congested from the natural increase of the population. Is it not the fact that it was congested also to a large extent by the people being put in from outside?—To be sure: they were shoved from the straths up there and from the parish of Tongue into it.

30,168. And you are of opinion that these people's descendants who are there could go back to the places their forefathers came from?—Some of them would be very glad to do it.

[ADJOURNED.]

THIRTY-FIRST SITTING.

Scourie, Sutherland-shire.

SCOURIE, SUTHERLANDSHIRE.

October 20, 1893.

Present:—

DAVID BRAND, Esq., Advocate, Sheriff of Ayr, and Chairman of the Crofters Commission, Chairman.
ANGUS SUTHERLAND, Esq., M.P.
JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq.
GEORGE GORDON, Esq.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

ALEXANDER MACLEOD, Crofter, Scourie Village (43) —examined.

Alexander Macleod.

30,169. The Chairman.—Were you appointed as a delegate to appear before us?—No.

30,170. You come just as an individual?—Yes.

30,171. Are you a crofter?—Yes.

30,172. Was your case considered by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

30,173. Is your holding No. 50?—Yes.

30,174. I see the area is 2 acres 2 roods 5 poles, arable; 1 acre 3 roods 38 poles outrun; and a share in a common of 6500 acres, and an enlargement was granted to the applicants in Badcall, Scouriemore, and Scourie village. The old rent was £4, 4s. 9d., and the fair rent for the enlarged holding is £4, 12s.?—Yes.

30,175. Have you a written statement?—No.

30,176. Just tell us in your own words what you wish to say.—Yes, I will do that. I want a larger holding, the present holding is not sufficient to support myself and my family.

30,177. What family have you?—Five.

30,178. And your wife?—Yes.

30,179. How do you earn your livelihood at present?—Just by anything I can get to do.

30,180. Labouring?—Yes.

30,181. Do you do fishing at all?—No.

30,182. And do you get labour pretty constantly?—No, there is no labour at all.

30,183. Where do you mostly get work then?—I was getting labouring in the forest now for some years back.

30,184. You mean in the Reay forest?—Yes.

30,185. What sort of labour had you there?—Common labour, working with horses, or anything I could do.

30,186. And do you get that now?—I had it for the last two years, but for seven years before that I was not allowed to work.

30,187. Does such labour continue during the year, or is it only at certain times?—During the summer season.

30,188. You say you wish a larger holding. Can you point us to where the larger holding could be obtained in the district?—Yes.

30,189. Where is that?—Oh, the forest is wide.

30,190. What part of the forest in particular?—Badnabay, I want Badnabay and a share of the hills.

30,191. Is it at the head of Loch Laxford?—Yes. [Mr Maciver.—On this side next to Scourie.]

30,192. What kind of land is there; is there old arable land there?—Yes, there is old arable.

30,193. Can you tell us what extent of old arable there is?—No, I cannot.

30,194. But are there a number of acres at all events?—There are a few acres whatever; there are two parks, and there could be more added.

30,195. By bringing in land?—Yes.

30,196. How many holdings could be put there, do you think?—They could be scattered through; there could not be many holdings put on the one place, but all over

Scourie, Sutherlandshire.

Alexander Macleod.

30,197. Is there an area of ground there and in that neighbourhood, which would allow of the settlement of a number of crofters?—Yes, along the road up through the forest.

30,198. That is the road leading to Loch Stack and Lochinver?—Yes, leading to Lairg.

30,199. Is all that past Laxford Bridge?—Yes.

30,200. And it is all at present under forest, is it?—Yes.

30,201. What size of holding have you in view?—What would keep a horse, or two horses, and four cows, and so many sheep, but I would get assistance from Government to stock it. Government was offering money to people to go to America, and I don't see why we should not get money to stock land here.

30,202. Since you have raised that matter I had better ask you. Have you in view to undertake a new holding only with assistance?—Just with assistance.

30,203. Assistance for stocking?—Yes.

30,204. And assistance for anything else?—Anything else that would be necessary.

30,205. Have you estimated what amount of assistance you would require?—No, I have not.

30,206. But I understand you to mean you would not be prepared to leave where you are and go to Badnabay without assistance?—No, I cannot leave the place I have now till I get another.

30,207. Now, is there any other suitable land in this district?—Yes.

30,208. Where is it?—I will commence with the island of Handa.

30,209. Is that good grazing land?—Yes, and good arable land too.

30,210. And has there been arable land there cultivated?—Yes.

30,211. Was there a township there at one time?—Yes, eight or nine families and two cottars.

30,212. Well, besides Badnabay and Handa, is there any other land?—Weaver's Bay, on this side of Badnabay: there was a crofter there before.

30,213. It is not far from Badnabay?—No, on Loch Laxford side.

30,214. How is that land occupied at present?—By Mr Maciver.

30,215. Is it part of the Scourie farm?—Yes.

30,216. Is it under rotation at present, or under grass?—It is under grass. It has been under grass since I was born I daresay.

30,217. It was always under grass in your recollection?—I don't remember any time when it was not.

30,218. Is there any other place you wish to mention?—There is another place called Findlebeg beyond that.

30,219. On what side of the loch?—This side of the loch.

30,220. The left hand side looking down?—Yes.

30,221. Is it also a part of Scourie farm?—Yes.

30,222. And is it under grass at present?—Yes.

30,223. Is there any other place?—You can go up the forest all the way one may say.

30,224. You mean up by Loch Stack, and Loch More, and Loch Merkland, and Loch Shin?—Well, I don't want to go past Loch More.

30,225. Is there suitable land, in your opinion, on the shores of Loch More?—Yes.

30,226. On both sides?—On one side, the south side.

30,227. On the right hand side of the road as you go up to Loch Merkland?—Yes.

30,228. Can you give us the names of any places there, or old places?—There is Loch More and Achfarry, there could be crofters in these places.

30,229. Besides Achfarry and Loch More, are there any other small places there?—No.

30,230. But you ask our attention to the lands on the right hand side of the road running by the margin of Lochmore?—Yes.

30,231. From the one end of it to the other?—Yes.

30,232. Now, is there anywhere else?—We will go now to Glencoul; there were crofters there at one time.

30,233. What is the name of any place or places there?—Just Glencoul itself.

30,234. How is that land used at present?—It is part of the forest.

30,235. Were there crofters in Glencoul at one time?—Yes, I understand there were four or five crofters there; I heard so, but I am not sure.

30,236. You have that from information, not of your own knowledge?—No.

30,237. Anywhere else?—There is a place between Glencoul and Glendhu called Aird-da-Loch.

30,238. On the tongue of land between the two lochs?—Yes.

30,239. Are these all the places you wish to mention, or are there more?—There are plenty more. Coming now to Glendhu, there were crofters there.

30,240. Were there crofters at Maldie?—Yes.

30,241. And crofters at Glendhu itself?—Yes.

30,242. Anywhere else?—Kylestrome.

30,243. Is that land under forest at present?—Yes, there were 16 crofters there at one time.

30,244. And is the land lying between Kylestrome and Scourie, so far as not in the hands of the crofters, suitable for our consideration?—Yes.

30,245. Is it under forest, or in farms?—Part under forest and part farm.

30,246. The forest is the Reay forest?—Yes.

30,247. And what farm is it you refer to?—Duartbeg. [Mr Maciver.—The forest is Glendhu forest, separate from the Reay forest.]

30,248. Is there any other land?—Not that I am aware of.

30,249. As I understand, you do not live by your holding at present, but mainly by labour?—Mainly by labour. My corn this year would hardly cut; it would not take binding.

30,250. You mean it is so short?—So short. As to the park that I have my hay on, a boat could swim on it, and for the last six weeks I have had to go knee deep in water to reach the hay.

30,251. What stock have you got?—A horse, mare, and foal.

30,252. And how many cows?—A cow and a stot.

30,253. Have you any sheep?—Twenty sheep.

30,254. Ewes?—But I cannot call them mine.

30,255. Are they pledged, or why are they not yours?—They belong to Mr Macdonald, in the village; he gave them to me to be paid for as I could.

30,256. You mean that they are yours, but you are owing part of the price?—Yes.

30,257. Mr Sutherland.—With regard to these lands you have mentioned, are they, in your opinion, suitable for cultivation?—I think they are: they were under cultivation before, and I do not see why they should not be so now; only there would be a great deal of labour in taking any in, because they are all out under rushes and ferns.

30,258. Do you ever hear it mentioned that these lands were now not so good for pasture as they were before?—I think they are as good for pasture, only the principal parts that were under cultivation before are now under rushes and ferns.

30,259. You mean that the grass is overborne by the ferns and the rushes?—The ferns and the rushes killed the grass.

30,260. So then it is not so good grazing as it was before, now that it has been let out of cultivation for some time?—Oh, no, that is sure enough.

30,261. And is that, in your opinion, one reason why the pasture is deteriorated now on these sheep farms and deer forest?—The people were put out of it.

30,262. But is that one of the reasons, do you think?—Certainly.

30,263. Have you ever seen land cultivated on grazings for the purpose of improving the pasture? Do you ever see that in this part of the country?—No, I don't think so.

30,264. Did you ever hear it said that land was being improved for the purpose of improving the pasture?—No.

30,265. But, in your opinion, would the grazing be better and be able to carry more stock if it had some arable land upon it?—Oh, certainly it would.

30,266. And do you know the state of the pasture in a deer forest: is it improving, or getting worse?—It is getting worse.

30,267. In what way?—The grass is getting wilder, and it is allowed to lie from year to year rotting.

30,268. And the tendency is in the case of a deer forest for land to go back to a state of nature, is it?—Certainly. It is a shame to see the grass in the Reay forest going rotting as it is, and poor people's cattle starving for want of grass.

30,269. And have you both these things side by side,—ground as bare as a table, and grass rotting in the forest?—You can see it here, the grass about the door here is as bare as my hand, and grass in the forest that you could take a scythe and cut.

30,270. And that is allowed to rot?—Who is to eat it? the deer won't eat it.

30,271. And is the tendency for the land to go back into a state of nature when the grass is allowed to go that way,—is the grass getting wilder?—It is getting wilder, certainly.

30,272. And there are plenty places of that kind in the Reay forest?—Plenty. There are many places where there used to be a crofter, but which you would not know now, the place is so wild.

30,273. You have a holding yourself here?—Yes.

30,274. Would you like a larger holding?—Yes, to support myself and my family.

30,275. Does not this holding support your family?—No, it will not keep me in potatoes scarcely.

30,276. It does not pay you for your labour?—No, you have to sit at it, or it would go to pot.

30,277. You could attend as well to a holding three times the size of your present one?—Yes, if it was not for the bad weather; if I had a holding that I could stock all over from the one end of the year to the other, I could make a living by it.

30,278. But your holding is not profitable, because it is too small?—It is not profitable at all. One half of the land that I have won't take a crop at all.

30,279. Do you not take the rent of the land out of the holding?—I can hardly get my own labour out of it, you hardly get the return of the corn sown. This same year for instance the half of my corn would not take binding.

30,280. But this is an exceptional year?—Well, last year and every year is always the same. I have been working at it from winter to winter since I was able to work, and my forefathers before me.

30,281. And you think their labour is largely thrown away, because the subject is unprofitable to begin with?—Yes, because it is every year turned over and over again.

30,282. And become exhausted?—Yes, the ground is run out to nothing.

30,283. And I suppose this other land that you mentioned to the Chairman is exhausted, through not being laboured?—Exactly.

30,284. You stated that you would require assistance to stock a holding?—Yes.

30,285. That, of course, naturally would depend on the size of holding you think desirable?—Yes.

30,286. Could you give us any idea of the size?—Well, I would like a holding where I could keep a horse, perhaps two.

30,287. Could you give us an idea of the approximate acreage that would be required for that purpose?—No, I cannot.

30,288. But it is a considerably larger holding than that you have now?—Yes, if I get the hill along with it.

30,289. Do you know how many families there are in Scourie?—How many that have crofts do you mean?

30,290. No, altogether. Well, give me the number of crofters to begin with?—There are 11 crofters in the village, and 22 in Scouriemore; I think that is all.

30,291. And are there people without land then?—Yes.

30,292. How many?—There will be 4 or 5 I daresay.

30,293. Do you know what acreage all these people hold among them?—No, I do not know.

30,294. Is the whole of their land as big as the Scourie farm?—The arable land do you mean?

30,295. No, the whole area they occupy?—Oh, I think it is bigger; but the tenants have bad land.

30,296. And the Scourie farm is in the occupation of one man?—Yes.

30,297. And the other 36 have only got perhaps twice as much?—I cannot say as to that.

30,298. And the Scourie farm is by no means the biggest in this neighbourhood?—It is the biggest here.

30,299. The biggest farm, but it is nothing as compared with the forest, not a fleabite?—Not a patch upon it.

30,300. And that is all in the occupation of one man for non-productive purposes?—It is.

30,301. And you think that it is a state of matters that could easily be remedied?—I think so. I went the other night through the forest at dead of night, and I was actually afraid for my life, lest the deer should put their horns through me. It was the first time in my life I was afraid of them; they were on every side of me.

30,302. You would have some difficulty in stocking a holding?—Yes.

30,303. Is your ground here overstocked, the common grazing of the people of Scourie?—I think it is pretty well overstocked now: those who had not stock before are getting it up now, and that will make the ground overstocked in a very short time.

30,304. But with the natural increase of stock would you be afraid to undertake a larger holding than you have now?—I don't think I would, if I could stock it.

30,305. If you got easy terms for a while?—Yes.

30,306. It would all depend on that, would it not?—Yes, it would all depend on that.

30,307. No doubt, you were speaking for yourself, but you will have some knowledge of the opinions of the people hereabouts through living here always,—you are a native of this place?—Well, I know that they want land, for some of them applied for land before and did not get it.

30,308. To whom did they apply?—Five applied to the Crofters Commission.

30,309. For what?—For this part of Duartmore; that is a place I did not mention to his lordship.

30,310. They applied for that?—They applied for that and they did not get it. Others applied for Handa.

30,311. Stop one moment. They applied for Duartmore, which is in the deer forest?—Yes.

30,312. Do you know the reason assigned for their not getting it?—I cannot say, but some of them are here.

30,313. Was it, do you know, for fear of doing material injury to the forest?—Quite likely it was. [The Chairman.—Have you seen the Order? It is a pity to talk of the thing if you have not seen the Order.—No.]

30,314. But they did not get it,—it was not taken out of the forest and given to them?—No. [The Chairman.—You were not a party to the application, were you?—No.]

30,315. Then, that is an indication of the desire of the people to get land?—Yes. Others applied for Handa; the Tarbat people applied for Handa but did not get it.

30,316. But there was another arrangement made regarding Handa, was there not?—Yes.

30,317. What other indication have you of the desire of the people to get more land?—I suppose most of them want more land.

30,318. Have they ever made any application to the estate management for land to your knowledge?—I cannot tell as to that myself.

30,319. You did not hear of any?—Likely enough, some of them did. I, myself, applied for more land,

Scourie, Sutherlandshire.

Alexander Macleod.

some years ago, when there was a lot vacant down in the village. I applied for a part of it, but got no answer.

30,320. But you think there is a sufficient indication of the desire of the people for such holdings?—I think there is, if they had the pluck to shift.

30,321. Would they, do you think?—I think they would; of course, I cannot tell. But I know that I would shift to-morrow if I got the chance.

30,322. Then, these lands that you have mentioned to his lordship here were mentioned because you thought they were fit for cultivation, and one of the reasons was that they were in occupation before?—Yes, I thought when there were crofters on it before they would be able to make a living now.

30,323. Did you ever hear that the people themselves wanted to be put out of their holdings?—No, I did not hear that.

30,324. Did you know that Mr Maciver stated at Durness that the Duke of Sutherland was petitioned by the people themselves to get them put away?—I did not hear that. [Mr Maciver.—To emigrate to America.]

30,325. Did you ever hear that?—I never heard that. All that I heard was the late Duke of Sutherland saying to the ground officer to evict any crofter that was two years in arrear.

30,326. Then, you did not hear anything of the people themselves petitioning to be emigrated?—No, I did not.

30,327. That, in your opinion, was not the reason why the people were removed from the places they were in before, that they wished to go themselves?—Well, I know that I wished to go myself.

30,328. Where to?—To America; but when I heard of this Royal Commission which is sitting here at present coming round I thought I would wait till I saw what they would do for me.

30,329. But was that your desire, because you thought there was no land in Sutherland fitted for you to make a home?—No.

30,330. Was it rather because you just despaired of getting such land though you knew it was there?—Because I despaired of getting it.

30,331. All these lands, you think, are perfectly fitted for the purpose we are sent here for?—I thought when there were crofters here before there might be crofters now.

30,332. But quite apart from that you have been living here yourself and had an opportunity of knowing the circumstances, and being a practical farmer yourself, would you think there is a prospect of success if such holdings were given?—I am quite prepared to take one of them myself to-morrow.

30,333. The Chairman.—I see the ground on which Mr Macintyre disposed of the application you referred to was this:—'Finds that the applicants have applied for 'enlargement of holdings by taking land from the farm 'of Scouriebeg, presently let to and occupied and poss-'essed by Mr Evander Maciver: Finds that the part 'of the said farm specially asked is locally known as 'Handa Island and Eilean an Aigich: Finds that at 'the date of the hearing all the applicants, with one 'exception, were considerably in arrear of rent: Finds 'it proved on the evidence that the applicants are not 'able properly to stock the land for which application 'is made under and in terms of sec. 12 (2) of the Act: 'Therefore sustains the objection taken at the hearing 'on that ground by the respondent: Refuses the appli-'cation and dismisses the same.'

30,334. Mr Gordon.—Is the demand for land in this township more for arable land than for pasture?—I think pasture is what we need most. There is not much arable land hereabout; of course, there is some.

30,334*a*. How many sheep would there be on this hill?—Perhaps about 1000 sheep now.

30,335. Have you any idea of the extent of the ground?—No, I have not.

30,336. And how many cattle have the 36 crofters, do you think?—I really cannot tell; some have less and some more.

30,337. Would you have an average of four?—Oh, no.

30,338. Would you have an average of three?—I think that would take it all.

30,339. About 100 cattle and 1000 sheep?—Yes.

30,340. How many horses?—Twenty-eight horses.

30,341. That would be equal to a stock in all of 1600 to 1800 sheep on the ground. Now, looking at the ground as we see it, it seems to me to be overstocked, that is to say, you are more in want of pasture than of arable land?—Well, the way the thing is managed has a great deal to do with it. The sheep and cattle are not kept on the hill.

30,342. They come close down upon the green ground?—They come to the corner, which I think is a sin.

30,343. Have you any system of management; have you a souming at all?—Yes.

30,344. And is the souming list adhered to by the crofters?—They went through the form; that is all.

30,345. Have you a committee of management?—Yes.

30,346. And do the crofters, as a rule, obey their orders?—I am one of the committee myself.

30,347. Well, do the public, as a rule, obey you?—No, they don't. I want to get the yeld sheep and the cattle and horses on to the hill.

30,348. It would improve your position here if you could separate the cattle from the sheep and put the sheep at some distance from the crofts?—Yes, it would, at certain times of the year; but this ground is so bad.

30,349. It is not bad ground, you cannot say that; it may be overstocked, but what is in sight is not bad land?—The upper part is bad.

30,350. That may be; is it floe ground?—It is floe ground.

30,351. The lower part is very good ground; it is very bare simply because it is too hard eaten?—Yes, that is quite right.

30,352. Assuming that you were yourself to shift, what size of croft would you like?—A croft that would keep a horse, with four or five cows and followers.

30,353. You would require ten acres of arable land at least?—If the pasture was good, less than that would do, where they could winter out a good part of the day during the winter.

30,354. Could you give me a general idea of the number of stock that you would like, how many sheep?—A few hundreds of sheep.

30,355. You would soon take up a corner of the forest at that rate?—That is what I want.

30,356. But suppose that you had less than a few hundred; suppose you had 100?—So far, I would be satisfied with 100.

30,357. How many people in the village of Scourie have the same views as yourself in regard to stocking?—Not one.

30,358. Do you know any one else who would be willing to flit?—I don't think so; there may be some, but if there are they are very dumb about it.

30,359. They are pretty well satisfied, as a rule, then, the others?—It looks very like it.

30,360. Now, there is one statement you made which I think I would like to give you an opportunity of either restating or correcting. You said that the last time the Duke of Sutherland came to Scourie, he instructed the ground officer to evict any man who was two years in arrear?—He said in my hearing to the ground officer, 'Any man that is two years in arrear, 'evict him.' There was another man present at the time, a man from Tarbat.

30,361. That is a very strong statement to make, unless well supported by evidence?—It is as true as that I am standing here.

30,362. The Chairman.—What is the name of the other man who was present?—Donald Mackenzie, Tarbat.

30,363. Is he alive?—Yes.

30,364. Is he a crofter?—I think he is rather a cottar; he has a sublet.

30,365. What was the occasion of that statement being made?—I cannot tell indeed; it was at the inn, where I was at the time.

30,366. Was it in front of the inn?—Yes.

30,367. Can you give me the date of it?—It was the last time he was round here; I am not sure as to the date.

30,368. What time of the year was it?—It was in harvest time, I think, or in summer.

30,369. Of what year?—Two or three years ago.

30,370. What was the occasion of the Duke being here?—He just came on his round.

30,371. Who was with him?—The Duchess.

30,372. The late Duchess?—Yes, the Duchess Dowager.

30,373. And who else?—There were no others.

30,374. Was Mr Maciver there?—Not at the time.

30,375. Was anybody else there that you remember?—No, there were just the four of us altogether, his Grace, and the ground officer, and I, and this man from Tarbat.

30,376. What was the name of the ground officer?—He is at present ground officer here—James Mackay.

30,377. Then, what was the occasion of the conversation?—I heard no conversation at all.

30,378. How did you happen to be there, may I venture to ask?—I went to see his Grace about getting iron for the roof of my house, as the water was coming in.

30,379. Did you speak to him personally?—Yes, I did.

30,380. And what did he say?—He said it was a pity I did not come when Mr Maciver was there. I showed him the house and he wanted me to write to him to Dunrobin, which I did, and after doing so there came back word that it was not granted.

30,381. Word from whom?—From his Grace.

30,382. But who wrote you? Who gave you the word; or was it a verbal message?—From the secretary.

30,383. Mr. Wright?—Yes.

30,384. And was the Duke apparently quite willing at the time to consider your application for iron?—He looked like it when I showed him the house.

30,385. He was perfectly cordial and courteous in his manner?—Yes, quite; oh, yes.

30,386. What led to this conversation about evicting?—I cannot tell; I just heard the words of him talking to the ground officer.

30,387. This man from Tarbat was along with you?—Yes.

30,388. Had he an application to make to the Duke?—He was seeing about something or other, I don't know what it was.

30,389. He had some claim of his own that he wanted to submit to the Duke?—Yes.

30,390. Do you know what the Duke said to him?—I cannot tell.

30,391. Was the interview between the Duke and the man from Tarbat a perfectly agreeable interview?—Oh, yes, quite.

30,392. There were no words of an unpleasant kind?—No.

30,393. All was quite agreeable?—Quite agreeable.

30,394. Then, in these circumstances, what led to this observation about evicting?—I cannot tell; just that I heard the words.

30,395. Do you know to whom he referred as being in arrear?—I cannot tell; yon were just the words he said to the ground officer.

30,396. And what did the ground officer say in reply?—He as much as put with him.

30,397. What did he say?—Oh, I cannot tell what he said.

30,398. Do you remember if he said anything?—I cannot go through it, and there is no use for me to say it. [Mr Gordon.—If you were near enough to hear the Duke make that statement, you must have been near enough to hear the answer?—I was that much vexed to hear such words coming out of the Duke's month that I could not pick it up.]

30,399. Did you make any observation yourself, when you heard this statement by the Duke?—No.

30,400. Were you in arrear at the time?—No

30,401. Then, it did not apply to you?—No, no.

30,402. Was the man from Tarbat in arrear? He is a cottar?—He is a cottar, but he had his house rent to pay, and I think he was seeing his Grace about that.

30,403. Was he in arrear?—Yes, of his house rent.

30,404. It did not apply to you?—No, it did not apply to me. [Mr Gordon.—The statement was so extraordinary, and different from what I have ever understood of the Duke, that I could not help giving the witness an opportunity of explaining it.—Well, sir, yon was what I heard, and I was very sorry to hear it out of his mouth.]

30,405. Was anybody evicted after that?—No, my Lord, none.

30,406. Not a human being?—Oh, no, there was none.

30,407. Did you hear of any steps being taken in that direction by the ground officer?—No, none.

30,408. Mr Forsyth.—Can you give me any idea or the prices of stock that have been current for crofters' stock in the district lately?—The prices were very bad this year, worse than ever was.

30,409. What have you been getting for your stirks, let us say: do you sell your cattle as stirks?—Perhaps £2 for a three-year-old.

30,410. Then, you keep your cattle till they are three-year-olds?—Some do and others do not; some send them as year-olds, just as they can get them sold.

30,411. You think £2 is the usual price for a three year old here?—Oh, no, it is not; I have seen £6 given for a three-year-old. Prices are very much down.

30,412. But I want to know the prices during the last two or three years. Can you tell me the average price say for an ordinary crofter's three-year-old?—No, I cannot, because the prices were not the same all the year through.

30,413. Of course, they are not the same, but you can give me no idea of what they are worth on an average?—That depends on the class of beasts.

30,414. Would you take £6 then as an average or somewhere near it?—Oh, no, they would not average that.

30,415. Would they average £4?—I hardly think so.

30,416. Then, as to sheep, do the people sell their lambs off the hill here?—Yes, when they can get them off.

30,417. Have they been sold lately?—Not this year.

30,418. Have they sold cattle this year?—Yes.

30,419. Do you think there are more sheep than usual on the hill owing to the holding of stock?—Well, I have seen more sheep on the hill than are there now, but I think there were too many on at that time; the bulk of them died. But I think the hill will soon be pretty well stocked.

30,420. Yes, of course, if you do not sell, but it is not likely to be overstocked?—Well, the most of them that had not a share before are getting up stock for themselves now.

30,421. Have you any method of regulating the stock?—Yes.

30,422. But then it appears to vary very much. Is it that some of the people have not had the stock they might have had and now are putting them upon it; or is it that the people are just holding their stock and increasing them without reference to regulations?—Those that had not stock are buying new stock for themselves, and those that had too much stock before will have to reduce it.

30,423. But they have the overstock on now?—Yes.

30,424. Won't that account a good deal for the bareness of the hill, and also the fact that the stock are lying too much down on the green ground?—Yes, that is so.

30,425. Have you proposed among yourselves to make any regulations by which your stock could be better kept over the hill ground?—I thought that would be done when the committee was appointed.

30,426. But the committee has not worked well, so far?—They don't keep the beasts to the hill.

30,427. Have you any shepherd to look after the stock?—We have two.

Scourie, Sutherlandshire.

Alexander Macleod.

30,428. And do they not take pains to keep the stock in the proper place?—No, they don't.

30,429. But is not that within your power to alter; could not the committee deal with your shepherds?—Yes, if the committee would do it, but none of them will do it but myself, and I am making my tongue thin with speaking to them.

30,430. What remedy do you propose if the shepherds don't do their duty?—What can you do to them when they will not do their duty and the committee won't force them to do it?

30,431. Don't you think it would be advisable to get the committee to force them to do it?—Well, I have tried it, and cannot get them to do that.

30,432. You appear to have done all that you possibly can do; but in the event of your having extended grazings, don't you think this will act very prejudicially in the future? Supposing your grazings and holdings were much enlarged and increased; suppose a considerable portion of the forest or the farm land were to be added to holdings here, don't you think it would be necessary to look a great deal more sharply after your shepherds and keep your stock better over the land?—Certainly.

30,433. Do you think that would be done in the future?—When it was not done in the past, how will it be done in the future unless they take an interest in it? At clipping time there were five of my own sheep that I took home, as they were bad with pining.

30,434. This does not point to a very satisfactory working of the existing land?—It does not.

30,435. Do you think it would not be possible to get your neighbours to join with you in a more energetic working of the pasture lands you have?—When they will not do it, you cannot force them to do it. I tried all in my power to get them to do it. They ate part of my own hay after eating my neighbour's hay. There was one of the Popes there who was day and night keeping the sheep out of the corn, and we are paying for two shepherds, which I think is a perfect disgrace. We could not get any good from our cows, and the top part of our ground is lying waste, part of it being grazed by Mr Maciver's sheep; they eat the north-east side of the ground.

30,436. Have you a head dyke here between the crofts and the hill?—There is a sort of dyke on part of it.

30,437. How are the shepherds paid?—They get £30 a year between them, father and son.

30,438. Who pays them?—The crofters.

30,439. And the committee has the power of dealing with them?—Yes.

30,440. But the committee will not interest themselves in the matter?—It seems not when they will not see the sheep out of the other man's corn.

30,441. Then, finally, how do you propose to deal with such a question as this in the future, supposing you had larger grazings and holdings?—Get new shepherds.

30,442. But suppose it rested with the committee and not with yourself alone; if your committee won't act, what can you do?—That is the point; I don't know what to do, I am tired speaking to them myself.

30,443. I am pressing you upon this point—I quite see that you have apparently done all that you personally can possibly do, but don't you understand that this may be a great difficulty in the future, in the event of larger holdings, if your committee won't act, what can you do?—I want to shift from them altogether and have a holding by myself.

30,444. Because you find the system of grazing here is not carried out satisfactorily?—Not to my satisfaction.

30,445. The Chairman.—How many are in the committee?—Seven.

30,446. And you are one of the seven?—Yes, and there were eight at first but one drew back.

30,447. Who is the chairman or head of the committee?—Mr Macdonald, merchant.

30,448. Have you again and again advised the committee as to the way in which the hill should be looked after, and have they refused to take your advice?—Often have I told them it was a disgrace to see their sheep lying at their doors instead of grazing on the hill.

30,449. What did they say?—They would say nothing at all.

30,450. They would not listen to you?—They would say it should be done, but they would not do it.

30,451. Have you a quarrel with the committee?—No.

30,452. Do you not get on with them?—I cannot get on with them when they won't do what is right.

30,453. They do what is wrong and you do what is right?—I try to do what is right.

30,454. But the majority are against you?—Yes.

30,455. Are we to understand that the rest are all wrong and you are right?—I don't know indeed; you can see the place and judge for yourselves.

30,456. But you want to get away from them?—Yes, I want a holding for myself.

30,457. Mr Sutherland.—When was this committee formed?—When the Crofters Commission was round here.

30,458. You had no committee before that?—No.

30,459. And is the area of the pasture land you have at present the same as it was before the Crofters Commission came, or has it been enlarged?—It was enlarged.

30,460. And it was in view of the enlargement that the committee was formed?—Yes.

30,461. To what extent was it enlarged?—I am not certain; they got the hill that was following the doctor's park, and they got the hill that was following the inn, and the hill land that was following Achlochan.

30,462. The boundary was not changed?—No, but they got the grazing that followed these three places.

30,463. But the boundaries are the same as they were before the Crofters Commission came?—Yes.

30,464. How did the people get on with their sheep before?—Just the same as they do now.

30,465. So that it is not worse than it was before?—It is worse, because there is more stock, and the sheep are allowed to go low down.

30,466. But they put on more stock than was taken off?—Yes, most of them put stock on for themselves now.

30,467. And before they had not stock?—No.

30,468. And was it souming that they were paying, do you know?—Yes.

30,469. Do you know what a souming is,—it is not very familiar in this part of the country I suppose?—Oh, there is a souming here since this committee was appointed.

30,470. Was there a souming before?—No.

30,471. Had the people any experience at all in the management of sheep before?—No.

30,472. Every man was doing as he saw proper himself?—Yes, he put as many on as he liked.

30,473. And it was only since the visit of the Crofters Commission quite recently that they took to managing their stock at all?—Yes.

30,474. They had no experience before that of managing their stock?—None. At the time the Crofters Commission was here, Mr Macintyre spoke to me that we should have a club farm. There were some more of us who had not stock at the time, and he said he was in communication with the Secretary for Scotland, Lord Lothian, and that we would get money for the club stock.

30,475. Did Mr Macintyre say that you would get money for your club stock?—He said he was in communication with Lord Lothian, and that he would do all in his power for the club stock.

30,476. The Chairman.—I must take leave to say that I do not believe that statement. Mr Macintyre is not here and is not able to speak for himself; but I must take leave to say that so far as I am individually concerned, I cannot accept that statement from you. It may be correct, but I cannot accept it on your authority alone?—Yon is all I heard him say.

30,477. Are you sure you have not misunderstood what he said? He was not likely to make any such promise as that he would do all that lay in his power to get Lord Lothian to give help towards the formation of a club stock?—We got up a petition.

30,478. That is another matter entirely.

30,479. Mr Sutherland.—Perhaps all Mr Macintyre said was that he would do all in his power to support the prayer of the petition?—Yes, that is what he said. [The Chairman.—You must be more careful in what you say. You are now favouring us with a statement as to what you represent Mr Macintyre as saying; however, I shall see Mr Macintyre on the matter.]

30,480. Have you adopted the Grazings Act? Has your committee been appointed under the provisions of that Act?—I think so.

30,481. You know the Act, I suppose, that was passed some three or four years ago, which enables crofters or an estate management to form a committee and to frame rules for the regulation of common grazings?—The committee was formed before that.

30,482. So it is not a statutory committee? It is not one under the Act?—I am not sure as to that.

30,483. But you are aware that if you are a committee appointed under the Act of Parliament you have the power of enforcing your regulations?—I think so, but the regulations were never enforced.

30,484. I suppose because the majority did not agree with you: the finding of the committee is the finding of the majority, you understand that?—Yes.

30,485. And I presume then it is because the majority have a different opinion from you, that there will be no means of enforcing your views: your own shepherds for instance must take their orders from the majority of the committee?—Certainly, I think that should be.

30,486. You have the power of dealing with your own shepherds; they are your servants, are they not?—I think so, seeing that we pay them: they will not work for me at all events,—say just now if I were to ask them to go to Badcall, would they be bound to do it?

30,487. That is if you, as an individual, order them,—but I presume you have a recognised official to communicate with the shepherds, a chairman, or secretary, or official of some kind? You cannot expect the shepherds to take the orders of individual members, or of any individual member of the committee, unless in an official way?—Well, say they were told to go to Badcall, three miles down. Was it right that they should refuse to go with me to Badcall with some sheep?

30,488. Of course, I am not a member of the committee, but I should think that every case would have to be considered on its merits. It resolves itself into this, then, that a majority did not agree with you as to the way in which the pasture should be managed?—My aim is to keep the sheep to the hill in summer and harvest.

30,489. But the others may have reasons for not being of that opinion, is that not possible?—Not that I know of. Of course, the sheep would be better on the green, but what are you going to do with the hill?

30,490. Would there be any difficulty, in your opinion, if new holdings were formed with this Act of Parliament in existence for the appointment of such committees, with power to carry out the will of the majority of the committee,—would there be any serious difficulty in the way of making these new holdings because committees might not agree?—I don't think so: there is just the one point between the committee and myself on which we do not agree.

30,491. There are a number of other points on which you do agree?—On every other point.

30,492. And you do not think it would be any serious obstacle or barrier in the way of forming new holdings and carrying them on successfully?—I don't think so.

30,493. Mr Maciver, factor, Scourie.—Mr Sutherland informed you that I had stated at Durness that a number of people had presented petitions to the Duke of Sutherland asking for assistance to enable them to emigrate to America. Do you know when these emigrations took place?—No.

30,494. Were you born when they took place?—I am not sure.

30,495. I may tell you that they took place in the years 1847 and 1848.—I was not born then. Scourie, Sutherlandshire.

30,496. How then could you know whether they presented petitions or not?—I was not born at the time. Alexander Macleod.

30,497. Then, you know nothing about it except what you heard here?—No, I am only 43 years old.

30,498. I will put another question to you. When you heard this conversation between the Duke of Sutherland and the ground officer, did you consider it likely that if the Duke wished to evict a tenant who was two years behind with his rent, he would give instructions to the ground officer on the subject? Was the ground officer the man he would instruct?—Well, I would think not, only that I heard the words and I was very sorry to hear them said.

30,499. Are you quite sure now as to what was said? You may have heard part of a conversation and not the whole?—I took yon part to be true enough: I may be wrong, and if I am I withdraw it.

30,500. The Chairman.—You say you may be wrong?—I say if I took it up wrong I withdraw it.

30,501. Do you think now upon reflection that it is quite possible you may be wrong?—Oh, well, I might pick it up wrong.

30,502. You think it is quite likely you did pick it up wrong?—I believe I might have picked it up wrong.

30,503. And if that is so you withdraw it?—I withdraw it.

30,504. Mr Sutherland.—You heard the words which you repeated?—Oh, well, if I were to give my oath on the Bible I could give my oath that I did hear the words, but I may be wrong myself.

HECTOR MORRISON, Crofter, Badcall, Scourie (42)—examined. Hector Morrison.

30,505. The Chairman.—You are a crofter at Badcall?—Yes.

30,506. Was your case disposed of by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

30,507. I see lot 5 contains 1 acre 2 roods arable; 1 acre 2 roods 36 poles outrun; and a share in 6500 acres; as in the case of the previous witness. The old rent was £4, 8s. and the fair rent for the enlarged holding is £3, 9s.?—Yes.

30,508. Have you a written statement?—A few words.

30,509. We shall be glad to hear them.—On this portion of the Reay forest, known as the Glendhu farm, there are five townships very suitable for crofter fishermen, viz., (1) Maldie; (2) Kylestrome; (3) Duartmore; (4) Duartbeg; (5) Gisgill; from which there have been upwards of thirty farmers cleared off to make room for one man, viz., Charles Clark. He only paid rent for two years when he failed. Some of them had to go to America, and some got patches taken up in the surrounding district. It is thus that the township of Badcall was occupied about 1815: no fewer than nine crofters on something like 13 acres of patches they managed to make arable, of which my share is only one acre, or according to the estimate of the estate 2½ acres between arable and pasture, special as it is called.

30,510. Do you go to the fishing?—Yes.

30,511. The herring fishing?—Yes: there are two years I have been at the salmon fishing.

30,512. Do you get work from the lessees of the salmon fishing?—Yes, from Messrs Speedy, Perth.

30,513. And have you continuous employment at the salmon fishings for about three months?—For four months.

30,514. How long have you been in the habit of going to the herring fishing?—For twenty-one years.

30,515. And you still go?—Yes, I have always maintained myself by fishing.

30,516. You maintain yourself more by fishing than by your holding?—In fact, I maintain myself entirely by the fishing, because my holding is only 1½ acre arable.

30,517. Now, are you anxious to give up fishing, or do you wish a larger holding combined with the fishing?—I would rather have a larger holding contiguous to the fishing ground.

Hector Morrison.

30,518. And you would combine the occupation of the holding with the fishing?—Yes.

30,519. That is your idea?—The best of my day as a fisherman is over now, but I would sooner help myself out of the fishing than go far up the country.

30,520. Is there land in any of the localities you have mentioned that would enable you to get a larger croft and carry on fishing at the same time?—There is, and very suitable.

30,521. Where is the suitable land?—Kylestrome and Maldie: both places are very suitable.

30,522. You have easy access to the fishing from Maldie?—Yes.

30,523. And, of course, also from Kylestrome. Are you appearing here as a delegate, or as an individual?—More as an individual; I was advised by two or three to appear, but time would not admit of my preparing a full statement, so I just made these notes. I only heard word a few days ago that your Lordship was to arrive, and I am very seldom at home.

30,524. You heard the previous evidence given by Macleod, with regard to available land?—Yes.

30,525. Do you agree with that evidence?—Yes, for the most as to land.

30,526. The other matters, I suppose, you don't know anything about?—Not some of them.

30,527. Mr Forsyth.—What size of holding would be suitable for crofting and fishing together, supposing it were near a harbour?—I should say that a man should have five or six acres, or up to ten: he could make something of a living on that, with a stretch of outrun.

30,528. What stock would you keep?—I would like to keep, providing I had the land for it, four or five cows and a horse, and I could get then from 60 to 80 sheep.

30,529. Does not that look much more like a self-sustaining holding than a fisherman's holding?—Well, it would hardly be self-sustaining: it must be understood that this land is not equal to the land in other places.

30,530. It is not the acreage of the land I am speaking of, but the number of stock. Is not that a large amount of stock for a fisherman to handle?—Not at all; it could be as easily handled as one acre, provided it was land that could be wrought.

30,531. Don't you think your crofter-fisherman would be better with one or two cows, really well done to, than all that stock?—I know that would do as a place to make a living by, in a more comfortable way than I can do at present.

30,532. We hear it so constantly mentioned here, 'four or five cows': don't you know that a cow properly kept takes a great deal of keep, and I don't suppose this is a very good country for making large quantities of wintering keep?—But our cows are not so good as others,—two of them are not equal to one cow of the kind you are acquainted with.

30,533. But don't you think one or two cows, thoroughly well fed, would be more profitable than four or five half fed?—I am sure they would.

30,534. Then, don't you think it would be better if men who desire to fish as well would lay out their mind to have quite sufficient ground to keep one cow, or at the most two cows, thoroughly well?—But the fishing is not a thing to rely on in these places.

30,535. It is uncertain, you mean?—It is quite uncertain, and there is no proper communication with the market, and very often we are reduced to low prices, or no prices, when the fishing is there.

30,536. But still you want a holding by which you would mainly live, and fishing would be a sort of second thing that would come in to assist you?—Yes.

30,537. That is to say, a croft first, and fishing afterwards?—A croft mostly, and fishing for a little, because it is impossible for a man to give attention to a croft, or work it properly, who has to take his living from the fishing.

30,538. That is one of the reasons why I was asking you about the four or five cows. I think if a man had land for such a stock as that, and if the stock was at all properly done to, he would have so much land that he would not be able to devote any time worth speaking of to the sea?—Not the one man, but where there is a family.

Scourie, Sutherlandshire.

Hector Morrison.

30,539. Then, you put the croft first, and make the fishing a secondary thing?—Certainly, and that is the way that ever they were before the people were put off these places that I have mentioned.

30,540. They were small holdings in old times, were they?—Certainly.

30,541. You would not wish to go back to the same size of holding, though, would you?—No, I would not.

30,542. You think the holdings should be larger?—Yes, I know they should be larger, because when the holding is so very small it has to be cropped and re-cropped always, and thus the ground is brought to no use.

30,543. How many acres of the arable land do you calculate it would take to make wintering for a cow properly done to?—I would consider that also; but at the same time I would think five or six acres would be little enough for any man, so that I could have an acre under grass always.

30,544. And that to keep a cow?—Yes, it would be giving justice to the ground.

30,545. Then, your holding for four or five cows would have to be a good sized one, don't you think?—Certainly, it would require to be fairly large.

30,546. Mr Sutherland.—You said you are a salmon fisher?—Yes, for the last three years.

30,547. Was it such employment as the salmon fishing you had in your mind when you were speaking of a croft where you could carry on other work at the same time?—No, it was the herring fishing.

30,548. Had you been to the herring fishing before you became a salmon fisher?—All my days, since fourteen years of age.

30,549. And you know all about it?—Yes, I know all about it.

30,550. How many families are in Badcall?—There are nine crofts, with ten families, and there is another, only he pays rent to the Established Church minister.

30,551. He is on the glebe?—Yes.

30,552. And are all these fishermen?—They have to be.

30,553. Do you know if any of these people are fishermen by choice?—No, I don't think so.

30,554. Do you think that if they got reasonably sized holdings that would be self-supporting, any of them would fish?—I don't think any of them would fish for a living: any that fish are just forced to become fishermen.

30,555. And when they talk of carrying on as fishermen and crofters at the same time, it is because they are limited in the size of their holdings, so that they must fish?—Certainly.

30,556. Do they pay their rent out of the land, or out of the sea?—As far as I can calculate, it is over twenty-three years since I have had a croft, and it is only one rent that ever I paid out of the croft.

30,557. During the whole of that time?—During the whole of that time; and as near as I can mark, I think one boll of meal is worth about all that ever I ground or sold, but year after year I had to buy seed.

30,558. And do those who prosecute the fishing get regular fishing?—Not at all.

30,559. Are there some years when they don't get any?—Some years hardly any at all.

30,560. Now, in your opinion, which is the better man, speaking generally, the man who makes a livelihood for himself out of a self-sustaining croft, or the man who is a fisherman and a crofter both?—The man who has a self-sustaining croft is more comfortable, because he has a surer way of living.

30,561. You think he is in every way?—I know it.

30,562. In answer to a question by Mr Forsyth, you stated that you would not hope or desire that a holding, if you got new holdings, would be so small as the old ones were?—No.

30,563. Do you refer to the arable, or to the pasture? The arable, I refer to, in the acreage.

30,564. Then, how does that old acreage, in your opinion that the people had, compare with what they have now; had they more land then than they have now?—Yes, by a long way.

30,565. That would refer to the pasture?—To arable, both. There was one man who came out of Geisgill told me that when he left it, he carried a stock 12 cows and 60 sheep.

30,566. And what sort of holding was he placed on afterwards?—One of the poorest in creation, something less than two acres of the worst species.

30,567. And do you think now it is reasonable that that man would himself ask to be put off the bigger holding on to the small one?—No; he told me the contrary. He would never ask that.

30,568. You think it would not be reasonable that he should ask it?—No, it is not reasonable to ask to be put to a worse place, and there are not many who would ask for that.

30,569. You mentioned places that are now in deer forest?—Yes.

30,570. Do you know the extent of that deer forest? Did you ever hear it?—Yes, I read it, but I do not recollect it.

30,571. Do you know that the deer forest that is in the occupation of one man has over 100,000 acres?—Yes.

30,572. That is a pretty big holding, is it not?—Yes.

30,573. There were not such big holdings as that in the olden times?—Not that I know of.

30,574. You mentioned places in that holding that you think might be very well utilised for giving people a chance to live?—Yes, for any man that forces a living out of the present holding at all is sure, provided he once gets started, to make a good living out of that.

30,575. How many families did you say were in Badcall before 1815?—I don't think there were any; it was occupied at that time, as I was told by the old people, by a minister, one Mr Mackenzie. It was only kept for just a special place for putting cattle.

30,576. And was there any arable land in it, any land in cultivation when the people were put there?—No.; they had to make it arable, the kind of patches there are.

30,577. How many families did you say?—Nine families, or about eleven families altogether.

30,578. Have you got a road yet?—Not yet.

30,579. How far is the road from you?—About three quarters of a mile, or between that and half a mile.

30,580. How do you carry your effects to your houses from the road?—Just a most cruel way of working, carrying it up a steep brae on our backs.

30,581. And do you pay road money?—Certainly, we were never exempted.

30,582. How long have the eleven families been paying road money?—It is before my time, but they have been paying it all along since the crofts were formed.

30,583. And they never saw fit even to make a road for you?—No; there was one road that was said to have been made to the pier for the crofters of Badcall, but it has nothing to do with the crofting township of Badcall. I never knew the road referred to the crofting township of Badcall till I saw it stated in this statement.

30,584. What statement is that?—A statement showing how things were put out.

30,585. Is it from the County Council?—No, I got it at the time of the Crofters Commission.

30,586. What do you desire to show from it?—I never knew till then that this road that leads to the Badcall pier was pointed out as benefiting the crofters. It is not touching us nor doing us any good that I can see. The brae is steep, and even if we took the stuff to the shore from the pier where that road leads we would have to carry it all along.

30,587. The Chairman.—This seems to be an estate document. It says:—Road leading to pier in 1846, "£77, 12s. 2d. of outlay: branch road through township in 1847, £28, 1s. 7d." The only road mentioned here is the road leading to the pier at Badcall?—There is a bit of a branch road leading up there that never came near hand us, nor does it touch upon the ground belonging to the crofters at all: it is on the glebe. Scourie, Sutherlandshire.

30,588. Mr Sutherland.—Have you made any representations direct to the County Council since they were appointed?—Yes, I have had notice lately that it was to be granted. Hector Morrison.

30,589. That it was to be made now?—Yes.

30,590. After all this delay?—Yes. I have got word from the County Council that his Grace the Duke has consented latterly.

30,591. To make the road, and the County Council will maintain it, is that the way?—I suppose so.

30,592. Do you think the people of Badcall, if they got opportunities of getting such holdings as you have indicated, would take them?—Well, I am not sure, because the place is run out; the people who were able to make a living had to leave it, and most of the people are failing. The able-bodied men had to leave.

30,593. Are all the young people away?—Very few left; there is only one other man and myself rearing a family in Badcall.

30,594. It is education, I suppose, that does that. Are there no young people at all? Is there no rising generation in Badcall?—Just very few: there are two or three who have to stop there to support their parents; these are all that I know.

30,595. Then, it will be an arithmetical question, how soon the population will get extinct altogether?—It will not take long at the present rate.

30,596. That is a serious state of matters, is it not?—Certainly.

20,597. The Chairman.—What family have you?—Six.

30,598. How many sons?—Two.

30,599. Are they both grown up?—No, the eldest is about 13.

JAMES MACKAY, Ground Officer, Scourie—examined. James Mackay.

30,600. The Chairman.—You are ground officer in the Scourie district?—Yes.

30,601. How long have you had that employment?—For three years.

30,602. Who was ground officer before you?—My father.

30,603. And was he here for a long time?—Yes, about forty years.

30,604. Did you hear the statement made by Macleod, with regard to something the late Duke of Sutherland is alleged to have said?—Yes.

30,605. Were you present at the inn at the time referred to?—Yes.

30,606. The Duke was there and the now Duchess Dowager?—Yes.

30,607. And do you remember Macleod being there?—Yes.

30,608. And the cottar from Tarbat?—Yes, there was a cottar from Tarbat.

30,609. What was his name?—Donald Mackenzie.

30,610. Were Macleod and Mackenzie there asking some aid from his Grace?—Yes, just as I went up.

30,611. Now, did you hear any statement made by the late Duke of Sutherland, or any instructions given by His Grace to you with reference to the eviction of persons two years in arrear?—Oh, he gave me no instructions whatever.

30,612. Did anything pass with reference to that matter?—Well, he said now that the Act is when a crofter has been two years in arrear he can be evicted. These are the words that passed.

30,613. Did he give you any instructions on the matter?—No, he did not.

30,614. Did you understand from anything that was said by the Duke that in the event of a crofter falling behind in his rent for two years you would have it in your power to take proceedings against him?—Well, that was the way I took it. I understood the Duke to say that the landlord, by the Act, would have that power.

30,615. Just what you have said?—Yes.

Scourie, Sutherland-shire.

James Mackay.

30,616. Have you any authority to take procee lings against a crofter?—No.

30,617. With whom does that matter lie?—With Mr Maciver.

30,618. And the Duke?—And the Duke.

30,619. Then, was the remark made by the Duke with reference to the state of the law under the Act; or was it made with reference to intended proceedings of his own?—To the state of the law under the Act; that is the way it was said.

30,620. Mr Gordon.—The explanation is quite satisfactory.

Evander Maciver.

EVANDER MACIVER, Factor, Scourie (82) recalled—examined.

30,621. The Chairman.—Do you remember the visit which the Duke paid to Scourie two or three years ago?—Perfectly.

30,622. He was accompanied by the Duchess?—He was accompanied by the Duchess Dowager.

30,623. The lady who is now Duchess Dowager?—Yes.

30,624. Did you, on that occasion, receive any instructions from the Duke, with reference to the eviction of crofters whose rents were two years in arrear?—None whatever on that occasion.

30,625. I should explain to you that while passing through Rhiconich yesterday we were waited upon by two crofters—Donald Morrison, Balchrick, and Lachlan Ross, Achreisgill—who represented to us the extreme difficulty they would have in coming here to give their evidence; they said they had a written statement to submit, but as they could not attend here to-day without serious inconvenience, we resolved to hold an informal sitting, at which they might submit their statement to us. Possibly, you have not yet had an opportunity of reading that statement?—I have not the least desire to hear it.

30,626. What I wish to tell you is that we shall give you an opportunity of reading the statement for yourself, and we shall also, if you so desire, read over to you the shorthand writer's notes of the examination, or hand you the transcript for perusal; and if you wish to make any statement or to adduce any evidence relative thereto, we shall be glad to hear you at Lochinver.—I am much obliged to you.

30,627. It is only right to explain that because the sitting was held in your absence, and owing to the circumstances I have mentioned there was no time to communicate with you or anyone representing the estate; but, of course, if you wish to lead any evidence with regard to it, you shall have an opportunity of doing so at Lochinver?—I shall take the opportunity of reading what was said.

30,628. I may mention that the evidence was very much on the lines of what we have heard elsewhere.—Just so.

30,629. Do you wish to make any statement to us here?—I have nothing to say except to submit the paper which you wished me to produce with regard to the 'black park' at Durness.

30,630. Just let me look at it, please?—That is the paper [hands in document], and I may say that it is the only document I found in the office at Scourie. I produce also a statement of my own with regard to it.

30,631. 'Memorandum of agreement between Alexander Stewart, Esq., and Anthony Dunlop, Esq., Balnakeil, 1839; confirmed by James Loch, Esq., M.P., 2nd January 1840; intimated to Mr Dunlop, by letter addressed to him to Tain Post Office, 8th January 1840.'—And initialled by Mr Alexander Stewart, who was at that time factor for the Duke of Sutherland here.

30,632. The agreement is between Mr Stewart, as factor for the Duke, and Anthony Dunlop, tacksman of the farm of Balnakeil, and it narrates that:—'In respect that the existing lease of Balnakeil comprehends the grazings of Knock-Damph, which is situated in the common of Durness, and that Mr Dunlop claims also in virtue of his lease a share and division of the said commonty, effeiring to that portion of the Balnakeil farm called Crosspoll and Balvollich; and in respect that the present indefinate mode of possessing those subjects forms a continual source of annoyance not only to Mr Dunlop, but to all the neighbouring tenants, and in order to have all amicably arranged and finally settled, it is considered expedient by the parties to enter into this agreement: First, Mr Dunlop hereby renounces all claim to the said grazings of Knock-Damph and to every portion of the said commonty, accepting in lieu thereof a piece of land adjoining Balnakeil, commonly called Clashdhu, situated and bounded as follows:—' And then the boundaries are given. That is the 'black park'?—Yes.

Scourie, Sutherland-shire. Evander Maciver.

30,633. 'Second. Mr Stewart engages to extend the new line of road along the Durness glebe dyke, the length of the church and Balnakeil mill, as also the Balvollich road until it joins it about the north west corner of the glebe, as now lined off in our presence by Alexander Bauchop, County Road Surveyor, Mr Dunlop giving permission to take materials for the formation of the said road from his farm in the most convenient part, free of any charge . . " and so on; and there follows certain other provisions. Then your statement with regard to the matter is as follows:—

Scourie, 20th October 1893. I produce herewith copy of Agreement referred to at sitting of Commissioners in Durness, on 16th inst., relative to the 'black park' there, between Alexander Stewart, factor for the Duke of Sutherland, and Anthony Dunlop, tacksman of Balnakeil farm, dated 26th December 1839. I have not found the original, but the conditions as to this park contained in it were all carried out, and the pasture given up in exchange for it. The roads mentioned in it were made at the expense of the Duke, and the conditions as to seaware have been since observed by all parties interested. The Agreement has thus been homologated, and there can be no doubt that it was accepted at the time, and to be observed in the future. The 'black park' has siuce continued to be occupied by the tenants of Balnakeil, of which it forms a very important and useful addition. The arrangement altogether appears to have been judicious and valuable on both sides.—Yes, that is my statement in regard to the matter.

30,634. I understood you to say at the previous meeting that there was a reference or arbitration?—I thought there was, but when I looked into the matter I found it was an agreement between the factor and the tenant of Balnakeil.

30,635. But it was an agreement, as I understood, which related to lands previously in the possession of crofters?—Yes, the grazings of Knockdamph were situated in the centre of the common of Durness, and were a constant source of quarrelling between the tenant of Balnakeil and the people; and to allay this quarrelling this agreement was entered into, a most judicious one, in my opinion.

30,636. That may be; but were the crofters made parties to this arrangement?—There is no mention of them there at all; they held from year to year; but they have homologated it since by possession.

30,637. But it would rather appear, if I gather the thing accurately, that while the agreement appears to have been exclusively between the Duke's factor and Anthony Dunlop as tacksman; the crofters who had previously certain rights of grazing over this land were not made parties to the arrangement?—No, but they gave up the 'black park' in exchange for this right of grazing.

30,638. But what I am pointing at is that they are made to give up the 'black park' without being parties to the arrangement under which it was given up?—Exactly, it appears to have been entered into between the estate and the tacksman of Balnakeil.

30,639. The point is that while the crofters had certain grazing rights or privileges, or whatever they may be called, at that time, they were not made parties to this written arrangement?—No. The Balnakeil farm was under lease, and the crofters' ground was held from year to year.

30,640. Mr Sutherland.—And with regard to the homologation of the bargain, is it not the fact that the crofters pulled down the fence and put their cattle in next year?—Not next year. It is a fact that when the farm of Balnakeil passed from Mr Dunlop to Mr Gabriel Reid, Gordonbush, they came forward and claimed the 'black park' back again, and took violent possession of it, and put their stock into it, and kept it for about a month or six weeks; but they gave it up on being assured that they had done a very illegal and improper act, and the matter has since remained as it is now.

30,641. All I wanted to say was, that it did not look exactly like homologation of the bargain on their part?—Well, it was six years after the original bargain that this happened.

30,642. The Chairman.—But still, can parties be held to homologate an arrangement to which they were not made parties? Can C be held to be bound by what is done between A and B, C being no party to the arrangement between A and B?—Well, they agreed to it at the time; it was done with their knowledge and approval at the time.

30,643. But they were not parties to it?—They were not parties to the arrangement; the estate took charge of it.

30,644. Mr Gordon.—Mr Stewart appeared on behalf of the estate?—No doubt; if he had not the crofters would have objected at the time.

30,645. Whether he did right or wrong, he was there as representing their interests?—Yes.

30,646. Mr Sutherland.—Mr Stewart was representing the estate. I have not heard any of the crofters in this district admitting that Mr Stewart represented their interests; on the contrary their position is, rightly or wrongly, that Mr Stewart misrepresented their interests.—Well, whether it was right or wrong, it was agreed to at the time.

30,647. The Chairman.—By the parties to the agreement, but not by others who were not parties?—There is no evidence that they objected at the time.

30,648. Yes, they made a noise about it?—Six years afterwards.

30,649. Mr Sutherland.—The question was mine, and the essential point is this, whether the people themselves agreed to the transaction, and I rather think if my memory serves me aright that you stated that you had documentary proof that they did so agree?—Well, those are all the documents I found in the office. That is a paper which was written many years before I came to Scourie, and I think it gives the whole story.

30,650. I accept it pro tanto, but it does not prove the statements made by you at Durness on this matter.

[ADJOURNED.]

THIRTY-SECOND SITTING.

Lochinver, Sutherlandshire.

LOCHINVER, SUTHERLANDSHIRE.

October 23, 1893.

Present:—

DAVID BRAND, Esq., Advocate, Sheriff of Ayr, and Chairman of the Crofters Commission, Chairman.
ANGUS SUTHERLAND, Esq., M.P.
JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq.
GEORGE GORDON, Esq.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

ROBERT MENZIES, Crofter, Elphin, Assynt (32)—examined. Robert Menzies.

30,651. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter under the Act of Parliament?—Yes.

30,652. Was your rent fixed by the Crofters Commission?—I believe so.

30,653. Who is the principal tenant of your holding?—John Macleod, an uncle of mine, a weaver.

30,654. Is he still in the holding?—His wife is; he, himself, is dead.

30,655. And you are a sub-tenant of Mrs Macleod?—Not now. I became the crofter in 1888, I think.

30,656. Holding No. 396 consists of 3 acres 0 roods 31 poles arable; 2 poles outrun; and $\frac{1}{19}$ share in a common of 3613 acres; the old rent was £8, 7s. and the fair rent £5, 8s.?—Yes.

30,657. You were first a sub-tenant on the holding of John Macleod, and now you pay rent direct to the estate?—Yes.

30,658. What rent do you pay?—£2, 10s.

30,659. How much of the croft have you got?—About $1\frac{1}{2}$ acre.

30,660. Off John Macleod's holding?—Yes.

30,661. One and a half acres arable?—Yes.

30,662. And have you a share in the hill grazing?—Yes.

30,663. What share have you?—Just according to the rest.

30,664. What stock have you got?—28 sheep, 3 cows, and a follower, but no horse.

30,665. Have you any other stock?—No.

30,666. You have no written statement, I believe?—No.

30,667. Are you here as a delegate appointed at a meeting of the Elphin and Knockan crofters?—Yes.

30,668. When was the meeting held, was it recently?—Yes, a week on Tuesday last, or a fortnight.

30,669. What is it the Elphin and Knockan crofters mainly desire to lay before us?—There are three farms contiguous to their holdings, Cromalt, Ledmore, and Ledbeg.

30,670. And what do you wish to say with regard to these farms? Do you suggest for our consideration whether your grazings can be extended by land being taken from one or more of these farms?—Yes.

30,671. Your claim, I suppose, is more a claim for extension of grazing than for new settlements?—Well, yes, I suppose so, but we need new settlements as well.

30,672. But are you more anxious about extending your grazings than about new settlements?—Yes.

30,673. Do you feel your present grazings to be too contracted?—Oh, yes.

30,674. You live at a very high level?—Very high indeed.

30,675. And your lands are greatly exposed to severe climate in winter?—Yes.

30,676. Are the three farms you mentioned, or parts of them, on a much lower level?—Well, Ledbeg is.

30,677. Have you difficulty in meeting your fair rents?—Oh, no.

30,678. You are able to do that?—Yes.

Lochinver, Sutherland-shire.

Robert Menzies.

30,679. Have you anything to say with regard to your arable land?—Just the smallness of it; that is all.

30,680. Your own holding is a very small one, but you are not a crofter under the Act. Do you know what extent of arable is in the holding in name of John Macleod, from whom you got this land?—Nearly 4 acres I daresay.

30,681. And what outrun?—Just the same as the rest.

30,682. But has he not an outrun of his own?—No.

30,683. If I remember rightly the crofters of Elphin and Knockan derive the profit from their holdings mainly from their stock?—Yes.

30,684. And only to a very small extent from their crop?—The crop is nothing but potatoes.

30,685. Is it the desire of all the crofters whom you represent that we should consider the question of the claim they make with regard to these three farms of Cromalt, Ledmore, and Ledbeg?—Yes.

30,686. These are the lands to which they specially invite our attention?—Yes.

30,687. Were these the only lands mentioned at the meeting you have referred to?—Yes.

30,688. And does each of these farms march with the crofter lands?—Yes.

30,689. I need not ask you particulars about the farms, as I happen to know something about them, and I think some of the other Commissioners do also.

30,690. Mr Sutherland.—You have not a holding yourself?—Oh, yes.

30,691. But you are a sub-tenant with only half an acre?—Well, it is half an acre I have, certainly.

30,692. And would not you be desirous, if it could be obtained, to get the same amount of land as the others have?—Oh, most certainly.

30,693. Do you think it is possible to get it up there in the places you have mentioned?—There is plenty arable land up there.

30,694. Is it as good as, or better or worse than what the people have in cultivation?—Some of it better, and some worse.

30,695. But is there much of it that is better?—A good deal.

30,696. On those farms you have mentioned?—On Cromalt there is no arable land at all, but a shepherd's place; but on the other two there is plenty of arable land.

30,697. And do you say that a good deal of that land is better than the arable land the people of Elphin and Knockan have?—Yes.

30,698. Are there people in the district who would like to get larger holdings than they have now, besides the people who wish an extension of their present grazings?—I suppose some of them might, but I am not certain.

30,699. How many families are there altogether in Elphin and Knockan?—Thirty-six crofters.

30,700. Have all these got land?—Yes, besides the cottars.

30,701. I am asking you how many families altogether are in Elphin and Knockan combined?—Between 40 and 50.

30,702. And how many of these have no land at all, those whom you call cottars?—Eight or nine.

30,703. Do you think any of these would like to get land?—Oh, yes, some of them.

30,704. And is there land which, in your opinion, would be suitable for making new holdings for them in that neighbourhood, in the places you have mentioned?—Yes.

30,705. Do you think some of them would take such a holding if they got it?—Yes, I don't doubt they would.

30,706. In answer to a question by his lordship you mentioned that your great mainstay there was the rearing of stock?—Just so.

30,707. You cannot depend, you said, upon crops, except for fodder for your cattle and horses?—That is all.

30,708. You have, I presume, to get your meal and your bread stuff from other places?—Everything.

30,709. Have they got to do that in Assynt generally, do you know?—I suppose most of them have.

30,710. Is it the case that very large farmers do that as well, those that have arable farms?—I don't know about that.

30,711. Do you ever use wheat bread in Knockan and Elphin?—We use flour.

30,712. The flour does not grow in this country, does it?—I don't think so.

30,713. If you got a good price for your stock you could easily buy your bread stuff, could not you?—Yes.

30,714. The means of communication being, I suppose, very much developed from what they were some years ago?—Yes. Of course, the price of stock is very low at present, and we feel that very much.

30,715. And, therefore, the sources for purchase are not so great as they used to be?—No.

30,716. Now, have you any means of comparing the state of the people in Ard-Assynt with that of the people in Lower Assynt? Whom would you say are better off?—In a sense the people of Lower Assynt are better off, for they can get fishing whereas we cannot get work of any kind. We have to stay at home in our small holdings to keep things right.

30,717. Would you leave the holding you have got in Elphin and go down say to Nedd?—I don't think I would like it very much; I don't think I could live very well on the sea.

30,718. Do you think you are better off in that respect up in Elphin?—Not a bit, but I don't think it would suit me so well as the old hills up yonder.

30,719. Do you know the people in the north part of Stoer? Have you ever been up there?—Yes.

30,720. Are they as comfortably off as the people in Elphin and Knockan?—I don't know, I think they are pretty much the same; the one cannot envy the other very much.

30,721. But there are degrees even in adverse circumstances. Then could you tell us the amount of land you have got between the 45 families?—Between 4000 and 5000 acres I think.

30,722. How much does it give to each family?—Very little indeed, dividing that among 36 crofters.

30,723. How are these farms that you have referred to occupied at the present time?—One of them, Ledbeg, is in the deer forest, and the other two are in the Duke's hands.

30,724. Ledbeg is in the Glencanisp deer forest?—Yes, and Ledmore is in Mr Mundell's hands, a sheep farmer. That is the adjacent farm to Stronchrubie.

30,725. So that he has got not only the farm of Ledmore but also Stronchrubie?—Yes.

30,726. And does he live there?—No, I think he lives in a place called Moy in Ross-shire.

30,727. He has two farms and does not live on either of them?—He lives there for maybe a month at the clipping time.

30,728. But that is not his home?—No.

30,729. And these lands, I suppose, you would show us if we went there to see them?—Oh, yes.

30,730. The Chairman.—I wanted to ask you this. There was a claim made for enlargement by taking a part of the forest of Glencanisp?—Yes, so there was.

30,731. That application the Crofters Commission had to refuse, but do you wish to submit anything with regard to that matter to us now?—Most certainly.

30,732. What is it you desire to say about it?—It would be most useful to us, that part; it is the only low ground we could get up there.

30,733. Up by the shores of Loch Veyatie?—Yes, down to Allt-an-Fhamhair, Allt-an-Fhearna.

30,734. Allt-an-Fhearna is where the forest marches with your ground?—Yes.

30,735. And you would like us to consider that matter as well as the other places you have mentioned?—Most certainly.

30,736. Mr Gordon.—I did not catch the number of crofters in Knockan?—Sixteen.

30,737. And how many cottars?—Two.

30,738. How many crofters in Elphin?—Twenty.

30,739. And cottars?—A good many; seven or eight I think between the two townships.

30,740. Do the crofters all have about the same number of stock that you have, or have they more?—Some more and some less.

30,741. Would the average stock held by the crofters in both townships be something like what you have stated?—Hardly as much; not with the present souming.

30,742. Did you apply formally for any part of the outlying hirsel of Cromalt?—Not of Cromalt.

30,743. It was on the other side, the forest side?—On the other side; it was a bit between the bridges there.

30,744. Are there many people in your townships who would be willing to shift; or do you point more to an extension of grazings?—I think it is more an extension of grazings they would like just now.

30,745. You don't think there are many people in either of the townships who would be willing to flit to such a place as Cromalt or Ledbeg?—It is not a very easy matter for a poor man to do that: it would be much easier to put stock on the land if they could get it than to work new holdings.

30,746. Are there about 1000 sheep on the ground altogether?—I daresay there are more than that.

30,747. And is your pasture very bare at present?—Yes.

30,748. As a matter of fact, would it improve your position, would it be a greater advantage to get an extension of grazing for your sheep than to get new holdings?—I would certainly think so; that is my opinion.

30,749. And you are here to express the opinion of the township?—That is what I could take up from them.

30,750. Mr Forsyth.—What kind of sheep have you on the hills—cheviots?—Cheviots and black-faces.

30,751. Mixed?—Mixed. Well, we have very few black-faced sheep now; they are mostly cheviots.

30,752. Do you winter your hoggs on the ground?—No.

30,753. Do you send them away?—Send them away.

30,754. Do you find the cottars at the two places, Elphin and Knockan, a burden on the crofters in any way?—Well, of course, they are a little.

30,755. Do you not think that some of you could be removed with advantage to other places to relieve the others there?—Certainly.

30,756. But if you had plenty of grazing, you think you would rather that the townships generally would remain where they are: that they could live fairly if they had sufficient hill grazing according to your ideas?—Yes.

30,757. Do you do much with cattle, beyond keeping milk cows?—Of course, we would sell the young beasts, but we could hardly winter any at all there.

30,758. Your profit lies in the sheep up there?—Yes.

30,759. And on the whole, if you had more grazing land you think that your townships could live?—That is my opinion and the opinion of the township just now.

30,760. About this piece of land that you applied to the Crofters Commission for. I mean the land between Loch Veyatie and the Cam-Loch I think you called it, is that specially good wintering ground?—Wintering ground.

30,761. Do you think you could winter your hoggs there?—Yes.

30,762. Then is it specially for hogg wintering that you ask it?—Yes, or when a great storm comes on we could put some of the weaker sheep in along with the hoggs.

30,763. Is the ground on Ledbeg at the east end of Loch-Cam as good as the other side you ask for?—Much better.

30,764. Better than the ground between Loch Veyatie and Cam-Loch?—Much better.

30,765. Then, what you wish for is not only extended grazing but some lower ground on what you think you could winter your hoggs?—That is it.

30,766. Where do you winter your hoggs?—Some wintered them at a place called Ochto in Strathoykel, where they paid 3s. 6d. a head for their pasture. I sent fourteen hoggs there last year, and I got ten back.

30,767. How do you manage your hill grazing, have you a shepherd?—Yes, in summer time.

30,768. But you have not thought of keeping your sheep on the club stock system, have you?—We have been thinking about that, that we would do it if we could: we are just working our way towards that.

30,769. You think there would be no difficulty as to your agreeing about that?—I don't think there would be much at all.

30,770. Do you understand the advantages there are in being able to sell the sheep of the grazing in one lot as an even lot from the club farm?—Yes, very well.

30,771. Do you think that would make a considerable difference in the price you might get?—I think it would.

30,772. And you anticipate no difficulty in the matter of agreeing among yourselves as to a club farm system?—Oh, I think so.

30,773. You mean you think you could agree?—Yes, I really think so.

30,774. The Chairman.—Would you describe the Elphin and Knockan crofters as hill farmers and nothing else?—Nothing else.

30,775. They have no other means of livelihood?—Nothing at all.

30,776. And they get along as best they can from the returns given by the holdings?—Yes, that is so.

30,777. Now, you said something about cheviots and black-faced sheep. Are the Elphin and Knockan crofters gradually changing their stock from black-faced to cheviot?—Yes.

30,778. Why are they doing that?—Most of the sheep were cheviot ewes altogether, with the exception of black-faced hoggs now and then.

30,779. Which do you think is the stock more suited to the place, or do you try both?—I tried both, but I think the cheviots are just as hardy as the black-faced we have. There are some black-faced sheep that are much hardier than them, but they don't fetch the same price.

30,780. A much lower price than the cheviots?—Yes.

30,781. Your holdings at Elphin and Knockan are among the highest in the county in point of altitude?—Yes, they are.

30,782. Mr Macaulay, Solicitor, Golspie, Agent for the Duke of Sutherland.—I understand the Crofters Commission recommended that your name should be entered as tenant of part of that croft to which you referred in answering his lordship?—Yes.

30,783. And that was done?—Yes, by Mr Gordon and Mr Maciver.

30,784. So that you are now a direct tenant of the Duke of Sutherland and not a sub-tenant?—No. [The Chairman.—And under the Act?]

30,785. Not under the Act, but the Crofters Commission recommendation was given effect to. Were you not offered some grazings between Loch Veyatie and Cam-Loch, some 700 acres there?—Yes, the Crofters Commission pointed out that, but we never got a final settlement of it.

30,786. Did the Crofters Commission not call upon you to put up fences.

30,787. The Chairman.—Do you mean the Glencanisp enlargement?

30,788. Mr Macaulay.—These are the very lands we are referring to.

30,789. The Chairman.—Yes, but the fencing question was a very serious one; the value of the land as compared with the cost of the fencing. Besides, the case is under appeal at the instance of the late Duke.

30,790. Mr Macaulay.—The appeal has been withdrawn.

30,791. The Chairman.—We have no notice of the withdrawal.

Lochinver, Sutherlandshire.

Robert Menzies.

30,792. Mr Macaulay.—Was it not a recommendation that this place should be fenced?

30,793. The Chairman.—Oh, yes, but it was pointed out in the Order that the cost of fencing was a very serious question indeed. There is no reason for wonder that the thing did not come to a practical result.

30,794. Mr Macaulay.—The landlord, at any rate, was willing to give it, provided it was fenced.

30,795. The Chairman.—Provided it was fenced at the cost of the crofters. The question for the crofters to consider was whether the cost of the fence would be at all comparable with the value of the land assigned.

30,796. Mr Macaulay.—But the Commissioner who looked at the place thought a fence was required and recommended that it should be done.

30,797. The Chairman.—No doubt.

30,798. Mr Macaulay. (To witness).—These are the very lands you want?—But a much larger extent.

30,799. Do you take advantage of the Grazings Act? Have you had regulations for your township?—Yes.

30,800. And have these been kept up? You worked for some years under these regulations?—Yes.

30,801. And do you still work under them?—Well, I expect we are not quite done with them yet: this year there was not very much about it; we got the length of taking up the number of stock on us, but there was some misunderstanding about it.

30,802. Is it not the fact that you have practically dropped these regulations?—Oh, no.

30,803. Did you make up accounts last year showing the sums payable by those who had overstocked?—There was one man who had overstocked and he never paid for it. There is a gentleman here who is looking after that and who can give a better explanation than I can.

30,804. You had regular accounts kept for season 1890?—Yes.

30,805. Had you as regular accounts made for season 1891?—Yes.

30,806. You are one of the parties whose names are down under the Grazings Act,—at least you were; your stock is regulated in the same way as the other stock in this place?—Of course, everybody's is.

30,807. Well, when was the last statement made up?—Last clipping time.

30,808. And can you tell me how many people then had an overstock, and how many had not their sufficient stock?

30,809. The Chairman.—Stay a moment: are you a member of the Committee?—No.

30,810. Well, then, he is not bound to answer these questions.

30,811. Mr Sutherland.—Are you, as a community, practically satisfied with the way in which you manage your sheep stock?—Yes.

30,812. Mr Macaulay.—But you do not put the regulations as to the Grazings Act laid down by the Commission in force?—I believe we are going to put them in force; we have the number of sheep taken down.

30,813. The Chairman.—Mr Macaulay, the Secretary tells me that we have laid down no regulations under the Grazings Act in regard to these two townships. You seem to have been misinformed by those about you. These regulations come into force when they receive the sanction and authority of the Commission; now de facto they have not received that sanction and authority.

30,814. Mr Macaulay.—Well, I have been misinformed then.

30,815. The Chairman.—They have not been before the Commission at all.

30,816. Mr Macaulay.—I am obliged for your information. [To Witness].—Do you remember the farm of Cromalt being offered to the crofters some three years ago?—Yes, but we made an application to the Marquis of Stafford direct, and his answer was that he did not want to put more burden on the people there, and that they had plenty of land already. As far as I know that is the way it was. [The Chairman.—Were you a party to that matter?—I had my name down.]

30,817. You told us, I think, that there were some cottars, who, you thought, would take new holdings if they were formed,—cottars, I presume, in your townships?—That is my opinion.

30,818. Who are the cottars in your township who are likely to do that?—There is one Stuart who I think would be able to do so.

30,819. Is it not the fact that most of the cottars there are old wives?—There are some women, but the world could not get on very well without women.

30,820. Are you in arrear of rent?—Last year my rent was not asked from me.

30,821. But has it not been asked several times since?—The winter was very severe last year, and it was not easy to pay the rent after the proper time.

30,822. But the fact is that you have been asked for the rent several times?—I was asked in May and June I think.

30,823. You have not paid it yet?—No, I have not.

30,824. The Chairman.—You would have paid it if you had been asked for it at the usual time?—I would have paid it if they had come for it at the usual time; I had it then.

30,825. And when they did not come for it at the right time you found a use for it otherwise?—Yes.

30,826. Mr Macaulay.—Is it the fact that you have not been able to pay your rent since it was asked?—I have been able.

30,827. You have been able, but still you did not pay?—I did not pay.

30,828. Where do the people usually send their sheep for wintering?—I told that already.

30,829. In your own case; but the people of the township generally?—I don't know much about the rest of them.

30,830. Do you not know where they actually send them?—No.

30,831. Do you know whether they send any of them into the forest sometimes?—There may be a strayed one or two going into the forest.

30,832. Is it not the fact that a good many more than a few stray ones go in?—I don't think so.

30,833. The Chairman.—I find that there were two applications for enlargement to the Crofters Commission, one known as the Elphin case and the other as the Elphin and Knockan case, and the orders are reported at pp. 190-1 of the Report for 1890. With regard to the first of these cases, the land in question formed part of the forest of Glencanisp and now forms part of the farm of Ledmore. It was held that the land might be granted without material damage to the letting value of the remainder of the farm of Ledmore, and the disposal of the case was continued for a month with a view to those crofters in Elphin who had not applied, also lodging an application with reference to the land under consideration, and that order was appealed against. We indicated the intention of granting the application, but adjourned it for a month with a view to the other crofters who were not a party to the application coming forward and being parties to it so as to make it an enlargement applicable to the whole of those locally concerned; and that order has been appealed, and as far as we know the appeal is still standing. Then the other case known as the Elphin and Knockan case, was for taking land from the forest of Glencanisp, and the order made was:—'Find that the claim made by the 'applicants for additional land better sheltered and at 'a lower altitude than the land presently in their 'possession is well founded and reasonable: Find that 'this claim might be met in part by the assignment 'of that portion of the land applied for immediately 'adjoining the township of Elphin, and extending to '880 acres or thereby: Find that this land consists of 'dry hills covered with rough bent or heather, with small 'portions of green and mossing in the hollows: Find 'that the annual value thereof would not exceed £7 'sterling; but find that in order to the said land being 'made available to the applicants, it is indispensable 'that a very substantial iron fence of fully one mile in 'length be erected along the line marked ABF on the 'said plan or tracing produced: Find that the cost of 'this fence would not be less than £106 sterling, viz., '£66 or thereby for the materials and carting, and '£40 or thereby for the erection: Find that although 'a fence might be erected at a cheaper rate, it would 'not, in the opinion of the Commissioners, keep stock 'out of the forest, and therefore would not suffice'; and the order goes on to call upon the parties to say whether they will put up this fence or not. But, of course, it is very manifest they would not put up a fence to cost £106 for the sake of land that is worth £7 a year. That order also was appealed against by the Duke.

30,834. Mr Macaulay.—And was the appeal not withdrawn?—

30,835. The Chairman.—The Secretary is my authority upon these matters of procedure, and he assures me that no such withdrawal has reached him.

30,836. Mr Gordon.—Is the old township of Ledbeg low enough for watering?—Well, it is a much warmer place than our place; the south side of it lies more to the sun.

30,837. But the other side lies more to the east than to the south; it seems to be pretty high ground, about 1000 feet to the head of the hill?—So it is, but it is not so high as Elphin and Knockan; and we have a lot of black ground on the south side of the hill.

30,838. Is Ledbeg the best wintering place in your neighbourhood?—Between the lochs.

30,839. That is the place you applied for?—Yes.

30,840. Which is the best ground for wintering?—Well, between the lochs.

30,841. Mr Sutherland.—You were asked a question by Mr Macaulay, whether some of the people got wintering for their hoggs in the forest. You remember that question, don't you?—Yes. [Mr Macaulay.—I beg your pardon, I did not say 'got wintering,' but whether they went into the forest.]

30,842. Whether the wintering was got there. Is the forest fit for wintering sheep? Can it winter hoggs then?—Yes.

DONALD MACLEOD, Crofter, Knockan, Assynt (46)—examined.

30,843. The Chairman.—Was your case dealt with by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

30,844. You seem to have two holdings of 2 acres 18 poles and of 4 acres 2 roods 4 poles arable; the outrun being altogether 3 acres 1 rood 35 poles, with a share in the common of 2534 acres. The old rent was £8, 10s., and the fair rent is £5, 15s.?—Yes.

30,845. Were you appointed as a delegate at a public meeting?—Yes.

30,846. Was that the same meeting at which Menzies was appointed?—Yes.

30,847. And you specially represent the interests of the township of Knockan?—Yes.

30,848. We are told there are 17 crofters in Knockan?—Yes.

30,849. And two cottars?—Two cottars.

30,850. Will you tell us in your own way what it is you desire to lay before us?—Well, they thought the ground was not sufficient to maintain the people.

30,851. Are the Knockan people desirous of obtaining an extension of grazings?—Yes.

30,852. By taking land, if land can be legitimately got, from the farm of Cromalt and the farm of Ledmore?—Exactly.

30,853. And the part of the deer forest known as Ledbeg?—Yes.

30,854. Are there, in your judgment and in the opinion of those whom you represent, lands suitable for extension of grazings there?—Well, it is suitable for extension of grazings, but it is not much lower than our present land.

30,855. Not lower in altitude, but suitable for grazing purposes?—Yes.

30,856. Is it more suitable for wintering purposes than the land you have?—A little, not much.

30,857. Are all the crofters of Knockan with stock in the habit of sending their hoggs away south for wintering?—Some of them winter them at home and others send them away.

30,858. How do they manage to winter them at home?—Just by hand feeding them.

30,859. On their own holdings?—Yes, some of them do so.

30,860. Are any of the Knockan crofters desirous of leaving their holdings if they could get other holdings in the county?—If it could be done.

30,861. Was that subject discussed among you?—Yes, it was discussed many a time.

30,862. What then is the general feeling?—They would like to get some way of moving some of the people, because it is overcrowded.

30,863. It is an overcrowded township?—Yes.

30,864. And it would be a great benefit if some of them could be removed elsewhere, and their holdings assigned to those who remain?—Yes.

30,865. How many of the 17 do you think would be inclined to move?—I think we could manage ten or twelve in the township.

30,866. You think the land would accommodate ten or twelve?—Yes.

30,867. That would leave six or seven to remove?—Yes.

30,868. Do you think there are six or seven willing to remove?—I cannot say about willingness, but some of them would.

30,869. And do you make the same observation, or can you make the same observation, with regard to Elphin?—I cannot say anything about Elphin, but on their present holdings they can only keep about 30 sheep each on an average, and don't consider that sufficient.

30,870. What would you say would be an adequate stock of sheep for crofters living there, and subsisting entirely by the holding?—I would think any man that would live by stock would require to keep about 100 sheep.

30,871. But you think if the crofters of Elphin and Knockan had land sufficient to enable them to keep an average of 100 sheep each, they would do?—I think so.

30,872. Paying always a fair rent?—Exactly.

30,873. Did the crofters of Knockan consider among themselves the land that we had to refuse as an enlargement?—Oh, yes.

30,874. And are you still of a mind that that land would be suitable in some degree at least for the purposes of extension?—Yes, it would be of some benefit to the crofters.

30,875. Now what would be its main benefit; it stands pretty high, I suppose?—Just in time of snowstorm to put the sheep there.

30,876. Is there what is called bield there,—protection from storm?—There is no protection, but there is heather on rough ground. On our present ground we must take them high up, because there is no heather on the lower ground, it is all green.

30,877. The heather is more accessible?—Yes.

30,878. And the heather affords some little fodder for the sheep when the snow is lying deep on the ground?—Exactly; and they can scrape away the snow off the heather better.

30,879. Your townships are very liable to deep snow?—Very.

30,880. And the snow lies for a long time?—About six weeks at a time sometimes.

30,881. In winter, therefore, I take it, it is much colder there than the average temperature of the country?—Oh, yes, I have seen black ground at Strath Caniard, when we could not take a cart from home owing to the depth of the snow.

30,882. That is how many miles from Knockan?—Seven.

30,883. It was all covered with snow till you got to Strath Caniard?—All snow, we could not take a horse and cart.

Lochinver, Sutherland-shire.

Donald Macleod.

30,884. What time of year was that?—Sometimes in winter or spring: any time of the year between December and the latter end of March.

30,885. Is there anything else you would like to say to us?—Nothing.

30,886. The Secretary has called my attention to a very interesting passage with regard to this locality from Captain John Henderson's work, entitled A General View of the Agriculture of the County of Sutherland, where the author says (p. 17):—"After crossing Drum-'croy and Glenmuich by Alltnacallagach, the first place 'that presents itself in Assynt is Ledmore, to the south 'of which is Loch Borelan, and a rivulet from it to 'Loch Kirkaig, at the west sea divides Assynt from 'Coigach in Ross-shire. Assynt is the most mountainous 'and rugged part of the county of Sutherland. At 'Ledmore and Ledbeg Mr Mackenzie (Ardloch) and Mr 'John Mackenzie have 12 sub-tenants on about 30 acres of 'land; and in the neighbouring hills, quarries of white 'and variegated marble are wrought by Mr Jopling.

'From this place I proceeded due north through 'what is called the valley or glen of Assynt by a road 'of 12 miles made by Mr Jopling to carry his marble 'to the seaport at Unabol. The first habitable place is 'Stroncroubie. Here Mr Mackenzie has 8 sub-tenants 'on about 40 acres of arable land, they have a corn-'mill, and pay £40 rent" Now that was written by a well know writer in 1815?—Yes.

30,887. Mr Gordon.—Do you know what stock is upon Cromalt at present?—I cannot say what number of stock is on it.

30,888. Do you know what kind of stock is on it?—Cheviot stock.

30,889. Are they eild sheep or ewes?—Eild sheep from Achmore farm.

30,890. Is there any part of the hirsel of Cromalt that would keep ewe stock?—There was ewe stock on it when William Gunn, Dornoch, had it.

30,891. Cheviot ewes?—Yes.

30,892. Upon that hirsel by itself, or was it in connection with some other ground?—On the hirsel alone.

30,893. What stock has Mr Mundell upon Ledmore?—Black-faced sheep.

30,894. And how do they do there?—I believe they do middling there.

30,895. Does he keep black faced sheep there in preference to cheviots?—Yes, but I believe he is going to change them; that is what I have heard.

30,896. Because he thinks cheviots would do better?—Yes.

30,897. The Chairman.—When did Mr Gunn of Dornoch have the farm of Cromalt?—I cannot say exactly when he left.

30,898. Is it some years ago?—Some years ago.

30,899. And it is now in possession of Mr Mundell, is it?—No, of the Duke of Sutherland.

30,900. He has had it for some years?—Yes.

30,901. Is there a farm house and a steading on the ground?—No, a shepherd's house; there never was a farm house.

30,902. Mr Macaulay, Solicitor, Golspie.—Do you remember that farm being offered to the crofters of your township?—No, I don't remember it being offered; I remember putting in an application for the farm, and the application being refused.

30,903. Did the township put in that application?—Yes, they did.

30,904. What stock have you got yourself at present?—About 35.

30,905. And your rent was fixed by the Crofters Commission I understand?—Yes.

30,906. Have you fulfilled your obligation now?—Hardly.

30,907. Are you much in arrear?—One rent and some of the arrears that were left by the Commission.

30,908. And what is your reason for not settling up these arrears?—That it was not very easy for me.

30,909. It was inability in your case, was it?—Well, not altogether inability; I think if I would be hardly pushed for it—

30,910. You would pay if you were hardly pushed for it?—Yes; but owing to bad prices for stock it would be very hard on me.

Lochinver Sutherlan shire.

Donald Macleod.

30,911. Mr Sutherland.—With regard to the payment of rent, is the rent due now?—Oh, yes, last year's rent is due.

30,912. What is the usual rent time for crofters here?—About the beginning of December.

30,913. Then, when you pay in December is it the rent up to that date that you pay?—Yes, up to 1st December.

30,914. Is it not to May of the following year?—Yes.

30,915. Your rents are always half a year in advance?—Exactly.

30,916. Now, keeping that in mind, is it the proportion of your rent that is due from this time last year only that is to pay?—Oh, no. [Mr Macaulay.—There is a full year's rent, besides that, now payable.]

30,917. A year and a half?—Yes.

30,918. Mr Macaulay.—And some of the arrears of the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

John Macleod.

JOHN MACLEOD, Crofter, Knockan, Assynt (50),—examined.

30,919. The Chairman.—Your holding has 3 acres 15 poles arable; 1 acre 3 roods 30 poles outrun; and $\frac{1}{10}$th share in the common of 2534 acres, the old rent was £7, 13s., and the fair rent £5. Were you appointed as a delegate at a public meeting?—Yes.

30,920. The same meeting as the other two witnesses from your quarter?—Yes.

30,921. And do you desire to express the same views as they have done with regard to the extension of grazings for the Elphin and Knockan crofters?—Yes.

30,922. Is there any serious desire for new settlements among the Knockan crofters?—Yes.

30,923. How many do you say would be prepared to remove if they got suitable holdings elsewhere?—I am not sure about the number, but I know I would shift myself.

30,924. When you say you would shift, you mean you would shift to a holding where you could obtain a living by the holding?—Yes.

30,925. At present you live by your holding?—Yes.

30,926. You have no fishing or labour to depend on?—No.

30,927. Am I right in saying that the Elphin and Knockan crofters generally depend entirely on their holdings for their living?—Yes.

30,928. They are too far from labour, and they are a long distance from the sea?—Yes.

30,929. Have you anything to add to what we have heard already with regard to part of the forest of Glencanisp, and the farms of Ledmore and Cromalt?—Just the same. But there is another thing that the people want to put before the Commission and that is with regard to Coulmore. They thought they were paying the rent since 1812; I think that is the time it was taken from them.

30,930. It was taken away?—Yes. It was taken off the crofters, we think, and off the estate and the county.

30,931. It is in the county of Cromarty?—Yes.

30,932. You thought your predecessors were paying rent for it in 1812?—Yes, till the Commission fixed fair rents. The estate lost nothing from it till then; they went on the New Years Day to look at the marches, and they are quite distinct from all these present day cairns put up.

30,933. The marches of 1812?—Yes.

30,934. Are they field dykes?—No, cairns on the watershed.

30,935. And were these cairns indicative of a line of march between the old forest?—It was before it was a forest that these cairns were put up.

30,936. What were they a march between?—Between the two counties we think.

30,937. Well, we are going down to the locality and we will have a look at the ground. Are you in arrear of rent?—Last year's rent.

30,938. Nothing more?—No.

30,939. Were you left by the Commission with some arrears to pay?—No.

30,940. You had no arrears when you came before the Commission?—No.

30,941. And you have no arrears yet, except last year's rent which was not asked from you at the usual rent collection time?—No.

30,942. Did that circumstance lead to some hanging back on the part of the crofters?—Yes, it did.

30,943. Would most of them have paid their rents if the rent collection had been held at the usual time?—Yes.

30,944. But I daresay many of them when they were not asked for the money at the time found other uses for it?—They used it otherwise, and it was reported that it was not required.

30,945. Mr Sutherland.—What do you say was the old boundary of Coulmore?—The watershed.

30,946. At the top of the hill?—Yes; the cairns are there still; any man that goes there will see them.

30,947. Did you ever hear the occasion of the boundary of the county being changed?—Yes, a man who is at Achnahaird came, and he was thinking of getting the two townships together.

30,948. But you made some reference to a circumstance that led me to think that the boundary of the two counties was changed?—Of course, it was.

30,949. From Coulmore to where it is now?—It is on the watershed on the hill till then.

30,950. And what were the circumstances that led to the change of the boundary between the counties?—It was this man.

30,951. No man could do it by himself?—It was, indeed, sir.

30,952. But your contention is that the boundaries of the counties were changed, and that you were put back again into Sutherlandshire, is that it?—Yes.

30,953. And that you still continued to pay the old rent; is that your contention?—Yes, until the time of the Crofters Commission.

30,954. You stated that you, yourself, wished a new holding?—Yes, indeed, I do.

30,955. Could you get such a new holding as you have indicated upon the land that has been mentioned by Mr. Macleod, the other witness?—I could; I could get much better than anything in Elphin or Knockan.

30,956. And you think it could be taken off the holding of this non-resident farmer?—Government could do it.

30,957. What I mean to indicate is that the land is there?—The land is there.

30,958. And it is at present waste?—Of course, it is.

30,959. And you could cultivate some of it and occupy it to advantage?—Yes.

30,960. Mr Macaulay, Solicitor, Golspie.—Would you take the farm of Sronchrubie altogether, the rough part as well as the better parts?—Myself?

30,961. Yes, or you and some other crofters?—I could if there were plenty of us.

30,962. You mean that you would take the whole farm?—Yes.

30,963. You, I believe, and some others about Elphin and Knockan are employed as gillies, in the forest, are not you?—No.

30,964. You are not a gillie?—I am a gillie but not in the forest.

30,965. Where then?—Fishing.

30,966. So that that really is the means of livelihood apart from the land up about Elphin?—Yes.

MURDO MACLEOD (FINLAY) Culkein-Drumbaig—examined.

30,967. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—I represent my mother.

30,968. What is her name?—Widow Ann Mackenzie or Macleod.

30,969. I see the holding extends to 2 acres and 16 poles arable; 1 rood 18 poles outrun; and a share of the common pasture of 907 acres; the former rent was £3, 14s., and the present rent is £2, 8s. There was an enlargement of holding there, of which you have a share as well, the land that was taken from Oldney?—Yes.

30,970. That is to say 256 acres divided into 16 shares, the rent of each share being 8s.?—Yes.

30,971. Is that 8s. included in the £2, 8s.?—No, the rent is £2, 16s. with the enlargement.

30,972. Were you appointed as a delegate?—Yes.

30,973. At a meeting held recently?—Yes.

30,974. Is Murdo Maclean from Nedd, the other delegate appointed along with you?—Yes.

30,975. Have you any written statement?—No.

30,976. What desires do the township you represent wish to lay before us?—They are wishing that some of the crofters would be removed to where there is plenty land.

30,977. Is the township overcrowded?—Altogether.

30,978. How many crofters are in Culkein, Drumbeg?—Eighteen I suppose.

30,979. Are there any cottars?—Oh, yes.

30,980. How many?—Five.

30,981. And it is their desire that if arrangements could be made a number of them should be removed to other ground?—Yes.

30,982. And the vacated croft made available for those who remain?—Yes.

30,983. How many are willing to remove?—I could not be exactly sure about that; but I know one thing, I would be willing to remove myself and a good few along with me, although I cannot say exactly how many.

30,984. Do you point us to land anywhere that you think would be suitable for new settlements?—Any place in the country where there is land I would be willing to go.

30,985. Anywhere within the county?—Anywhere within the county.

30,986. You would be quite willing to leave the parish?—To leave the parish altogether, and go where I could live on a croft.

30,987. How do you live at present?—Very middling.

30,988. But what is your means of livelihood?—The only means I live on is if I will get anything to do, to labour. I have a brother who goes from home now and again helping to support the family; without that we could not live on the croft.

30,989. You get along by means of outside labour, either your own or your brother's?—Oh, not in the country.

30,990. But by going far afield?—Yes, of course.

30,991. Is there any land in the immediate neighbourhood of the township to which you ask our attention?—Yes.

30,992. What land is that?—There is the land of Ardvar farm.

30,993. Is this suitable for settlements, or for extension, or for both?—For both.

30,994. Does that land of Ardvar farm march with Culkein-Drumbaig?—It marches with Nedd.

30,995. And you ask us to inspect the farm, and consider the land that may be pointed out to us there?—Yes.

30,996. In whose hands is that farm at present?—The Duke of Sutherland's.

30,997. Has he had it in hand for some time?—Yes, for four or five years I think.

30,998. Is the stock managed through a local manager?—Yes, the manager is living on Achmore farm: he manages both Achmore and Ardvar.

30,999. What is his name?—John Mackay.

31,000. Then is Achmore farm also in the hands of the Duke?—Yes.

31,001. Are the two worked as one grazing farm?—Yes. There is fully better land on Achmore farm.

31,002. You ask our attention to Achmore as well as to Ardvar?—Yes, and to Kirkton, bordering Achmore again.

31,003. Is that a separate holding?—Yes.

31,004. Is it up Loch Assynt?—Yes, at the farthest end of the loch.

31,005. Is Kirkton in the hands of the Duke?—Yes.

Lochinver, Sutherland-shire.

Murdo Macleod.

31,006. Who was in it before?—It was inhabited by crofters before.

31,007. But is it now worked as part of the farms of Achmore and Ardvar?—Yes.

31,008. Does any one live upon it?—No, except shepherds and gamekeepers.

31,009. But Mackay manages the three, Ardvar, Achmore, and Kirkton?—Kirkton is only a hirsel on Achmore farm.

31,010. Now, when you ask our attention to Ardvar and Achmore of which Kirkton is a part, may we take you as representing the feelings of the meeting who delegated you to appear?—Well, I think you may.

31,011. Are there any other lands you desire to mention?—No, these are the principal places. There is a place called Little Assynt up there, on the farm of Achmore, that would be very suitable for a crofter or two.

31,012. We will see it when we are looking at Achmore. You got an extension of holdings from the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

31,013. And since that additional land was assigned, has it been occupied by the crofters?—Yes.

31,014. Has it been found to be insufficient?—Quite insufficient.

31,015. Is it the desire of the crofters for whom you appear that they should have such an amount of stock as would enable them to live by their holdings?—Yes, that is their only desire.

31,016. In the same way as was represented to us by the crofters of Elphin and Knockan?—The very same way, but more so.

31,017. Your folks are worse off, you think, than the Elphin and Knockan people?—Yes, a great deal.

31,018. But if you and the others for whom you appear had land sufficient to raise and keep a certain stock, you would be satisfied?—Yes, that is our only wish.

31,019. What stock would you consider sufficient?—About 150 sheep each.

31,020. And how many cows?—Six or seven cows.

31,021. Any horses?—And a horse.

31,022. Do you know the farm of Oldney?—Yes.

31,023. Is there land there?—Oh, yes.

31,024. Who has Oldney at present?—The present tenant is Macaulay, and the rest of the farm is divided into shares among the crofters.

31,025. There was an enlargement of holdings granted from the farm?—Yes.

31,026. Does Macaulay live upon the farm?—Yes.

31,027. Is Oldney island a part of Oldney farm?—Yes.

31,028. Now, is there land there that would be suitable for extension to the Culkein crofters?—Very suitable. There is no more suitable place in the country.

31,029. It lies very near?—Very near.

31,030. What sort of steading is there upon Oldney?—A first-class steading. I forgot to mention a place, Unapool.

31,031. What do you wish to say about Unapool?—It is a good place for crofters.

31,032. What farm is that on?—Ardvar or rather Achmore.

31,033. And you ask our attention to it also as a part of the farm of Achmore?—Yes.

31,034. Is that land suitable for extensions or for new settlements?—For new settlements.

31,035. Is there low-lying ground with high ground also?—Yes.

31,036. That is on the shores of Loch Glencoul or Loch Cairnbawn, close to Kylesku?—Yes, within a mile.

31,037. I see that Captain Henderson whose work I mentioned says on p. 19:—'The next farm is Mrs 'Mackay's at Auldney, who has six families of fishers. 'Mr Clark at Culkein-Drumbaig, has 20 acres; Drum-'baig contributes 15 families and 4 boats; Ned, 15 'families; Glenlerag, 24 families; at Ardvaar, Captain 'Scobie has six families, all fishermen, and about 15 'acres; Reantragaid, on the north Kyle's Cow border, 5 'acres; Unabol, 30 families, and about 40 acres, rent '£70. Balnacaul and Glendow are at the head of 'Kyle's Cow or the narrow Kyle. Upon the whole 'there are in Assynt about 300 families, and if I except '40 families the rest are fishermen on the coast of the 'Atlantic.' That seems to have been the state of possession in the year 1815.

Lochinver, Sutherland-shire.

Murdo Macleod.

31,038. Mr Sutherland. — How many families are there within the district of Culkein-Drumbaig? I see the number of tenants is 18, and are there people who have got no land?—Yes.

31,039. How many families in Culkein-Drumbaig have got no land?—I think four families.

31,040. That would make along with the 18 tenants 22?—I daresay there are more: there may be seven.

31,041. Are there nearly 30 families in Culkein-Drumbaig?—Yes, I believe there are.

31,042. Then, do you hold your pasture in common with the Drumbaig and Nedd people?—No, we have it separate.

31,043. You are adjoining each other?—Yes, we have marches between.

31,044. Do you know the number of families in Drumbaig and in Nedd as well?—John Maclean knows that.

31,045. There are 20 tenants on Drumbaig, and do you know how many cottars besides these?—Seven cottars.

31,046. Then taking Nedd, there are 15 tenants, and are there any cottars there besides?—There are some five.

31,047. That then makes about 69 families in all. Do you know what extent of land these 69 families have got between them?—Of arable land it is not much.

31,048. Have they less than 4000 acres?— Oh, yes, I think it is less.

31,049. And do you know the extent of the farms you were talking about to the Chairman, the farm of Ardvar for instance, do you know the size of it?—Not the acreage.

31,050. Do you know that it has 9000 acres?—9000 acres.

31,051. So that this one farm alone has got double the land that the 70 families have?—Yes, I know that.

31,052. And do you know the extent of the farm of Achmore?—No, I don't know.

31,053. Do you know that it is over 40,000 acres?—I believe it is all that.

31,054. And there is no tenant at all on these two?—No.

31,055. And I think your reasonable contention is that the overcrowded people of these townships should get the lands of these three farms that are at present lying tenantless?—Yes, I think so, seeing that their fathers and forefathers were living there.

31,056. You heard the statement that was read by his lordship out of a book written in the year 1815, in which it was mentioned that there were then 24 families in Glenleraig?—Yes.

31,057. Could you tell us how many families are in Glenleraig to-day?—One shepherd.

31,058. From the same quotation we saw that there were 16 tenants in Ardvar?—Yes.

31,059. How many are in it now?—One shepherd.

31,060. And the land in Glenleraig and Ardvar generally, is it better land than the land in your possession?—Much about the same, I daresay the land we have would be as good if we had plenty of it.

31,061. But what you complain of is that that is not a just or rational distribution of the land?—Yes.

31,062. You think you could occupy that land which is now lying tenantless and in large farms if you got an opportunity of doing the best you could with it?—Yes.

31,063–4. Have you any idea as to the comparative rental of the land that you hold and this other land in large farms? Which of you pays most per acre for the land?—I think we pay most for the acreage.

31,065. Do you know what you pay per acre in Culkein-Drumbaig?—No, I don't know exactly what we pay per acre, but I could tell if I was preparing.

31,066. Do you know that the tenants of Nedd used to pay 10½ per acre before the Crofters Commission went there?—Yes, I was told that.

31,067. And do you know that they still pay 9¼d. per acre for their holdings?—Yes.

31,068. And are you aware that the large farm of Ardvar pays only 7d. per acre?—I am not aware of that.

31,069. Do you think now that if the people got this land for occupation they would raise the value of the land?—I am of that opinion.

31,070. In your opinion are Nedd and Drumbaig, and particularly the place you represent yourself, in need of getting a chance to live and thrive by means of land?—Actually in need.

31,071. You think the means is there for bettering their condition?—Yes, the land is there.

31,072. And to any of our number who may go to look at the land you would be glad to show it, would you?—Very happy to get the opportunity.

31,073. Mr Macaulay, Solicitor, Golspie.—About the farm of Achmore, you said there were 40,000 acres in it?—So I am told.

31,074. Would you be surprised to find that there is not more than half the area, so that if the acreage is only 20,000 acres it is just about half what you estimated it at?—(No answer).

31,075. The Chairman.—Are there only 20,000 acres?—[Mr Macaulay. Just about that].

31,076. Mr Sutherland.—What is your authority?—[Mr Macaulay. The information has been given me].

31,077. My authority is the estate map that has been supplied to us.—[Mr Macaulay. Well, I can assure you, that there are not 40,000 acres; 20,000 is about the number. Probably you include Ardvar and the crofters and everything].

31,078. It is just as it is here on the map?—[Mr Macaulay. Well, it is not the fact].

31,079. The Chairman.—That would make it 1s. 2d. per acre.

31,079*a*. Mr Macaulay.—8500 acres for Ardvar. (To Witness). Now you tell us that your idea of a holding is one to carry 150 sheep, 6 or 7 cows, and a horse?—Yes.

31,080. Supposing you had an opportunity of taking such a place, could you stock it?—No.

31,081. You would not be in a position to stock it?—No, I could not. I could partly stock it, perhaps, along with help.

31,082. I see that the rent of your mother's croft is considerably in arrear?—Yes.

31,083. How do you explain that state of matters, two years in arrear?—It is one year, I may say; and last year, owing to the fault of the officials in not collecting, made it two years in arrear.

31,084. The officials were not to blame for the year before last?—Yes, of course.

31,085. You were a year in arrear this time last year, and now you are two years in arrear?—Yes.

31,086. Is it because of inability on your part?—Yes.

31,087. You are not able?—No: but why? Owing to the smallness of the croft.

31,088. Do you prosecute fishing at all?—No.

31,089. Is fishing not the principal means of livelihood of the majority of the tenants?—Yes, of those who are following the fishing; it is bread and bone to them.

31,090. But do the most of them not follow the fishing?—Yes, most of them do; without that they could not live at all.

JOHN MACLEAN, Crofter, Nedd (35)—examined.

31,091. The Chairman.—Was your case dealt with by the Crofters Commission?—It was.

31,092. Your holding occupies 2 acres 2 roods 28 poles arable, 4 acres 3 roods 29 poles outrun, and $\frac{1}{15}$th share in the common pasture of 811 acres; the former rent was £3, 1s. 5d., and the present rent is £2, 8s.?—Yes.

31,093. There was an extension of holdings, I see; you got $\frac{1}{15}$th share of land taken from the farm of Ardvar, and in 1891 there was another adjustment by which you got other two shares, making altogether three shares on the farm of Ardvar?—Yes.

31,093*a*. You pay altogether £3, 9s. 3d. for the extension?—Yes.

31,094. Were you appointed as a delegate?—I was, not at a public meeting but informally.

31,095. Was there an informal meeting of some of the crofters at which you were appointed to represent the views of the township of Nedd?—Just so.

31,096. What are their views particularly?—It was to give general information about these farms; of course, they got an extension already.

31,097. But is that extension insufficient?—It is insufficient to make a living by.

31,098. The crofters of Nedd would like such an extension of their holdings as would enable them to live upon the spot?—Some of them would, I suppose, like to remove.

31,099. How many crofters are in Nedd?—There are 15 crofts, but only 13 crofters now.

31,100. And how many cottars?—Five cottars.

31,101. What has become of the two unoccupied crofts?—Two others got them.

31,102. Is there any desire on the part of any of them to leave the holdings?—As they are situated just now, there are very few of them that could stock a larger holding in another place.

31,103. But suppose they were able to meet that difficulty, would they be willing to leave?—I think so, a good few of them.

31,104. Is the township overcrowded?—Certainly, it is, as to arable land.

31,105. And they would be in favour of some of them going away, and getting land elsewhere, and the vacated lands going to those who stayed?—Certainly.

31,106. Where in particular are there lands suitable, either for settlements or for extension of grazing? In which farms or forests?—The two farms that lie adjoining us, Achmore and Ardvar.

31,107. And you desire, I daresay, to submit the same views with regard to these farms as has been mentioned to us already?—Just so; there is a lot of old arable land on them.

31,108. Is there old arable upon both?—Yes, where the crofters stayed in olden times. But it is not very good land; there is a lot of it that could not be ploughed; just the same as we have in Nedd already. There are only a few acres in Nedd that can be ploughed at the present time.

31,109. There was an application for enlargement of holdings by the crofters of Nedd which was refused, I think?—The application was refused, but it was compromised by this piece being given them, which they got.

31,110. The 434 acres?—Yes.

31,111. You agree, I daresay, with the evidence you have heard already with regard to the farms of Ardvar and Achmore?—Yes.

31,112. And do you wish to add anything, or has the matter been laid before us with sufficient fulness?—There is no doubt the land is better than the land that we have, but there are not many places in it where a large arable croft could be got. The land is pretty rocky, the same as we have at present.

31,113. Would the necessities of the Nedd crofters be met substantially by an extension of grazing, or have they both in view?—Both.

31,114. Both settlement and grazing?—They could not get arable land, only extension of grazing.

31,115. How do the crofters of Nedd live at present?—They live by fishing or work in other places.

31,116. They supplement what they get for the holdings by fishing and labouring?—Yes, they could never live by the produce of their crofts.

31,117. Mr Sutherland.—Do they leave home and follow the fishing round the country?—Yes, they go to the east coast, Morayshire and Aberdeenshire.

31,118. How many months of the year do they get fishing at home?—Some years there is no fishing at all; there is herring fishing in Glendhu at present, and there was last year, but not for a good while before then.

Lochinver, Sutherlandshire.

John Maclean.

31,119. The herring fishing at home is rather uncertain?—Rather uncertain; there are many years they get none at all.

31,120. But is there constant white fishing, is it more constant?—Well, yes, out at the banks; but in our district they have very few boats that could work there.

31,121. The boats are not large enough?—Not large enough.

31,122. The holdings do not pay the rent out of the land, do they?—Certainly not.

31,123. That is your opinion decidedly, is it?—I am sure of it.

31,124. Do you know the lands that were spoken to by the previous witnesses?—I daresay they could sell as many sheep, some of them, as would pay the rent; but would not keep themselves living, because they don't get any produce except potatoes off the croft.

31,125. The first claim ought to be to support the people themselves?—Unless they be supported there would be nobody to pay the rent then.

31,126. The rent-producing instrument would be destroyed?—Yes.

31,127. You got an extension of holding from the Crofters Commission, and I suppose that, small as it is, you have found it to be of some good?—Oh, yes; but that there are some of us who have not got sufficient stock on it yet.

31,128. But I suppose they will be stocking it by degrees?—Just by degrees. There are very few who can buy stock.

31,129. You got 434 acres among 13?—Yes.

31,130. That is about 33 acres each, which, at ten acres to each sheep, represents the keep of three sheep to each tenant; and you have found that a benefit, have you?—Yes.

31,131. Do you argue from that that a still greater extension would be of still greater benefit?—Certainly.

31,132. You think that is a rational deduction to make, and a reasonable one?—Yes.

31,133. Then I think you stated very fairly the quality of the land that was there, in comparison with the land in Achmore and on the Ardvar farm; and do you see any good reason why the people who are able to pay this 9½d. per acre should not pay 7d. per acre for the land in Ardvar?—Well, I would think they could.

31,134. And do you think if they had the opportunity they would be able to do that, and to make a livelihood for themselves?—If they had sufficient of it.

31,135. I am assuming that there would be sufficient of it,—as much land as would maintain 100 sheep. Do you agree that that size of holding is desirable?—I daresay it would require to carry more than 100 sheep before a family could make a living on it.

31,136. Perhaps 150?—Yes, or even 200; because they could not rear many cattle on it?—they could not get wintering for them.

31,137. That would depend upon how much could be made arable, I suppose?—Just so.

31,138. But is there any land being cultivated at all upon the farm of Ardvar just now?—There is nothing cultivated. There are three parks in it, but they are only grazing.

31,139. Have they been cultivated at one time?—Yes.

31,140. And now they are waste?—Now they are waste.

31,141. Do you think it would be profitable that these should be cultivated?—Yes.

31,142. Now, would the cultivation of the land increase the capability of the land for maintaining stock in winter?—Yes, it would.

31,143-4. So, then, we would not be justified in taking the present wintering capabilities of Ardvar as a criterion of what it could be made if more land were cultivated? Would not it maintain more stock, if more land were tilled?—I am not very sure myself, but I know that there has been a lot of cattle on it in former times.

31,145. And do you think it was due to the fact that more was cultivated then than now?—Some people say that if there is cattle roaming about a place more grass will grow on it: I heard a shepherd saying so.

Lochinver, Sutherlandshire.

John Maclean.

31,146. And is that in accordance with your own observation?—I think it is.

31,147. Mr Gordon.—You have not very much experience in sheep, have you?—I have been for a few years now working about them in our own place.

31,148. But, personally, you have never had charge of any sheep apparently?—No, except just about the crofters for twelve or thirteen years. I have never been a shepherd myself.

31,149. You have spoken generally to these two farms of Achmore and Ardvar as being suitable for new holdings?—That is all that I know of in the parish here. I am not acquainted with the parish over here.

31,150. Did you refer to any part of these farms as suitable for extension of grazings for your township?—Well, we got some grazing already out of the two farms.

31,151. Can you suggest to us any further land in that neighbourhood?—Yes, the place that we applied for when we got this.

31,152. What did you apply for?—Contiguous to the place we got, to the south side of it.

31,153. Do you know the name of that loch, Loch-an-Leothaid?—Yes.

31,154. Was it near that?—It was to the south west of that.

31,155. Was that up between you and Loch Assynt?—Yes.

31,156. Is that good ground for wintering or for summering?— For summering it is good.

31,157. I have seen that ground, and I think that is as worthless ground as there is in that part of the country: is it not very black ground?—There are a number of green places in it, about Gormchnoc.

31,158. Between you and Assynt Lodge?—Yes, but not altogether as far south as that.

31,159. Is it not very black ground?—There is a lot of green in it.

31,160. Is that the most convenient part to your place?—It would be the most convenient for an addition to our holdings; there is a nearer part to us on the farm, but there is a small loch or arm of the sea going up between us just opposite our crofts—Loch Nedd.

31,161. But that is not the part of the country you are speaking of just now?—No, but I mean that is nearest: but it is not convenient, for the sea separates us.

31,162. The Chairman.—With regard to the extension of 434 acres, what stock is upon it just now?—Perhaps 70 or 80 sheep, sometimes more: they come down in winter to the croft generally.

31,163. But you have 70 or 80 during the summer season?—Yes.

31,164. And have you any other animals on that ground?—Some eild cattle go on it sometimes.

31,165. How many?—Five or six.

31,166. And any horses?—The horses have not been going: we are trying to keep them off.

31,167. For the sake of the other stock?—Yes.

31,168. And how do you feed the horses?—They were grazing out in summer, but we graze them in in winter, and feed them.

31,169. Mr Macaulay, Solicitor, Golspie.—With regard to this extension, are you aware that some of the crofters have forfeited their shares of this extension by not complying with the Order?—There were some four, I think.

31,170. And these, then, were parcelled out among the other crofters?—Yes.

William Matheson.

WILLIAM MATHESON, Crofter's Son, Badnamban (21)—examined.

31,171. The Chairman.—Are you here representing your father?—The crofters of the township.

31,172. Are you a crofter yourself?—No; my father is a crofter.

31,173. What is his name?—Norman Matheson.

31,174. His holding appears to have 1 acre 0 roods 32 poles arable, 3 acres 2 roods 34 poles outrun, and one-ninth share of 239 acres common pasture; the former rent was £2, 6s. 9d., and the present rent is £1, 18s.?—Yes.

31,175. Were you appointed as a delegate?—Yes.

31,176. At a meeting of the Badnamban crofters?—Yes.

31,177. What farm does your township march with?—The township of Inverkirkaig on the south, and on the north-east Strathan township.

31,178. You march on the east with the deer forest of Glencanisp?—No; Strathan cuts us off.

31,179. And Strathan marches with the forest?—Yes.

31,180. What is it you desire to say?—Simply that they wish some additional pasture.

31,181. And where do you think it may be obtained?—The townships of Badnamban, Strathan, and Inverkirkaig could join together for a piece of the forest.

31,182. The forest of Glencanisp?—Yes.

31,183. Do you mean a part of the forest marching with Strathan?—Yes.

31,184. As an extension of grazing?—Yes.

31,185. And you wish us to look at the land there with a view to our considering that question?—Yes.

31,186. Is extension of grazing the only matter that you have considered, or have you considered the question of some of your number leaving?—There is not a proper place for settlements.

31,187. How many crofters are in Badnamban?—Nine.

31,188. And how many cottars?—One.

31,189. How many are in Inverkirkaig?—I cannot tell.

31,190. Do you know how many are in Strathan?—No.

31,191. Are these townships at least as large as Badnamban?—Larger.

31,192. I think we may take it that Strathan has 14 and Inverkirkaig has 18 crofters (you will correct my figures, Mr Macaulay, if they are wrong), and probably one or two cottars besides?—Yes.

31,193. But, I understand, the feeling you represent is that the occupants of the townships of Strathan, Inverkirkaig, and Badnamban combine to ask our consideration of the lands of Glencanisp forest marching with Strathan?—Exactly.

31,194. Mr Forsyth.—What is your idea with reference to this portion of the forest: do you wish to keep sheep?—Yes.

31,195. And you think it is suitable for sheep?—Yes.

31,196. Do you see your way to stock it in due time with sheep?—Some could, and others could not, without assistance.

31,197. Would it be as a common grazing between the whole of the townships, or would each township ask for the land for itself?—No, I suppose it would be in common to the three townships.

31,198. How many sheep do you think you would try to keep if you had sufficient ground?—About 100 sheep or so to a share, or even less; that is, taking it all over.

31,199. There appear to be a good many crofters in each of these places; do you think there are too many?—Yes, there are too many; the place is overcrowded.

31,200. Some of them would be inclined to move elsewhere, would they?—Yes, a few would.

31,201. Have you heard of that?—Yes.

31,202. They have absolutely said they would go?—There are at least two who said they would be very willing.

31,203. But they consider they might get on if they had additional hill grazing?—Exactly.

31,204. Do they fish in your township?—Yes, they do.

31,205. Have you boats?—Yes, small boats.

31,206. Do you follow the lobster fishing?—Yes.

31,207. And herring when the chance comes?—Yes.

31,208. And white fishing?—Yes.

31,209. Do you cure any fish?—No, we sell it all fresh.

31,210. How do you manage as to a market?—We send the fish away by the steamer, and by the mail.

31,211. And you find that something is to be made by that?—Yes.

31,212. Mr Sutherland.—Have you a definite idea of where the grazing you referred to could be got in the forest? What had you in your mind?—Simply that an addition might be made to the present pasture.

31,213. How far up do you think it could, with advantage, be extended?—It could be extended up to Suilven.

31,214. The southern slope of Suilven?—Up to about the middle of Suilven.

31,215. And is that as good pasture as you have got in Badnamban?—Most of it is better.

31,216. Mr Macaulay, Solicitor, Golspie.—I understand there was an extension of grazing given to the townships there?—Yes, to the townships of Strathan and Inverkirkaig, but Badnamban did not get any.

31,217. Are you aware that some of the crofters there have not taken up their share, so to speak, of that grazing?—Yes, for the reason that they thought it too dear.

31,218. You know that a number of them have not taken it up?—I understand there are a few who did not.

31,219. The Chairman.—You were no party to the applications by Strathan and Inverkirkaig?—Yes, we were.

31,220. Have you anything else to say?—To explain the way in which the Badnamban crofters were thrown out of that claim. When the first application for the pasture from the forest was sent in, shortly before the Crofters Commission came here, the Inverkirkaig crofters wrote an agreement, which most of them signed, giving Badnamban a portion of their own pasture contiguous to Badnamban, on condition that they would forego their claim to the pasture in the forest. This they did, and sent in an application for the pasture; but when the Commission came here the Inverkirkaig crofters would not give them this.

31,221. They did not adhere to the arrangement?—They did not. The Crofters Commission went over the ground, and the Kirkaig crofters showed them the piece they were willing to give, which was to be fenced. Sheriff Brand pointed out, when he was examining the place, that a fence should be erected. The application did not come from the Sheriff Clerk until Saturday, and the court rose thatevening before the applications came, so they were deferred, and it was two years afterwards before the case was taken up again: and then the Inverkirkaig crofters denied that ever they wrote such an agreement.

31,222. So the thing fell through?—The thing fell through.

31,223. Mr Sutherland.—Did the people consider whether it would be possible for the Crofters Commission under the Act to take an extension of holdings from crofters' land?—They thought so, seeing the other crofters were willing to give it.

31,224. The Chairman.—I think the matter stood in this way, that the Crofters Commission were not unwilling to deal with it, if all parties consented; but under the Act we did not feel that we were able to assign to the Badnamban crofters land which belonged to Inverkirkaig, unless with the full consent of the crofters of Inverkirkaig?—But we thought, if we could have produced the letter, we could have compelled it.

31,225. But you were not able to produce the letter?—No.

31,226. What we held was this:—The Commissioners 'find that the land applied for is therein 'described as Point of Inverkirkaig: Find that the 'said land already forms part of the holdings of the 'crofters of Inverkirkaig for which Fair Rents were fixed 'under their applications disposed of by final orders, 'dated 22nd December 1888: Therefore sustain the 'objection stated for the respondent,' i.e., for the Duke: his objection was that it was already crofters' land.

BIBL. LONDIN. UNIV.

Lochinver, Sutherland-shire.

William Matheson.

Of course, if the alleged arrangement could have been made good by production of evidence, we might have taken another course.

31,227. Mr Sutherland.—But you must remember that the 'respondent' is not the Inverkirkaig crofters?—I understand that.

Angus Matheson.

ANGUS MATHESON, Crofter, Baddidarach (46)—examined.

31,228. The Chairman.—Was your case dealt with by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

31,229. Your area is, I find, 1 acre 0 roods 27 poles arable, 3 acres 3 roods 2 poles outrun, and one-ninth share in a common of 397 acres; the former rent was £2, 12s. 6d., the present rent is £2?—Yes.

31,230. Were you appointed as a delegate?—Yes.

31,231. Along with John Macleod and John Matheson?—Yes; but John Macleod could not appear to-day, and John Mackenzie is to take his place.

31,232. With what lands does your township of Baddidarach march?—We are hemmed in between the townships of Ardroe and Torbreck and the farm of Inver.

31,233. Have you a written statement?—I have got a statement of our desire.

31,234. Just read it, if you please?—We put it down in the form of a petition, but we can read it all the same.

APPLICATION to the Royal Commission (Highlands and Islands) by the Baddidarach Crofters.

GENTLEMEN.—We, the undersigned, beg to petition you requesting additional land, viz., a part of Inver sheep farm, adjoining our neighbourhood. Seven or eight years ago we submitted a similar application to the Marquis of Stafford (now Duke of Sutherland), but without success. Encouraged by the ancient proverb 'If at first you don't succeed, try, try, try, 'again,' we again produced our petition to the Crofters Commission when at Lochinver, and latterly to the County Council, but both with a similar result to that of the preceding one. The above-mentioned farm, along with that of Clashmore, Stoer, is at present in the possession of David Macbrayne, Esq., proprietor of the Lochinver and Culag hotels, and Shipowner, Glasgow. Our pasture and arable land taken collectively merely comprises about one square mile, thus affording an average not exceeding 1½ acres of very inferior arable soil for each of the nine crofters whose present rent, for total, amounts to about £20.

(Signed) JOHN MACLEOD.
ANGUS MATHESON.
JOHN MATHESON.
WIDOW MURDO MACLEOD.

31,235. You say there are nine crofters in Baddidarach?—Yes.

31,236. How many cottars?—One cottar, who would be glad to get a portion of this land we desire to get.

31,237. Do you happen to know how many crofters are in Ardroe?—Four crofters.

31,238. And any cottars?—No, no cottars.

31,239. How many are in Torbreck?—Five crofters and no cottars.

31,240. The land occupied by these townships lies between Loch Roe and Loch Inver, I think?—Yes.

31,241. And goes back to the march of Inver farm?—Yes.

31,242. Which you say is in the hands of Mr Macbrayne. Does he hold it under lease for a term of years, do you know?—I suppose so; I cannot say about that, because it is difficult to find out.

31,243. He only got it a few years ago?—Two years ago.

31,244. Who held it previously?—The hotels had it before.

31,245. But he is at present the occupant of the farm of Inver, the neighbouring farm in Stoer of Clashmore, and of both hotels here?—Yes. Lochinver, Sutherland-shire.

31,246. He is a non-resident shipowning farmer?—Yes. Angus Matheson.

31,247. Is that land of Inver suitable for settlements or for grazing?—For grazing.

31,248. The other lands marching with you, or near to you, are, I think, crofters' lands?—Yes.

31,249. Mr Forsyth.—Is there any arable land on this farm of Inver?—There is.

31,250. Do you contemplate making new settlements, supposing any portion of the farm were given to you?—I believe they would not like to be removed; the crofters want additional pasture.

31,251. Then it is as pasture that you ask for part of this farm?—We want the help of arable land too; that part of Inver farm which is below the road on the left hand going to Baddidarach is all arable; there will be about seven or eight acres of arable land which would be a great help to crofters.

31,252. Is that across the river?—Yes, on the other side of the river, on the left hand side going to Baddidarach after crossing the bridge.

31,253. Then, is your application that part of this farm should be added as grazing to these various townships, or only to your own township?—To the township of Baddidarach. It is that township that I represent.

31,254. Are there any applicants here for Torbreck or Ardroe?—Not so far as I know.

31,255. But you represent Baddidarach only?—There are two others from the same township to be called after me.

31,256. Mr Sutherland.—Those others, I take it, are the parties who have signed this paper along with you?—Yes.

31,257. And you detail there the various steps you have taken to get an enlargement of holdings, and you have always failed?—Yes, for the last eight or nine years.

31,258. So it cannot be said but your desire is for enlarging your bounds?—We desire it very much.

31,259. And you are so situated that this farm of Inver is the only land that is contiguous?—Yes.

31,260. And you have also said in your statement that the land is at present in the occupation of a Glasgow shipowner?—Yes.

31,261. Well, I wish to ask you with regard to the other lands held by the Glasgow shipowner, there is part of it not contiguous to Inver; is not there part of it at Clashmore?—Yes.

31,262. How many miles away is Clashmore?—About nine, I think.

31,263. And you have pointed out also, I think, in your statement, that you have only got 1½ acres of arable land?—We have not got that altogether; I think I have only got 1⅙ myself, but the crofters might average nearly 1½ acres.

31,264. And that land is easily seen from here, is it?—Quite easily.

31,265. And you will show it to us when we are there?—I shall be very glad to have the opportunity.

31,266. The Chairman.—I find that the ground on which your application was dealt with was this:—'Find that the land applied for forms part of an 'existing farm or holding, the rent or annual letting 'value of which does not exceed £100, being only £50; 'therefore sustain the objection stated on that ground 'under section 13 (3) c. of the Act?'—Yes.

31,267. Now, who manages the farm of Inver for the occupying tenant?—The shepherd.

31,268. Who is the shepherd?—One Roderick Mackenzie.

31,269. Does he live on the farm?—Mr Thomson is manager.

31,270. Who is Mr Thomson?—The hotel manager.

31,271. You mean the gentleman who takes charge of the hotel?—Yes. He has got a shepherd, Roderick Mackenzie, who lives on the ground.

31,272. Mr Gordon.—I see that a part of the farm of Inver comes to this side of the river?—Yes.

31,273. Are there any crofters' holdings in connection with that?—No.

31,274. There are only the village lots there, I suppose?—Some of the villagers keep a cow on the grazing. [Mr Maciver. They get grazing from the innkeeper.]

31,275. Is there any arable land on this side of the river?—No, there is none on this side of the river, but there is a good bit of arable land here, just about 100 yards beyond this house we are in.

31,276. That is the ground the innkeeper works in connection with the hotel?—Yes.

31,277. But the sheep are kept principally upon the north side of the road leading from Lochinver towards Clashmore?—They are on both sides of the road between Torbreck and Lochinver.

31,278. But the larger portion of the grazings is to the north or north-east side of the road?—Yes.

31,279. The Chairman.—What do those who have cows on this patch of land pay to the hotel-keeper?—I am not sure how much they pay.

31,280. But do they pay to the hotel-keeper, Mr Macbrayne?—Yes. I think it is £2 a year, and sometimes more for the summering.

31,281. Mr Macaulay, Solicitor, Golspie.—Those that have cows pay £2, I understand, and they also get half an acre of arable land, don't they?—I cannot say.

31,282. This Inver farm has been in connection with the hotel for many years,—I suppose since ever you remember?—Yes.

31,283. Are you aware that a portion of it, the lower part of it, has been laid out for feuing purposes?—Well, that is said by Mr Gordon, but I do not see any marks of feuing; there is not a feu taken up there.

31,284. Oh, yes, there are feus taken?—But supposing it was, that would not matter if we got it, and if the rent were to be reduced according as the sites were taken up; we would have no objection.

31,285. I am quite sure you would have objections; the fact is, however, that it is let for feuing purposes, and some feus have been taken?—Well, it may be so.

31,286. The Free Church are going to build a manse there?—That is all very good; we don't object to that, but we want a part for all that.

31,287. What employment are you engaged in?—Anything I can earn a penny by honestly.

31,288. Do you act as gillie for the hotels?—I do.

JOHN MACKENZIE, Baddidarach (36)—examined.

31,289. The Chairman.—You attend here, I understand, instead of John Macleod, who is unable to be present?—Yes.

31,290. Are you a crofter at Baddidarach?—No, I live with my mother-in-law, who is the crofter.

31,291. What is her name?—Widow Murdo Macleod.

31,292. I see her croft has 2 acres 1 rood 34 poles arable, 10 acres 0 roods 34 poles outrun, and one-ninth share in the common of 397 acres. The former rent was £2, 17s. 6d., and the present rent is £2, 10s. You heard the evidence given by Matheson?—Yes.

31,293. And you appear as a delegate along with him?—Yes.

31,294. Do you agree with his evidence?—I quite agree with it, but I don't agree as to the amount of outrun stated in our petition there; I don't think we have a square mile. Of course, you will know better, but I am pretty well acquainted with the west coast, and I don't know a township that is more needing additional ground than Baddidarach.

31,295. And you think that part of the farm of Inver is very convenient?—Yes.

31,296. And suitable for extension of grazings?—Very suitable, and this part of Inver for arable land. We will be very glad if the feus are taken up, and to part with it just the same as Mr Macbrayne does. Of course, if we were to lose ground by feus the rent would be reduced accordingly.

31,297. You don't think the matter of feuing offers any difficulty?—I don't think so.

31,298. You would be quite willing to give it up?—Quite willing.

31,299. In fact, you would be very glad to see Lochinver extended considerably by means of feus?—I would.

31,300. Are you one of those who have cows' grazing upon the ground?—No, I belong to Baddidarach.

31,301. Do you know anything about this giving of land for cows?—No, excepting that there are some of them that have a cow on the ground belonging to the hotel, and they pay so much.

31,302. Do you know how much they pay?—I am not certain. A man present here who has a cow says he pays £2 a year for the summering.

31,303. Mr Sutherland tells me that the acreage of your outrun is not more than half a square mile?—I thought so. The township of Badnamban is, I think, the nearest to Baddidarach for not having pasture. They are very close in; but we are hemmed in with other townships, and, of course, we don't blame them, for we just chase their cattle and they chase ours.

31,304. You are hemmed in by Ardroe and Torbreck on the one side and by the Inver farm and Lochinver on the other side?—Yes.

31,305. How do the tenants of Baddidarach obtain their livelihood mainly?—They are willing to turn their hand to anything. There are a good few of them employed as gillies from the hotel going out to the fishing; some of them work in the winter at the lobster fishing and the herring fishing.

31,306. They depend upon labour for paying their rents and getting along?—Principally on labour: the crofts do not afford much at all.

31,307. Mr Gordon.—Does this small township of Torbreck have any share in the large area of pasture lying to the north? There is a place there called Achmelvich?—Some of the crofters of Torbreck got an addition from the Achmore farm along with the Achmelvich crofters.

31,308. There is a place called Richarn?—Yes.

31,309. Do the Torbreck people and the Richarn people and the Achmelvich people have any pasture in common?—Yes.

31,310. Does the Ardroe township participate in the common?—No.

31,311. Neither Ardroe nor Baddidarach?—No. There is another man in the township with me (of course, I am really the crofter, although the croft stands in the name of my mother-in-law), and we have to keep a horse each, as we cannot do without it. We are the farthest away in the township up the hill, and we have no place to keep the horse, but we cannot do without it; we try as well as we can to keep the horse at home, but we cannot. One season we were making a footpath in the forest for Lord Brownlow; and we got paid for it, certainly. We employed our horses to bring up the necessary things we required there, and when our horses got the good taste of the grazing in the forest there we were never able to keep them out of it since. They used to go every summer, and as soon as they would get the chance they would stray into the forest. Well, they kept pinfolding them in the forest; and on various occasions never sent us any word of it. The keeper told me the horses might die there before he would give us word that they were in the pinfold. Well, the forest is not fenced, and it is very difficult for us to keep our horses out of it. [The Chairman.] And is your horse up there now?—Very likely. It was a week in the pinfold not very long ago, and the keeper told me of it yesterday. I said he ought to tell me at once, and he asked whether I would pay for the messenger. I said 'Certainly, if the law compels me to pay; but I think if you don't fence the forest I am not bound to pay for the messenger.'

31,312. What part of the forest do they go into?—The other side of Brackloch, through the river: I don't think it is right to pinfold horses in a forest that is not fenced.

31,313. But before you can get at that you must

Lochinver, Sutherland-shire.

John Mackenzie.

trespass upon Brackloch or upon the Inn farm?—Yes, that is quite true; but she takes the main road to it. The main road leads directly to the river, which is the boundary of the forest. I cannot do without a horse as long as I am there, wherever I am to keep her; but if I get a part of Inver farm I shall be able to keep her off the forest.

31,314. Mr Sutherland.—In the circumstances you relate to us, don't you think that the horse displays a great deal of intelligence?—Well, she knows what's good for her.

31,315. And, following up the hint, might you not have asked for an extension of your grazing from the forest?—I shall be very glad to get it: there is a park on this side of Glencanisp that is fenced in.

31,316. A park in the forest?—Yes, I do not see why we should fail in getting this; but if we fail I should be very glad to take my ninth share of that, and pay a fair rent for it: we don't want it for nothing.

31,317. You complain that outside the forest, on the boundary of it, there is no fence?—No.

31,318. Now, you tell me that inside the boundary there is a park fenced?—Yes.

31,319. Does the deer forest come to the dykes of the houses of the people here? Does it not come down to near the public school?—Yes, it comes down to the public school up there; and this wood plantation, of course, is included in the deer forest. The pasture we talk of we don't get the use of until we come to Brackloch; but the park is within 500 yards of us.

31,320. Would not the natural outlet for you in the way of pasture be the Inver farm and part of the deer forest also?—There is more than sufficient for us in the Inver farm, if we were to get it. There are some in the township who would not be very able to go in for it, very likely, but if we could get a good part of the Inver farm we would do with it for the present.

31,321. What strikes me most is the small area you hold for so many families?—Yes, there are above 60 people on that.

31,322. Mr Gordon.—In the nine crofts?—Yes, and one cottar.

31,323. Now, don't you think, with regard to this deer forest, that with the expansion of Lochinver and the feuing ground there will be a necessity for some outlet to the people for pasture for their cattle?—It would be very suitable: those who take up feuing ground will be pretty well off, and will not need it so much, but we require it.

31,324. But I am talking just now of the encroachment of the forest upon the village of Lochinver: don't you think it is much too near it?—I would not object to the forest being near if I and my neighbour had plenty of grazing.

31,325. But is it not a natural outlet for the people who have feus in Lochinver or who may have them afterwards?—Very suitable.

31,326. And do you think if an opportunity were given to those people they would be very glad to get pasture for cows,—those who would have the feus?—I should think so, certainly.

31,327. And do you think they have sufficient grazing at the present time?—I think a good many more would be very glad to take more grazing.

31,328. Mr Macaulay, Solicitor, Golspie.—I think you said that the crofters of Torbreck and Baddidarach held grazings in common?—[Mr Gordon. No, he said the very opposite].

31,329. Is it not a common thing for your stock to wander across this river to the forest?—My two horses only.

31,330. These are the only two obstreperous animals?—The only two horses that went in from Baddidarach, or that go, and I gave the reason why they go.

31,331. Ordinarily, I suppose, the river boundary would be a pretty good boundary? Do you not look upon the river as a pretty good march?—Very good, but it does not keep horses out. There may be cattle straying from other townships, but not from Baddidarach.

31,332. Mr Sutherland.—Is it natural for cattle that have not sufficient grazing to go where the grazing is?—Certainly it is. But my horse would never have gone there if she had not got the taste of the grass.

Lochinver, Sutherland-shire.

JOHN MATHESON, Crofter, Baddidarach (40)—examined.

John Matheson.

31,333. The Chairman.—Was your holding dealt with by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

31,334. It contains 1 acre 0 roods 34 poles arable, 2 acres 2 roods 30 poles outrun, and one-ninth share in a common of 397 acres; the former rent was £2, 12s. 6d. and the fixed rent is £2?—Yes.

31,335. Were you appointed as a delegate?—Yes.

31,336. To represent the views of the Baddidarach crofters?—Yes.

31,337. Do you concur with what we have heard from Angus Matheson and John Mackenzie?—Yes.

31,338. How many cows have you?—Three.

31,339. Any stirks?—No; I had one calf.

31,340. What sheep have you got?—Thirteen or fourteen.

31,341. Ewes?—Yes.

31,342. Your desire is to obtain, if it can be got, an extension of grazing from the farm of Inver?—Yes.

31,343. And also arable land, if there is arable land there?—Yes.

31,344. I think we will take you as concurring with what we have heard, as it has been very fully gone into: I think we understand your case, by the evidence given by Matheson and Mackenzie?—Yes.

EVANDER MACIVER, Factor for Scourie (82) recalled—examined.

Evander Maciver.

31,345. The Chairman.—I understand you wish to make a statement?—Yes, a short statement regarding the parish of Assynt. I wish to make it as brief and laconic as possible, just as I did with my evidence regarding the other parishes. At the same time it is proper for me to state that I am instructed by the Duke of Sutherland to give every possible information, and I am very much inclined to do so myself, in connection with anything that I know.

The parish of Assynt contains, according to the Ordnance Survey [less 8953 acres of water and foreshores], 110,111 acres, which appear to be occupied as follows:—

	Acres.
Sheep farms,	46,880
Deer forest,	28,500
Crofters' holdings,	31,040
Minister's glebe,	1,300
Woods [enclosed],	2,000
Hotels, sites, feus, &c.,	391
Total,	110,111

The area of the farms may be thus divided:—

Farm.	Arable.	Outrun.	Moor Pasture.	Total.
	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.
Achmore,	12	63	18,925	19,000
Cromult,	1	4	1,995	2,000
Ardvar,	5	13	8,982	9,000
Stronchrubie and Ledmore,	20	40	12,940	13,000
Oldney Mains and Island,	10	20	818	848
Inver,	...	5	1,995	2,000
Brackloch,	5	10	872	887
Clashmore,	80	3	...	83
Culkein,	34	...	28	62
	167	158	46,555	46,880

The following is the rental of the farms :—

Achmore [in proprietor's hands],	550
Cromult [in proprietor's hands],	40
Ardvar [in proprietor's hands],	275
Hotel farm,	80
Stronchrubie and Ledmore	412
Oldney Mains and Island,	38
Brackloch,	16
Clashmore,	54
Culkein,	20
Total,	1485

The rental of the deer forest of Glencanisp is £950, but this rent includes wages of foresters, rates, and taxes, and maintenance of houses, roads, and paths, which may amount to about £300 annually.

The crofters' holdings may be thus divided : —

Number of townships,		24
Number of holdings,		331
Area of Land :—
Arable,	1,025
Outrun,	3,152
Common pasture,	20,346
		24,523
Land assigned,		6,518
Total acreage,		31,040

The total rental of the crofters in Assynt is £1067. Since 1888 there has been expended by the landlord a sum of £440, 15s. 9d. in providing wire fencing, materials for enlargement of crofters' holdings in the parish.

The arrears due at 30th September last by the crofters of Assynt amount to the large sum of £1535, 12s. 4d., and another year's rent is due by them next month.

When I became factor on Assynt, in the year 1845, the crofters' rental in Assynt amounted to £967, 6s. 6d.

The rent of the additional grazings given to the crofters since the passing of the Crofters Act was fixed by the Commission at £174, 19s. 9d.

The Crofters Commission visited Assynt in 1888, and fixed fair rents for all the crofts in the parish, making a reduction of about 13 per cent. on the rents. They cancelled about 32 per cent. of the arrears, and ordered the difference to be paid, a small portion of which is still due.

The rates in Assynt are a very serious burden on both landlord and tenants. For the year ending Whitsunday 1893, the rates were :—For poor, &c., 2s. 4d. per £ ; for education, 1s. 6d. per £ ; for county rates, 1s. 1d. ; in all, 4s. 11d. per £, divisible between landlord and tenants, the landlord's portion being £696, 15s. 9d. ; and I regret to add that the rates for poor, education, and registration alone amount this year to 4s. 3d.

The rental of the sheep farms was more than double what it appeared at in 1845 up to the year 1882, but since that date there has been a fall of about 40 per cent., and the letting of sheep farms is now difficult.

My experience as to reclamation of lands here, by a landlord, is that it is a very poor speculation. The district is so rocky and hilly, with deep mosses intermixed, and the climate is so adverse and wet that arable farming is carried on under great difficulties. I found the greater part of the crofters' holdings was held in 1845, when I came to the country, under the old runrig system, under which few or no improvements were carried on by the occupants. The arable land was lotted, and considerable improvements were executed both by the landlord and by the tenants after these lots were formed.

There was a good deal of outlay on reclamations at Culkein, Achnacarnin, and at Clashmore, with less or more all over the parish ; but the result was a very heavy outlay per acre on inferior subjects from which good returns were never obtained. The grain produced on the west coast is inferior, and proves very badly when sent to the mill. Most of the grain grown in Assynt by crofters is given to their stock, and they purchase the meal they require for domestic purposes at Glasgow, Aberdeen, and Wick.

When the potato disease first broke out in the district in 1846 and following years, a strong desire was expressed by a large number of crofters and cottars in the district, especially in Assynt, to emigrate. Numerous petitions were sent to the Duke of Sutherland asking him to assist them to go to America. His Grace considered these petitions, and ultimately agreed to give assistance. About 400 persons left, principally for Upper Canada, in 1847, where friends had previously preceded them. The Duke paid the whole expense of their passage to America, and gave other assistance. The expense on the average was £5 for young and old. The whole outlay on emigration in 1847 and 1848 was upwards of £6000. For many years afterwards I received letters from some of these emigrants thanking me in the strongest terms for the advice and assistance I had given them, and informing me that they were getting on and becoming comfortable. Since these years, a considerable number left this district, to whom loans were made to enable them to emigrate to America and elsewhere, which loans have in most cases been repaid with gratitude, and some of whom appear to have been very successful.

(Signed) E. Maciver.

I may add that Mr Gordon has been sub-factor here for several years, and has had more to do with many matters connected with the parish than I have had ; and I should wish that you would examine him also.

31,346. If you will allow us, we shall put a few questions to you first. [Mr Gordon.]—How is it that the rates appear to be so much increased this year ?—It is just because the funds were found to be necessary, I suppose.

31,347. On account of a fall in the rental, or because of the greater necessities of the case ?—The necessities of the case, and partly owing to a number of the rates not having been paid last year. There is an arrear of rates at present such as never existed before ; so much so, that the Parochial Board were obliged to institute proceedings against a number of those who had not paid their rates ; decrees were taken against a number of them.

31,348. The rise appears to be very heavy ; the rate has jumped up in one year from 2s. odds to 4s. ?—4s. 3d. is the new rate, it was formerly 3s. 11d.

31,349. In 1893 the poor-rate was 2s. 4d., and now it is 4s. 3d. ?—The 4s. 3d. includes both poor and school rates.

31,350. What was the poor-rate last year ?—For poor and registration 2s. 4d.

31,351. But, at any rate, the rates have increased from 2s. 4d. to 4s. 3d. upon poor, education, and registration ?—No, from 3s. 10d. The poor-rate this year is 2s. 9d., as against 2s. 4d. last year ; the whole increase is on the poor-rate.

31,352. Mr Sutherland.—You mentioned with regard to reclamation of land by the landlord that you did not find it a profitable speculation at all. Did you refer to reclamation that was made on the crofters' holdings, or reclamations that were made on other holdings ?—On other holdings ; I referred to those I mentioned, Culkein, Achnacarnin, and Clashmore.

31,353. Were these reclamations made upon crofters, holdings by the landlord ?—Partly.

31,354. To any considerable extent ?—When the potato disease came on, there was a good deal done all over the parish ; the crofters were allowed to improve, and we sent a person to value the improvements, and we paid for the improvements.

31,355. And can you tell me at what rate per acre you paid for these improvements ?—I can tell you that Clashmore cost nearly £40 an acre.

31,356. But was the reclamation carried on at Clashmore on crofters' holdings, or on another holding ?—On crofters' holdings, and upon ground that was not

Lochinver, Sutherland-shire.

Evander Maciver.

cultivated by them, but was added when we took it in hand.

31,357. Added afterwards?—Yes.

31,358. But did you pay for reclamations made in 1847 to crofters at the rate of £40 an acre?—Yes. They were valued by a valuator whom we appointed for the purpose of looking over them. When a crofter had made any improvement, he called upon this man to go and value it; and upon receiving a report from him the man was paid for his work.

31,359. And are you enabled to state that they were paid for at the rate of £40 an acre?—Well, I cannot say that; that would depend very much on the nature of the improvement.

31,360. But you say, I suppose, with some degree of assurance, that the reclamations made at Clashmore cost you £40 an acre?—I say so.

31,361. That was upon part of the common which was previously held by the people of Clashmore?—Yes.

31,362. And that land has since had a history? It is the same land that has had a history which I do not wish to characterise more than this; I want to make sure of its locality?—It is the farm of Clashmore.

31,363. Concerning which there were some proceedings not very long ago?—There were some people apprehended for rioting.

31,364. It is the same land,—that is all I wish to know?—Yes.

31,365. But are you prepared to state authoritatively that land reclaimed by the crofters themselves without aid has been unprofitable to the landlord?—No, I am not; it would be profitable to themselves if they improved their land.

31,366. And, as a matter of fact, has it been profitable to the landlord?—Of course, the better off the tenants are the better off the landlord is.

31,367. The more rent they pay. You have given us no comparison between the rents paid per acre by the 331 crofters in Assynt and the large tenants?—Mr Gordon will give you that.

31,368. Then you made reference to a matter of which you spoke at Durness, the emigration of the people in 1847?—Yes.

31,369. Has there been a desire on the part of the people to emigrate at any other time than 1847?—Not near so general as it was then; but there have been a very great number of instances of single parties and some families asking to be assisted who were assisted.

31,370. What were the particular circumstances in 1847 that led the people to have this unusual desire?—The potato disease.

31,371. It had no connection whatever with the state the people were in before the clearances?—Oh, none whatever.

31,372. You never heard that the people petitioned to be sent from the places they were in before they came down to the sea-coast?—No, it was two years after I came to Assynt that that occurred.

31,373. You came in 1845?—Yes.

31,374. Then you stated that £6000 were spent at that time on emigration. Did that expenditure of £6000 add in any degree to the comfort of those that remained?—I think it was a very great relief to Assynt that so many left it.

31,375. Do you know what became of the holdings that these people had?—They were added to those who remained behind.

31,376. So that there was a time when their holdings were smaller even than they are now?—They would be a little smaller, but they have been added to very much since, in consequence of the lotting. I may mention to you that since I was examined in Durness, I received a letter from a Durness man whom I had assisted to emigrate. He wrote from the United States, and gave a most pleasing account of his success and prosperity. He is settled in Texas.

31,377. Where did he go from?—From Eriboll.

31,378. I am not surprised at that?—Perhaps not. He was fortunate enough to go to a place in Texas where a town was just being created, and he made himself so useful to the community that the town was actually called after him, Rossville, his name being Ross. This poor lad from Eriboll is now Judge there; he married a Spanish lady, the daughter of Don Antonio, of some celebrity in that part; he has now a large family, and he writes me to say that he had the pleasure of calling one of his children after myself.

Lochinver Sutherlan shire.

Evander Maciver.

31,379. Then, do you get letters from any who have not succeeded?—I cannot say I ever did.

31,380. And how many have you been, I won't say instrumental in sending away, but connected with the emigration of?—I have been instrumental in the case of something like 700 or 800 souls.

31,381. And how many congratulatory letters have you received from all that number, may I ask?—Oh, I cannot tell you that; they gave up writing about twenty years ago for the most part, but I got a great many soon after they went.

31,382. Would you recommend, then, instead of enlarging holdings, and getting additional holdings in the neighbourhood, that the people should go out to this place, Rossville?—I certainly would, if I were a young man, have no hesitation as to what to do in the circumstances.

31,383. You would not hesitate to do differently from what you did, is that so?—No; and I think I never did anything by which I felt I had done more good than by sending these very people that went, and advising them to go.

31,384. But in reference to yourself, you were saying that if you were beginning life again you would go yourself?—I think I would, if I were in their circumstances.

31,385. But, as a matter of fact, you did not go?—I was not in their circumstances.

31,386. Then, do you think it would be better for these people themselves to go, or is it more reasonable to suppose that they would like to exhaust what opportunities there are of thriving in their own country first?—I think it is more likely they would thrive there than in this country.

31,387. Would they not thrive in Ardvar farm, or Achmore, far more than they are doing in Nedd?—I don't think so.

31,388. So you cannot help us, then, to find the land we are in search of?—No.

31,389. The Chairman.—You mentioned particularly the three farms of Achmore, Cromalt, and Ardvar, and I think you say in your statement that the whole of these three farms are in the hands of the proprietor?—They are.

31,390. These farms include an area of 30,000 acres out of a total farming area of 46,880 acres?—Yes.

31,391. For what length of time have these farms been in the hands of the proprietor?—Seven or eight or nine years, I think: we could not get them let.

31,392. You tried to let them as sheep farms?—We are most anxious to let them.

31,393. Have they been carried on to a profit?—No, to a loss.

31,394. Has any part of these farms been afforested since they fell into the proprietor's hands?—None. A considerable quantity, as was described to-day, was taken from Achmore, and given to the crofters.

31,395. The parts given in enlargement of holdings were parts of Achmore; does their area fall to be deducted from the 19,000 acres which you have given as the area of Achmore?—No, that is the present area.

31,396. And the same remark, I presume, also applies to Cromalt and Ardvar?—Quite so.

31,397. Has the estate management, either through yourself, or in any other way, considered the question of dividing these large farms into smaller farms?—We have considered that subject, it is under consideration at this moment.

31,398. Has anything been done to carry out the proposal?—There has been nothing finally decided yet.

31,399. But the question is under the serious consideration of the estate?—Of the Duke and his advisers.

31,400. Have you proposed at any time to let these farms in smaller divisions? Have you offered them to the public?—No, they were advertised this year to be let separately or together.

31,401. The three farms?—Yes.

31,402. But not in sub-divided portions?—Yes, in sub-divided portions, separately or together.

31,403. But not in lesser areas than they occupy at present?—They were divided into several divisions.

31,404. You did not propose to let Achmore, for instance, as more than one holding?—Well, it was proposed to divide it also.

31,405. But that has come to nothing?—It has not been settled finally; I was to have gone down to Dunrobin the very day that you met in Durness, and I could not go. The Duke has gone since, but it was very much to consider that very important question.

31,406. Mr Gordon.—The question his lordship wanted to put was, when you offered Achmore to let last summer, did you offer to let it as one holding, or as more than one holding?—As both; it was advertised to let either as a whole or in divisions.

31,407. The three farms?—Yes.

31,408. But not Achmore by itself?—No.

31,409. You did not offer to let a hirsel of Achmore on the west?—Yes, that was it.

31,410. The Chairman.—Has anyone acquainted with the district, and following the occupation of a sheep farmer, come forward and offered to take a part of Achmore as a separate farm?—There is a party connected with the district who has come forward to say that he was seriously thinking of proposing to take it.

31,411. Part of Achmore?—Yes. [Mr Sutherland.—There is an intention, on the part of the estate management, to offer the present farms in lesser holdings than they are in at present?—Yes, if suitable offerers come forward.]

31,412. Now, you mentioned that there were in the form of crofter holdings 28 townships with 331 tenants. I understand that you use the word tenants there as meaning crofter tenants?—Crofters.

31,413. Can you tell me how many cottars there are in these townships?—I cannot condescend upon particulars.

31,414. Are you able to say there are a considerable number?—There are a few in every township, I believe.

31,415. And do these pay a rent of 10s. for the site of a house?—They were asked to pay 10s., but they ceased to pay it, and we actually expunged their names from the books altogether, in a number of cases.

31,416. These cottars, as I understand, have no land?—I think some of them have little bits behind their houses.

31,417. But they have no assignment of land from the Duke?—None.

31,418. And these cottars, whatever their precise number may be, constitute a considerable burden upon the crofters, I suppose?—Of course, but that is generally done with the consent of the crofters themselves.

31,419. I merely wished to get at the fact. We know, also, that many of the cottars are relatives of the crofters?—Sons and sons-in-law, and so forth.

31,420. You mentioned in Durness the extent to which the Crofters Commission had reduced the rental of the crofters,—I think you state that the net reduction was the sum of £2 or so?—Yes, £2, 13s. I think it was.

31,421. Would you give us the corresponding figure for this parish?—It would require a little calculation to give that.

31,422. We have endeavoured to make the calculation? Mr Sutherland brings out the sum of £134, 8s. 1d. as the reduction in Assynt?—Very possibly; I think it is 13 per cent.

31,423. You say the arrears amount to £1535, 12s. 4d., and another year's rent is almost due. Now, dealing with arrears due at this moment, £1535, that falls to be divided among 331 tenants?—Yes.

31,424. And would mean an average arrear of £4 or £5 each?—Yes.

31,425. Part of that, however—one year's rent of that—was a rent falling due after the death of the late Duke?—It was.

31,426. And I think you admitted at Durness that you found that the non-payment arose partly from the rent collection not being held at the usual time?—It did so, I have no doubt. And, in this connection, perhaps, I may be allowed to remark that the Duke is taking that matter into very serious consideration, and that the crofters may hear something about it ere very long.

31,427. You heard it stated by some crofters that they would have paid their rent if the rent collection had been held at the usual time, and that the necessities of the case led them to spend the money afterwards?—I heard that, and I believe it to be true.

31,428. Can you tell me how much of the total arrear of £1535 may be described as judicial arrears?—It does not amount to a very large sum; I did not calculate it, but it is not very heavy.

31,429. Then, would you say that the judicial arrears have, as a whole, been pretty well paid?—They have; what was ordered to be paid by the Crofters Commission.

31,430. Has in the main been paid?—Yes.

31,431. Would you say that the remainder, what has not been paid, is in the main due to inability to pay?—I believe so.

31,432. Would you also say that the last year,—I mean the farming year that is now over,—has been a very bad year?—Very bad; the price for Highland cattle has been very low.

31,433. And that might account, to some extent, for the inability of the crofters to meet their rents?—It is at Martinmas that we shall be able to tell as to that.

31,434. You referred particularly to the character of the land in this district which you described as largely consisting of hills, rocks, and waste. I take it that you apply that observation quite as strongly to the land held by the crofters as to the land held by the large farmers?—The whole parish is of that description.

31,435. Then, is the life of a crofter in this parish, owing to the character of the land, attended with peculiar difficulty?—I should say that it is.

31,436. And, therefore, the extension of their holdings,—I am not considering the question of whether it could be done or not, but the extension of their holdings, if it could be done, would be a great improvement to their condition?—Oh, it should.

31,437. You said that the grain was poor in this parish?—The grain produced all over the west coast is poor. I have a farm myself, and I know what it is from practical experience.

31,438. Is the grain in the parish of Assynt poorer than the grain in the parish of Durness?—I don't think it is: I think it is very much the same.

31,439. Where would you say in the county of Sutherland that the average quality of the grain is better?—On the east coast, generally 31,440. Mr Macaulay, Solicitor, Golspie.—Attention has been drawn to-day to the matter of rates in this parish. I suppose the rents obtained for the forests in the parish tend considerably to keep down the rates?—The rental derived from shootings, fishings, and forests materially affect the rates, because the larger the rental from these sources the less is the assessment over the whole parish.

31,441. Suppose the forest here were just now to be chopped up, and pieces taken off it, do you think that would affect the rental of these subjects?—I have no hesitation in saying that it might affect it very injuriously. We have seen such an effect produced already.

31,442. Where was that?—At Glencanisp. We had a tenant there, who, when land was given to the Inverkirkaig crofters, actually threw up his lease, and left us altogether. I refer to Major Paynter.

31,443. And that forest was let again with what result?—At a very serious loss and a lowering of rent.

31,444. And that is just a lesson of what might happen?—[The Chairman.—That is your own opinion,

Lochinver, Sutherlandshire.

Evander Maciver.

Mr Macaulay]. [Mr Macaulay.—I have no doubt Mr Maciver is of the same opinion, and he is under examination at present.]

31,445. The Chairman.—It may be convenient to state that the arrears dealt with by the Crofters Commission in 1888 amounted to £599, 15s. 11d., of which the sum cancelled was £188, 7s. 6d., and the sum ordered to be paid £411, 8s. 5d. That, I think, I may take it from you has been nearly all paid since?—Not nearly all, but a considerable portion of it.

31,446. More than the half of it?—More than half.

31,447. Mr Macaulay.—Is it not the fact, however, that the first payments made were applied towards clearing off these judicial arrears?—Yes, that is so.

31,448. They were applied in the first place to that purpose?—Yes.

31,449. Mr Sutherland.—Mr Macaulay asked you a question as to the incidence of the rates. Does the rate not depend upon the value of the subject that is rated? It is a poundage, is it not?—So much per pound.

31,450. A poundage upon the value?—The valuation roll is taken as a basis, and the district board consider what amount is required, and fix the assessment accordingly.

31,451. Well, then, if the people of Achnancarnin got the deer forest, is the probability not that they would put up the value to what they pay at present, 1s. 2d. or whatever it is per acre?—I will not venture an opinion on that subject.

31,452. You know the land of Achnancarnin in possession of the crofters?—Yes.

31,453. You would be prepared to admit that it is not very superior land?—It is just something like the rest of the land in the parish.

31,454. Is it as good as the deer forest, taking it all over?—It is a very different subject.

31,455. Assuming for the moment that the effect of putting the people into the deer forest would be to raise the value of it per acre to the value of the land they now hold, would the rates not benefit by that?—I don't know that; the more you increase the people and the crofters, the more you increase the rates.

31,456. You are assuming that they are always kept below the pauper line, but we intend to raise them above the pauper line. Is it not a rational conclusion that if you increase the comfort of the people you do away with pauperism to that extent?—Yes, but in a growing population you have to provide for education as well as for pauperism; and the more you increase the number of people the more expensive does education become, and therefore the larger is the rate.

31,457. I am quite prepared to admit that the education rate is a permanent rate?—And in a parish like Assynt, with an immense coast line, and the people scattered all along the coast, the education becomes very expensive.

31,458. But the poor-rate is not necessarily so heavy in proportion?—It depends on circumstances.

31,459. Just so; if you better the circumstances of the people, then you decrease the poor-rate?—We have not found that what additions we have made add much to their benefit as yet.

31,460. But we have had that admitted by the tenants themselves here to-day?—Well, we have not found any advantage in practice. Look at the arrears that exist.

31,461. But, from their point of view, look at their comfort?—We shall be able to judge of that better after the Martinmas collection, when we see how they pay their rents.

31,462. From the landlord's point of view?—Yes.

[Adjourned.]

THIRTY-THIRD SITTING

TAIN, November 2, 1893.

Present:—

David Brand, Esq., Advocate, Sheriff of Ayr, and Chairman of the Crofters Commission, Chairman.
Angus Sutherland, Esq., M.P.
James Noel Muller Forsyth, Esq.
George Gordon, Esq.
William Mackenzie, Secretary.

John James Robertson Meiklejohn, Factor for Novar (43)—examined.

John James Robertson Meiklejohn.

31,463. The Chairman.—You are factor on the Novar estate?—Yes.

31,464. And I understand that you, along with some others from that quarter, desire to tender evidence to this Commission with regard to forestry?—Yes.

31,465. Have you a written statement?—Yes.

31,466. Then we will be glad to hear it.—The great importance of the subject is Mr Munro-Ferguson's excuse for asking the Royal Commission to hear some evidence respecting forestry as a means of providing work and overcoming the unsatisfactory state of the congested population in various parts of the Highlands. It appears to Mr Munro-Ferguson that, if available land is found, crofting alone will not be a successful mode of effecting the purpose of replacing the population in the Highland counties on the soil; and I may say I entirely concur with him in that opinion. Crofting in the upland glens, far removed from markets and outlets for surplus labour, must he made into very considerable-sized holdings, and these are unsuited to men of small means; and even with holdings of considerable size these upland straths are subject to late harvests and sunless seasons—such, for example, as last year, when these high lands yielded no grain. If large holdings were successful and free from the objection stated, yet their size would preclude the possibility of placing many people in these upland districts. It appears to me that if a number of people are to be enabled to occupy holdings in these counties, you must give them comparatively small areas, and also facilities for marketing surplus labour. On the seaboards, where there are good harbours and quick and moderately cheap means of transit, you have the provision for such surplus energy in reaping the harvest of sea, and in some counties the seaboards are already partially provided with the class of holdings I have indicated. In the more inland portions of the counties the problem is to provide for the surplus labour of the crofting communities; and by such a system of forestry as will be described to you by the skilled witnesses that will follow me, you will have that problem solved on a remunerative plan. The people might be, first of all, supplied with cottages suitably placed on the best available land, and employed in the formation of forests. Those of them who merited, and seemed capable of occupying holdings, might get suitable areas added to the cottages, and so form a large permanent population, having all the comforts and independence their holdings would give them, and having a constant and convenient outlet for their surplus labour. Any indiscriminate selection of occupiers would, in all probability, be a failure; as, for example, the experiment of loans to fishermen. Speaking from personal knowledge, I would say that in those cases I am acquainted with nine out of ten of these loans were made to the least successful men in the fishing community, and hence its failure. It is a great mistake to think any man will make a successful occupier of a small holding. It seems such a simple business at first sight, but to be successful it requires energy, constant hard work, and self-reliance on the part, not only of the head of the household, but of all his family. It is an old proverb that a man thrives as his wife lets him, and in no station of life is that more the case than in the case of a crofter. This is corroborated by the study of small holdings recently published by W. E. Beare for the Cobden Club, where he states that the success of these largely depends on the work of the women of the household. Large farm hands, male and female, unless reared on small holdings, have not a suitable training for being successful occupiers of such holdings as those referred to. They have had the assistance of labour-saving machinery, and all the planning and management of farm operations done for them; and when put on their own resources, generally speaking, they do not take kindly to work from daylight to dark as a crofter must do to be successful. Whatever may be the failings of crofters, activity is, or ought to be, one of their virtues; and those I have lived amongst, and studied closely, have practised that virtue, carrying their surplus labour, if need be, across the globe to sell it in the best possible market, while those of the household left at home were equally untiring in their efforts to make the most of everything.

The Act of the Scottish Parliament of 1661, of which I produce a copy, contemplated some such mode of peopling the country as I have shortly endeavoured to describe; and had it not been allowed to fall into abeyance, congested population might not have been a difficulty of the present age.

(Signed) JOHN J. R. MEIKLEJOHN.
2nd November 1893.

31,467. That is an important statute. It is an Act of Charles II. reviving an Act of James I., and providing that those who had lands of a valued rental of not less than £1000 a year are to plant certain trees, particularly elm, oak, ash, plane, and larch, to the extent of four acres every year for ten years. These trees are to be planted three yards apart, and those who do so are entitled to cast about the highways to a certain extent with a view to the greater facility for such planting?—Yes.

31,468. And the Act provides certain penalties to be inflicted on those who destroy such trees as are planted, and also that the land planted is to pay no land stent for a period of 19 years?—Yes; and I think it enacts that those who had a smaller rental than £1000 a year are to plant in proportion to the rental.

31,469. To the best of their ability?—Yes.

31,470. Mr Forsyth.—Do you wish to answer questions yourself with reference to forestry in this country, or do you wish to leave that to the skilled witnesses who are to follow?—I leave that to the skilled witnesses who will give you the figures they have actually had experience of.

31,471. Then you would prefer that these skilled witnesses should be asked practical questions on forestry management in Novar?—Yes.

31,472. Mr Sutherland.—With regard to your statement, you went into the general question of the probability of the success of any repeopling of the glens upon certain lines?—Exactly.

31,473. Have you special knowledge with regard to that problem?—I have lived a great deal amongst the crofting population, and know their habits.

31,474. But beyond that you have no experimental knowledge of how a crofter lives?—I know from observation how a Highland crofter lives.

31,475. But you stated that land in these places could not be occupied to advantage, except upon certain conditions?—As ordinary agricultural holdings.

31,476. Then, while planting of trees is a very desirable thing of itself, is it your opinion, that without the planting of trees, they could not be profitably occupied?—I think they would require a market for their surplus labour; because, with bad seasons and other things, a man situated in these remote places requires some industry to turn his hand to.

31,477. But that would depend altogether upon the size of the holding given him?—Exactly.

31,478. And if a holding were given him which would employ all his own time as a farmer, would that not meet the case?—I think he would require even a larger holding than would occupy his time, in order to combat these deficiencies.

31,479. But if the holding were large enough to employ his time, that would meet the case even without forestry? I am not denying that the planting of trees is a very good thing.—I don't think it would meet the case, because, if he simply had a holding that would occupy his own whole time, he might meet with untoward seasons, and be left in destitution for the time being, if he had nothing else to turn to.

31,480. But the question is one of labour; would not the labour require to be done whether the season was good or bad?—But when the holding would not repay the labour, he would require to have other means of making a living.

31,481. That might be the case one year, but take an average of years?—You will find that in those upland places the number of cold, wet seasons predominates.

31,482. More than in more favoured places?—Yes.

31,483. I had all that in my mind. But surely they have good years and bad years, just as they have them in lowland places?—Yes, only the bad years are more frequent there.

31,484. If I remember your statement aright, you stated that they would have a cottage attached to the land to be planted?—In the formation of a forest, to begin with.

31,485. While the forest was being formed?—Yes. By that means you would get the people there who were most desirable: you would have an opportunity of selecting the farmers that would really be industrious and would make successful occupants.

31,486. From the evidence you gave, and from the Act which his lordship quoted, there has evidently been an attempt made in the past to encourage forestry?—Yes, that is quite evident.

31,487. Have you any idea why these efforts have not been more successful?—The Act has been allowed to fall into abeyance.

31,488. Was it because of a want of sufficient interest in the subject?—No, I don't think so. I think that to some extent the Act was successful; it was meant not only for forestry, but also to promote the reclamation of the soil, and at the time of the tax upon corn the efforts of individuals went more in the direction of agriculture, and forestry was neglected because it was not of so much importance when grain was so very dear.

31,489. Is it your opinion, then, that it was not from any want of public interest in the subject so much as something inherent in the Act itself that it had not succeeded?—I think it is owing to the difference in the times. In those days the Act was operative more in the direction of agriculture, because agriculture was more quickly remunerative than forestry.

31,490. You don't know of anything inherent in the Act itself that would prevent its becoming operative?—No, I think not.

31,491. Whose property were the trees after they were planted and grown?—They were the property of the owner, but he was stimulated to do this by being relieved of taxation, and he was encouraged by the protective clauses of the Act.

31,492. And was it the proprietor of the land himself who planted the trees?—Yes, it was the proprietor.

31,493. And they naturally then became his property?—Yes.

31,494. Being planted on his land?—Yes.

31,495. Now, in what you contemplate for the future, in giving evidence here to-day, would you look forward to the time when the trees would become the property of the tenant, if it were put upon the tenant to plant them?—It depends entirely on whether the land was acquired by the Government, or whether, in the wording of that Act, Government were encouraging the individual owner to plant them in order to provide labour for the population.

31,496. But supposing in any rearrangement of the land, or any redistribution of the people upon it, it were a condition imposed upon the tenant that he should plant and protect a certain number of trees, and that public money should be got for the purpose of assisting him, would you then contemplate that the trees would be his property, the property of the landowner, or the property of the Government who advanced the money?—If the trees were planted on land occupied by a tenant who paid rent for it, of course he would have a certain interest in them after paying interest on the Government money expended.

Tain.

John James Robertson Meiklejohn.

31,497. You, no doubt, quite appreciate the importance of that point, and the effect it might have on the success of the undertaking?—I quite see that.

31,498. You, no doubt, also have in your mind how that would weigh with Parliament as a reason for doing anything the one way or the other, that there would be a certain assurance given to them that there would be a sufficient return for any expenditure upon planting trees?—Yes, if it was properly supervised I have no doubt the thing would be successful.

31,499. Do you think that access to wood has a great deal to do with improving land, say, for instance, as an advantage to the tenant in erecting fences and putting up gates?—Yes, it has a very important bearing on that question.

31,500. Has it ever struck you in going through the country the great advantage people have who are near plantations, quite apart from the question of the labour they may afford?—Yes.

31,501. And I presume it is actuated by that knowledge you have given us your views to-day?—It was simply in order to put this question of forestry before the Commissioners, so that they might keep it in view in considering the general question whether something might not be done, because it seems such a reasonable way of giving occupation to the people and enabling them to be put on the soil in a healthy way, financially speaking, and one with some prospect of success.

31,502. And are you of opinion that the proposal has merits of its own quite apart from the question of migration or emigration?—Yes; but, of course, it would infer migration.

31,503. My question was rather directed to the fact that you mixed it up sometimes with other questions which perhaps had been better left alone?—I was not aware of that.

31,504. Mr Gordon.—Where did you derive your experience in regard to crofters?—In the east and north of Caithness and in Orkney and Shetland.

31,505. You were never acquainted with them in Sutherlandshire?—No.

31,506. Are you aware of any part in these counties where crofters had self-supporting crofts?—Yes, in those places I have referred to, there were several of them self-supporting, according to the size of the place and its situation. Of course, these were at low altitudes in nearly all cases.

31,507. What was the size of the crofts where you found the crofters able to support themselves and their families from the produce of their crofts?—Twenty to forty acres of arable.

31,508. Forty acres would scarcely be a croft; it would be a pair-horse holding, would it not?—Any holding is supposed to be a croft when under £30 of rent.

31,509. Were you ever in Strath Halladale?—No.

31,510. Well, you will find crofters there with less than a fourth part of 40 acres, who have evidently shown to the Commission that they are able to support themselves from their crofts, and nothing but their crofts?—They may live upon them.

31,511. They appear to thrive upon them. With regard to this question of forestry, it is no doubt very interesting, and, looked at from the national point of view, very advisable? But may I ask where is your experience of forestry apart from Novar estate?—I propose to put other witnesses before you to give you details of the forestry.

31,512. Then you are talking more theoretically than from practical knowledge?—Well, of course, I know it from observation.

31,513. Because my experience is that the successful growth of trees is confined to a very small area of Scotland: you cannot grow them in Caithness, you cannot grow them in Sutherland to any extent; we cannot grow them in certain parts of Banffshire and Aberdeenshire, as the value of the wood, except in very favoured places, would not repay the cost of its growth. Even in the southern parts of Scotland much the same condition of matters exists. Along Speyside, and along this firth here in Ross-shire, you do get a very superior class of timber; and there is a part of Inverness-shire, and a belt of country extending to the south of Perth, where it can be done successfully: but to the west of that again, in Argyllshire and in the outer islands, it is impossible. Even in the better lands in the south, such as Wigtownshire, it is only in very good places that they can grow hard wood, and they cannot grow firs at all to profit?—I quite believe that may be your opinion, but it is not corroborated by history or experience, as Scotland was at one time a dense forest, and the inhabitants living in log huts, even in Argyllshire.

31,514. Take the case again of the crofting counties, to which your paper would more naturally apply, as the suggestion is made to give occupation to the crofters. I don't know any great extent of land in the crofting counties that would grow wood, do you?—I think there are large areas in this county and in Inverness-shire.

31,515. But not in a crofting district?—Yes, in the latter county.

31,516. What part of it?—There is a good deal in Inverness-shire.

31,517. I am afraid that if you condescend upon particulars, you will find that the successful growth of timber would, owing to the climate, be confined into a very small area of the crofting counties. Do you think I am right or wrong?—I won't contradict you; but I think wood has not been sufficiently tried in these districts.

31,518. If you go to Sutherlandshire you will get rocks in plenty?—The rocks are no barrier to the growth of timber. If you go to Norway you will find more rocks than anywhere else, but you get excellent timber there all the same. You would think, if you were to see the land there, that nothing could grow on it; but the timber grows quite readily.

31,519. I would rather confine my observations to this country, as it is the one I am best acquainted with. I have no wish to make light of the effort to give employment to crofters; but I only wish to point out that in my opinion the benefits to be derived from forestry would be confined in actual practice to a very small area of the five crofting counties.

31,520. The Chairman.—I suppose you are of opinion that if land held by a crofter under the Act were planted with trees, he, or his successors in the holding, would be entitled to the benefit of the crop of trees, just as he is entitled to the benefit of any other crop that grows upon his holding?—Yes.

31,521. And that he himself or his successor, his son or grandson, would cut those trees and sell them, and have the benefit of them, in the same way as he cuts the annual crops?—Exactly.

31,522. Now, is it within your knowledge (and this is the only other question I detain you with) that, from the character of certain lands within the crofting area, the mere enclosing of these lands would lead, in the course of time, to the indigenous growth of timber?—In a great many cases it would.

31,523. And you would be in favour of steps being taken for enclosing such lands with that object?—Yes.

31,524. Mr George Malcolm, Secretary, Highland Property Defence Association.—With reference to what Mr Commissioner Gordon has said, you do not know the area actually under wood in the county of Inverness?—No, I do not.

31,525. Would you be surprised to know that there are no less than about 170,000 acres in Inverness-shire alone already planted and under timber?—I am very pleased to hear it: I have no doubt it is quite correct, and I think it could be increased very considerably.

31,526. Have you considered the altitude to which you would carry this planting scheme? To what height do you suppose trees would successfully grow in these crofting counties?—Yes, of course, they would not grow above a certain altitude.

31,527. To what altitude do you suppose you could successfully plant trees along the western seaboard?—I do not know the western seaboard in the counties of Inverness and Ross.

31,528. Then, to the extent that you lay down plantations in these counties, the land that would be suitable for giving to crofters would be withdrawn for that purpose?—No.

31,529. The land that you would propose to plant would be precisely the land that is now proposed to be given off to crofters, would it not?—There would be a great deal of other land. What I contemplate in making this statement is purely hill grazing that would be more profitable under forestry, as will be shown by the witnesses who will follow me.

31,530. The land that you propose to plant would be precisely the land that would otherwise, if these proposals are carried out, be given to the crofters for grazing purposes?—It might be used for grazing purposes, but it would be very much more profitable to them if under wood.

31,531. But it could not be used for both purposes, of course?—Not for a time, but after a time it would.

31,532. The Chairman.—Are you of opinion that trees might quite successfully grow upon land not available in the sense of the remit to us?—Yes, that is exactly what I do think; and it would render the land available in the sense of the remit—profitable to the owners, the occupiers, and the nation.

DONALD ROBERTSON, Forester, Novar (41)—examined.

31,533. The Chairman.—How long have you been forester on the Novar property?—Eleven years.

31,534. Where were you before?—On the Duke of Athole's estate in Perthshire.

31,535. Were you a forester there?—I was under-forester.

31,536. How long were you on that property in the capacity of under-forester?—I was born there, and lived there practically all my life, with the exception of three and a half years I was in Ayrshire.

31,537. Then your experience as a forester extends over a great many years?—Yes.

31,538. Have you a written statement?—I have.

31,539. We shall be glad to hear it.—Timber-growing as it affects the working classes of a country has not received the attention it deserves in the north of Scotland. There is a vague idea prevalent that timber-growing is only beneficial to sportsmen, and that it is detrimental to agricultural interests; this idea has been caused by game-preserving landlords planting, specially for game, coverts in the vicinity of arable lands. When plantations are formed for this purpose, it is not to be matter for wonder that agriculturists look upon it with aversion.

In what follows it is intended to show that by planting large areas of the so-called waste lands in the north of Scotland, agriculturists would be benefited to begin with, and when the timber was being sold they would derive still more benefit by getting a better local sale for their produce. The working classes would be immensely benefited, because, instead of their getting a few pence per acre per year from waste land, as at present, they would have from 15s. to 30s. per acre per year if under timber. Therefore we maintain that if Government wish to develop the resources of the Highlands, there is no better way in which they can do so than by planting the waste land suitable for timber-growing; thereby giving immediate employment to those requiring it, and providing a vast amount of employment for the future.

Germany affords us a very good example which this country might copy; the main idea with the Germans is that all land should bear whatever crop it is best adapted for growing for the benefit of the nation: large areas of their timber lands are directly under Government; other portions in the hands of communes resembling our County Councils; there are also extensive tracts of woodlands in the hands of private proprietors, but the whole have to be managed on a system approved of by Government.

The planting of waste lands in the Highlands of Scotland is essentially a Government question; because returns for money invested are too long in coming to hand, and many proprietors have not the wherewithal to plant extensively; the man who plants seldom reaps the full returns, and although one proprietor may plant judiciously and extensively, he may be followed by a proprietor who neglects the woods and allows them to be destroyed, or who cuts them down before they attain maturity, thereby causing a loss not only to the property but to the nation at large.

It is estimated that there are over 5,000,000 acres of waste land in the northern counties of Scotland very well adapted for growing timber, and of very little account for any other purpose. As to the exact area we are unable to judge, but we know that in the parishes of Alness and Kiltearn in Ross-shire there are 25,000 acres of such land very well adapted for growing timber, which is at present under sheep and deer, and which only yields from 1s. to 2s. per acre of yearly rent, grazing and sporting combined, and yields something under 3d. per acre yearly to the working classes, if shepherds, ghillies, and gamekeepers may be so classed.

Now, if by planting this land it can be made to yield 3s. to 5s. per acre of yearly clear rental, besides giving from 15s. to 30s. per acre per year to the working classes, is it not the duty of Government to at least give it a fair trial? We venture to say that money invested in planting will give a better return to Government, and be of far more lasting benefit to the people than what has been and is now being sunk in railways and harbours in the Highlands will give; without the land being under crop where is the traffic to come from to make railways and harbours pay?

We will now endeavour to show how the foregoing returns may be got out of waste land by planting; and at the outset we may say that it is very difficult to get all the information desirable, because it is seldom that one can get a correct account of expenditure and income relative to a particular section of wood or plantation covering the whole time the timber has been growing, because said accounts are either lost or have not been kept: however, we can give the clear income from the last clean cut of the timber on land similar to the above-mentioned 25,000 acres.

In 1883, a piece of wood land, 24 acres in extent, was sold by private tender to be clean cut, except a few hard-wood trees which were reserved; the wood was 61 years old, and there were 159 trees per acre, composed of 90 larches, 64 Scots firs, and 5 spruces, and fetched £77, 9s per acre. Which would be as follows:—

1 acre, 159 trees, in last clean cut gave	£77	9	0
5s. per acre yearly rental, with compound interest at 3½ per cent. for 60 years, comes to about . . .	£49	10	0
First cost of planting, including fencing and draining, say £3 per acre, taken at compound interest at 3½ per cent. for 60 years, is about . . .	23	0	0
	£72	10	0
Leaving a clear profit per acre of after paying first cost of planting, and a yearly rent of 5s. per acre, with compound interest on both items.	4	19	0

It will be noticed that we have not taken the previous thinnings into account at all; but let us give an estimate, seeing we have no records of value of said thinnings: the wood had every appearance of having been planted at three feet apart, or with 4840 plants per acre, and there were only 159 in the last clean cut, leaving 4681 plants unaccounted for; but let us suppose that 3000 of said plants died or never came to any market value, and we have 1681 trees which had been taken out as thinnings, and let us put the small average value of 6d. each on them, and we have the sum of £42 per acre for thinnings, leaving a clear profit of £46, 19s. per acre.

Tain.

Donald Robertson.

But the above is not all the profit, as we have still to add a grazing rent of 2s. per acre which was got during the last thirty years it was under timber, with compound interest, and also compound interest on the £42 received for thinnings at 3½ per cent. We have as follows :—

	£	s.	d.
Profit per acre on last clean cut, . .	4	19	0
Grazing rental at 2s., with compound interest at 3½ per cent. for thirty years,	4	12	0
Estimated value received for thinnings £42, with compound interest at 3½ per cent. for fifteen years, . .	65	8	0
Total clear profit per acre,	£74	19	0

Let us now consider how much the working classes had per acre out of this clean cut, and in doing so we base our calculations upon figures given us by the timber merchant who purchased the wood, and had to pay the working expenses.

Cutting off root cross-cutting and branching :—

	£	s.	d.
Cross-cutting and branching, 159 trees at 9d.	5	19	3
Carting to sawmill, 159 trees at 1s. 6d.	11	18	6
Sawing and stacking, average per acre,	11	2	0
Carting to railway station, average per acre, ...	7	8	0
Measuring and loading in trucks per acre,	3	14	0
Repair to wood roads, average per acre,	2	4	0
Cost of moving mill to wood, average per acre	0	10	0
Railway rates to Forres and Wick, average per acre, ...	11	2	0
Total, ...	£53	17	9
But we have still to add what would be spent on labour in connection with the thinnings, and this we have no hesitation in placing at	42	0	0
Giving a total per acre to labour of .	£95	17	9

Or, if spread over sixty years, giving something over 31s. per acre per year.

It is a well-known fact to all who are engaged in our northern home timber trade, that the cost of working thinnings is higher than the cost of working a clean cut, because the timber is more difficult to remove, and there is more waste from small trees, such as thinnings, than from heavier timber. We have invariably found that the cost of working is equal to the first cost; that is, the price paid for the trees as they stand in the wood.

To give an idea of the cost of working thinnings, we submit the following which we have ourselves paid :—Cutting off root-branching and dressing Scots fir pit props, 3 inches diameter, 3d. per 72 lineal feet; carting 7 miles to shipping port, and placing on board ship, 1s. per 72 lineal feet; total, 1s. 3d. per 72 lineal feet. Price received from F. O. B. 2s. 3d. per 72 lineal feet, leaving for the wood 1s. per 72 lineal feet clear; but heavier wood, such as 5 inch diameter, would leave 2s. clear; when heavier, and when it has to be manufactured at a sawmill, the cost is considerably more for working. When we consider that our country pays somewhere about £20,000,000 a year for foreign timber, and if we reckon that one-half of that sum goes to foreign labour, say £10,000,000, and if we divide this sum by 50, a labourer's year's income, we find that we pay for the upkeep of 200,000 foreign workmen in the timber trade alone, while thousands of our own workmen are unable to find work.

It may be argued that we could not produce all the timber our country requires, especially the finer classes of timber. It is true we could not produce some of the finer kinds of wood, but certainly we could produce the greater bulk of timber required for ordinary constructive purposes, and more than we do of the finer sorts.

Tain.

Donald Robertson.

Many well-meaning people say :—'There is no use of 'planting, because there is plenty of virgin forests wait-'ing the axe in many parts of the known world; and even 'should this run out, the ingenuity of the age will find 'a substitute.' The same class of people predicted that wood would not be of any use, or that very little of it would be required, when iron and steel began to be used in ship building and other constructions, but what are the facts? Since the introduction of iron and steel for constructive purposes, the consumption of timber has steadily and rapidly increased, and this has been the case in most nations of the old world, and the increase in newer countries has been and will continue to be more rapid still.

I would say that this generation could not do a kinder turn to themselves, and more so to the coming generation, than plant extensively the waste land throughout the country, and have part of it ready to supply our country's wants when the above-mentioned virgin forests give out.

Further, we are confident that however much the price of agricultural produce may be reduced in the future, the price of timber will increase at no very distant date; the better class of timber has been pretty well cut down near shipping ports and floating rivers in most foreign countries, and the cost of bringing wood to our markets is increasing, although I believe freights from port to port were never less than they have been during the past few years.

It may appear to some that what we advocate savours too much of land nationalisation; but we maintain that if the present landowners consider this matter fairly they will see that what is best for the community at large is also to their advantage; and if they help on the development of our country's resources, there is less inducement for the people to demand nationalisation of the land. We wish it to be distinctly understood that we do not advocate the planting of arable land nor any pasture land that is worth 5s. per acre of rent, although we are firmly convinced that many portions of land at present under cultivation would be much more profitable to the country at large if under timber; because the present occupiers only manage to eke out a miserable livelihood from the land in question, and contribute very little to the national purse.

Further, we submit that any land adapted for timber growing which is at present under sheep or deer would be much more profitable to the country if planted than if handed over to crofters.

We might further suggest that any landowner who held waste land suitable for timber growing should be allowed to improve it himself either by planting or otherwise; and if he plant the subject that he receive money from Government at fair interest, said money to be spent under Government supervision; and failing his improving such waste land within a reasonable period, that Government be empowered to step in and plant said land, giving the landlord fair valuation for the subject.

But we must leave such matters to men better qualified to deal with such subjects, with the hope that many who have never considered timber culture from a national point of view may do so, and that our Government may be induced to give it a fair trial.

(Signed) D. Robertson.
2nd November 1893.

31,540. Mr Forsyth.—You have given us an illustration of a wood of 24 acres, and have told us the financial results of it: I take it that that wood is at Novar?—It is.

31,541. It may, roughly speaking, be called a wood consisting of one-half larch and one-half Scots fir?—More larch than Scots fir.

31,542. I presume you have studied pretty closely the kind of trees most planted in this district of Easter

Ross: so far as my observation goes, the woods are mostly Scots fir?—They are.

31,543. Can you give any special reason for that?—All classes of land are not adapted for growing larch.

31,544. Then, the fact is, that it is being planted with Scots fir mainly because it is not adapted for growing larch?—I would not like to say so; I do not know the reasons the proprietors may have had. They may have planted it so because they could get Scots fir cheaper than larch.

31,545. I take it you would consider, on the whole, that if you could grow good larch, it is much more profitable than Scots fir?—It is at the present day, but I question very much if it will be by-and-bye. The difference is not nearly so much as it was twenty years ago.

31,546. That is a point I wish to get at. Assuming, then, that a considerable portion of this country might be planted advantageously with larch,—that larch would grow,—would you not have a much greater profit in the earlier thinnings? Are they not much more saleable than Scots firs?—They are.

31,547. Could you put any revenue upon the thinnings of Scots fir plantations up to, say, 25 years old?—I would not.

31,548. Any nett revenue?—I would not.

31,549. Would the thinnings pay the cost of cutting out?—I question if they would in many places. But I may say that I consider thinning is carried on far too much in many parts of this country: to grow good, clean Scots fir you must leave them thick, so that they naturally clean themselves.

31,550. But I am talking of it as a matter of revenue in the earlier stages of your planting: there would not be much revenue from thinning if you took Scots fir?—If you take Scots fir, you cannot look for very much revenue until the wood is thirty years of age.

31,551. And at what age do you consider Scots fir most marketable, I mean for the final cutting?—From 60 to 100 years old; it depends entirely upon the class of soil. Scots fir may be perfectly fit for cutting at 50 years in one class of soil, and it may not be fit till it is 100 in another soil.

31,552. Well, then, as to Scots fir: would you see your way to market as much Scots fir as you could grow, if, it be mature, and of good age? It is not likely at any time to become a drug on the market, is it?—I don't think so. The home timber is at the present time more a drug in the market than it would be if you had a large quantity of it, because in that case you would be able to supply all the wants of the country, and keep out the foreigner.

31,553. Do you think you could grow Scots fir wood that would take the place of foreign timber?—Certainly, the ordinary classes of foreign timber, the red and white, such as are used,—the spruce and fir that we get from the continent.

31,554. Has good mature Scots fir been used in this country for, say, the interior wood-work of a house?—It has: in Fowlis Castle you will find the interior done up with Scots fir, which has been there for over a hundred years, I understand.

31,555. Has not that been Scots fir of great age, cut when very old?—It does not appear to have been slow-growing, judging by its appearance.

31,556. But still probably old wood?—It may have been: I cannot say.

31,557. Was it not likely to have been wood of at least a hundred years old?—Probably it would be.

31,558. I want to get at that point, because, so far as I can make out, it appears to me that Scots fir requires to be at least that age before it is first-class timber in any way?—It depends on the use to which it is put.

31,559. I mean such wood as would be likely to compete with foreign timber, that would mostly be in the construction of buildings?—There is a great bulk of timber that goes into railway sleepers, which does not necessarily require to be of fine quality: if it takes enough creosote to preserve it, they do not particularly care whether it is old or young if it has size.

31,560. But for railway sleepers the wood is generally creosoted and bought comparatively cheaply, is it not?—Yes.

31,561. Now as to larch: do you think that a large extent of larch could be grown in this country successfully?—There is the question of disease, but outside the question of disease there is no doubt larch will grow in many parts of this country.

31,562. Have you any theories as to larch disease? Do you think it is accounted for by the seed used, or by the site in which the plantations are put?—I have an idea that a good deal of the disease is caused by trees being grown from home-saved seed: for this reason, that among the older class of trees anywhere throughout Scotland, and in many parts of England wherever you get larch trees from 80 to 100 years of age, you invariably get them sound; and these would naturally be raised from imported seed. But when you go to the following generation, from 50 to 70 years of age, there is a considerable amount of decay in them.

31,563. Then to what cause do you trace the disease to the foreign seed?—To the home seed: that is my opinion.

31,564. It is a somewhat difficult subject; but, on the whole, you are inclined to think that the home grown seed is not so good?—That is my opinion. The seed is better, and will propagate much more easily than foreign seed; but I do not think the timber produced from it is so good.

31,565. You put down roughly £3 as the cost of planting. Do you consider that if large areas were to be planted in one block that estimate might be reduced?—Very much,—by more than half.

31,566. Your £3 per acre applies for the most part to the ordinary plantations which are put about an ordinary estate, and are generally of a small size, for the sake of amenity, and for other reasons?—Yes.

31,567. Could you give any idea of the cost of planting, say, 500 acres in one block,—would that reduce the cost very considerably?—It would, unless there were a heavy cost for drainage.

31,568. Precisely, but we will take that as proportional for a big and a small plantation?—But if you were to take a 5000 acre block, that would reduce the cost very much.

31,569. Of course it would reduce the cost of fencing enormously, and that is the main expense of small plantations, is it not?—It is.

31,570. Now, assuming that there were lands which might be profitably planted, and that the financial statements that you have given us are correct throughout, do you consider that in forming new plantations on a large scale, that is to say, by Government, continuous labour could be given to a staff all the year round from the beginning?—It could, if you did not overdo the planting to begin with. If you plant a certain number of trees yearly, by the time you have got over your district the part that you planted first would be ready for the thinning to commence. So, if you took thirty years to finish your block (it would perhaps be wise to take a longer time) you would not have all your timber ready for the market at the same time.

31,571. But by planting a larger area each year, and taking in supplementary labour, say, from neighbouring crofters, do you think the amount forested could proceed more rapidly and be done equally effectually?—I do not quite follow you.

31,572. I assume that you have a permanent staff, and that, during the planting season and at certain other times, you would take in a considerable amount of extra labour,—temporary labour; could you then, under proper supervision, get over your area more rapidly? could you not cover a great deal more ground, if you had a large block to plant, by taking in extra labour largely at the planting season?—You have always to do that.

31,573. I ask this because it appears to me that you would rather have simply a permanent staff all the year round of a certain size: now that is not likely to produce the casual labour which would be required or might be required by neighbouring crofters. You would simply employ a staff of foresters?—I would employ outside labour during the planting season at a time when crofters had no other work. It is during the winter months, or, at any rate, the autumn and early in spring, when there is very little other out-door work being done that planting has to be done. You would have to employ all the labour to be had in the district, whether crofters or otherwise, and probably have to import labour.

31,574. Then you would calculate on having during the planting season a large demand for extra labour?—Certainly.

31,575. Now, have you looked over any parts of this district, or, let us say, Easter Ross generally, where you think you could find a large extent of ground in one block available for planting?—I have not been over much of the easter district here.

31,576. To what part could you refer us?—To the parish of Alness, and to Kiltearn parish.

31,577. And do you think you could in any other parts of the crofting counties, say, towards the west coast, find large areas available for planting in one block that would be easily accessible by water, from the sea on the west coast?—Certainly, many parts of the west coast.

31,578. Say of Ross-shire and Inverness-shire,—I don't wish to take you too far from home just now,—do you know the west coast of Ross-shire or Inverness-shire at all?—Not minutely; I have been through part of it.

31,579. But you have perhaps not examined it with a special view to planting operations?—No, but I know that on the Ardross property on the west coast there is very good timber,—I mean on Sir Kenneth Matheson's property.

31,579A. Do you think it likely that the plantations that you propose could be made on a large scale, and yet within fairly easy reach of market, in view of the expense of carriage?—I do; but apart from their being within easy reach of the present means of transit, if you have a large block of timber it will pay you to lay down the means of transit; whereas, with the isolated patches of wood we have now, it never pays either a timber merchant or a proprietor to lay down the means of transport.

31,580. That would be in the case of a very large extent of plantations?—Yes.

31,581. And the success of the sale would depend very much upon such conditions as those?—Yes.

31,582. Your area of wood to be sold must be very large in order to make it worth while to put down special means of transit for the wood?—It would.

31,583. You think on the whole that there would be no difficulty in establishing a profitable industry?—I have no doubt of it.

31,584. And that this would employ a great deal of labour besides the permanent staff?—It would.

31,585. And that it would not interfere, but rather it would take up ground that could not well be used for any other purpose?—Ground that could not be cultivated, and that was not of much value as a grazing subject.

31,586. And would you be prepared to verify these financial statements that you have given in your report should we require it? You could give us access to the accounts and sales that would show us any further information as to the financial results of the case?—I could give you access to the sale books where the sales are recorded, but the figures regarding the working expenses and other particulars are of course in the hands of the timber merchants. I could, however, give you access to the working figures of lots similar that we have worked ourselves.

31,587. That would be more useful to us. Do you consider that this statement that you have given is a fair average statement of results on the Novar estate, or is it rather a favourable one?—That particular one is a good one; one of our best.

31,588. You would not expect to average as well as that all over?—Not all over.

31,589. But still you hold that there would be a good working profit made?—Yes.

31,590. After paying a rent for the land?—Yes.

31,591. Mr Sutherland.—I think the concluding sentence of your statement was to the effect that you think land would be better employed if planted than if given to crofters?—I do.

31,592. That is to say, you contemplate that land that is proposed or that may be proposed to be given to the crofters could be planted instead; is that your position?—Yes.

31,593. Have you ever thought of the possibility of the land being given to crofters and planted also?—No, I have not.

31,594. Do you think it is impossible to do that?—I do not think it is workable.

31,595. What is your reason for supposing that?—I don't suppose, unless the crofter were put under very stringent regulations, that he would allow his timber to come to maturity, or that he would work it to the best advantage for the benefit of the country.

31,596. For the benefit of the country? Would his own interest and the interest of the country not be identical, do you think, in this matter?—I don't quite think that he would see it.

31,597. It is a question, then, of his knowledge?—I don't know that it is altogether a question of his knowledge, but it is a question of husbanding a subject that would only be beneficial to perhaps his son or grandson.

31,598. Do you think he is not actuated by the ordinary human motives?—I believe he is,—it is very human to wish to get as much as you can out of the subject you have in hand.

31,599. But is not that being done by people whose action is not controlled by the same limitations at the present time? Do not landlords do that at the present time with regard to timber?—There is very much less being done in that way now than was done in the past.

31,600. Experience has taught them, in fact?—Not experience but necessity has made them cut and not plant, because they have not had the money to do so.

31,601. But, supposing that legal conditions were imposed upon the landlord, by which he would not be allowed, except upon certain conditions, to cut down trees, would not that also be beneficial?—It would.

31,602. And if the same conditions were imposed on crofters getting land, would not that also be beneficial?—It would.

31,603. If such conditions, then, were imposed on crofters who got the land, do you not think there might be trees and crofters on the land at the same time?—Certainly, but I am afraid it would be a very expensive system of going to work.

31,604. But you referred to the system of forestry in Germany?—I did.

31,605. Do you know how it is carried out there?—I have no personal knowledge of it.

31,606. But you have read of it, I suppose?—I have read and I have heard of it from Germans.

31,607. Well, have they any difficulty in regulating the forests of their country?—I have not heard of any.

31,608. Nor Switzerland.—I do not know that country.

31,609. You do not know the way in which the communes of Switzerland regulate the forests?—I do not know.

31,610. You are not aware that the timber in Switzerland is the property of the public?—I believe to a certain extent that is so; but not the whole of it.

31,611. And that there are very stringent regulations laid down for the preservation of the timber, and its proper management?—I believe there are such.

31,612. We have nothing, I suppose, analogous to it in this country?—Nothing.

31,613. Now, you have given us a very interesting statement with regard to the ultimate value of timber per acre. I think Mr Forsyth asked you a question with regard to the location of these 24 acres, and you stated that they were rather above the average. You applied a certain agricultural test to that land, as to the value of it,—I mean, being 5s., I think, per acre. Was this land above or below that standard?—It was below; we cannot get 5s. now for it after being cleared.

31,614. The land you could not get 5s. per acre for bore a crop of timber in how many years?—Sixty-one years.

31,615. Which was worth £77, 19s., was it?—That was the last clean cut from the 159 trees, I think.

31,616. And then there would be the value of the thinnings at various times, over and above that?—I estimate that at £42.

31,617. Yes, I think your calculation involved that. But you see no difficulty, provided regulations were made under a competent public department, why land if handed over to crofters for new settlements should not also be devoted in part to the rearing of trees?—The only objection is, that I think it would be an expensive mode of going to work, and the restrictions would require to be very stringent.

31,618. I am taking for granted that we would have something analogous to the regulations they enforce in continental countries. Is it not because you have never contemplated any other system than the present system that you saw that difficulty?—I never thought of the question of handing such land over to crofters for the purpose of growing timber.

31,619. But, supposing certain lands were allocated to crofters to form new holdings, would it be a great hardship, do you think, that certain parts that would be pointed out to these crofters should be planted with trees; that regulations should be made that these trees should be kept properly and not interfered with until a certain time; and that all this should be done under public supervision?—Where the land would be suitable for growing timber, I think it would be a very wise step in the interests of the country at large.

31,620. But would your objections be overcome by regulations of that kind?—Certainly.

31,621. And there would be competent public officers appointed as foresters under the supervision of the County Council or any other local body, who would see that these regulations were carried out?—Just so.

31,622. Does that appear to you to be a feasible scheme?—It is quite feasible.

31,623. And is it possible,—I will not put it further than that?—It is possible; the only difficulty I see is regarding the expense, and the number of people these officers would have to contend with. If it were entirely under Government control, or under the control of the present landlords, or under the supervision of these officers, it would be much easier, I should say, for them to deal with the matter.

31,624. They would have the sanction of the law, and the authority of the law, at their back, for any steps they might require to take; is that your position?—And they would have only one man to deal with, instead of perhaps 50 or 60 crofters.

31,625. I am afraid you are assuming that crofters are more unreasonable than other people?—No, but where you have the opinions of 50 or 60 different people to deal with, is it not necessarily more difficult than where you have only one?

31,626. You gave us some rather striking figures, to the effect that we are paying twenty millions for foreign timber, and I think you expressed the opinion that that could be saved to this country?—Not the whole, but the great bulk of it, if we grow what timber other countries are capable of growing.

31,627. You would thereby considerably reduce that figure?—Certainly.

31,628. Now, with regard to the value of timber-growing, quite apart from how it would improve the scenery and amenity of the country, would it not, from the grazing point of view, be an advantage to those bleak places in order to afford a sort of shelter?—A decided advantage, and the woods themselves would be much better grazing than the land is at present, in many cases.

31,629. Does not the planting of trees improve the grazing?—The planting of larch materially improves the grazing underneath; larch or hard wood materially improves the grazing.

31,630. Are you aware whether the growing of trees has any appreciable effect on the climate? Did you ever notice that it had?—I have no doubt it has.

31,631. Does it promote underground drainage?—I am not quite certain as to that.

31,632. Do you know if tree roots take moisture out of the soil?—Oh, they certainly do.

31,633. And you have doubtless heard of certain trees being planted on marshes in order to dry them?—I have; and I know a district in Perthshire (Tullymet), which is at rather a high altitude, and which grows very good corn, and where the grain ripens very well. There is another district, Strathbraan, which is at the very same altitude, but which has no timber on the hill-sides; and the crops there are very much inferior, and do not ripen every year the same as they do in Tullymet. I have given these two districts as being about the same altitude and pretty near the same exposure.

31,634. And do you think the difference is due to the one being planted with trees and the other not?—I have very little doubt that has something to do with it.

31,635. Have you formed any idea as to the age up to which trees must be protected by enclosures for grazing purposes?—It is not a question of the trees being protected; when your trees are, say, twenty years of age, you may allow anything in the way of cattle to go in among them, but there is very little for them if there is a crop, as there ought to be, on the ground. You cannot expect to get much in the way of grazing until after you have thinnings.

31,636. But for the purpose of shelter in winter, say?—Oh, yes, you could let cattle in as soon as the trees are quite beyond their reach for eating the tops off.

31,637. Then are sheep more destructive?—I have an idea that sheep are rather detrimental to the growth of trees; they leave their wool about the stems of the trees, and that imparts a certain oil.

31,638. Or perhaps it may be the substance with which they are washed that is deleterious?—I could not say, but I think there is a certain oil that is absorbed.

31,639. But is it a fact that trees to which sheep have access do not flourish as well as others?—After they are of a certain age I do not see that it makes any difference.

31,640. At what age do they cease to be injurious to trees?—If your timber is, say, thirty years of age, and there is a certain amount of cork on the bark, I don't think sheep do any harm. But in young plantations, say, from fifteen to twenty years of age, I do not think it is advisable that sheep should be allowed to run through them; the bark has not cork enough, and I think they give off some sort of oil, or something else that is injurious to the bark of the trees, in the wool which they leave attached to the stem.

31,641. Could you call our attention to any place in Scotland where trees have been planted, and where they have failed to grow to any large extent?—I am not personally acquainted with any large extent that has been planted.

31,642. But your experience is pretty considerable, is it not?—Well, I have been over a good deal of Scotland.

31,643. And in all your experience you have not seen such a place?—I have seen patches, but I have not seen a large extent that has not been a success.

31,644. So that, as a general statement, it would be quite correct, according to you, to say that trees have succeeded wherever they have been planted,—as a general statement, with the small exceptions you have referred to; is that the case?—No.

31,645. Where have you seen them a failure?—I have seen in many cases where a tree was not adapted to the soil it did not prove a success.

31,646. That was owing to want of knowledge on the part of the person who planted it?—Certainly, but where trees adapted to the soil were planted they were perfectly successful.

31,647. Is it not true, then, as a general statement, that where trees have been planted they have grown and succeeded?—I would not quite put it that way:

Tain. Donald Robertson.

where the proper kind of trees have been planted on suitable soil they have succeeded.

31,648. And, in your opinion, there is no danger but they would succeed if planted with due judgment in those places that have been referred to to-day?—I have no doubt they would.

31,649. You have seen a great deal of the indigenous wood of this country, the old birch wood?—I have.

31,650. Have you observed that it is now dying out?—In many places it is.

31,650A. How do you account for that?—Sheep and deer in many cases kill them.

31,651. Is it not also the case that in a great number of cases no trouble is being taken at the present time to replant where trees are cut down, so as to keep them growing?—I don't think that, so far as birch is concerned, anything at all has been done in the way of preserving them.

31,652. Would we be justified in coming to the conclusion that wherever we see still existing clumps of indigenous birchwood, other trees would grow?—There is very little doubt that if that land were enclosed against stock, these birches would seed the soil. Birches are, as a rule, very good at seeding.

31,653. And, in exposed places where they grow, would they afford shelter for other young trees if planted?—They would.

31,654. Very good, do you think?—Yes, if the surface was in any way broken the birch seed would strike at once.

31,655. Then are you of opinion that the neighbourhood of woods is a benefit to people round about, apart altogether from the question of affording labour?—I have repeatedly seen very sickly gentlemen sent to the neighbourhood of pine woods in this country for their health.

31,656. But take the case of small occupiers of land, who live in the neighbourhood of a wood where trees are easily got, does not the proximity of the wood add a great deal to the value of their holdings? Cannot they put up fences more cheaply, and make improvements on their places such as people who are far away from a wood cannot do?—Oh, certainly: for instance, those living in this neighbourhood can put up a holding much more cheaply than those in the wilds of Caithness or in the Lews.

31,657. Take the case of Skye, where there are practically no woods: are there not many small improvements and amenities possible round their houses which the people would carry out if they had woods convenient?—I have no doubt.

31,658. And a great deal of the squalid nature of their surroundings is due to the fact that they have not such wood?—I believe it is; the dilapidated state of their buildings may be due in great measure to their being a long distance from timber; and the cost of carrying wood to their districts is very heavy. For example, we send wood from Novar to Stornoway, and it costs nearly as much as to send it to London.

31,659. Mr Gordon.—You have given us a very favourable account of those wood sales which you have mentioned in your paper as an illustration of the profits. It amounts to this, I think, that for the sixty-one years in which the 24 acres of wood were growing, the sum derived from profits during the period of its growth was about equal to the last price paid for the clean cut. The clean cut amounted in value to £77, 9s., and the profits derived from thinnings and grazings during the growth of the wood amounted to £74, 19s.; is that so?—It is.

31,660. Which would show an average return per acre of something like 24s. or 25s. per annum?—About that; but there is the 5s. to add, which is the yearly rental, that I took into account from the beginning.

31,661. Yes, but you have deducted that before showing the profits?—The 5s. is over and above that.

31,662. But you adhere to the statement that the profits derived from these 24 acres during the whole life of the wood were about 25s. per acre?—I don't quite understand.

31,663. After charging the estate with interest and compound interest at 3½ per cent., and deducting the annual rental of the land lost while the wood was growing, you brought out a final profit of £74, 19s.?—That is the estimated value of the thinnings,—of course, I do not certify that as the actual value of the thinnings, but I can certify all the other figures.

31,664. Now, do you think that that is a fair estimate of the wood-growing qualities of timber in this country?—Many parts of the country that I am acquainted with have grown a better crop of timber than was on these 24 acres.

31,665. I have no doubt you will find pieces: there are some pieces of timber that I have seen near your place which are worth twice £77 per acre. But the Novar estate is an especially good estate for wood?—Simply because it was specially planted.

31,666. I will not quarrel with you about that; it is a specially good place for wood, however?—It seems to grow because it is there. There are many places which have no wood, where timber would grow equally good if it was put there.

31,667. I have seen wood planted which was not a success. I am quite as much in favour of timber planting as you are, only I do not put the estimate of return quite so high. During your experience as a forester, what would be your average of clean cut per acre?—It depends on the number of trees per acre.

31,668. Would not £25 be much nearer the ordinary price per acre, for old fir wood?—At what age?

31,669. I don't care very much what age, whether 60 or 160, provided it is mature. But I think your estimate of the period of maturity is much too small. My idea is that fir wood is not ripe unless it is at least 100 years old?—I can put fir wood into the market just now at 60 years of age which will be accepted as first-class timber.

31,670. That may be on account of its being of special growth and from a special locality; but I am asking you whether such wood may be taken as a fair specimen of the wood in this country?—I have said that those 24 acres were rather above the average.

31,671. Are you inclined to give us a few more details as to the prices? How many cubic feet would you give to each of these trees?—I cannot say here, but I could give you my estimate of the cubic contents of the timber upon each acre before I sold the lot.

31,672. What would be the average contents of an ordinary fir tree? I do not refer to the woods in Novar, but an ordinary fir tree cut in the north of Scotland, a ripe tree, ready for the market? I say a ripe tree, because I do not think the value depends so much upon the age as upon the size?—That is just what I say.

31,673. I don't think you could depend upon having ripe wood at 60 years of age, as a rule?—When a tree is large enough to make scantling of 11 by 3, or to go into sleepers at 9–10 by 5, I consider it is ripe.

31,674. What would you get for a cubic foot of that just now?—If within reasonable distance of a shipping port or railway station, you would get just now about 4d. a cubic foot for it.

31,675. Now, is not 12 cubic feet a fair average of the contents of a Scots fir?—By no means.

31,676. Are there not a great many more Scots firs cut as ripe wood under 12 cubic feet than over it?—Oh, there may be; the numbers may be more, but you have far more cubic contents in the bigger woods.

31,677. Yes, in the bigger woods?—Take the Morayshire woods, which I have gone over, and with which you appear to be well acquainted. I valued a wood in Morayshire, at Blackstaff, near Findhorn, and the average, so far as my recollection goes, in that wood was about 18 or 20 cubic feet per tree.

31,678. Do you happen to know what each of these trees fetched?—I know the value I put on them.

31,679. But what is the value the man got for them?—The man who bought them at first had to pay very near my valuation for them. That was the purchaser of the property with the timber on it; I don't know what he got when he sold it.

31,680. Are you aware whether this proprietor when he sold the wood got your valuation?—I don't know; I never asked him.*

31,681. Do you recollect how much you put upon each tree?—I cannot say off-hand, but I have still got my notes.

31,682. You cannot tell us what the rate per tree would be?—No.

31,683. In that case you were within a little more than a mile of a railway station?—Yes.

31,684. But suppose you had gone up to the top or middle of Nairnshire, ten miles from a railway station, what would a fir-tree of 17 cubic feet be worth there, with ten miles of land carriage?—If I have 5000 to 10,000 acres of timber to sell there, I will make it worth as much as at Blackstaff.

31,685. I am sorry I cannot give you that, but take the case of 50 acres?—Well, then, it would be less by the difference in carriage.

31,686. Suppose a carpenter got a house to build at Nairn, and was offered the wood at Culmony, which is ten miles from Nairn, for nothing, if he could cut and carry it down, do you think he would use that wood, or buy foreign timber delivered at Nairn?—As a rule, when one is building a mansion-house, or any ordinary sized house, the specifications are made up by an architect, who may specify foreign timber simply because he cannot get home timber seasoned.

31,687. I do not refer to the case of specifications; I assume that the builder is free to use home wood if he chooses?—I have no reason to know what the man would do.

31,688. That is hardly an answer to my question.—If I were offered good wood ten miles away, I would take it, and it would pay me.

31,689. Would it not be cheaper for the carpenter to buy foreign wood at Nairn station than to cut and manufacture the wood ten miles up in Nairnshire, and carry it down?—One man might be much cheaper to do so; another might make a very decent profit out of it.

31,690. I have no desire to discourage the growth of timber. I am very favourable to it, but I do not think it can be grown to the amount of profit that your paper shows. Now, I would like to ask you another question. Are you acquainted with Sutherlandshire?—Not much.

31,691. Do you know whether the Duke of Sutherland's plantations in the glens on his estates have been a success?—I do not know.

31,692. Well, I would recommend you to look into that before you can say that wood can be grown successfully in this country.—I would like to know how they were managed.

31,693. I have no doubt they were carefully planted; the Duke of Sutherland has good men.—[The Chairman.—The general belief is that they are well managed.]

31,694. I think you would acknowledge that they manage matters well, even if they do not succeed?—I do not wish to throw any doubt on the management, but before I would credit the statement that they were not a paying concern, I should like to know how they have been managed from the beginning. Dukes may make a very lavish expenditure.

31,695. My question is whether the woods planted by the Duke of Sutherland on the glens of Kildonan Strath and away up on the heights of Loch Shin have been successful?—I have not seen them.

31,696. They are not grown successfully, and I think there are many other parts of the country in which wood cannot be successfully grown?—There certainly are large tracts of land in this country that it would be unwise to plant; but what I referred to is waste land that is well adapted for growing timber. I am far from saying that timber should be planted indiscriminately all over the country.

31,697. Then, you do not mean that, even in the average ground which you would recommend to be planted, you would expect at the end of sixty-one years to get a revenue of £77 an acre from it?—Certainly not.

31,698. What would you estimate the average revenue at?—If it yielded 3s. an acre of clear rental, it would be much better than at present.

31,699. That is one way of answering the question, but would you not think that £25 an acre would be a big price for an average acre of wood, even in Rossshire?—I do not think so, I think it would be a very small price. I take it that your question refers to the entire income from the wood during the whole course of its existence?

31,700. No, my question is not that, but what is the average value per acre of a clean cut of mature wood in the county of Ross?—A great many woods, when cut as mature, do not carry a crop, or what ought to be a crop. There are many cases of woods in a landlord's hands at the present day where the landlord requires money, and therefore cuts down the wood. The result is that the woods are thinned to such an extent that when the clean cut comes to be taken out there is not probably a third of a crop upon the ground. In that case I should say that £25 an acre was a fair average price.

31,701. I may say this, that in all my experience,—and I have had to deal with the sale of a good many woods,—I am sure the average price obtained for the final cut would be considerably under £25 per acre.—An average acre of mature wood bearing a full crop should contain 4000 cubic feet of timber, and this number of feet at £25 would be a very low price. There are many cases where, as I have said, woods have been overthinned, and in some of these I would consider £12 to £15 a big price for them.

31,702. Well, that is coming nearer it now, but that is a big difference from £77?—But you must bear in mind what came out of them before.

31,702A. It resolves itself into this, that you can plant a certain extent of this country profitably?—A large extent.

31,703. But that there is a very considerable extent of the crofting area with which this Commission has to deal which is not quite so suitable,—or perhaps you are not so well acquainted with it. Are you acquainted with the land to the north of this,—Sutherland and Caithness?—No, I do not know much about Sutherland and Caithness. I believe that Caithness nearly, as a whole, is unfit for the cultivation of timber. I judge that from what I have seen of it, and I do not think it is at all adapted for timber-growing.

31,704. Are you acquainted with Argyllshire?—I know the district about Poltalloch and Loch Awe.

31,705. Wood is not grown there to a large extent?—There are very good woods about Poltalloch, Mr Malcolm's estate.

31 706. In certain parts of the counties of Argyll, Ross, and Inverness, wood is grown successfully?—Yes.

31,707. But in the counties of Sutherland only moderately?—So far as I can judge from the nearer portions of Sutherlandshire there is a considerable area of ground there well adapted for timber-growing.

31,708. On the eastern seaboard?—Not quite.

31,709. Where then?—Not quite on the seaboard, but on these rocky hills that you see from Altnabreac station.

31,710. Did you ever see wood at Altnabreac?—I did not see wood, but I saw land that would grow wood.

31,711. Did you see an attempt to grow wood at Altnabreac?—Yes.

31,712. Which was an utter failure?—I think the Railway Company have done a little in the way of planting there.

31,713. Did you see anything like a promising growth of trees there alongside the railway?—I have seen trees promising to grow well on the railway banks there.

31,714. It is more than I have seen, and I have been there oftener than you. Then, again, in Caithness, they cannot grow wood, so that it is only a limited area of the crofting counties that your statement applies to?—I think my statement applies to a very considerable area of the crofting counties.

31,715. Well, kindly state them?—Argyllshire,

* Since then I have learned that the witness John Laing offered more than my valuation for the lot when for sale, and did not get it; and this after the proprietor had cut a number of trees for estate purposes.

Tain.

Donald Robertson.

Inverness-shire, Ross-shire, and part of Sutherlandshire.

31,716. To a certain extent I agree with you, but I cannot admit that there is a large portion of Sutherlandshire of that description.

31,717. The Chairman.—Is it the fact that during the last half century, say, landlords in the Highland counties have cut down a great deal more wood than they have grown?—I believe that that is true; they have cut far more than they have planted.

31,718. As wood has been cut down, proper steps have not been taken to plant new timber to take the place of the wood cut down?—I believe that is so.

31,719. So that a wise policy in the matter of wood growing has not been pursued by the landlords in the past?—In many cases, no. Some landlords have planted, of course.

31,720. Can you mention any large landowner who has, during the last fifty years, planted wood as he has cut it down, so as to keep up the area under timber?—I will take those that I am personally acquainted with. The Duke of Athole has planted very considerable areas, and he has also cut large areas of timber; and the money realised from the Athole woods is considerable, —it is equally good with what I have realised from the woods of Novar.

31,721. What area of timber have you under your management?—Somewhat over 4000 acres.

31,722. And how many different kinds of trees are grown there?—I am not quite sure as to the number.

31,723. I mean the different species?—I cannot say exactly.

31,724. What are the principal species of timber grown?—The principal is Scots firs, these are the most numerous; then there are larch, beech, oak, elm, ash, birch, alder, and poplar.

31,725. Now, when you happen to sell wood, for what purpose is it mainly used?—We have a sawmill steadily manufacturing, and we sell joist battens of all sizes and sarking for roofing purposes. We also cut railway sleepers of all sizes, and pit sleepers, from the refuse of our timber. Then we make railway fencing posts, and farm posts; and we contemplate creosoting our Scots fir into fencing posts.

31,726. These are the main purposes for which the wood is sold?—Yes. Then as to our hardwood, with the exception of the small oak, which we manufacture into cart-wheel spokes, and the elm, which we cut into nave, and the ash into planks for wheels, the better class of hard woods is sent away to the southern markets, — sometimes to Inverness, sometimes to Sunderland, sometimes to Dundee or Glasgow.

31,727. And when you speak of increasing your area under timber, is it mainly with the view of selling for such purposes as these?—If the area of timber were increased, I have no doubt that the timber that is imported for ordinary building purposes could be got at home.

31,728. You mean for the internal construction of dwelling-houses?—The internal construction of dwelling-houses and farm buildings.

31,729. You mentioned that it had been estimated that there were five million acres available for planting?—I did.

31,730. Is that your own estimate?—No, it is not.

31,731. Whose estimate is it?—Mr Mackenzie's, Mortonhall, near Edinburgh.

31,732. Do you know upon what materials that estimate is based?—On the Ordnance Survey, after making due allowance for land that is above the altitude fit for planting, and for bog lands.

31,733. It is not based upon any knowledge of the ground?—Well, I understand that Mr Mackenzie is very well acquainted with the ground throughout Inverness-shire and Ross-shire, and part of Sutherlandshire; he has worked timber in many parts of Inverness-shire and Ross-shire; he has worked at cutting it up and sawing it.

31,734. But his estimate is not based on any knowledge of Sutherlandshire, or Argyllshire, or Orkney and Shetland?—Oh, he does not take that in.

31,735. You have no personal knowledge, as I gather, which would enable you to estimate the area that could be planted?—Not of the whole counties.

31,736. You are taking your figures from that authority?—I have taken these areas from him.

31,736A. From the gentleman in the south?—Yes.

31,737. I gathered from your paper that in your opinion the area under sheep and deer is excessive?—I did not say so, my lord.

31,738. No, I do not say you said so, but may I gather that that is your opinion?—It is.

31,739. And you would reduce that area, if it could be done in a proper way, by planting a considerable part of it?—Certainly.

31,740. Are you of opinion that a large portion of the lands at a lower altitude, presently under sheep, might be successfully planted with timber?—In the deer forests that I am acquainted with there are considerable tracts that would grow timber very successfully

31,741. And in your opinion, I suppose, I may say would be better employed in growing timber than in giving room for deer?—It would be much more beneficial to the labouring classes of our country.

31,742. And more profitable?—More profitable, I have no doubt.

31,743. Now, which are the deer forests you refer to?—Wyvis and Gildermoie,—those I am personally acquainted with.

31,744. What extent of land in Wyvis do you think might be successfully planted with timber?—I have carefully gone over the ground in making up my estimate of 25,000 acres for the two parishes. These two deer forests are within the parishes I named.

31,745. Is the greater extent of the 25,000 acres within these deer forests?—No, I should say only the half of it, so far as my recollection goes.

31,746. Can you mention any other forests besides Wyvis and Gildermorie?—The deer forest in Blair Athole; very extensive tracts there would be very good for planting.

31,747. And you think, as a forester, that they would be better if devoted to timber than to deer?—Certainly.

31,748. Where timber is grown, deer could not be allowed to roam?—Certainly not, for some years, until the timber was high enough to be out of their reach.

31,749. They would be destructive to the young growth?—Yes, they feed upon young trees during a storm, and eat them down.

31,750. Would you say that they are even more destructive to young trees than sheep?—Very much more.

31,751. Are you of opinion that this question of planting land with timber could only be successfully taken up by the Government?—I think it is essentially a Government question.

31,752. Don't you think that since landlords have cut down so many trees they might set to work to plant the areas again with timber themselves?—They certainly ought to, but it requires a landlord with something more than a life interest in the property to do so at the present day, seeing the unsettled state of the land question. There is no inducement to landlords to plant at the present time.

31,753. Then landlords planting could not expect to compete with foreign timber, as trade is at present carried on, suppose they had the wood ready?—They certainly could compete with foreign timber.

31,754. You think they could?—We at Novar have got to compete with the foreign article, and unless we undersold the foreign article we could not sell.

31,755. But you have land, have not you, exceptionally favourable for the growth of timber?—I do not consider it so. The subject has been favourably planted, and well attended to and cared for.

31,756. Don't you think the woods under your charge, and the land on which they grow, are much more favourable for the success of timber growing than the land in Caithness and Sutherlandshire?—Certainly Caithness.

31,757. And large parts of Sutherland?—Probably large parts of Sutherlandshire.

31,758. You mentioned Sir Kenneth Mackenzie's estate of Gairloch. On what part of that estate do you say timber is successfully grown?—I forget the name of the place, but a section of it was sold to Messrs Cooper, Glasgow, lately, which fetched a very good price I think.

31,759. Is that the only transaction you are going upon?—Oh no, I saw part of it, but I do not recollect the name of the district.

31,760. Have you been through that district?—I was once through it.

31,761. You have no practical acquaintance with it?—No.

31,762. You say the question is essentially a Government question. How would you propose to deal with the matter, or in what way would you suggest to the Government that it should deal with the matter?—I think the best way for Government to deal with the matter would be to take up the land suitable for timber growing, and have it planted themselves under Government control.

31,763. Become owners of the land and grow the timber themselves?—Either that, or give the landlord the chance.

31,764. In what way?—By saying 'Here is a subject fit for timber growing, you must either improve it or put it under timber within a certain time. Failing your doing so, Government steps in and does it for you.'

31,765. Forfeits the land, do you mean?—Gives a fair value for the subject.

31,766. And if the landlord proceeds to plant, do you mean that he is to plant with Government aid?—I think he ought to get Government aid at reasonable interest.

31,767. Then, if you gave Government aid to landlords to grow timber, would you not be prepared also to give Government aid to crofters if they undertook to grow timber?—Certainly.

31,768. On equally favourable terms?—Oh, yes, by all means. My impression is that if the whole of the land available for planting in the north of Scotland is handed over to crofters the working classes must shift; there is no work for them, and the shopkeepers will follow them.

31,769. Mr Gordon.—I have one other question. With reference to your plan for the proprietors taking up the matter of planting, are you aware to what extent the ground of one of the late Earls of Seafield was planted at Strathspey?—I have read of it, but I do not know it personally.

31,770. You do not know Strathspey personally?—I know part of it.

31,771. Well, I believe the extent of ground that was planted there within the last thirty or forty years, as stated to Lord Napier's Commission, was 60,000 acres.—I thought the time was rather more,—50 years, I believe.

31,772. It is getting on to ten years since Lord Napier's Commission was round, and, if I recollect aright, it was stated to be forty years at that time. That, then, is a pretty large area that is being replanted, though you spoke of proprietors as not replanting?—I made exceptions.

31,773. But even up above the Seafield estates, there has been a large extent of ground replanted by Rothiemurchus and other proprietors?—Yes, but there are many landlords who have cut and who have not planted. I admitted there were some landlords who cut and planted, and I think I mentioned two instances.

31,774. Then, upon the Lovat estates again, there has been a large amount of timber cut down, but there has been quite as much, if not more, planted?—On the Lovat estates during my recollection there has not been very much cut down until within recent years.

31,775. But there has been a large extent planted within the last forty years?—Yes, I can see that.

31,776. These are two of the largest estates in the north of Scotland, on each of which planting has been extensively carried on?—Yes. [The Chairman.—Speaking generally, would you say that there has been far more cutting down of trees without corresponding planting, than planting trees to replace those cut down?—That is certainly the case.]

31,777. What is the state of matters on the Novar estate? Are you planting as much as you are cutting?—We are planting more. We have during the last eleven years planted over 2000 acres.

31,778. Taking the country between Novar and the upper reaches of the Beauly, is there not what you would call a fair proportion of young wood upon the ground?—Near the seaboard or near the railway there is.

31,779. That is, within marketable distance of the railway or the sea?—I do not at all confine myself to a few miles as a marketable distance: I hold that if you have a sufficient body of timber it will pay a timber merchant, or the owner of the timber, to lay down the means of transit.

31,780. You have mentioned that once or twice, and I would like to get from you what you consider a means of transit; is it a railway?—A railway or the chance of a canal.

31,781. The people in the internal parts of the country would be very much indebted to you if you did lay down a railway; but I am afraid the extent of wood would have to be much beyond what it is in our day before you could expect a man to lay down a railway?—Timber merchants have gone to considerable expense in making roads and making rails to haul their timber upon, and there is nothing to prevent them from laying a light railway a considerable distance inland, if they had a body of timber that would repay them for such outlay.

31,782. But you would require a considerable extent of wood?—Certainly.

31,782A. You mentioned 10,000 acres, I think?—Well, if you had probably the half of that, it might do.

31,783. The Chairman.—Is not this the case that in answering my questions you have been dealing with the general area under consideration, while in answering Mr Gordon you have been dealing with specific areas he put before you?—I do not quite follow you.

31,784. [Question repeated].—That is so.

31,785. Mr Sutherland.—I would like to ask you one question with regard to the success or otherwise of tree planting in Sutherlandshire. You do not profess to know that part very well, do you?—I do not.

31,786. But are you aware that a great deal of the parish of Dornoch and the parish of Creich, the southern parish, has been very considerably planted?—Yes, there is a considerable extent of timber there.

31,787. Valuable timber?—What I saw of it is pretty valuable.

31,788. Do you know that we had it in evidence that a certain parish could not very well apply to this Commission because it had no land available, all the land being taken up with timber; were you aware of that?—I was not.

31,789. Would not that imply that the greater part of that parish was taken up by plantations?—It would, certainly, if that evidence was read.

31,790. And with reference to plantations in Kildonan Strath, are you aware that they were merely fringes planted along the railway by the Railway Coy., and not by the Duke of Sutherland?—I understood they were fringes planted along the railway for protection from snow.

31,791. And that in a great many cases they were burnt by sparks from the passing engines?—Just so. But the specimens that I saw showed clearly that the land was fit for growing timber.

31,792. Provided, no doubt, that they were planted in sufficient areas?—Just so.

31,793. Are you aware that on the most exposed parts of Sutherlandshire, viz., on the coast of the Pentland Firth, we have examples of trees growing wherever they are planted? You have heard, perhaps, that there is a considerable number of trees at Tongue, on the north coast?—I believe I have.

31,794. And also at Lochinver on the west coast?—I have not heard of that.

31,795. But from such knowledge as you possess you would not be prepared to admit that Sutherland is not a favourable subject for planting?—I would not; from

Tain.

Donald Robertson.

what I have seen of Sutherland I would consider it a good subject for tree planting.

31,796. Would you be surprised to know that the Duke of Sutherland's foresters hold opinions very like yours with regard to the duty of planting?—I would not be a bit surprised.

31,797. Mr George Malcolm, Secretary, Highland Property Defence Association.—Do you consider that larch timber is, on the whole, most valuable for estate purposes?—For general estate purposes I do not think larch is the most valuable; I would consider Scots fir and spruce equally valuable for ordinary building purposes.

31,798. I think you stated that the larch disease which so extensively prevails is, in your opinion, due to the use of home-grown seed instead of imported seed?—I gave my opinion regarding that, based, as I stated, upon the second generation of larch timber being affected with rot or roy, as it is known locally, whereas the older timber throughout Scotland that I have seen cut—trees of from 80 to 120 years old—invariably falls sound.

31,799. Then, in this extensive scheme of plantation which you have sketched, would you propose to go abroad for the seed and use no home-grown seed at all?—I would not quite go that length. What I try to do at present is to plant half from home-grown larch, and half from foreign seed.

31,800. But you consider it inadvisable to use too much home-grown seed, even if you can get it from native quarters?—I have only given you my opinion, derived from my own observation; I consider that it is risky to use too much home-grown larch.

31,801. So that larch plantations, if these were gone into, would not really be reproductive? the seed obtained from them would not be used extensively again for replanting?—I would not go to the length of saying that; my opinion may be entirely wrong.

31,802. What are the usual seasons for planting larch and Scots fir? would it be October in autumn, and March and April in spring?—You begin to plant as soon as your plants are ripe. There is a danger, if your plants have not properly ripened their season's growth, of the tops dying down.

31,803. But, as a matter of fact, these are the most usual seasons for planting?—In October, November and December, whenever you can have open weather throughout the winter, you could plant on to the months of March and April. I have planted in the first ten days of May, and very successfully too.

31,804. These would be the times of the year when you would require to engage extra labour to carry on your operations?—These would be the months.

31,805. And are not these precisely the times when the crofters would be most engaged with their agricultural operations,—the harvest time and the seed time?—Of course, the month of October in many cases would be harvest time; but in November, December, January and February I do not see that the crofters would do very much on their crofts.

31,806. I am talking, you know, of the times when planting is most extensively gone into, which you have stated to be October and November, and March and April. Are not these the very times when crofters are mostly concerned with their crofts?—I do not find it so. I have no difficulty in getting a good many crofters' sons to come to work at planting during the time that we are planting.

31,807. Then you have stated that large extents of certain deer forests might be profitably planted, and used to better advantage in that way than they are at present. Have you considered what the effect of doing that would be upon the remainder of the deer forest? would that be an advantage to the deer forest as it remained, or would it be a disadvantage?—In many cases it would be a disadvantage for a considerable number of years, but, eventually, when you allowed the deer in, it would be a decided advantage, I think, to the deer forest.

31,808. You appear to be a very intelligent and well-informed wood forester, but you have never had anything specially to do with deer forests, I think?—No, except that I have stalked a deer occasionally.

31,809. But you would not be inclined to put your opinion on a question of that kind against the opinion of a professional deer-forester?—Not so far as the working of a deer forest was concerned; but when it came to be a question of whether the land was to be of more advantage to the community under timber or under deer, I should certainly claim to be as good an authority.

Tain.

Donald Robertson

31,810. I am not objecting to the planting of the land as such; my question had reference to what the effect would be on the deer forest for many years afterwards, at any rate?—It would no doubt cut away a considerable portion of the grazing of a deer forest.

31,811. It would take away from the wintering of the deer?—A considerable portion. There is a great deal of the wintering of deer that is rather boggy land, and where rushes grow, which, in many cases, would not be suitable for timber growing.

JOHN LAING, Timber Merchant, Nairn (50)—examined.

John Lain

31,812. The Chairman.—You have come here, I understand, to give evidence as to growing timber?—No, to give evidence as to the sums paid for working timber.

31,813. Have you a statement in writing?—Yes.

31,814. Read it, please.—

Note showing expense of working a Lot of Wood at Cairnfield, Banffshire.

Number of trees in lot,			4700
Price paid for the wood,				£590	0	0
Expense of erecting sawmill,	£14	7	7
Engineman's wages,	24	15	0
Woodcutter's wages,	45	19	7
Sundry small accounts,	16	5	0
Railway carriage,	223	15	0
Freight of a ship, and shore dues,	49	0	0

Time taken to do the work, 8 months
Extent of the clean cut, about 26 acres.

31,815. Mr Forsyth.—What kind of wood was this?—Mostly Scots fir.

31,816. Was there much larch in it?—Not very much; a few trees.

31,817. Do you give the price of £590 for it as it stood on the ground?—Yes.

31,818. Was the carriage unusually difficult or very long?—No, it was very easy.

31,819. Did you work it on the place with a sawmill?—Yes.

31,820. How far had you to take it to your carriage?—About two miles to the railway station.

31,821. Can you give me any idea of the acreage on which it grew? How many acres did it cover?—About 26 acres.

31,822. Then you found you were giving fair value, on the whole, for standing wood?—It was bought by competition; the proprietor took offers for it.

31,823. I do not wish to ask you absolutely as to your profit, but you did not find that a losing bargain, did you?—No, not quite.

31,824. It may be assumed that it was a fair value for the wood,—a fair competition value?—Yes, it was sold by competition.

31,825. In what shape did you manufacture the Scots fir: what was it for?—Herring barrel staves, and wood for boxes, and what was fit for railway sleepers went into railway sleepers.

31,826. Do you buy much Scots fir for railway sleepers?—Yes, a considerable quantity.

31,827. Do you ever work up Scots fir for building purposes?—No, very seldom, it is never asked for.

31,828. Is there any demand for it if it could be used at a price slightly below that of foreign timber,—I mean the best Scots fir?—Oh, there would be a demand for it, I believe, locally.

31,829. But not a general demand?—No, there is no great demand for it.

31,830. Is it supposed to be less durable than foreign wood?—No, I don't think it is less durable, but it cannot be got at the very minute it is wanted.

31,831. It is not in stock, and it is not seasoned?—That is the real reason.

31,832. Mr Gordon.—Would this wood of 26 acres be a fair average class of wood?—No, it was rather under the average.

31,833. What would be the cubical contents of the trees, on an average?—Perhaps something like 7 feet.

31,834. And what would you consider a fair average of the contents of Scots firwood?—Do you mean the growing wood, or a wood just to be cut down?

31,835. You have bought a good deal of Scotch wood in your time?—Yes.

31,836. What is the average size of the wood in the trees you have been in the habit of buying?—When it is a clean cut, usually from 12 to 15 feet.

31,837. And the price you generally give is 4d. to 6d., according to the quality of the wood sold?—A good deal depends on where it is growing, apart from the quality.

31,838. Suppose you were within two miles of a railway station?—About 4d. a foot.

31,839. So that, taking the tree at 15 cubic feet, would give 5s. for the tree?—Yes.

31,840. And taking it at 12 feet would give 4s.?—Yes.

31,841. How many trees do you generally have on an acre?—The number varies very much.

31,842. About 60, or 70, or 80?—Oh, more than that; 150. But I have seen them as thin as 60, and not any bigger. But they were just thinned out before then.

31,843. May I ask you what part of Banffshire this wood was in?—In the parish of Enzie.

31,844. And you do not find that in that part of Banffshire you get very good wood, if you go far from Fochabers, until you get to Cullen House?—There is very good wood about Cairnfield.

31,845. But few trees on it?—Few now that they are cut away.

31,846. Are you acquainted with Aberdeenshire, the Buchan district?—No, not the Buchan district.

31,847. There is pretty good timber up Deeside, and even up Donside, but my experience is that in Aberdeenshire generally there is no hard wood at all, except a few trees in the neighbourhood of mansion houses?—There is wood about Fyvie.

31,848. Some old fir?—Yes.

31,849. But not generally throughout the country,—Fyvie is not in Buchan, you know?—Possibly not, but the wood could not be there if it was not planted.

31,850. I am afraid it was not planted, because it does not grow well. You are not acquainted with this part of the country very well, are you?—Not so well acquainted as a native, but I know it fairly well.

31,851. If you were offered a fir wood in the centre of Sutherlandshire, where you had 20 miles to go to the nearest seaboard and 20 miles to the nearest Railway station, and the trees were 15 cubic feet each on an average, what would you be willing to give for the fir?—It would depend upon the turnpike road whether it was good or not.

31,852. Would the carriage of that wood not cost more than its value, if you had to carry it 20 miles?—No, it would not.

31,853. What would you get a ton carried for?—It would depend on the turnpike road. The top of Strathdon is as far away from Alford as that; it is 50 miles to Cockbridge, and Alford is 23.

31,854. From where?—From Aberdeen.

31,855. Did you buy wood at Cockbridge?—No, but there was any amount of wood taken down from that.

31,856. And carried down to Alford?—Yes.

31,857. Do you happen to know what price they get per cubic foot there, those who buy it?—No, I don't know what price they paid.

31,858. What price per ton do you generally pay, if you are carrying ten miles?—Well, you happened to mention Culmony; I have driven wood from there to Nairn at 6s. a ton.

31,859. What kind of wood,—birch or fir?—Fir.

31,860. And how many cubic feet are there in a ton?—That would depend on how dry the wood was.

31,861. Did you manufacture it?—Manufactured it on the ground.

31,862. And carried it down afterwards? That is ten miles; let us assume that if you were to drive it 20 miles it would cost 12s a ton. Now, would that not in itself be equal to a large portion of the value of the wood?—Yes, it would be a proportion.

31,863. A large proportion?—Yes, it would be a large proportion, but it would not double for double the distance.

31,864. I am afraid it would; it would take two days for each load to do the 20 miles. That would be a fair load for a horse to do in a day; and then you must keep in view that at Culmony you are going down hill to Nairn?—Yes, for part of the way.

31,865. On the whole, the road is down hill?—The last eight miles are easier than the first two.

31,866. As I said already, I have no wish to throw any discouragement upon the growing of wood, because I myself believe thoroughly in the beneficial effect of growing wood, whether used as an ornament merely to the country, or for purposes of shelter, or grown as timber; but at the same time I don't think that wood can possibly be grown to realise the profits that Mr Robertson indicated, or anything like it. And I think this Commission would scarcely be justified in accepting that without making some slight comment upon it.

31,867. Mr Sutherland.—You mentioned in reply to a question already put to you that foreign timber was preferred for house building purposes, but that was not because of the difference between the quality of the timbers, as from the fact that home-grown timber cannot be got when it is wanted?—That is so.

31,868. And does that arise from the fact that it is not possible to supply in large quantities the home timber?—It is not quite that, but it is the way in which wood is sold in small quantities, and it will not pay any firm of timber merchants to erect sawmills to dress up home-grown timber into wood suitable for flooring, sarking, roofing, or anything that kind.

31,869. Then, why do landlords sell timber only in such small lots?—Because they have not more to sell.

31,870. It is done on too small a scale?—Yes, that is the thing.

31,871. Whereas in foreign countries they can afford to cut down a great number of trees at a time, and keep it stored ready?—Yes, and the wood is floated down to great centres; and the sawmills remain there, I suppose, for half a generation without being shifted.

31,872. Without trouble or cost, except the cost of first putttng them up, and their maintenance?—Yes.

31,873. But there is nothing, is there, in the nature of the home timber itself to prevent its being used for house building purposes?—Nothing for house building, but for finishing it would not be so suitable.

31,874. But quite suitable for the main operations of house building, the joists, and flooring?—Our common larch would last out three roofs of Norwegian or Swedish white wood.

31,875. So it is superior to the foreign timber for such purposes, is it?—Larch is.

31,876. And home-grown pine, how does it do?—It would be just about equal to the other; perhaps not any better, but certainly not worse.

31,877. And the reason why foreign timber is more largely used in house-building is that home timber is not available, through the want of a sufficient quantity of it being in the market at one time?—Yes, nobody keeps it in stock.

31,878. Then, with regard to the carriage of timber, you stated, I think, that in certain cases you manufactured it upon the ground?—Yes

Tain.

John Laing.

31,879. Does not that considerably lessen the price of carriage, preliminary carriage?—Well, no one would buy it till it was manufactured.

31,880. You would have to manufacture it somewhere?—Somewhere.

31,881. So that when you talk about the carriage of the timber it is not the carriage of the logs but the carriage after it is made into battens?—Cut and dried into suitable sizes.

31,882. So that by the cutting away of superfluous portions you decrease its weight a good deal?—Yes, I employ a great deal of labour in that operation.

31,883. You heard the evidence of Mr Robertson, the previous witness?—Yes.

31,884. Do you give a general concurrence in that evidence?—I have never studied the question from his point of view, so I could not say.

31,885. But would the evidence he gives, no doubt from his point of view, account for a great deal of the difficulty of the timber trade, the point that planting was carried on only in small quantities?—Yes, of course, that accounts for it; we cannot compete with foreign wood through having to buy wood in small quantities, and always shifting about.

31,886. Are you then of opinion that the amount of timber grown in this country could be very largely increased?—Yes, I have no doubt that it could be very largely increased if it were planted.

31,887. And you are of opinion that where a fair chance has been given for timber to grow in this country it is grown; are you of that opinion?—I cannot say as to that; I never go but where the article is ready made. I don't go near the thing as forest.

31,888. But you surely must have seen them: you take a general interest in the matter?—I see them, most of them, from the railway.

31,889. Have you seen any place where the experiment was made and where it failed? Do you remember one at the present moment?—No, I cannot say that I did; I paid no attention to that.

31,890. But you know a great number of places where it has been tried and has succeeded, don't you? It has succeeded in every place where you went? You naturally do not go to wood until it has succeeded?—No, I never go near them; I cannot speak on that point.

31,891. Tree planting has, at all events, succeeded in every place where you have carried on your operations?—It is bound to be so, because I could not cut unless they grew.

31,892. The Chairman.—Were your dealings as a timber merchant more largely in foreign wood or in home-grown wood?—Entirely confined to home-grown wood.

31,893. Then, are the purposes for which the home-grown wood is sawn the commoner purposes, or is it also used for the finer purposes?—The very commonest purposes.

31,894. Such purposes as you have mentioned already, staves and boxes and sleepers?—Yes, that is the principal outlet.

31,895. Can you say that you sell any considerable quantity of Scotch-grown wood for the finer purposes for which foreign wood is mainly used?—Never sell any for the finer purposes.

John Campbell.

JOHN CAMPBELL, Wood Merchant, Inverness, (38)—examined.

31,896. The Chairman.—I see you have a statement in your hand?—Yes.

31,897. Just read it?—The amount of labour connected with the manufacture and transit of timber depends a good deal on the situation of the plantations. In very remote places far from rail and water transit it might take all the timber was worth to defray the working expenses. But when the timber is from two to four miles from a harbour or railway station, on fairly good ground for haulage, the expenses for working Scots fir and spruce would be something like the following:—

Tain.

John Campbell.

	£	s.	d.
Throwing and dressing,		2	0	per 100 cub. ft.
Carting into sawmill,		5	0	„ „
Sawing the same, including hire of machinery,		10	0	„ „
Cartage to harbour or rail,		4	6	„ „
Railway and shipping,	1	5	0	„ „
	£2	6	6

This is at 3000 to 5000 cubic feet per acre.

In the case of hard wood the labour bill would generally be about treble the amount indicated above; and in some cases, such as bobbin wood ornaments and toys, a much higher rate, probably six times the cost for the same baulk in fir, spruce, and larch.

During last summer I cut and peeled a little over 4000 cubic feet of oak; for this labour I paid the following sums:—

Cutting and peeling and curing bark,	£120
Dressing trees,	7
Haulage of timber to loading places,	50
Loading,	6
Freight, including firewood,	70
Cross-cutting firewood,	12
	£265
The first cost of the wood was,	£140

I am sending this timber away round, consequently there is no charge for manufacturing, as this is done by the purchaser. There were 300 trees in the lot, so they could stand on about four acres of ground. Last year I bought 9500 fir prop poles, the thinnings of a young plantation in this district, for which I paid the following sums in labour:—

Cutting and dressing,	£27	0	0
Peeling and casing,	31	0	0
Dragging in lots in the wood,	30	0	0
Cartage to station,	81	5	0
Loading at station,	20	0	0
	£189	5	0
First cost of wood,	£27	10	0

These thinnings were cut off about 50 acres of wood, and a good crop left on the ground. The wood was about 35 years old.

In some places there is a large trade done by utilising the refuse from hard wood in making acetic acid, charcoal, and several other chemicals, and a great deal of labour is required in the manufacture of these.

31,898. Are your dealings confined to Scotch wood?—Yes, entirely.

31,899. And for what purpose do you sell wood?—For railway sleepers, and colliery wood, and for boat wood and bobbin wood.

31,900. And for staves, perhaps?—And staves.

31,901. And plain deal boxes?—Yes.

31,902. You have no dealings in foreign wood?—None whatever.

31,903. Did you hear the evidence given by the previous witness, Mr Laing?—Yes.

31,904. And do you concur generally in his evidence?—Yes.

Charles R. Manners.

31,905. The Chairman.—You are factor for Lord Wimborne?—I am.

31,906. For how long have you been factor?—Since

* See pages 480–481, Questions 20,582–20,587.

the date when he purchased the estate of Achnashellach in 1871.

31,907. Are you factor on any other estate?—For Lord Lovelace, on the Bendamph estate.

31,908. How long have you been factor on that estate?—Since his purchase: I am also factor for Mr Pirie of Leckmeln in Lochbroom, and now for Mr Dalgleish of Coulin, which was formerly part of the Achnashellach estate.

31,909. There was a statement prepared by you and submitted to us by Mr Duncan Shaw of Inverness, while we were in the Lochcarron district?—Yes.

31,910. I think that statement was read at the time. Is it the same statement which you now produce?—Yes.

31,911. I don't know that we need trouble you to read it again: we could not take the statement at the Lochcarron sitting as evidence without having you present in order to answer any questions which might be put, but we shall hold the statement as read.

The following is the Statement referred to:—

Achnashellach Estate.

Statement as to the deer forest, &c., of Achnashellach, Coulin, Glencarron, and Glen Uaig, in the parishes of Lochcarron and Contin, and county of Ross, as possessed by Lord Wimborne.

This estate was purchased in four separate lots, and at different dates, viz.:—

Achnashellach in	1871,	extent about	18,911 acres.
Coulin	,, 1872,	,,	14,606 ,,
Glencarron	,, 1874,	,,	8,523 ,,
Glen Uaig	,, 1875,	,,	7,538 ,,
		Total about	49,578 ,,

From a survey of Achnashellach, made in 1868, there appears to have been a total of about 129 acres of arable, a considerable portion being scheduled as then out of cultivation. Of this arable, 43½ acres are on the crofter's holding at Coulags, and 33¾ acres on the crofter's holding at Balnacra, leaving a balance of 51¾ acres as within the area of the forest. This is now used as follows:—

Garden and grounds,	about	4½ acres.
Hay park,	,,	24 .
Keeper's park at Craig,	,,	6½ .
Thrown into open pasture,	,,	16¾ .
Total,		51¾ .

The great bulk of the land thrown into open pasture, and a portion of the hay park, in fact the greater part of the low-lying grounds between the county road and the river, is very subject to flood, rendering it quite unsafe for cultivation. The sub-soil is open gravel through which the river water freely percolates, giving a cold and wet root bed. The climate is naturally wet; the glen is narrow, and confined on the north and south by high hills, and altogether the land is not fit or capable of being cultivated to advantage.

On the Coulin section of the estate there appears to have been some 22 acres at one time under plough. About 3 acres of this is now cultivated by the keeper and gardener, and the remainder is enclosed as a hay park for the joint use of the proprietor and his estate servants, and is indispensable for the keep of their ponies and cattle.

On the Glencarron section there does not appear to have been any arable, except what is within the Loan Park, extending to about 6 acres. It is at an elevation of about 525 feet above sea-level, and is used by, and necessary for, the stalker at Glencarron.

On the Glen Uaig or Gleann-Fhiodhaig section, which is in the parish of Contin, there does not appear to have been any land cultivated as arable, nor indeed is there any suitable for that purpose.

From the foregoing statement it will be seen that out of an area of about 47,500 acres (excluding the lands held by the Balnacra and Coulags crofters), only some 80 acres appear to have been cultivated, and of this about 63 acres are at present fenced and either cultivated or preserved as hay parks, being necessary for the maintenance of the cattle and ponies belonging to the proprietor or his servants.

The area under deer forest and plantations, &c., may be divided into zones of elevation as under:—

Below 500 feet elevation, about	2,490 acres.
Between 500 feet and 800 feet, about	5,740 ,,
Between 800 feet and 1000 feet, about	5,810 ,,
Above 1000 feet, about	33,420 ,,

It will thus be seen that the percentage of ground at a moderately low elevation is very small, and I believe it to be absolutely essential to the forest for the wintering of deer, as well as for the grazing of cattle and ponies belonging to the proprietor or sporting tenant and the estate servants.

If the deer were confined to the high grounds alone they would be starved in the winter, and many of them would die. The forest would be in detached pieces, and quite ruined; so that the large percentage of the land, that above the 1000 feet level, would be practically useless and valueless.

Under the present system as a deer forest, regular employment is given to the following estate servants:—

	Married.	Single.
Gardeners,	2	3
Gamekeepers,	5	2
Housemaids,	—	2

In addition to the above, almost constant employment is given to a carpenter.

A couple of men extra are generally employed in the gardens for from six to eight months per annum; and six to eight gillies are also employed, generally with their ponies, for about ten weeks in the autumn.

Frequent labour is also employed during every year in various estate works, and very considerable sums are thus spent annually in repairs and general upkeep, as well as in new works.

I cannot give any data as to the actual amounts expended previous to the purchases by Lord Wimborne; but in the erection of Achnashellach, Coulin, and Glencarron, houses and offices, with roads, plantations, &c., it must have been very considerable, and at a low estimate cannot have been less than some £30,000 or £35,000. Since the purchase of Achnashellach by Lord Wimborne in 1872, to the end of 1892 inclusive, a period of twenty-one years, there has been spent, under the head of Tradesmen's Accounts, a sum of £15,723, and under the head of Labour £16,408, giving an average annual outlay as follows:—

Tradesmen, such as builders, carpenters, plumbers, nurserymen, &c., but exclusive of butchers, grocers, and such like,	£748
Labour wages, including road and such contract, but excluding estate servants,	£781

It might be said that now that all the houses, &c., are complete, and the roads and other improvements finished, the outlays have ceased, and the forest does no more good in circulating money through the district. Such, however, is not the case, and I now give the average annual expenditure by the proprietor for the last seven years, during which time the forest has been let; and which expenditure is for repairs and general upkeep of the estate.

Tradesmen's accounts as before,	£266
Labour wages, including the upkeep of roads and paths,	327
Wages of gamekeepers and gardeners,	418
Poor and school rates,	358
County rates,	141
Income tax,	149
Giving an annual average expenditure under ordinary circumstances of	£1659

Tain.

Charles R. Manners.

This is exclusive of wages paid by the sporting tenant for gillies, hire of ponies, coals, oats, hay, and other items necessary for the maintenance of their establishments; and I am assured that during the occupancy of Mr Bass his bills under this head may be put at from £600 to £800 a year, all paid to local tradesmen. During the years the forest was in the proprietor's hands, the average wage paid for gillies was £61, and I do not think it would be any less, and possibly more, during the time it was let.

The amount paid, as above, for labour, keepers' and gardeners' wages, poor and school rates, amounting to upwards of £1100 per annum, may be said to be almost entirely expended in the district; whilst the tradesmen's accounts and the county rates, amounting to £407 per annum, are almost entirely spent in and north of Inverness.

I venture to say that under no system of crofting would any such sums as above be annually paid in wages or tradesmen's accounts, and the expenditure of these moneys in the district must be of great benefit to the crofters and others in the district. Exclusive of large sums invested in the purchase of these properties as a sporting estate, I have shown that no less a sum than from £60,000 to £65,000 has been spent in building houses, road-making, and other works; by far the greater portion of which would certainly never have been expended had it not been for sport.

I may perhaps here mention that a sum of £1617 has been expended by Lord Wimborne in building new cottages, offices, and fencing, for the crofters at Balnacra and Coulags, for which no interest is charged, and that their present gross rental amounts to £60 per annum.

The total rental of the parish of Lochcarron, per Valuation Roll for year 1891–1892, was £7301, 12s. 4d., and of this the portion due to sport was £4118. Of this sum the estates of Achnashellach, &c., paid rates upon a rental of £2979, excluding the crofters' rents, or upwards of one-third of the whole parish assessment; and it must be obvious that the destruction of this forest, or anything done materially to injure it, would have the effect of greatly raising the rates in the parish, as well as of reducing the amount of money expended in labour and other wages, tradesmen's accounts, &c.

The crofters of Balnacra and Coulags hold about 2,000 acres between them, and of this some 77 acres are scheduled in the survey of 1868 as arable or arable out of cultivation. The total gross rental paid by the two places is now £60 per annum, being at the rate of about 7d. per acre over head. At the same rate the whole estate, as in the hands of the proprietor, would give a rental of £1385, as against £3579 as a forest. This is, however, based upon too high an estimate of the average and proportionate value per acre. The proportion of arable to pasture in the case of the Balnacra and Coulags holdings is about 77 in 2000; whilst in the case of the forest it is about 80 in 47,500.

On the two holdings of Balnacra and Coulags there are at least 60 acres now under plough, and averaging this at least 10s. per acre would reduce the rent of the pasture to about 3½d. per acre.

If then we take the whole portion of the forest, &c., which is below the 1000 feet elevation (14,040 acres), and taking into consideration the small proportion of arable to pasture within this area, and, on the other hand, allowing for the superior quality of portions of the pasture, we estimate the average value at 6d. per acre overhead, we get a gross rental for this land of £351. The lands above 1000 feet elevation would be practically valueless as deer forest, or for any other purpose, if deprived of the lower grounds for feeding and wintering, but I will assume that for the shooting-lodges, fishings, and shooting generally over the whole estate, a nett rental could be got of, say, £900 a year. We should then have a total assessable rental of £1251, as against £3579 as let under deer forest for the past seven years.

In the above estimate I have made no allowance for interest on cost of buildings, fencing, &c., which would be necessary if converted into crofter holdings, and which would amount to a very considerable deduction from the gross rental, if provided by the proprietor.

Tain.

Charles R. Manners.

In the foregoing statement I have treated Coulin as being a part of the same estate, and such it has been since the date of purchase by Lord Wimborne until the term of Whitsunday, 1893.

It has now been sold to Mr Wm. Ogilvie Dalgleish, who commenced extensive improvements even before getting full possession. These improvements consist chiefly in new cottages for estate servants, additions and alterations to the house and offices, draining, fencing, and planting, road-making, &c., and will before completion involve an outlay of several thousands of pounds, a large portion of which will be spent in labour wages, and on builders' and other tradesmen's accounts. Up to the present time some £5100 has been paid on these works, and of this about £1448 has been expended on draining, planting, and other works employing entirely unskilled labour.

(Signed) C. R. Manners,
Factor for Estates.

31,912. I understand you have another statement to submit?—I have another short statement with reference to the Bendamph estate, if your lordship will allow me to read it.

31,913. We have not been in the district at all, and we do not propose to hold sittings there just at present; if we took that statement now it would have to be subject to your having to come before us there if we so desire.—I am prepared with it now, because that estate happens to lie between Achnashellach and Coulin and the Shieldaig forest of Mr Murray with which you have already dealt. It lies in between, and I thought, possibly, this might be a favourable opportunity of grouping the whole together: but, of course, if you decide otherwise, I have no objection.

31,914. Mr Sutherland.—You will readily appreciate the convenience of our having an opportunity of asking any questions of you after seeing the ground?—It is all the same to me, and I shall be glad to attend at any future time.

31,915. The Chairman.—If it is quite convenient to you, we would rather take that statement when we are dealing with the Bendamph estate?—Very good.

Alexander Ross.

Alexander Ross, Ochto Falls, Strathoykel (49)—examined.

31,916. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter under the Act?—Not under the Act.

31,917. Do you hold under lease?—Yes.

31,918. For a term of years?—For one year only, from year to year: I am a yearly tenant.

31,919. You are a yearly tenant, but not under the Act?—Not under the Act.

31,920. Did you settle with your landlord for your rent?—Yes, but I was not under the Act. I only came there four years ago, and did not get the privileges of the Act.

31,921. You were not a crofter at the passing of the Act?—No.

31,922. Have you a written statement?—Yes.

31,923. Kindly read it.—Estate of Balnagown. Proprietor, Sir Charles W. A. F. Ross, Bart. Invercassley sheep farm, parish of Creich, on the above-mentioned estate, consists of very good arable and pasture, from the Cassley along the Sutherland side of the Oykell river until we reach Kinlochailsh, viz., Invercassley, Tutim, Turnaig, Caplich, Gallachy, Slugach, and Kinlochailsh, with very wide and valuable moorland pasture stretching onward for miles. At a meeting held at the Schoolhouse, Strathoykell, on Saturday 29th ulto., it was unanimously concluded that the aforesaid farm contained ample arable and pasture land for 21 crofters.

Parish of Kincardine, Ross-shire, Estate of Inveroykell, proprietor C. M. Gaskell., Esq., consists of a good number of acres of arable land, with a wide stretch of hill pasture. Estate of Sir C. Ross, Bart.—Next is Langwell sheep farm, consisting of a number of acres of beautiful flat, arable land, with good hill pasture. Still further on, along the Ross-shire side of the Oykell river, are Amat, Loubcroy, Craggie, Aelag, and Strateskie, all on the Balnagown estate, consisting of beautiful arable land and hill pasture, all of which is under sheep. Returning back to Amat aforesaid, we follow up the Einig river, all good hill pasture, until Letters is reached, where there is plenty of arable, formerly occupied by crofters, and now under sheep. Crossing the Duag we come to Drumvaich (proprietor Lord Tarbat), formerly occupied by the crofters, but now turned into a deer forest. Still further on is Corriemulzie (property of Mr Ross, Pitcalnie), consisting of good arable and pasture, but now turned into a deer forest. At the said meeting it was unanimously concluded that the said places contained ample ground, arable and pasture, for 29 crofters, making in all ample scope for 50 to 60 crofters.

(Signed) ALEXANDER ROSS.

31,924. You mentioned land in the parish of Creich which you say would be suitable for occupation by 21 crofters?—Yes, and for double that number; but we wish to give ample room to each.

31,925. What is the extent of that land, can you tell me?—I could hardly mention the number of acres.

31,926. How many acres arable would you give to each croft?—It would depend upon how the hill pasture was to be divided. Some would, perhaps, live with very little arable land, if they got enough of hill pasture: it would depend also a good deal on the climate. I should say if every man low down had 30 acres of arable land, along with pasture, that would be sufficient.

31,927. With corresponding hill pasture?—Yes.

31,928. Do you say that that would form a self-subsisting holding?—Oh, yes.

31,929. And do you think a man with such a holding there could get on without outside assistance or outside labour?—Yes.

31,930. Is the land you mentioned as suitable for arable land, old arable land?—Yes, it is all old arable.

31,931. And what is it used for at present?—Sheep farming; it is the Invercassley farm. All the Balnagown estate is used for sheep farming.

31,932. You were appointed a delegate, I think, at a meeting?—Yes.

31,933. Was any one else appointed along with you?—One James Murray of Doune.

31,934. And you are here to represent the views of the meeting, as well as your own?—Yes.

31,935. Now, is there a keen desire among those you represent to obtain new holdings?—Yes.

31,936. And is it your opinion that there is need for such holdings?—Oh, yes, great need.

31,937. Is the crofting area you represent through that meeting congested?—Yes.

31,938. What are the names of the townships you represent?—Innis-nan-damh, Obe, Doune, and Brae, in Strathoykel.

31,939. Is each of these townships congested?—Yes.

31,940. Is any one of them worse than the others?—Well, there are from 2 to 16 acres of arable land.

31,941. For each holding?—For each holding; they range from 2 to 16 acres.

31,942. What would you say is the average?—I daresay about 8 acres would be the average.

31,943. What is the size of your own holding?—My own holding is all pasture: I have no arable land at all; it is about 12 acres pasture. But I am not on the Balnagown estate, I am on Strathoykel, the property of the British Linen Coy.

31,944. You are on an estate in the hands of the British Linen Coy.?—Yes.

31,945. What is the name of the estate?—Strathkyle.

31,946. And the profits, such as they are, which you make from your holding, are entirely from stock?—Yes.

31,947. What stock do you keep?—I keep two cows and a pony. I summer the cows on the place, but winter them where I can find wintering. I work with the pony all summer wherever I can. Tain.

31,948. Where do you keep the pony?—Wherever I am working; I buy keep for him when at home. Alexander Ross.

31,949. You mean that you have to work in order to live?—I have to work in order to live.

31,950. That is to say, outside your holding as well as inside your holding?—Yes; the holding would not keep me.

31,951. Has it ever kept you in any year?—No.

31,952. What sort of labour do you get generally?—Wherever I can get a day's work with the pony I take it, all over the country: I take carting work or anything I can get.

31,953. Anything you can do with the aid of the pony?—Yes. I have been with gentry sometimes in the harvest, and I do whatever I can get to do.

31,954. Do any of the crofters whom you are here to represent live by their holdings, or have the whole of them to labour elsewhere?—There may be two or even three that make a kind of living off their croft, but all the rest have to work for their living elsewhere.

31,955. Can you mention to us the two or three who you think may be able to live by their holdings?—One Kenneth Macleod; he is one man I can speak of.

31,956. And the others?—One John Ross, Obe; but he is hardly making a living off it: he is not a very able man, and he has to stick to the holding.

31,957. He lives by his holding as well as he can?—He lives by it after a fashion.

31,958. Any one else?—None else.

31,959. I think you also mentioned Wester Langwell farm?—Yes.

31,960. Who is the tenant of it?—Mr John Ross, Postmaster, Ardgay.

31,961. And do you say that there is a stretch of land there that we ought to consider?—Yes.

31,962. Is that old arable land?—Yes.

31,963. What is the extent of it on the farm?—I could not state the exact area.

31,964. Now, when you speak of that land, you exclude, I hope, land under rotation of crop?—Yes.

31,965. And is the land, in your opinion, suitable for new holdings?—Yes.

31,966. Is there adjacent hill pasture that would serve for the occupants of such holdings?—Yes.

31,967. On what estate?—On Sir Charles Ross's estate.

31,968. The farm is also, I suppose, on his estate?—Yes.

31,969. You also mentioned Amat and Loubcroy: is there land there?—Yes.

31,970. Is it a farm?—It is under sheep, a sheep farm.

31,971. What is the name of the farm?—Sir Charles Ross has the farm in his own hands.

31,972. Has it been in the hands of the proprietor for some time?—Yes.

31,973. What is the name of it?—Loubcroy farm.

31,974. All under sheep?—All under sheep.

31,975. You mentioned land on the Einig river?—Yes.

31,976. Particularly near the township of Letters?—Yes.

31,977. Is the land on a farm at present?—Yes, a sheep farm.

31,978. What is the name of that farm?—The same farm of Loubcroy, in the occupancy of Sir Charles Ross.

31,979. Is it called the Forest farm?—Yes, it was called the Forest farm at one time, but the forest has been cut off it, and now we call it Loubcroy. But, perhaps, it may still be called the Forest farm by others.

31,980. Do you know what is now called the Forest farm?—Yes.

31,981. Is it a very large farm?—Yes, it is a large farm.

31,982. Do you know the size of it?—I could not mention the number of acres, but I know all the shepherds on it.

31,983. How many shepherds are on it?—Eleven steady, forbye winterers and hirers.

Tain.

Alexander Ross.

31,984. Eleven besides people who winter on the ground, and people who hire parts of the ground during the summer?—The eleven men are constant on the hill.

31,985. And the others you mentioned come and go from year to year?—Yes.

31,986. Are there many of these?—There are about four of them, I suppose, just now.

31,987. And whose sheep do they look after?—Sir Charles Ross of Balnagown's.

31,988. Do these men come down to the lowlands to winter?—Yes, the four extra men.

31,989. How many hirsels have the eleven shepherds?—Each man has a hirsel.

31,990. And what is the average number of sheep in the hirsel,—of course they differ?—They differ, of course, but I would take them to average 700.

31,991. That would make, in all, nearly 8000 sheep?—I cannot say exactly, but I am not very far off it.

31,992. It is there or there about?—Yes.

31,993. Well, we have had a look at the farm on coming to this quarter, and I think we were told that it extends to no less than 90,000 acres?—I believe it may be all that, though I cannot say definitely.

31,994. It is one of the very largest farms we have had occasion to consider. Then you mentioned Drumvaich?—Yes.

31,995. Is that forest land?—Yes.

31,996. What is the name of the forest?—Rhidorroch forest.

31,997. That is a forest belonging to the Earl of Cromarty?—Yes, to Lord Tarbat.

31,998. It extends up to Loch-Broom on the west?—Yes, but Drumvaich comes in at the junction of the Rappach water and the Dubhach as you go up Corriemulzie.

31,999. That is so; you are describing it quite accurately. Now, you say there is land there suitable for 50 to 60 crofters?—Yes.

32,000. Now, where exactly is the land?—I took both sides of the Oykell river all along.

32,001. You are taking the Oykell river up by Caplich and Craggie and Salachy?—Yes.

32,002. Do you go as far as Loch Ailsh?—Yes.

32,003. Do you also take the valley of Glen Einig?—Yes.

32,004. Up the Rappach water?—Yes, and then turning up the Dubhach to Corriemulzie, and following on to Coire-Mor.

32,005. Then, the land you are calling our attention to is in the valley of the Oykell and in Glen Earig and in Strathmulzie?—Yes.

32,006. Is all that land under forest?—No, not all; there is none of it under forest except Corriemulzie.

32,007. The land under forest is in Strathmulzie?—Yes, and Drumvaich.

32,008. The land you referred to is on both sides of that strath and of the river Rappach?—Yes.

32,009. Is that old arable land?—Yes.

32,010. And is it, in your opinion, land that would be suitable for a considerable number of self-sustaining holdings?—Yes.

32,011. You think it would accommodate in the way I am describing 50 to 60 crofters?—Yes.

32,012. With such a size of holding as you have already indicated?—Yes.

32,013. Do you think that if a crofter had such a holding in that district he would have any serious difficulty in paying his way during average seasons?—No, I don't think he would.

32,014. And would as many as the land would accommodate be ready to come forward for such holdings?—I think they would.

32,015. Would you yourself take such a holding?—Yes.

32,016. And look forward to working it to a profit?—Yes.

32,017. Partly by utilising the arable, and partly by the hill grazing?—Yes.

32,018. Is there an extent of grazing in the neighbourhood of the old arable sufficient to pasture the stock which the old arable would winter?—Yes, far more pasture than arable.

Tain.

Alexander Ross.

32,019. Do you know the total extent of the Corriemulzie forest?—I cannot give you the exact figure, but I think it is over 10,000 acres. I am told the number is 12,000.

32,020. Mr Sutherland.—What is the extent of the hill grazing of the crofters you represent? How far back does their grazing go?—I could not exactly tell the number of acres.

32,021. But could you tell us how far south it extends?—To the watershed on the top, between Strath Cuilionach and Strath Oykell.

32,022. Is it not Strath Carron?—Yes, Strath Carron.

32,023. Do you know the hill called Sithean on the watershed, between Strath Carron and Strath Oykell?—I know the whole of these hills.

32,024. That is the southern boundary of the grazings of the townships?—Yes.

32,025. And is it also the boundary between the two estates?—No, it is the same estate.

32,026. In these townships of Brae, Oape, Doune, and Innis-nan-Damh how many families are there altogether? How many are in Brae?—There are 16, if I am not mistaken, altogether in the whole of these townships.

32,027. You said you came to your present holding after the passing of the Crofters Act?—Yes.

32,028. And did not the proprietor allow you to become a crofter?—Well, I did not get the benefit of the Act, as I had not been there at the passing of the Act.

32,029. But have you asked the proprietor to allow you to become a crofter?—I have not asked him the privilege.

32,030. Would you prefer to have it?—Yes, I would.

32,031. May I ask you where you were before you came to Ochto?—I was a shepherd on Corriemulzie when I came up to Ochto Falls.

32,032. How long were you shepherd there?—Ten years.

32,033. Therefore you know very well all those places you have spoken about?—I am very well acquainted with the whole of the places.

32,034. Do you know any other person who lived there for ten years who is likely to give us evidence?—There is a keeper there who lived there far longer than that.

32,035. But you have lived there for ten years?—Yes.

32,036. And, therefore, know everything you have already told his lordship of your own personal knowledge and experience?—Yes.

32,037. You have had experience as a shepherd, you have had experience as a crofter, and you are perfectly satisfied that if you got a reasonable holding in any of these places you would have reasonable prospects of success?—Yes.

32,038. You think that there is sufficient land of old arable, or that could be made arable, that would enable you to winter and bring through stock sufficient for the holdings?—Yes.

32,039. And under such conditions do you think you would be better off than the people are now in Ochto?—I would be far better.

32,040. Now, was the amount of pasture and arable land that you gave in answer to the Chairman, the amount that would, in your opinion, enable the people to live in comfort in these places?—I have no doubt that more people could live on the land that I spoke about than the number I gave.

32,041. But you want to guard against every possibility of error?—Yes.

32,042. And have you, therefore, put your estimate rather low?—Yes, I am quite sure I made it low.

32,043. Was it Corriemulzie you lived at?—Yes.

32,044. Had you any crops there?—Yes, I had corn crop and potatoes and turnips.

32,045. Had you good crop there?—Yes, very good.

32,046. Did it ripen at all?—Oh, yes, it always ripens yonder. Some years owing to the wet season there might be a loss on the corn crop; but I have seen as good a crop there as ever I saw. I never saw the like of it in Strath Oykell.

32,047. It is better than you have in Strath Oykell?—Far better.

32,048. And were your crops ever destroyed by frost?—Never, there is no such thing as frost there.

32,049. You mean crop-destroying frost?—Yes, I mean frost that destroys the potatoes as is done in the lowlands sometimes.

32,050. You have heard that statement made, I suppose, by people who were never in Corriemulzie?—I knew that the potato crop was spoilt low down.

32,051. But you are of opinion that this place here is different, and you are talking not only of your opinion but of your experience?—Of my experience.

32,052. You think you raised better crops than you now raise in Strath-Oykell?—By far.

32,053. And you have given, I think, practical testimony to your belief when you state that you would be quite prepared to take a holding yourself, and would be very glad to take it?—Yes.

32,054. If you had had the opportunity of taking a holding in Corriemulzie, you would have gone there rather than to Ochto?—Yes, but if I got enough land in Ochto perhaps I might stay as I am. But I would prefer Corriemulzie to Ochto any day.

32,055. If you had the opportunity of going there?—Yes.

32,056. Mr Gordon.—Where were you born?—At Innis-nan-Damh, Strath-Oykell.

32,057. And how long have you been in that quarter of the country?—All my days.

32,058. Then you know the country quite well?—Oh, yes, I ought to know it.

32,059. Are you of opinion it would take 30 acres of old arable land to keep a man there?—I have no doubt less would do, with hill pasture along with it.

32,060. Now, you have mentioned a good many places which we have seen. Did you mention a place called Tuiteam?—Yes.

32,061. And Turnaig?—Yes.

32,062. And Caploch?—Yes.

32,063. And Craggie?—Yes.

32,064. And Loubcroy?—Yes.

32,065. The last two are upon the forest farm, and the first three are upon the Invercassley farm?—Yes.

32,066. Now, could you shortly tell us the extent of old arable upon these lands?—Well, I cannot give the acreage.

32,067. Could you give us it roughly?—I can hardly say.

32,068. You gave us the acreage of one place, that is Langwell, which we will come to bye-and-bye.—I have a kind of knowledge of that, but as for the other places I cannot say.

32,069. Would there be ten acres at Tutim?—Far more.

32,070. Upon the flat next the river?—Yes, and above Tutim house there is some old arable land.

32,071. And how much would there be at Turnaig?—There are two small haughs there: there will be 15 acres between them at any rate, say 30 for Turnaig.

32,072. That would be room for two crofters, you think?—Yes.

32,073. And how many would you put into Turnaig?—It is Turnaig I mean for the two.

32,074. But you would not put the two on the 15 acres?—There are 15 acres in each of the two haughs.

32,075. An upper and a lower?—Yes.

32,076. How many crofters do you think Caploch would hold?—Owing to the amount of low ground, arable land, that is on Caploch I would think two would be enough, for there is part of Caploch that the river overflows in some measure.

32,077. I am afraid there is part where the river would be troublesome?—Yes, and it can only be used for meadow hay.

32,078. So that you would only put one on Caploch perhaps?—I would put two on Caploch.

32,079. Well, what do you say to Craggie?—One would be enough for the arable land in Craggie, but there is too much pasture for one.

32,080. How far to the west does the pasture of Craggie go,—back to the Alltan-nan-cealgach?—It goes to the burn that is on this side of Alltan-nan-cealgach; it goes on two miles past Craggie, to a bridge called Ealag bridge.

32,081. Beyond the loch there?—Yes.

32,082. You say you would put two into Tutim, two into Turnaig, two into Caploch, and two into Craggie?—Yes.

32,083. And what about Loubcroy?—Two there also.

32,084. Well, then, I must take you a little farther up the river to a place called Craggan; do you know Craggan?—Yes.

32,085. Is there arable land there?—Yes.

32,086. What extent of arable land is at Craggan?—I should say about 15 acres.

32,087. Then you would require to reduce your number there to one?—Yes.

32,088. At Langwell you think there are 120 acres?—Yes, I am quite sure of it.

32,089. How many people would you put in there?—Four.

32,090. Would you not leave the laird a little bit around the lodge for hay ground?—Oh, of course, he would need to get his share, if he would be a decent man himself.

32,091. How many families would you put in Amat?—Two.

32,092. And how many in Letters?—Three.

32,093. Are there 30 acres of old arable land on Letters?—Oh, yes, and over it.

32,094. Now, what do you say as to Craigmore,—how many acres of old arable land are there?—We did not go that way.

32,095. You must come down that way if you go to Glen Eirig?—But Craigmore is not in Glen Eirig.

32,096. What do you call the shepherd's house there?—That is Craigmore; but we do not go over the height at all.

32,097. Do you want to leave Craigmore out?—Yes, I did not take Craigmore in.

32,098. You did not take in Lubachoinnich, or Glaschoill, or Croick?—No.

32,099. What other places do you mention?—Drumvaich again.

32,100. How many would you put there?—One.

32,101. And how many at Corriemulzie?—Four.

32,102. Would the gamekeeper's croft be one of them?—The gamekeeper would do with his wages.

32,103. You have given us one in Drumvaich, four in Corriemulzie, two in Tutim, two in Turnaig, two in Caploch, two in Craggie, one in Craggan, four in Langwell, four in Amat, and three in Letters, in all 25, which is nearly half your number.—But we did not go over half of the ground.

32,104. Where is the rest then?—We left Invercassley where we should begin.

32,105. Are you going to take the arable land that is under cultivation at Invercassley?—Oh, yes.

32,106. But I am afraid that is beyond our power?—Oh, we are going to sweep everything before us.

32,107. Taking your own estimate you have only 25 families?—Yes, but that was the way that we counted them.

32,108. There are at present on the ground 11 shepherds and four extra men, making 15; you propose to clear away 15 and put on 25, thus making room for only ten more people?—That is the way that we made it up; but there is ample space for what I said.

32,109. I am showing you how the facts stand according to your own statement?—Yes, but it is a very wide statement that I gave, as you will see when you go over the ground.

32,110. Well, I did go over the ground, and saw it all, therefore, I am quite able to speak about it. Now,

Tain.

Alexander Ross.

there is this other ground below that which you have left out, that is Glen Eirig?—Yes.

32,111. What do you say as to that country?—We went to Amat, did not we?

32,112. Yes, but Amat is in Strath Oykell, is it not?—Yes, at the end of Glen Eirig.

32,113. You require to cross over the hill to Glen Eirig?—No, Glen Eirig is on the Oykell river, going up from Oykell.

32,114. I beg your pardon, I should have said Glen Coulin.—That is across the hill, on the Strath Carron side.

32,115. At the top of Strath Carron?—Yes.

32,116. You cannot speak to that country?—I could speak to it, but I leave it to others to speak about.

32,117. Well, as far as we can make out, this is the state of matters; you propose to remove 15 men and put in 25 in their place?—I don't want to put away any man in that respect; I thought there was ample space for them all.

32,118. But we must provide somewhere for the shepherds if you displace them?—Oh, yes, of course.

32,119. Where would you put them?—I thought the shepherds would have as good a right as any.

32,120. If you leave them in possession you would only be able to add ten to their number, assuming your areas to be all correct?—But there would be plenty for us at my number, taking the shepherds too.

32,121. I presume there are shepherds' houses on most of these places?—Yes.

32,122. But there would be accommodation for only one crofter at each place I have mentioned?—Yes.

32,123. Therefore, you would require to provide a place, would you not, for each of the others?—Oh, yes.

32,124. Now, have you any idea, in your own mind, as to how these buildings could be put up? Would you be able to erect your buildings?—I would not be able on my own head to build for myself, but I know of men who would be able and would be willing to take the lodgings, and to build for themselves any day.

32,125. And you think the average number of sheep in each of these hirsels is about 700?—Yes, taking them on an average I think they will come to about that.

32,126. Do you think you will find men willing to take a half or a third of these 700 sheep, and to build the necessary houses?—Oh, I think so.

32,127. You believe there are people in your neighbourhood who would do so?—Yes; I don't say there are as many in my neighbourhood, those whom I represent, as would take up the whole of the ground, but I know there are plenty in other places that would be ready to go.

32,128. Do you happen to know what would be the average rent of these hirsels?—No.

32,129. Do you think these new tenants would be able to pay the same rent as the like of the Messrs Kennedy are paying, as the forest farm is entered at in the present Valuation Roll?—Oh, the rent would, of course, have to be considered afterwards. I think it would be a good thing for the country to have crofters on the ground, and I think it would pay the country fully as well as a big sheep farm.

32,130. I don't dispute that part of it; but the question is, would these crofters be able to pay as much rent as the ordinary tacksman, do you think?—I don't know if they would, after building and everything.

32,131. As a matter of fact, they would require to be moderately rented before they could be successful?—Of course, if they were to have buildings and everything before them as the sheep farmer has I have no doubt they could pay the rent as well as he does.

32,132. But the difficulty is that there are not buildings on the ground, and we must provide these buildings: so that whoever does provide the buildings the cost of doing so would be an extra tax upon the present rental: I must point that out to you?—Yes, of course.

32,133. You admit that?—Yes.

32,134. But still you think there are men in the country, in your neighbourhood, or otherwise, who would be willing to take a share of these grazings?—Yes.

32,135. To erect the necessary buildings?—Yes.

32,136. And to pay in cash the relative value of the stock effeiring to each of the new men?—Yes.

32,137. Mr Sutherland.—With regard to these townships that you represent, I find that the average amount of arable land they possess is very much less than you have stated?—Very likely it may be.

32,138. I am talking just now of the townships that you are here to represent.—The people of Brae, Oape, Doune, and Innis-nan-Damh?—Yes.

32,139. Their average amount of arable land is only about 7 acres each?—Very likely.

32,140. You were proposing to give how much arable land to each,—15 acres, was it?—30 acres.

32,141. So that if the people at the present moment subsist on 7 acres of arable land, you think if they got 30 they would be very much better off?—Yes, but you must keep in mind that it is not upon arable land that they subsist just now?—They have to work.

32,142. That would increase their chance of success very materially?—Oh, yes.

32,143. Do you know who built the houses on Oape and Brae and Doune and Innis-nan-Damh?—Sir Charles Ross built them partly.

32,144. What proportion was provided by the landlords, and what by the tenant?—The tenants did the carting. They have got new houses lately, most of them, of which Sir Charles paid for the mason work and carpenter work and slate.

32,145. He paid the mason work and the carpenter work: and did he provide the materials?—Oh, yes, he provided everything; they had nothing to do but the carting.

32,146. Was that the way in which the house you live in yourself was built?—No, the house that I live in is on a feu: the man I came in after was a feuar, who built the house at his own expense.

32,147. So that house cost the landlord nothing?—No.

32,148. And you are now paying rent for it?—No, I just pay so much for the grazing, and have the house along with the grazing. Of course, I pay so much for the house in a sense, but everything is taken in at the one rent.

32,149. But, as I understand what you have stated, the provision made by Sir Charles Ross is much above the average in liberality?—I believe it is; I am quite sure it is.

32,150. But the house you are living in cost him nothing?—It is not on Sir Charles Ross's estate that I live.

32,151. Those townships of Brae, Oape, Doune, and Innis-nan-damh, are they all on the Balnagown estate?—Yes.

32,152. But you are not on the Balnagown estate?—No.

32,153. Whose estate are you on?—The British Linen Coy. Bank's.

32,154. Is the British Linen Banking Coy. a landlord?—Yes.

32,155. How does that come about?—G. G. Mackay bought the estate, and in some way it came into the hands of the British Linen Coy. through him,—I don't know how it was.

32,156. And the bank is holding lands, and collecting rents, and performing the usual functions of a landlord?—Yes. I am told the estate is sold lately, but I cannot speak with certainty.

32,157. Has it got many tenants except you?—Oh, yes, there is a number of tenants down Strath Oykell.

32,158. The Chairman. — The proprietor, whose name is entered on the Valuation Roll, is Harry Cheyne, Esq., W.S., Edinburgh, as trustee of George Grant Mackay. The entry with regard to the forest farm is, Forest, tenant, Lady Ross, rent, £540; and the farm of Croick, tenant, Lady Ross, rental, £225, or a total rental of £765. That seems to be the state of the rental?—Yes

32,159. Mr Anderson, factor for Balnagown. — I should like to ask one or two questions, principally in reference to your desire to transplant the people. You appear particularly on behalf of the people of Strath Oykell, I think you said?—Yes.

32,160. How much pasture land have they, do you know?—I cannot exactly say, I think it is over 400 acres.

32,161. Hill pasture?—Yes.

32,162. Are you not aware that they have a common grazing of about 3000 acres of hill pasture?—I am not aware.

32,163. It is a fact, however; I think Mr Sutherland will bear me out in that. I should like to put a question or two in regard to the condition of the people there. You have referred to tenants having rather better houses than is customary with crofters, and you also mentioned particularly one tenant who you thought was a prosperous man, Kenneth Macleod. I suppose you knew his father?—Yes.

32,164. Did you ever hear a story about his leaving a good deal of money when he died?—Yes, I heard that.

32,165. How much did you hear that he left?—I did not hear the sum.

32,166. Did he do anything else but work his croft?—Yes.

32,167. What did he do?—I could tell you that, and how he made his money; but a man is not bound to tell everything here.

32,168. Have you ever heard this remark made, that the people frequently pay their rents with what they get from the wool?—I am not aware of that. I know what wool is sold, and what price is got for it, and I know they do not pay the fourth part of their rents with it.

32,169. You never heard it said that in good years George Anderson at Bonar had given them a sufficient amount of money for their clip, their season's clip, to enable them to pay their rents?—That might be so twenty years back when wool was selling at £1 a stone; but I am quite confident to-day that there are none on the Strath that could pay a third of their rent by means of the wool.

32,170. How many sheep would Kenneth Macleod have?—I could not say.

32,171. Is it about 100, do you think?—No,

32,172. Is it much short of that?—Oh, yes.

32,173. How many has George Ross, Oape?—Very few.

32,174. You do not mean to assert that there are too many people in Strath Oykell?—Yes.

32,175. But there are a good many families of elderly people without any children. My impression is that Strath Oykell, unlike other straths, is thinly peopled. Do you think it would be wise to make the people of Strath Oykell go to Tuitem and Caploch?—I think it would be more than wise for the half of them to go there to-morrow, if they got the chance.

32,176. You also say that the people wish to remove from their present holdings and to go elsewhere?—Yes.

32,177. Do you know John Ross's place at Loubcroy?—Yes.

32,178. Would you like to put people there?—Yes.

32,179. Did you see his crop there this year?—Yes.

32,180. Was not this a rather favourable year all over the Highlands?—Yes.

32,181. What like was his crop when he cut it?—It was very good.

32,182. Was it ripe?—No, for he did not give it time to ripen: if he had given it time it would have been ripe enough.

32,183. Does it ever ripen?—Yes.

32,184. Is it not the fact that at a good many of these places, particularly on the Cassley side, the crops are always cut in a green condition?—I have been on the Cassley side, and I have seen the crops there as ripe as ever I saw them in Strath Oykell, and as good a crop. I think I have never seen such a crop as in Dail-nan-Cliabh.

32,185. Is Da-nan-Cliabh very subject to flooding by the river?—Not where the crop is.

32,186. I thought it was just precisely where the crop is that the flooding took place?—It floods sometimes in the winter time if there is a snowstorm, and the ice breaks about that part.

32,187. Does it not flood very frequently?—Not at Dail-nan-Cliabh. Tain.

32,188. How would you account for that arable land having been allowed to go out of cultivation?—When the crofters were all evicted from it, of course it had to go out of cultivation then. Alexander Ross.

32,189. When were there crofters there?—Since about 80 years: I cannot give the exact date, but it is about 80 or 90 years since they were removed.

32,190. But if it was worth cultivating at all, would not the shepherds cultivate some of these places?—Of course the shepherds cultivate as much as they get leave to cultivate. There is so much set apart for each shepherd to cultivate, and he does that, but may not go beyond it.

32,191. That is not my opinion. My impression is that they cultivate just as much as they require for their immediate needs?—I was a shepherd myself.

32,192. I am speaking of Invercassley grounds?—Well, that is Invercassley.

32,193. In regard to Langwell, you said there was old arable land there?—Yes.

32,194. Where about is that? You do not refer to the farm that the postmaster at present occupies?—Yes, of course.

32,195. That is not old arable land in the strict sense of the word; it is arable land?—That is what I referred to.

32,196. Is the land you refer to there presently worked or cropped by the postmaster?—No.

32,197. It is not being cropped just now?—No.

32,198. Is it many years since it was cropped?—It is only twice that ever I saw one park of it cropped in my time.

32,199. Where about does it lie precisely?—It lies about three miles on this side of Oykell.

32,200. I think you said that, occasionally, you worked for sporting gentlemen?—I wrought for them sometimes.

32,201. If the crofters were transported from their present holdings to, say, Loubcroy, what effect would that have upon the shooting?—I don't think it would have any bad effect upon it; I think it would only benefit the shooting.

32,202. You believe the shooting would let. Would it be a loss to the people and a loss to the parish generally if the shooting was not let?—I don't think it would be any loss to the people. It might be a loss to one or two individuals; but, taking the people as a whole, it would not.

32,203. Is it not a fact that a vast number of the young men in such places as Strath Oykell and Strath Carron are employed in one shape or other by the sporting tenant in the season?—Five or six might be engaged for a month or so, but what is that?

32,204. Mr Sutherland.—I should like it made clear about the common pasture that these townships have. Is it the fact, according to your knowledge, that the townships of Innis-nan-Damh, Doune, Oape, Brae, Hillton, Easter Rhelonie, Wester Rhelonie, Bogroy, and a tenant on the Hill of Edderton, have all a common right to the 2300 acres of hill pasture?—No, none but the Strath Oykell tenants have it.

32,205. You were not aware, then, that the townships you represent had 2300 acres of hill pasture?—No, I thought they had not that.

32,206. But you do not doubt that it may be the case?—Oh, no; I do not doubt Mr Anderson, of course, as he knows about it.

JAMES MURRAY, Doune (25)—examined. James Murray.

32,207. The Chairman.—Have you a croft of your own, or do you live with your father?—My grandmother holds the croft, but I work it.

32,208. What rent does she pay?—The rent fixed by the Crofters Commission was £4, 8s.

32,209. What was the old rent?—£6.

32,210. I see widow Ross or Macleod entered as having a holding of 4 acres 3 roods 2 poles arable, no

Tain. James Murray.

outrun, and share in common pasture of 2300 acres. That common pasture is shared by the townships of Brae, Doune, Oape, and Innis-nan-Damh?—Yes.

32,211. Were you appointed as a delegate at the same meeting as Ross, Ochto Falls?—Yes.

32,212. Did you hear his evidence?—Yes.

32,213. And do you concur in it?—I do.

32,214. Mr Gordon.—You speak just of the same land that he spoke to?—Yes.

32,215. Have you anything to add to what he told us?—Not much.

32,216. Is there anything you would like to say?—I would like to say something about the deer forest. I have a personal knowledge of the deer forest of Drumvaich and Corriemulzie; I was gillie at Corriemulzie for the shooting party for the last four seasons, and I know the place very well. I consider it is very good arable and pasture land.

32,217. Do you agree with the evidence which Ross gave as to the availability of these places as places where self-sustaining holdings might be established, where crofters could live without going to labour elsewhere?—Yes.

32,218. Have you anything else to add?—No.

John Ross.

JOHN ROSS, Crofter, Syal, Strathcarron (29) —examined.

32,219. The Chairman.—Was your rent fixed by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

32,220. What was the old rent?—£7, 10s.

32,221. And what is the new rent?—£6.

32,222. I see from the blue book there is a holding in name of John Ross and Widow Ann Maclean or Ross, containing 6 acres 3 roods arable, 8 acres 3 roods 15 poles outrun, and a share of 2500 acres common to the townships of Balchrick, Corvost, Fearann-nan caorach, Lon-na-meine, Cawderg, Wester Syal, Mid Syal, Syal and Cornhill.

32,223. Have you a written statement?—No.

32,224. Were you appointed as a delegate?—Yes.

32,225. At a meeting of what crofters?—The Kincardine Association. I am going to give evidence, as far as I can from memory, about the Braelangwell sheep farm occupied by Mr Anderson, Bonar.

32,226. What is it you wish to say about it?—I wish to say that about the year 1806 it was cleared of crofters, who were packed into Strathcarron, where they live now.

32,227. Do you know how many crofters were cleared off?—No, I cannot say.

32,228. Is your information derived from old people?—Yes.

32,229. Are these alive, or people who are now dead?—One of them is alive, who has the old tack or lease that he had in 1806.

32,230. You mean the document itself?—Yes.

32,231. Have you brought it with you?—No.

32,231A. Well, I wish you had. They held Braelangwell as a township under an old lease, did they?—Yes.

32,232. Which is still existing?—Yes.

32,233. In whose possession is it?—Finlay Munro, Donmain.

32,234. Will you send the document in to the Secretary?—If I get it; or I will send a copy.

32,235. The Secretary asks me to say that if you will send in the principal he will return it without any loss of time?—Yes.*

32,236. That land is under sheep now?—Yes.

32,237. Is there a considerable tract of ground there suitable for occupation by crofters?—I heard it said that there were about 130 acres of arable land. Tain. John Ross.

32,238. Who told you that?—The people said so; and by good hill pasture, with a part of the hill pasture of Strathcarron attached to it in 1878, taken off the Strath people,—the best portion of the hill.

32,239. Do you know what extent was taken off?—No, I could not say.

32,240. What is done with it now?—It is added to the Braelangwell sheep farm.

32,241. And is under sheep at present?—Yes.

32,242. Is Braelangwell sheep farm in the hands of the proprietor?—No.

32,243. Who is the tenant?—Mr Anderson, South Bonar.

32,244. Does he hold it under lease, do you know?—I suppose so, because we approached the estate more than once to get the sheep farm of Braelangwell attached to Strathcarron, and we were always told that it was under lease.

32,245. How many times did you apply for it?—It was once that we applied by petition for it.

32,246. When was that?—I cannot recollect, but about ten years ago I should think.

32,247. And the answer given was that it was under lease?—Yes.

32,248. Was it for extension of grazing you applied?—Yes.

32,249. Then, are the crofters whom you represent in need of more land?—Yes.

32,250. For extension of grazing, or for new holdings, or for both?—For both.

32,251. Are the townships you represent overcrowded?—Yes.

32,252. And would some of the occupants of the holdings there be willing to leave them if they got larger holdings elsewhere?—I believe they would.

32,253. And would those who remain be willing to take up the vacated crofts?—Yes.

32,254. Now, do you think such a holding as you have in view could be cultivated to a profit?—I believe so.

32,255. Would those who take the new holdings be able to enter upon them, and carry them on without assistance?—I cannot say.

32,256. Are you desirous of leaving your holding?—If I got a holding that would keep me from having to march the country for work I would leave it to-morrow.

32,257. You have a holding of 752 acres altogether?—About 6 arable.

32,258. Six arable and 8¾ outrun, and a share of the hill?—Yes.

32,259. Are you able to live by the holding?—No.

32,260. You say you have to walk the country for work; is that for labouring work?—No; I am a mason to trade.

32,261. You go to get mason work?—Yes.

32,262. And do you live mainly by the croft, or mainly by the mason work?—I live mainly by my trade.

32,263. Then, of course, if you got a holding which was self-sustaining, you would have to give up the mason work, and devote your time exclusively to your croft?—Yes.

32,264. But you were brought up a mason, I suppose?—Yes.

32,265. What stock have you got?—Two cows and a horse.

32,266. Any sheep?—Fifteen ewes.

32,267. Do you ask our attention to any other lands than have been mentioned already?—No, I confine myself to the sheep farm of Braelangwell; there are other delegates for other places.

32,268. Mr Sutherland.—Could you tell us the boundaries of the Braelangwell farm?—On the west it is bounded by Littlejohn's property.

32,269. Could you give us any natural feature that forms the boundary,—the eastern boundary is the Allt Domhainn, is it not?—Yes.

32,270. What is the western boundary of it?—(Mr

* On 22nd January 1894 Ross wrote the Secretary as follows with reference to the lease:—"On enquiry I find that I was 'misinformed as to the existence of an old lease relative to 'Braelangwell at the time it was cleared of crofters. But the 'Strathcarron people held the part of their common which was 'added to the Braelangwell sheep farm in 1878, under a 19 'years' lease, which expired that year. But on the renewal of 'our leases the best part of our common was added to the Brae-'langwell sheep farm. Therefore I wish my evidence from 'question 32,229 to question 32,235 to be cancelled."

Anderson.—You will see it all from the plan which I produced).

32,271. What do you think Braelangwell farm is best fitted for; is it for an extension of the existing grazings of the people on the north side of Strathcarron, or for new holdings?—I think it would be more suitable for new holdings.

32,272. How many holdings do you think it would be suitable for?—Five or six, I should think.

32,273. Then, could you give us a general idea how the land farther up the glen than the boundary of Braelangwell farm on the same side is occupied?—As a sheep farm.

32,274. What is the name of the sheep farm?—Strath Cuilionach.

32,275. What is the extent of it?—I cannot say.

32,276. It is as large as or larger than Braelangwell?—Three times as large as Braelangwell.

32,277. Is it part of the forest farm?—I think the Strath is between three and four miles long, with an average breadth of three quarters of a mile.

32,278. But, at the present time, it is part of the farm known as the Forest farm?—Yes.

32,279. Is the land in Braelangwell of the same character as the land on the south side of the river that the people have got?—It is if anything better.

32,280. How many people do you say were in the farm?—I could not say.

32,281. You have not heard how many?—No.

32,282. And it is presently occupied by Mr Anderson?—Yes.

32,283. Has he any other farms except this one?—Yes, he has a good number.

32,284. Has he more farms than one?—He has other three or four.

32,285. Which of these farms does he reside on?—He resides on none.

32,286. Is not that the Mr Anderson who lives down at Bonarbridge?—Yes.

32,287. What are the other farms he has got?—Kincardine, and Badanvoon and Braelangwell, and a bit farm at Bonar; and I believe he has another farm in Sutherlandshire, but I am not sure of that.

32,288. Who held the farm before he became the tenant?—Mr John Forsyth, late factor for the Balnagown estate.

32,289. Did he hold it when he was factor?—Yes.

32,290. He was at one time factor on the Balnagown estate?—Yes.

32,291. But has now ceased to be?—Yes.

32,292. Is there any other land that you particularly call our attention to besides the Braelangwell farm?—Only Strath Cuilionach.

32,293. What do you say with regard to Strath Cuilionach?—I have not very much knowledge about Strath Cuilionach, only that they were cleared away a long time ago—about the beginning of this century or the end of last century—I am not able to give the exact date.

32,294. Now, with regard to Strathcarron itself, are the tenants there leaseholders or crofters mostly?—They are all crofters.

32,295. Have they built many new houses since the passing of the Act?—They are about starting now. They have not built any yet, but I think they are in process of starting three or four in the Strath.

32,296. Is it the intention of the people to build better houses on account of the security of tenure?—Yes.

32,297. Supposing you got such a holding as you desire, you, being a mason, would be in exceptionally good circumstances to build a house?—Yes.

32,298. And there are a number of other people who could contribute to the building of the houses themselves?—Oh, I believe they could do a little.

32,299. Have you any fear in your own mind that if they got the opportunity of forming holdings on this good land there would be insurmountable difficulties in the way of putting up houses and steadings?—I don't suppose there would.

32,300. Have they within your memory in Strath Carron improved their houses and steadings?—Some of them.

32,301. Is the tendency towards improving them and making them better?—I think so. I know there is a great cry for land, because, if a croft becomes vacant there are a number of applicants. Tain. John Ross.

32,302. You know, as a matter of fact, that whenever a croft becomes vacant there are a number of applicants?—Yes.

32,303. And that a great number of people are always disappointed when they cannot get it?—Yes.

32,304. Mr Anderson, factor for Balnagown.—When you speak of Mr Anderson's farm, do you refer to the whole of the farm, or to the part that you say the Strath Carron crofters were at one time deprived of?—I speak about the whole farm of Braelangwell

32,305. Is it not the case that some number of years ago,—I think about ten years ago,—the crofters were told that they might have part of the farm again if they liked on their own terms? I wish you would tell the Commissioners what you remember about that?—If you want to know I will just tell you the condition they were to get the farm upon. [The Chairman.—Do so, please]. They were to take over 1200 of Mr Anderson's sheep at valuation, i.e, £2000.

32,306. Yes, but what terms did the landlord propose?—These were the terms.

32,307. These were the terms between themselves and the outgoing tenant, what terms was the landlord disposed to give the farm upon?—If they would not give £2000 for the sheep they would not get the farm, these were the terms.

32,308. Was it not the case that apart altogether from the stock, with which the landlord had nothing to do, he was prepared practically to give the tenants the farm for nothing, or that part of it?—No, I remember it perfectly well: Mr Forsyth came round with two papers, one of £2000 and the other to be signed, that they would have nothing to do with it.

32,309. The matter fell through because you, the crofters, and the outgoing tenant could not agree as to the valuation of the sheep?—Yes, because they could not agree.

32,310. But as far as the landlord was concerned they might have had the place?—Yes, for £2000.

32,311. That would not have gone into the landlord's pocket at any rate?—It was the landlord's agent that was going about with the papers at anyrate.

32,312. You say that some of the crofters in Strath Carron would be prepared to leave their present holdings if they got a holding elsewhere. Would you be kind enough to mention them as I would like that recorded. Just mention their names. [No answer].

32,313. The Chairman.—You are asked to mention the names of any who would be willing to leave and take such holdings as we have been hearing of.—I cannot say, because I did not go through the crofters to see who were willing to leave or not.

32,314. But is it your belief that there are such persons?—Yes, because when any croft falls vacant in the strath there are any number of applicants for it.

32,315. There is a competition for every croft?—Yes.

32,316. Mr Anderson.—That refers to outsiders; but who among the people in the strath are prepared to leave their places and go elsewhere,—I don't care where it is, to a better place, or a worse place,—who do you imagine would be willing to give up their holdings and go elsewhere?—I would for one if I got a holding that would support me.

32,317. Any one else?—I did not go over the strath to see.

32,318. You are a mason to trade?—Yes.

32,319. And you get work pretty regularly, don't you?—Sometimes.

32,320. Would you prefer to discontinue being a mason and working altogether at your trade, and become altogether a crofter?—I would.

DONALD ROSE, Baddaroch (54)—examined. Donald Rose.

32,321. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

32,322. Was your rent fixed by the Crofters Commission?—No.

Tain. Donald Rose.

32,323. What rent do you pay?—£5.

32,324. Do you hold from year to year, or under lease?—Our lease was out last Martinmas, and we have no lease now at all. [Mr Sutherland. You said you were a crofter?—I am a leaseholder, we are leaseholders, but our lease has expired].

32,325. And now you hold from year to year?—Yes.

32,326. For what term did the lease run?—We had a lease for nineteen years.

32,327. And what was the rent under the lease?—At the beginning of the lease my rent was £10, and it was reduced by the proprietor to £5.

32,328. Are you paying £5 of rent since the lease expired?—Yes.

32,329. I think you are most interested in the lands which Mr Sutherland and myself went to see on Saturday?—Yes.

32,330. These are hill grazings?—Hill grazings, of which we were deprived nineteen years ago.

32,331. Were these the hill grazings you lost in 1874?—Yes.

32,332. Through some proceedings on the part of the late Mr George Grant Mackay?—Yes.

32,333. Now can you tell us what extent of grazing you lost then?—Over 2000 acres, including all the tenants in our district and the township pasture.

32,334. Can you give us any idea of the boundaries of that grazing?—Yes. [Mr Gordon.—Did they extend to the Balnagown march]?—On the east side by the Balnagown march, and on the west by the sheep farm of Ochto, or Inver Oykell as it is called now.

32,335. You had the farm of Ochto on the west?—Yes.

32,336. And you had the farm of Braelangwell on the south?—Yes, on the ridge.

32,337. The ridge was the boundary?—Yes, the watershed.

32,338. Then you had the Kyle of Sutherland on the east?—Yes.

32,339. And you yourselves were on the north?—Yes.

32,340. That was the ground which had been purchased by Mr Mackay from Novar?—Yes.

32,341. At the time of the purchase, was it under lease?—The lease was out at the time he purchased it from Novar.

32,342. Then, was it taken away by Mr Mackay shortly after his purchase?—Mr Mackay had it a long time: he had it four years ago, and then the British Linen Coy. got it as trustees.

32,343. When did he take it from you, was it in 1874?—Yes.

32,344. Now, at the time it was taken from you, was there any change made on your rents?—Yes.

32,345. They were reduced?—They were doubled and trebled, all the hill pasture was taken off us, and a lot of low ground as well.

32,346. Was that low ground near the road?—Near the Kyle of Sutherland.

32,347. And, as I understand, your main desire and that of those for whom you appear is to bring that land which you lost under our consideration now?—Yes.

32,348. You were appointed, I think, as a delegate?—Yes.

32,349. At a meeting of the crofters who had been interested in this pasture?—Yes.

32,350. What were the names of the townships represented at the meeting?—Cill-Mochalmaig, Ach-na-h-Annaid, and Baddaroch.

32,351. Did the loss of the ground as pasture cause a reduction in your stock?—Yes.

32,352. Both sheep and cattle?—Both sheep and cattle.

32,353. When you lost that pasture, did you get any other pasture in lieu of it?—No.

32,354. And have you since that time been without pasture?—Yes, for nineteen years.

32,355. Would it meet your views and the views of those you represent if that pasture were restored?—Very much.

32,356. It is more with a view to the restoration of that pasture than for new holdings that you are giving evidence before us?—Yes. Tain.

32,357. It is rather rough black pasture, but is it good summer feeding?—It is all good pasture for summer and winter. Donald Rose.

32,358. Is there a good deal of green interspersed with the heather?—Yes, but the sort of plants that are now growing on it are spoiling the low ground very much. At the tops there are no plants; they will not grow there; and they will not grow on the low ground, except some bushes.

32,359. I think you have stated verbally all that you say in this letter to us?—Yes.

32,360. So I think we need not read it over.

32,361. Mr Sutherland.—You mentioned the townships of Cill-Mochalmaig, Easter Ach-na-h-Annaid, and Baddaroch?—Yes.

32,362. But are not there other townships that were interested in the grazing as well?—Yes, but there is a delegate here to represent them, and I would rather not interfere with them.

32,363. What was the boundary farther up the river,—what was the boundary of the pasture that was taken from the townships?—The hills facing the district.

32,364. Can you give me the name of the western boundary of it?—Yes, Alltmore. Cill-Mochalmaig burn comes in a curve to the east end, Meall-Deargaidh.

32,365. Did it follow the Alltmore all the way?—No, there are five or six branches coming into the Alltmore.

32,366. Which of these did it go up?—By the fourth branch, in to the east corner, Meall Deargaidh; then it follows the watershed all the way till it joins with Rhelonie estate.

33,367. You made the very strange statement that when your pasture was taken away your rent was increased. Are you sure that was the fact?—I am sure it was more than doubly increased. In the Novar time I was paying £6.

32,368. You were paying £6 before your pasture was taken away?—Yes.

32,369. And what did you pay afterwards?—£10. I paid £10 for fifteen years, and I was beat to pay it; I could not pay it.

32,370. Then, you said some low ground was taken from you as well as the pasture. What low ground was that?—What we call the meadows at the waterside: it was joined to another and part taken off Barroch, about 100 acres: and we got about one and a half acres for these 100 acres that were taken off and joined to Achnagart. When we got the new proprietor he made new properties.

32,371. But the result to you was that your pasture was taken away and your rent was raised at the same time?—Yes, I lived in poverty, but we are alive yet, thanks to the Almighty.

32,372. Who is the present proprietor?—As far as I can know I think it is the British Linen Coy., and they are very nice with us,—I am not going to say a word against them. I heard that the estate was sold about four weeks ago, but I cannot say, for I am not going to interfere in such matters.

32,373. You know to whom you pay your rent?—We pay to the British Linen Coy. [The Chairman.—The British Linen Coy. have been very reasonable and forbearing?—They are very reasonable with us, and very gentlemanly.]

32,374. Have they reduced your rent?—No, they did not reduce our rent: I hope they will.

David Ross, Torroy (42)—examined. David R

32,375. The Chairman.—Were you appointed as a delegate at the same meeting as Donald Rose?—Yes.

32,376. And is your evidence to the same effect?—It is.

32,377. We may take you as concurring with the evidence he gave?—Yes, so far; only we were deprived of our hill grazing by the late Mr Hadwen, who bought the Rhelonie estate from the late G. G. Mackay.

32,378. Was your grazing just a part of the same block of grazing that Mr Rose has been referring to?—Adjoining it.

32,379. And Mr Mackay bought the land of which your pasture was a part from the late Mr Hadwen?—No; Mr Hadwen bought the estate of Rhelonie from Mr Mackay.

32,380. Through whom was it you lost your pasture?—Through the late Mr Hadwen.

32,381. He took it away from you shortly after the purchase?—Yes, as soon as the lease expired he fenced off the hill pasture. The tenants had the hill pasture before then from time immemorial.

32,382. In what year was that?—In 1875.

32,383. Was your rent raised or lowered, or left as it was?—Left as it was.

32,384. What rent do you pay?—We are under the Crofters Act; we pay £7, 10s. now.

32,385. That is your new rent, but what was your old rent?—£9, 1s. 6d.

32,386. Are you and those whom you represent anxious for restoration of that park?—Certainly.

32,387. It is more in that view you come before us than for new holdings?—Certainly.

32,388. What townships do you particularly represent?—Easter Rhelonie and Wester Rhelonie or Torroy, and Achnagart.

32,389. These are the townships immediately next the townships of Badandarrach and Cill-Mochalmaig and Ach-na-h-Annaid?—Yes.

32,390. And the pasture we have been dealing with stretches along immediately to the south of all these townships?—Yes.

32,391. Mr Sutherland.—Can you give us the eastern boundary of the pasture that was taken from you?—The march between Rhelonie and Inver House or Rhiantyre, the property of Mr Smith.

32,392. The fence that encloses the plantation, is that it?—That is so.

32,393. Then after that, what?—Just along to Hilltown again.

32,394. Following the fence, is it, as far as it goes?—There is a piece there belonging to Sheriff Simpson enclosed.

32,395. Is it in a straight line to Hilltown?—It goes in a bend, but part of that pasture belonged at one time to the Mains farm of Culrain.

32,396. Then it curves round somewhat?—Yes, and to the top of Shian to the watershed.

32,397. The Chairman.—Is any of the land that was taken from you now under wood?—The Croc-Chait, as it is called, is under plantation.

32,398. Was that part of your pasture?—It belonged to the Achnagart township.

32,399. Is there any great extent of it in wood?—I cannot give the exact area.

32,400. At any rate no part of your pasture has been put under wood?—No.

WILLIAM CAMPBELL, Crofter, Amat-na-tuath (66)—examined.

32,401. The Chairman.—Were you appointed as a delegate?—Yes, I was.

32,402. At a meeting of what townships?—I was not present at the meeting, but I was appointed to show the ground to the Royal Commissioners,—not to attend any meeting, but just to show the Royal Commission the place where tenants were of old.

32,403. Just mention the place or places?—Glencalvie.

32,404. Tell us in your own words what you wish to say with regard to Glencalvie?—There were 17 families evicted in 1845, and three or four cottars.

32,405. Seventeen crofters and four cottars?—Yes, they had no place on the face of the earth to go to in the meantime but the churchyard.

32,406. Is that land under sheep now?—It is occupied as deer forest, but first and foremost it was made a sheep farm.

32,407. It is now the deer forest of Glencalvie?—Yes.

32,408. Were the crofters living in townships?—Yes.

32,409. What were the names of the townships?—The name of the township was Glencalvie.

32,410. Have you heard of Glen More?—No.

32,411. Was there one township, or more than one?—Only one.

32,412. And there were 17 crofters and four cottars in Glencalvie?—Yes. In all there were 23 crofters between both sides of the glen.

32,413. That land is now under deer, and you invite our attention to it for inspection, do you?—(In Gaelic). Yes, undoubtedly, the Royal Commission should go and see it.

32,414. Is it land that, in your opinion, would be suitable for cultivation by crofters now?—I know that by experience.

32,415. How many crofters would it accommodate?—It would accommodate six on the north side, and three on the south side.

32,416. And what size of holding would these have?—They would not have much of what you call arable, but the hill pasture is good.

32,417. Would they have such an extent of hill pasture as would enable them to live by their holdings?—(In Gaelic). Between arable land and hill ground they could make their living.

32,418. Could they live by the holding alone, without going elsewhere to labour?—They might, or they might not: it would depend on the price of stock.

32,419. Is there any other land you wish us to consider besides Glencalvie?—Yes, there is a bit of land they would like to get part of; it belongs to Sir Kenneth Matheson of Ardross. I live on that estate; not on Glencalvie, but on Sir Kenneth Matheson's estate.

32,420. What is the name of that land belonging to Sir Kenneth Matheson?—It is a Gaelic name, Muckernich.

32,421. What is the extent of it?—I could not actually say the number of acres.

32,422. Is it under sheep?—No, it is under deer at present.

32,423. What deer forest is that?—Glen Dibidal deer forest; it adjoins our march.

32,424. Then, is there any other land you wish to mention, or are these the only two places?—Well, I believe some members of the Royal Commission saw part of Strath Chuilionaich, and that belongs to Sir Charles Ross of Balnagown.

32,425. And is there land there?—Plenty.

32,426. Mr Gordon.—What part of Dibidal forest is it you referred to?—The back joins us at Sallachy: on the south side of Sallachy water.

32,427. Is that at Loch-na-Tuppah, or Carn-dubh?—Marching with Carn-dubh.

32,428. Is it upon the south side of your present pasture?—Yes.

32,429. Is it Cairn Sallachy?—No, it is Carn-dubh.

32,430. Does Amat-na-tuath belong to Sir Kenneth Matheson now?—Yes.

32,431. What is the name of your place?—Amat-na-tuath; you have been round there yourself.

32,432. Do you not have the grazings just now to the top of the hill, to the watershed?—Yes, we have the grazing to the water, on the north side of the water.

32,433. You go up past Cnoc-an-t-saic there?—We graze past Cnoc-an-t-saic, down to the water on the north side.

32,434. And the ground that you say you want or wish to get is the ground between your present pasture and the river Calvie?—Between Glencalvie and the road that leads from Ardross Castle to Dindy Lodge.

32,435. The road would be on the south side of the land you want to get?—Yes.

32,436. And is that ground at present occupied as a deer forest?—Yes.

32,437. Part of the Dibidal deer forest?—Yes.

32,438. Now, when you speak of Glen Chuilionaich, to what part of it do you refer?—The whole of it, from end to end.

Tain. — William Campbell.

32,439. That is from Craigmore down to Croick?—Yes.

32,440. There are apparently four hirsels there at present; Craigmore on the one side, Loub-nan-cuinneag on the other side, and Glaschoill and Croick, is that so?—Yes.

32,441. There is not much of that land that you could safely cultivate, is there?—The whole of the low ground could be cultivated, but in many cases the water might come over the low ground. But that could be checked.

32,442. Well, I would not like to dishearten you, but, I am afraid it would be a difficult matter to keep the water from overflowing?—These lands were cultivated in former days.

32,443. Is it not a fact that the whole of the green ground in Glencalvie is so flat as to be subject to flooding every time the river rises?—Oh, yes, no doubt, the water will come over it.

32,444. I would not go quite so far as you; I don't think it would go quite over the whole, but I think it would cover four-fifths of it?—It will come within half-a-mile of Rhelonie House, to the east end.

32,445. Would you propose to put crofters in Glencalvie with the object of their cultivating that green ground?—It would not be altogether the cultivation of the low ground, but the produce of the hill.

32,446. That means a sheep stock farm?—Yes.

32,447. How many people would you suppose could be put on it?—I am not prepared to give the Royal Commission any answer to that; if I had time I could soon tell, but I had no time to consider the matter over.

32,448. There are apparently four hirsels there at present: now, how many more people would you expect to keep in that glen?—It would keep double the quantity.

32,449. Well, assume that it would keep eight,—I believe it would, but you must recollect this, that in those four hirsels there are in all probability about 3000 sheep, so that each of your eight men would have to take over 375 sheep?—That would be little enough for them to live upon and pay their landlord.

32,450. Little enough if they paid the same rent as the tacksman. Now, do you think you could get eight men in your country who would have sufficient capital to do that, for you must also keep in view that there are no buildings there except the houses of the four shepherds; they would have to erect buildings for the extra four men?—Well, I cannot say in the present day, because the land is getting of less value than it was some years ago.

32,451. Yes, but it is very good ground: there is nothing to say against the land: but what we want to get at just now is whether you could get eight men in your locality, or in the strath about you, with sufficient capital to provide the buildings and to purchase these 375 sheep (I take the number at the statement made by a previous witness). The value of these sheep at the present time would possibly be not far from £600?—That is according to the market: we cannot set a figure on it.

32,451*a*. I am taking the market prices,—the prices that have generally ruled in this part of the country?—Some few years ago we were getting 14s. more for a sheep than we would get to-day.

32,452. I quite agree with you. I have heard of sheep being valued in your country at 70s. for the ewe and lamb, which at present prices would fetch something like 40s. or 50s. But putting it at 25s. per head on the average, would mean nearly £500?—Hardly; you may leave it at £1, 1s.

32,453. I won't be very particular. Suppose we take them at £1, 1s., that would be £400 for the sheep. How much would you allow for the buildings?—Surely to goodness if I was paying my landlord he would be obliged to give me a place to live in: I was not going to live in a tent outside. It is the case at the present day that landlords are putting up buildings for tenants. There may be something different under this new law, but I am ignorant of it.

32,454. There are four of your eight men who would have to pay £400 each for the sheep and who would occupy the present shepherds' houses: and there are other four who would have to pay £400, and to build houses for themselves?—Likely these poor men had as much right to get houses as those who might get the shepherds' houses.

Tain. — William Campbell.

32,455. Very likely, they might be the better men, but unfortunately they cannot, two of them, live in the one house. But do you suppose you could find people of sufficient wealth to take these places?—There is no doubt but the money could be raised.

32,456. You have no fear of it?—No.

32,457. You think if the lands were available you would find people of sufficient capital to take them?—I don't bind myself to take them, but I know throughout the country there are those who would chance it.

32,458. I am glad to hear it.

32,459. Mr Sutherland.—How many families did you say were in Glencalvie?—Seventeen crofters and four cottars.

32,460. You would not propose to put so many back now, would you?—No.

32,461. How many?—I think five in place of 17.

32,462. And you think there is sufficient arable and hill pasture to give reasonable sized holdings to five families?—Oh, I think so.

32,463. When was Glencalvie cleared of people?—In 1845.

32,464. Then, you remember that?—I was at the age of 20 when I was knocked out, and put into the churchyard.

32,465. Do I understand you to be one of the Glencalvie people at the time the Rosses were cleared out of Glencalvie?—Yes, and here is another.

32,466. What use was Glencalvie put to immediately after that?—It was made into a sheep farm. The sheep farmer had it for a number of years, and when he died it was given over to Sir Alexander Matheson of Ardross, who made it a deer forest, and it has been a deer forest since. Now, the present landlord is an English gentleman who bought it as a forest, and spent a lot of money since he got it three years ago. He is a splendid, first class neighbour, for we are neighbouring him.

32,467. He is a good neighbour to you?—He is a better neighbour than our landlord was, whether that was owing to the fault of the landlord or of his servants.

32,468. He is a good neighbour to you, and you are good neighbours to him?—Yes, we would like to be that.

32,469. So it is as broad as it is long. With regard to the stock that the Glencalvie people had when they were removed, was their stock taken over at a valuation?—Yes.

32,470. I mean the people who were cleared out of Glencalvie in 1845; was their stock taken over at a valuation?—It was.

32,471. By whom?—By Major Robertson, or his factor.

32,472. Was the stock of these people taken over from them when they were cleared from Glencalvie?—Yes, the whole stock.

32,473. The sheep?—The sheep only.

32,474. What happened to their sheep?—They were taken over by the incoming tenant.

32,475. He took over their stock?—Yes, he did.

32,476. And kept it there?—Kept it there. That was the stock he had first and foremost there.

32,477. Do you know how much he paid per head for them?—I cannot say.

32,478. Did you ever hear?—I heard it, but you see I was a young lad at the time, and cared very little about the affair.

32,479. Their houses, were they taken over at a valuation?—No, not a penny.

32,480. And their cattle stock?—The cattle stock they had to sell the best way they could.

32,481. Where were the people sent to mostly?—First and foremost they were sent to the churchyard.

32,482. Is that a figure of speech, or is it an actual fact?—Mr Murray in Tain here had the forest farm under sheep, and he had Croick and Torphin also. When we were turned off Mr Murray gave tarpaulins for shelter to keep off the rain. The tarpaulins were put up beside the churchyard dykes; the people lived there, having fire outside at which they did their cooking.

32,483. What took them to the churchyard?—They had no other place on the face of God's earth to go to.

32,484. They went there because the churchyard was public property?—The churchyard was their own public property.

KENNETH MACRAE, Corrieblair, Edderton (50) —examined.

32,485. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—No, I am a cottar.

32,486. Have you any land?—I have a small bit of croft and some pasture.

32,487. Do you pay a rent?—Yes.

32,488. What rent do you pay?—£3.

32,489. To whom do you pay that rent?—To the Dowager Lady Ross of Balnagown.

32,490. You are on the Balnagown estate?—Yes.

32,491. Do you ask our attention to any land in your neighbourhood?—I was appointed as a delegate for the purpose of directing attention to the Mains of Edderton farm, where I was born and brought up.—It being allowed out in waste land under sheep now.

32,492. You were appointed delegate at a meeting of the crofters of Mains of Edderton?—Yes.

32,493. Were you deprived of pasture?—Pasture and farm, some time ago.

32,494. When did that happen?—Well, I was born and brought up on the estate of Edderton, and I am now on the estate of Balnagown. What I referred to happened eight years ago.

32,495. What is it you wish to say?—Mains of Edderton being a good arable farm, and laid out under sheep about 240 or 250 acres.

32,496. What about it?—It would be better under crofters.

32,497. There is land there available for crofters?—Yes, where I was born and brought up.

32,498. Is that old arable land, or is it grazing you refer to?—It was old arable land at one time, but it is now grazing, under sheep.

32,499. Now, what extent of land is there on the Mains of Edderton suitable for cultivation by crofters?—About 140 acres, or so.

32,500. Where exactly is that land? Do you mean the whole farm?—Yes.

32,501. You do not include land that is under rotation of crop, I suppose?—No.

32,502. Just land under grazing?—Under grazing.

32,503. Are the crofters you represent in great need of land?—Oh, yes.

32,504. Do you know the size of the farm of Mains of Edderton?—About 160 acres.

32,505. One hundred and sixty acres and you want 240; do you mean 240 acres on the Balnagown estate?—No, but the Mains of Edderton farm—Macfie's farm.

32,506. Do you include part of Balnagown and part of Mr Macfie's farm?—No, the Mains of Edderton farm; there are 160 acres in it; and there are crofts outside the farm that crofters were evicted from. In addition to the 160 acres, there are about 90 acres in the farm from which crofters were removed.

32,507. What is the name of that land?—Carn-a'-chait, Larigs of Tain, Bogruadh.

32,508. These are old townships?—Yes. There were crofters there in my younger days.

32,509. You have indicated sufficiently the locality of the ground. Bogruadh is immediately south of the Mains of Edderton?—Yes.

32,510. And I think you said already that the land is suitable for cultivation now?—Yes.

32,511. Or a considerable portion of it?—The whole of it is.

32,512. Now, would you be able to take a holding in the land you are specifying?—If I got it for a fair rent.

32,513. But if you got it at a fair rent, could you stock it without assistance?—Yes, I made two farms there already. Tain.

32,514. Where were these?—One was Bogruadh, and the other was down below at Seafield. Part of Bogruadh, and the other I cultivated solely myself. Kenneth Macrae.

32,515. Were these lands that you reclaimed from the waste?—Yes, except a few acres.

32,516. Except a few acres arable which you got on entry?—Yes.

32,517. And how did you come to leave these?—Because the places were high rented. I was evicted.

32,518. And you gave them up?—Yes, I had to do so.

32,519-20. How many crofters are living at the Mains of Edderton?—There are none.

32,521. Well, how many crofters do you represent from the meeting?—About nine.

32,522. Where are these nine living at present?—They are back and fore on the Hill of Edderton.

32,523. And are all these crofters anxious to get more land?—Yes, they are.

32,524. Mr Gordon.—Is this farm of Edderton all under grass at present?—Well, except a garden that the proprietor and the gamekeeper and the shepherd have.

32,525. But the farm comprises almost all the estate, does it not?—No.

32,526. Are there more places upon the property?—Yes.

32,527. What is the name of them?—The Hill of Edderton.

32,528. That is crofters round to the south?—Yes.

32,529. But in connection with this farm of Mains of Edderton, is the mansion house there?—Yes.

32,530. And a good house for the tenant?—There is a steading.

32,531. And if the farm was put under crofters this steading would be practically useless?—Oh, yes, it would. It is useless already.

32,532. The present tenant of the farm does not reside on the farm?—No.

32,533. But suppose that the farm was let to another tenant, he might reside upon it, and cultivate the whole land, and get the good of the steading, is that not so?—Yes, that might be the case.

32,534. Well, would it not be a great sacrifice to divide the farm up into crofts?—It would be better in crofts than as it is, lying waste without yielding a crop.

32,535. But you do not say that land is waste because it is under sheep?—Crofters had it before.

32,536. There is nothing to prevent the farm being again cultivated and being used as an arable holding? It is not under sheep in the form of outlying arable land in a grazing farm or a deer forest, but simply arable land under grass, is that not so?—It is arable land under grass.

32,537. Are you one of the crofters upon Edderton Hill?—No.

32,538. There was an application made some years ago by the crofters for an extension of grazing there to the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

32,539. Did their proposal include this Larig of Tain, or was it confined to the hill?—To the Hill of Edderton.

32,540. It did not go down into the hollow?—[Mr Watson. It embraced the whole thing except the arable land.]

32,541. Your application is for the arable farm of the Mains of Edderton, which is principally under grass and pastured with sheep, is that so?—Yes.

32,542. Mr Sutherland.—How many families are on the Hill of Edderton?—About nine or ten.

32,543. How much pasture have they got each?—Very few acres, just right about the houses.

32,544. And have they hill pasture?—No hill pasture.

32,545. You stated that crofters had this land before, when was it?—About twenty years ago.

32,546. And it was taken away from them as recently as twenty years ago?—Yes.

32,547. And what was made of the land when it was taken away?—Under sheep.

32,548. It was not made into arable land?—No.

Tain. Kenneth Macrae.

32,549. It is not arable yet in fact?—It is not arable yet.

32,550. The people who are on the Hill of Edderton now, did they themselves make the arable patches that they live on?—Yes, I believe most of them reclaimed the land themselves.

32,551. This land that was taken away from the crofters was consolidated into the present farm of Mains of Edderton, is that the case?—Yes.

32,552. At present that farm is held by a tenant who does not reside there?—Who does not reside there.

32,553. And you also say that the land that was under crop at one time has recently been allowed to go out of crop and is now waste?—Out of crop and under sheep.

32,554. Is there any land cultivated at all on the farm of Mains of Edderton?—No.

32,555. Do you remember a time when it was cultivated?—Yes, and I did it myself.

32,556. So the result of taking the land from you has been that it has been put out of cultivation?—Put out of cultivation.

32,557. That is high farming, I suppose, do you think so?—High farming.

32,558. Then you think that this is a very good subject for giving these people extension of their grazings, is that so?—As good as any in Ross-shire.

32,559. And you are prepared to show us that land if we go there to see it?—Yes, I am.

32,560. Mr George Macleay, Solicitor, Tain, Agent for Mr Macfie.—Are you serious in saying that the crofters had this Mains farm twenty years ago? Is it not the case that two families, first the Macintyre family and then the Gillies family, occupied this as one farm for more than fifty years altogether?—You are wrong.

32,561. Well, correct me.—I am only fifty years old yet, and I was born on Mains of Edderton farm.

32,562. How long is it since Mr Scott was tenant of this Mains farm?—About half a dozen years.

32,563. Before then who was tenant?—Mr Macintyre.

32,564. Was not it Mr Catley?—Mr Catley.

32,565. Did he not occupy part of it as arable land himself?—Yes.

32,566. How many years had he it before he sold the place?—Three or four years after Mr Macintyre left.

32,567. Who had it before Mr Catley?—Mr Macintyre.

32,568. Had he the whole of this Mains farm?—Yes.

32,569. How many years had he it?—I daresay about ten or twelve years.

32,570. And who had it before him?—I had a part of it,—my father at least.

32,571. And who had the rest?—One Donald Mackenzie had a part of it, one Mr Gallie had another part of it.

32,572. Had not Mr Gallie the proper Mains farm for over thirty years?—He had 90 acres of it for nineteen years.

32,573. So that this Mains farm was arable for more than thirty years?—Yes, and more; perhaps seventy years.

32,574. Was it your father or you who had part of the Mains farm?—My father.

32,575. Did he get a better place at Seafield below there, from the landlord?—No, he did not.

32,576. He got a worse, did he?—He got a worse.

32,577. He got a bigger place?—No.

32,578. A smaller place?—A smaller place.

32,579. How then did he come to shift?—He was evicted from the Bogruadh.

32,580. And put down to Seafield?—Put down to Seafield.

32,581. And you succeeded him?—Yes.

32,582. And you told us that you gave it up yourself?—Yes.

32,583. What bit are you wanting then? Do you say you are able to take a bit if you got it? Is it not the case that your affairs became embarrassed?—Oh, it is that; but Novar's representatives were talking of getting Government money for planting trees, and would not it be as well to give money for crofting purposes as give it for plantations?

Tain. Kenneth Macrae.

32,584. You are aware that the Edderton crofters got a bit of the Hill of Edderton from the Crofters Commission, are you?—They had the offer, but I don't think they took it.

32,585. But you know they got the chance and would not take it?—They would not take it.

32,586. So the crofters of the Hill of Edderton now propose to remove from where they are at present?—Most of them might take more land where they are.

ROBERT ROSS, Cottar, Ardgay (42)—examined. Robert Ross.

32,587. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—No.

32,588. A cottar?—Yes.

32,589. Do you pay a rent?—No, I do not pay a rent.

32,590. Do you live at Ardgay?—Yes.

32,591. Were you appointed as a delegate, or are you here in your own interest?—I have been appointed as a delegate.

32,592. At a public meeting?—Yes.

32,593. Where was the meeting held?—At Ardgay public school.

32,594. Have you any written statement?—No.

32,595. Do you wish to call our attention to any particular lands?—Yes, I do.

32,596. What lands do you desire to bring before us?—Glencalvie.

32,597. We have heard a good deal of evidence already about Glencalvie; did you hear it also?—I heard part of it; I was born there.

32,598. And do you agree with the evidence you heard?—Just with part of it. I do not agree with the whole of what I heard about it.

32,599. Were you evicted from Glencalvie?—Yes, twice. My father was evicted from Glencalvie in 1845, and he had no place to take refuge, but to put up his tent in the churchyard. After that he went back to Glencalvie, through the incoming tenant who occupied the place as a sheep farm.

32,600. He let your father back?—He let my father back to the house, and gave him the grazing of a cow, and there we remained for some years when Matheson, Ardross, put everything we had outside the door.

32,601. Was that Sir Alexander Matheson?—Yes.

32,602. And where did your father go when he was evicted by Sir Alexander Matheson?—He came down to Strath Carron.

32,603. And lived there a number of years?—Yes.

32,604. You think there is land in Glencalvie that we ought to consider?—Plenty land that will grow barley, corn, and potatoes as much as is put into it.

32,605. How many crofters did Sir Alexander Matheson evict altogether?—It was not Sir Alexander Matheson that evicted them, but his former tenant of the sheep farm. But it was Sir Alexander who evicted my father out of it at the latter end. There were 18 families evicted. They possessed about 30 cattle, 700 sheep, and 80 goats, with the produce of the land.

32,606. Mr Sutherland.—Have you any land?—Not an inch.

32,607. Do you know Glencalvie well?—Yes, I was born there.

32,608. Is it your opinion that there is land there suitable?—Plenty land suitable, but it does not suit the proprietors, because they make the whole land their own.

32,609. Would you take a holding in Glencalvie yourself if you got the opportunity?—Yes, to-morrow.

ALEXANDER ROSS, Crofter, Fendom, near Tain (60)—examined. Alexander Ross.

32,610. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

32,611. What rent do you pay?—The former rent was £7, 10s., but since the Crofters Commission came round I got a reduction of 3s. in the £, making it £6, 7s. 6d.

32,612. Have you got a statement to submit?—Yes.

32,613. I will read it for you to save time. There is a farm of Ballicherry, in the Parish of Tain, consisting of about 600 acres not under cultivation, which is desired for the formation of say five small holdings of 30 acres each of arable, and the following persons are willing and desirious to join in taking some:—(1) John Ross, carpenter, Tain; (2) K. Munro, Fendom; (3) Donald Graham, Tain; (4) William Ross, Fendom; (5) David Ross, Fendom; and erect houses, &c. This leaves about 450 acres over, and with regard to these 450 acres it is proposed to form a club farm with the above five tenants, and the following:—(1) myself; (2) Donald Ross, crofter, Fendom; (3) Hugh Munro, crofter, Fendom; (4) John Ross, crofter, Fendom; (5) Alexander Ross, crofter, Fendom; (6) William Munro, crofter, Fendom. These were formerly 11 occupiers on the farm of Ballicherry, and about 150 acres of it is old arable land suitable for small holdings. Formerly we had a direct road from our holdings in Fendom to the common grazings in the commonty of the Morrichmore near Tain, but now and for some years back we have been shut out by a gate at Ballicherry, and we have now to go a distance of three miles before we can reach our grazing. This farm is now held by Mr Young, late factor on the estate, who has besides it the following farms:— (1) Lochslin, rent £250; (2) Cadboll and Cadboll Mount, rent £620; (3) Ballicherry, rent £160; in all £1030. He keeps one shepherd on the place.

(Signed) ALEXANDER ROSS.

32,614. That is your statement?—Yes.

32,615. And in a word you ask us to consider this farm of Ballicherry, and to inspect it in view of the statement and claims put forward here?—Yes.

32,616. Mr Gordon.—Does this farm of Ballicherry include the pasture land between the old arable land and the sea?—It lies between the sea and our place. When I came to Fendom about 32 years ago I could go with my cattle and put them on the grazing of Morrichmore in half an hour; but I cannot do it to-day. The cattle that I took out of my byre would take three hours to reach the Morrichmore; I have to go by Tain.

32,617. You have one of the crofts lying between Ballicherry and Tain?—On the Fendom.

32,618. Is that old road leading from Tain or from South Balchagarty closed up now so that you cannot get to the pasture?—It goes to Tain, this fence, or very near Tain, and then I have to turn down to the Morrichmore, and there is another fence down at the bent which I cannot get through with my cattle; but when the old boundaries were in Ballicherry the old road went down by the bent. When they got new tenants there they put an iron gate before our faces and said "Stay you there."

32,619. If we go there will you show us exactly where you mean?—With pleasure.

32,620. Whose land is that?—Cadboll's.

WILLIAM ROSS, Pitmaduthie (42)—examined.

32,621. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—No, I am not a crofter.

32,622. What are you?—I work at wire fencing, but I am a crofter's son.

32,623. Is your father alive?—No.

32,624. Were you appointed as a delegate?—I was asked by many of the inhabitants of the parish of Logie and Tain to-day to appear, to make known to this Commission that there is land both in the parish of Tain and in the parish of Logie once cultivated by tenants but now given over to sheep.

32,625. Where exactly is the land in the parish of Tain that you refer to?—First, Grantfield.

32,626. Who occupies Grantfield?—I don't think any tenant has Grantfield.

32,627. Is it a farm?—It was a farm.

32,628. And what is it now?—I cannot tell you what it is now: there is no tenant at all; it is out of cultivation. There is no tenant, except that it is let for wintering for sheep. Tain.

32,629. It is in the hands of the proprietor, I suppose?—I expect so. William Ross.

32,630. Who is the proprietor?—I cannot tell you; it was feued from the Burgh of Tain; I think it is Mr Scott, Solicitor, Inverness, who owns it, but I cannot tell you how many more; I think there are a good many more connected with it.

32,631. Then besides land in the parish of Tain, I think you mentioned Logie?—Yes, but that is not all in the parish of Tain.

32,632. Is there land in Logie?—Yes, there is the Glen of Scotsburn where there were once two tenants, but which is now under sheep.

32,633. Who is the proprietor there?—I think it will be the Dowager Lady Ross.

32,634. You think there is land there that we should inspect?—There is land there; there were two tenants living comfortably there and it is now under sheep along with the farm of Scotsburn.

32,635. It is added to the farm of Scotsburn?—Exactly.

32,636. Do you know who the tenant of Scotsburn is?—The Dowager Lady Ross; it is in her own hands.

32,637. Mr Sutherland.—Are there just these two places, Grantfield and Scotsburn, to which you wish to call our attention?—No, that is not all in the parish of Tain; there is Kingscauseway also.

32,638. Do you say there is land there too?—There were four or five tenants there, and all that land is now under sheep which was once arable, as could be seen.

32,639. Any other place where you think there is suitable land?—In the parish of Logie there is Badnagaun, above Scotsburn, where there were two tenants.

32,640. Any other place?—No.

32,641. Were the small holders put out of there, and the holdings consolidated?—Yes.

32,642. Into one?—Yes.

[ADJOURNED.]

THIRTY-FOURTH SITTING.

Port-Ellen, Islay, Argyllshire.

PORT-ELLEN, ISLAY, ARGYLLSHIRE, March 28, 1894.

Present:—

ANGUS SUTHERLAND, Esq., M.P. (Acting as Chairman.)
JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq.
REV. MALCOLM MACCALLUM.
JOHN MACLEOD, Esq.
HENRY MUNRO, Esq.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

JOHN CAMPBELL, Cottar, Oa (52).
(Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.) John Campbell.

32,643. Mr Sutherland.—You are a cottar from Oa?—Yes.

32,644. Were you elected at a meeting to represent the people of Oa here?—I was.

32,645. How many were present at the meeting?—There were not many at the meeting.

32,646. Were the bulk of the people of the place present?—There were not many, but they selected me because I was better acquainted than the others there.

32,647. Do you know the object of our visit here?—Yes.

32,648. What do you think it is for?—To inquire about land, to see if there are lands that could be reclaimed or taken in.

Port-Ellen, Islay, Argyllshire.

John Campbell.

32,649. Have you any written statement?—No.

32,650. Could you tell us where there is such land as you have referred to?—Yes, plenty of it, where my father and my grandfather and other relatives were.

32,651. Where is that?—The first place I speak of is Giol in Oa.

32,652. Is that a large farm now?—It is now under sheep.

32,653. Can you tell us the size of that farm?—At one time there were nine tenants in Giol.

32,654. How many sheep are on this farm now?—The tenant of Giol has in addition Glenastle, a neighbouring piece of ground, where there were seven tenants.

32,655. Does that adjoin the farm?—Yes.

32,656. Do you think that would be suitable land for making into small holdings?—I think so; it would be as suitable now as it was before. It is not so good now, however, as it has gone under rushes.

32,657. At what time did the small tenants you refer to cease to be there?—It is about thirty-two years since they went to America.

32,658. Have you any information to give us as to the state these small tenants were in when they were there,—were they prosperous?—In these years the markets were not so good; the rents were high, and they were not very well off at that time.

32,659. Did they all go to America?—The majority of them did. Adjoining that is Grastle, also in the Oa district.

32,660. What can you tell us about Grastle?—Nothing, but that it is out the same as the rest: it is under sheep.

32,661. Could you give us any idea of the number of small tenants that were there formerly?—There were at least six in Grastle or Tockmal at one time.

32,662. It is within the farm of Giol?—It is let to the tenant of Kintraw.

32,663. Is that the farm round about Port Askaig?—Yes.

32,664. Is there any other place you have to call our attention to?—That is all that I am to speak about; but there are other delegates to follow me, who will speak to other districts of Oa.

32,665. Is it your opinion that, if an opportunity were given to people in the district of Oa to get small holdings there, they would avail themselves of it?—Yes, some would take land there: I for one would take land. I need land, for I have only a small piece, which is let to my brother. It is too small, and my name is not even in for it.

32,666. Do you know any other person in your neighbourhood who is in the same position?—There is another one, Archibald Macmillan, who is also wanting a piece.

32,667. Mr Maccallum.—As to the means of those who are thinking of getting land, do you think they would be able to stock the land if they got it?—I cannot say as to others, but I would endeavour to stock my own. If we get it at a reasonable rent, we can live on it.

32,668. Did you make an effort to get land from the proprietor?—Yes.

32,669. How were you met by him?—According to them, there was not a suitable place, and when there was a little place vacant, they gave it to another in the neighbourhood.

32,670. Are there many small holdings in Oa?—At Cill-Iain, where I am, there are only two, and there is one at Cill-Iain-mor. There is also a place marching with Bally-Chaitrigin.

32,671. When any small holding falls vacant, is there a good competition for it?—People speak about getting it, at any rate.

32,672. Have such holdings been advertised of late?—I don't know.

32,673. You say that the people who were at Glenastle went to America?—Yes, they all went to America.

32,674. Is the rent of the place now higher than what they paid for it?—They raised the rents when the markets went up, but the rents now are not higher than they were at the time the tenants were there.

32,675. When they were re-let immediately after the people left, were the rents raised?—Well, they got them down afterwards.

32,676. The big farmers have got their rents reduced now?—Yes.

32,677. Are the rents lower now than the rents that were paid by the small tenants?—I cannot say; they did not tell me how the rents are.

32,678. Have the people from that district made application to the County Council for small holdings?—Yes, they have.

32,679. And do you know what reply they got?—That there was no land which could be reclaimed that was worth reclaiming.

32,680. Do you think that has been the reply of the County Council? What did the County Council give as their answer to the applications that were sent in?—That they had not completed their inquiries.

32,681. Do you know the number of applications from Oa?—I cannot tell.

32,682. Can you give any idea of the number of people there who would wish to have a small holding?—I am not sure; but a great many people are speaking about it.

32,683. What is the present position of these people; are they cottars?—They are cottars.

32,684. And what is their occupation?—Labourers.

32,685. Are they accustomed to farm work?—Yes, to some extent.

32,686. And what size of holding do they look for?—Some would take more and some would take less, according to their ability.

32,687. Do you know the general size that they have been applying for?—They want about a Cota-Ban or two.

32,688. Can you tell us what acreage there is in a Cota-Ban?—No, I cannot.

32,689. What capacity would it represent for stock-keeping?—Two Cota-Bans would yield a crop of twenty stacks.

32,690. The Secretary.—A Cota-Ban or Groat Land is a measure of value, not a measure of extent. I see that according to an old authority, Macdonald's work on the agriculture of the Hebrides, dated 1811, one tenant who held a Groat Land, or, as it is called in Islay, Cota-Ban, had right to keep four horses and from seven to ten cows. The rent of a Cota-Ban at the beginning of the century was from £8, 10s. to £10.

32,691. Mr Sutherland.—Would they be able to pay a fair rent for that?—I cannot say a fixed rent: these years it would require to be cheaper, perhaps, than in coming years.

32,692. Why do you say it should be cheaper in these years?—The land is getting into waste, and cannot be tilled at present; it is going under rushes and wild growth.

32,693. And at first there would be some difficulty in getting it into such a state of cultivation as it was in when the tenants were there?—Yes, it would be much more difficult now than before; it would require to be drained and improved, and it would require a fence also, in time.

32,694. And would the applicants undertake to carry on these improvements themselves, without Government aid?—I cannot say about that.

32,695. You can speak for yourself?—I could take land on these conditions, with perhaps a little help also.

32,696. Would you be able to get that help without applying to the Government?—We would require a little help.

32,697. Would you be able to find the money yourself without Government advancing it?—I could take a groat land, I think, without any aid.

32,698. What rent would you pay for that extent of land?—According to the condition of the ground just now, it would be worth just half the rent it used to pay.

32,699. That is until it would be brought into a better condition than it is just now?—Yes; half rent till the ground would be improved.

32,700. What was the old rent?—£24 at one time.

32,701. That used to be the rent for a groat land?—The ground was drained and improved, and then the rent was increased accordingly, to some tenants.

32,702. If the parish of Oa were let to small tenants, do you think they would be able to pay as good a rent as is now paid by the large farmers?—I think they could do that.

32,703. Were farm-houses built for the large farmers by the proprietor?—I don't remember about that; there are simply thatched houses there at present.

32,704. But I refer to the big farm-houses: by whom were they built?—I don't remember about the building of these houses.

32,705. Are you not aware that these were built by the proprietor for the tenants before they entered?—I cannot say: perhaps someone else present might be able to say.

32,706. Is it the usual custom that farm-houses are built by the proprietor for large farmers?—The tenants themselves kept up these buildings.

32,707. But the building of them was done by the proprietor, was it not?—I don't know about that.

32,708. Mr Forsyth.—If you had one of these groat holdings that you speak of, would you use it for cattle alone, or would you keep sheep?—I would raise cattle on it—six or seven milk cows.

32,709. In the event of your getting one of these groat holdings, would you have part of your stock in the form of sheep?—We would have some sheep.

32,710. But principally cattle?—Yes, mostly cattle.

32,711. Would such a holding have a large acreage of rough pasture or outrun, or would it be mostly arable and green land?—There is land that could be tilled, and there is land also suitable for grazing purposes.

32,712. Can you give any idea of the average size in acres of a holding of this kind?—My knowledge about acres is rather limited; but about 30 or 40 acres arable I think would be sufficient, with pasture in proportion.

32,713. What rent do you think you could manage to pay for such a holding?—I cannot say till the land is laid out for the purpose.

32,714. But if you had it at a fair rent you could put a full stock on it, and build and fence with a little help: is that your position?—We would like some aid in building the houses.

32,715. How would you propose to get that help?—From the Government, if possible and practicable, paying interest thereon.

32,716. Do you think there are many who would undertake such a considerable holding as that with a good chance of succeeding?—I cannot say that there are many, but there are a good many who talk of the thing.

32,717. Is there any wish here for small holdings, such as would give a man a certain amount of land and leave him time to work at another employment?—Yes, there are some that would take crofts on these conditions.

31,718. Mr Munro.—Are you aware that the proprietor builds the houses of the present large tenants of these farms?—I don't know about that.

32,719. Were the tenants who left thirty-two years ago forcibly evicted, or did they go of their own free will?—Some left voluntarily, owing to the poor markets.

32,720. And were any of them evicted with force?—Yes, on the south side of the parish.

32,721. Were these tenants fairly prosperous thirty-two years ago?—Yes, they were prosperous, but the markets were behind, as they are in these times; and potatoes failed, and so forth.

32,722. If these farms were divided amongst a similar class of tenants to-day, is it your opinion that they would succeed?—Yes, I think they would: the ground is good.

32,723. How would they cultivate these little holdings to-day?—Ploughing, cutting off the rushes, and so forth.

32,724. Would they produce any crops?—It would not be very good the first year, or the first two years, perhaps; it would require to be manured.

32,725. What sort of green crops do they grow?—Oats.

32,726. No barley?—Barley also, and potatoes and turnips; any kind of agricultural produce.

32,727. Do you think now that a proportion of them could take these small holdings without Government assistance?—I cannot say about that: I don't know. Perhaps a few might.

32,728. What would be the size of the stacks you spoke about?—They would be rather small.

32,729. How many quarters of grain would be in each of these stacks?—7 bags, with 6 bushels, on some of the stacks.

32,730. Mr Greig, law agent for the proprietor of Kildalton.—Were any tenants evicted from the estate?—On one side of the parish they were evicted, and on the other side they left voluntarily.

32,731. What side were they evicted on?—Strimnishmore.

32,732. What is the name of the place where they were not evicted?—A place called Giol; they left it voluntarily, I understand.

32,733. Give us the name of one person who was evicted forcibly?—Archibald Campbell from Strimnish, and Duncan Macnab from the same place.

32,734. Mr Sutherland.—Would you show us the land considered to be suitable for the purpose, if we go there?—Yes, I will do that.

NEIL MACEWAN, crofter, Oa (59).
(Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

32,735. Mr Sutherland.—You are a crofter, I understand?—Yes.

32,736. What is the size of your croft?—I cannot tell the number of acres.

32,737. Did you apply to the Crofters Commission to have a fair rent fixed?—Yes.

32,738. What was your old rent before the Commission came?—£20.

32,739. And what did the Commission make it?—They made a reduction of £4, 10s.

32,740. Were you elected at a meeting to give evidence before us to-day?—Yes, I was elected for that purpose.

32,741. Are there many crofters in Oa?—No, there are not many.

32,742. How many?—Seven.

32,743. Do they on an average pay more or less rent than you?—In one township, Cragabus, we pay the same rent.

32,744. Therefore the holdings will be practically the same size?—Yes.

32,745. Have you sheep and cattle both?—Yes, we have both cattle and sheep.

32,746. Do you hold your pasture land in common?—Yes, we have moorland in common, besides the arable grounds.

32,747. How many sheep have you got?—We have about twenty, and perhaps more in some cases.

32,748. What crops do you grow?—Oats, potatoes, turnips.

32,749. Are these of a good quality?—Yes, they are a good quality.

32,750. Does your corn ripen regularly, or do you suffer from late harvests sometimes?—Yes, it does ripen.

32,751. And do you grow potatoes of good quality?—According to the weather and the season; one year is better than another.

32,752. Is there plenty land in large holdings round about where you are, that is as good as the land you have?—Yes, part of it is, and part is not.

32,753. Would the crofters in Oa take more land if they got it? Do they complain of the smallness of their holdings?—I think there are some who have enough.

Port-Ellen, Islay, Argyllshire.

Neil Macewan.

32,754. And are you here rather in the interests of those who have got no land at all than of the crofters?—I am not here for the crofters nor for the cottars: I just want to give evidence about the land in the place.

32,755. Is there a desire on the part of the crofters of Oa to have more land?—I do not hear that there is.

32,756. Did you hear the evidence that was given by Mr Campbell?—Yes.

32,757. You heard him speak of land which he thought was suitable for the purpose of our inquiry on the farms of Giol, Glenastle, and Grastle?—Yes, I heard that.

32,758. Do you agree with that evidence?—I do not say anything against that evidence.

32,759. Do you know any land additional to what Mr Campbell spoke of that would be suitable?—There is none in that part of Oa except what Mr Campbell mentioned.

32,760. Is there any other place outside of Oa?—I do not want to refer to other places in the neighbourhood.

32,761. Are there other witnesses who in your opinion are better qualified to give us information regarding those places?—There is a man, Archibald Campbell, here who might come forward.

32,762. May we take you to agree generally with Mr Campbell's evidence?—Yes, I agree with all he said.

32,763. Mr Forsyth.—How many cows have you?—Five just now.

32,764. Have you any horses?—Yes, three.

32,765. Do you find that you are able to make a fair living out of your croft without doing other work?—We cannot get much other labour to do outside the croft.

32,766. Would you have time for other labour if you had the chance?—In parts and seasons of the year we would have time for it.

32,767. Then your croft not taking all your time, would you desire a larger holding that would occupy all your time?—Yes, a holding like that would be more suitable.

32,768. You would prefer a larger holding, taking all your time to a croft, with a chance of labour if you could get such?—Yes, we would prefer the larger holding without extra labour.

32,769. But as it stands you can make a fair living now with the croft as it is?—We do take out all that we can from it.

32,770. But still that enables you to make something of a living?—Yes, a sort of livelihood, but it is not very good.

32,771. Mr Munro.—Are you aware whether the proprietors of the island generally are favourable to an increase of small holdings?—I cannot say as to that.

32,772. In answer to Mr Sutherland, you stated that you produced good grain crops. To be a little more specific, what would be the weight per bushel of the oats you produce on your holding?—Sometimes 40 lbs., and in other years under that.

32,773. Have you any idea what quantity of meal your 8 bushels of oats would produce?—At 40 lbs. two bags of corn would yield 280 lbs. of meal, that is out of 12 bushels.

32,774. Mr Macleod.—What is the name of your township?—Cragabus.

32,775. Do you crop the arable portion of your holding in rotation? Do you lay it out in grass?—Yes, we till it in rotation.

32,776. Is it a five or a six-year rotation?—One year between each crop.

32,777. Mr Maccallum.—Did the crofters of your township fall into arrears before the Crofters Commission came to fix the rents?—Yes, they did.

32,778. To what extent?—Some had £20 of arrears, others had not so much, and some none at all.

32,779. Did the crofters get a reduction of rent from the proprietors without the intervention of the Commission?—Yes, they did. The landlord reduced the rents at one time.

32,780. When did they last get a reduction from the proprietor?—I cannot give the exact date.

32,781. What was the rent before it was reduced?—It was £20, and we got it reduced £3.

Port-Ellen, Islay, Argyllshire.

Neil Macewan.

32,782. But it was £20 when the Commission came?—Yes.

32,783. Was it reduced from £23 to £20 by the proprietor?—Yes.

32,784. Are you able to sell grain from your holding?—Yes, we sell a little of either oats or meal.

32,785. And do you make your own meal?—Yes.

32,786. Sufficient for the family the whole year?—No, it does not yield so much as that.

32,787. In your recollection was there more cultivation in Oa than there is now?—Yes, I have remembrance of such times.

32,788. Can you tell us the number of cottars in Oa?—There are three cottars altogether: I don't know of any more.

ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, carter, Port-Ellen (60). (Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

Archibald Campbell.

32,789. Mr Sutherland.—Do you hold any land yourself?—I have not any just now.

32,790. Have you any written statement to submit to us?—No.

32,791. What do you wish particularly to bring before us?—I used to have land and to till land twenty-three years ago.

32,792. How did you cease to have land?—We were forced to stop it.

32,793. Where were you at the time?—In a place called Lurabus first.

32,794. Where is Lurabus?—On the south side of the promontory of the Oa.

32,795. In whose occupation is that now?—A gentleman farmer, Mr Gemmell, has it now.

32,796. What is the name of the farm?—Lurabus.

32,797. Is it near Giol?—Near the lighthouse, on the opposite side of the promontory.

32,798. What land had you there?—Two groat lands.

32,799. How many were in Lurabus besides you?—Four other crofters besides me.

32,800. What became of the others?—They left.

32,801. Do you know where they went to?—To America. One of them is down at Oa just now.

32,802. At the time you left, were the holdings consolidated or made into one large holding?—Yes, when we left they were made into one large farm.

32,803. How long ago is that?—Thirty-two or thirty-three years ago.

32,804. Have you been in Port-Ellen ever since?—Yes.

32,805. Were those tenants of whom you were one in comfortable circumstances there?—Yes, in pretty fair circumstances.

32,806. Were they in better circumstances than you are to-day?—Yes, we were much better off in these times, when we had the land.

32,807. And if you got an opportunity under reasonable conditions of taking a holding of that size again, would you take it?—I have no means just now to take it.

32,808. But if you had means would you change your present life for that?—Yes, I would.

32,809. Where do you get employment now chiefly?—At all kinds of work, carting, &c.: I keep my cart going as much as I can.

32,810. Do you get employment about the distilleries?—Yes.

32,811. Do you get more work from distilleries than from any other source?—Yes.

32,812. Were you elected to represent any person but yourself here?—A meeting was held, and I was elected to come here and give evidence.

32,813. So you speak as a representative not only of yourself but of others?—I speak for myself.

32,814. What is your opinion regarding the desire of others? Are there many persons except yourself who you think would be glad to take small holdings, if they got an opportunity, in Port-Ellen?—Yes, there are some.

32,815. You are aware that there are two ways of getting land that have been recognised,—first a small holding and second an allotment. Do you understand the difference between these?—Yes.

32,816. Which, in your opinion, would be more suitable for those people in Port-Ellen who would like some land?—I would take a small holding myself.

32,817. That means leaving your present place and going to live on the holding: do you understand that?—Yes, I would leave my present work and go there.

32,818. And on the other hand, an allotment is meant to provide a small piece of land to one who has none now, and who would still continue to live in his present home?—I would take an allotment along with my present work.

32,819. Which would you prefer for yourself?—It would be no use for me to be in the village unless I got work on the holding.

32,820. Would it not be a benefit, in your opinion, to people who are living in Port-Ellen to have a small allotment of an acre or two acres upon which they could raise potatoes?—Yes, I think that would be an advantage to them.

32,821. Do you think there are other people who would prefer to leave Port-Ellen altogether if they got a small holding, and live on such a holding?—So they say, some of them.

32,822. Do you know in this neighbourhood any land which would be suitable for making into such small holdings?—There is plenty of land, but they will not give it.

32,823. But you know that there is such land?—Yes, I know there is such land.

32,824. Can you tell us any place where we would find such land?—I don't want to tell that, or to take anything to do with that.

32,825. But don't you want to give us all the information in your power? Where is there land held in large farms that would be suitable for the purposes to which we have been referring, of small holdings and allotments?—In Oa, in Kildalton. The south side of the Oa is suitable for that purpose.

32,826. Let us take the case of allotments. The land for allotments would require to be near Port-Ellen?—Yes.

32,827. And there could be land, now held as large holdings, further out than that, which would be suitable for small holdings?—Yes.

32,828. Take then first the land that would be suited for allotments, which would require to be near Port-Ellen; do you know of any such land?—The land about Port-Ellen is under lease, occupied by others.

32,829. We are not talking about leases, we are talking about information as to where that land is in large holdings. Never mind the leases, but tell us where the land is?—I don't know about that.

32,830. You heard the answers that were given by Mr Macewan about the crops that were yielded by the holdings. Does that agree with your experience when you had a holding?—Yes, I agree with most or all that Mr Macewan said about the crops the land would give.

32,831. On that point you corroborate his evidence?—Yes.

32,832. And also with regard to the stock?—Yes.

32,833. What rent did you pay when you had a holding?—I paid £29.

32,834. Was that larger or smaller than the holding that Mr Macewan now has?—The holding I had was twice the size of Neil Macewan's.

32,835. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Can you tell us the number of householders in Port-Ellen?—I cannot say, but it could be ascertained.

32,836. Can you give us a rough idea?—It is not easy for me to answer that question.

32,837. Do you know the number of those who have cow's grazing?—There are not many in the village who have grazings. We pay rent for each cow's grazing.

32,838. How many have got cows?—Nearly all the householders in the village have one cow.

32,839. And have they land from which they can get wintering for the cows?—We buy fodder in winter: we buy everything for them.

32,840. Have you land for cultivation at all?—I have no land whatever, but I could cultivate if I had.

32,841. Are there others in the same position?—There are some.

32,842. Are you aware that fifty persons applied to the County Council for allotments and small holdings from Port-Ellen?—I don't know the number that made application.

32,843. Are you aware that a large number did apply?—I know that a large number did.

32,844. Are those who applied entirely without land, do you know?—Yes, all are of that description.

32,845. Can you tell us how the land in the neighbourhood of Port-Ellen is occupied?—Partly arable and partly grazing.

32,846. Is it in the occupation of working people?—The people that have the land have as much land as to keep them going, around the village.

32,847. Is it the case that the land is let in grazing parks from year to year?—Yes.

32,848. And who are the people that take them—what, generally speaking, is their occupation?—Merchants and butchers and blacksmiths, distillers, hotel-keepers, and large families.

32,849. They are let to those who are in comfortable circumstances?—These people have the privilege of getting such land.

32,850. And is it impossible for a working man to get an allotment?—I don't know about that.

32,851. Do you think a working man would be able to compete with the merchants and butchers and others who presently take the grazings?—If they would get it at a fair rent.

32,852. Just now it is let at a high rent on account of the competition by the well-to-do people?—Yes.

32,853. Do you think the land in the neighbourhood of Port-Ellen is let at a higher rate than would be suitable for working people?—Supposing the land was cultivated, it would not yield produce that would average the rent that is paid for it now.

32,854. And those who occupy these parks do not depend at all on the produce of the land?—That is so; merchants and butchers and blacksmiths do not depend upon these grazings.

32,855. Do you know what the County Council did with regard to the applications that were sent in?—I don't know about that.

32,856. Are you aware that they refused to put the Small Holdings and the Allotments Acts into operation in this country?—I don't know about that.

32,857. Was there any answer at all sent to the fifty applicants from Port-Ellen?—If there was, I did not hear about it.

32,858. You were not aware that the County Council resolved that it was unfair to impose upon them the extra cost of carrying out the Small Holdings and Allotments Acts?—I heard a rumour about the reason why the holdings were refused to applicants.

32,859. And is it your opinion that allotments, such as are contemplated under the Act, would be very suitable for such a place as Port-Ellen?—Yes, I think so.

32,860. Mr Macleod.—You said that there were five tenants at Lurabost including yourself. Were they all paying a rent equal to yours?—Yes, they paid a rent similar to mine.

32,861. How long had you a holding there?—My people were there for generations untold.

32,862. Were there more people at Lurabost at one time than those five tenants?—Yes, there were more people.

32,863. What became of them?—Most of them left for America.

32,864. You and those who were left got their holdings?—Yes, their land was added to the land we had.

32,865. Can you tell me what year that was in?—It was about fifty-one or fifty-two years ago; in the year 1843, I think.

Port-Ellen, Islay, Argyllshire.

Archibald Campbell.

32,866. When did you leave Lurabost?—Thirty-one years ago.

32,867. But you told me there were more tenants in Lurabost at one time than five, and that they went to America, and you and the others who were left got the land that they had given up. Now you say you left in 1863 at the same time as they left. Is it the case that there had been more than five families in Lurabost with land?—Yes.

32,868. How long since? Do you remember it?—I cannot say how many years.

32,869. Was it long before you left?—Yes, a long time before I left.

32,870. But you remember them?—Yes.

32,871. What would the holdings be rented at in these days; how many holdings were there then?—Eleven altogether, including the five.

32,872. There were six who went to America, and the five who were left got their holdings?—Yes, their land was added to ours.

32,873. Did those tenants go away of their own free will or were they evicted?—Some left voluntarily, and one went away against his will—was evicted, in fact.

32,874. What was the reason for his being evicted?—His cattle used to stray on other farms about.

32,875. Then did those who went to America leave because the places were not paying them?—I don't know about that; it paid some and it did not pay others.

32,876. But there must have been some reason why a number of families went all the way from Islay to America; was not there some general reason for them all going at the same time?—I cannot tell the reason.

32,877. Do you mean to tell me seriously that six families in a small township made up their minds to go to America, and that you were living in the township and cannot remember what the reason was?—I don't know the reason.

32,878. Don't you think it would be fairer to say that you do not want to tell the reason?—I don't know the reason.

32,879. You state positively that you don't know the reason?—Yes, I state positively that I don't know the reason.

32,880. Can you tell me whether the holdings that they left were sufficient to keep the five families that were there occupied all the year round? Were they sufficiently large?—Yes, they were.

32,881. Then why did you leave your holding there?—We had to leave.

32,882. You were removed from there?—Yes.

32,883. Was there any reason for it?—No.

32,884. But you were all removed at the same time?—Yes, we all left at the same time.

32,885. Did you leave, or were you removed or evicted?—We left voluntarily and went to Ballychatrigan. [Mr Sutherland.—The translation should rather be, 'We left and went to Ballychatrigan.']

32,886. Did you get as good a holding there as you had at Lurabost?—Yes, it was as good.

32,887. Then why did you leave Ballychatrigan?—We had to leave to make room for sheep, and go to strange places.

32,888. How many years were you in Ballychatrigan?—Four years.

32,889. Did the other four tenants who were in Lurabost get places in Ballychatrigan also?—No.

32,890. Did they get any place anywhere?—Two of them got a place in Ballychatrigan.

32,891. And the other two?—The other two went to America.

32,892. Then, when you were removed from Ballychatrigan did you go of your own free will?—We had to go.

32,893. You did not go of your own free will?—No, it was not of our own free will.

32,894. Where did you go to?—Strimnish.

32,895. Did you get a holding at Strimnish as good as you had?—We got a holding in Strimnish as good as in Ballychatrigan.

32,896. What was the rent you were paying in Strimnish?—£29.

32,897. And how long were you there?—Four years.

32,898. Why did you leave Strimnish?—We were not allowed to stop.

32,899. You were again removed from Strimnish?—Yes.

32,900. Why?—They wanted the land for sheep.

32,901. What was done with the holding that you left at Lurabost? Was it put under sheep too?—Yes.

32,902. And the second holding was also put under sheep?—Yes.

32,903. And when you were put out of Strimnish where did you go?—We came to Port-Ellen.

32,904. There was no provision made for you when you were put out of Strimnish?—I had nothing; I had to go to some place.

32,905. Did any of the other tenants that were with you in the other places come to Port-Ellen, or what became of them?—One went to America and one went to Mull.

32,906. When you left your last holding at Strimnish what did you do with your stock: did you sell it off?—We sold it.

32,907. What stock did you sell when you left Strimnish?—Nine or ten cows.

32,908. Any followers?—Yes.

32,909. As many, or more?—Sometimes few and sometimes many.

32,910. How many horses had you?—Three horses.

32,911. How many sheep?—Forty sheep.

32,912. Can you remember how much the whole of that stock realised when you sold it?—I cannot tell that; I kept some of them to come to the village here.

32,913. How did you propose to keep them at the village?—We paid rent to other parties for the grazing.

32,914. Was it a good time to dispose of stock? Did you get fair prices for them?—It was not a very good time.

32,915. Did you get any compensation for any improvements you had made on the holdings you had in any of the places?—We got nothing as a compensation.

32,916. You got nothing for the houses?—No, we got nothing for the houses.

32,917. Who put up the houses that you had in Lurabost?—My forefathers.

32,918. When you went to the second holding had you to put up a house there?—The walls of the house were up but we thatched them.

32,919. Were there tenants put out at Ballychatrigan to make room for you?—They left, anyway.

32,920. When you got to the third holding had you to put up buildings again?—We had to build or put up houses then.

32,921. Did you get any assistance from the proprietor?—We got wood from the proprietor.

32,922. You will perhaps know the parish of Kildalton, in general, well: you have known it for a good many years now?—Yes, I know it well.

32,923. Are there more people in the parish now than there were when you remember it first?—There are not so many in Oa: I don't know so much about the Kildalton part.

32,924. How do you think their condition compares with what it was when you knew the people first? Are they better off now than they were then, on the whole?—I don't know, but I would prefer being in the Oa to my present position.

32,925. Do you think there are a good few in the same way as yourself?—I cannot say as to that.

32,926. You remember Port-Ellen when you were a boy?—Yes.

32,927. Has it grown very much?—Yes, it has.

32,928. Do you think the people of Port-Ellen are better off to-day than in Oa?—I cannot tell about that.

32,929. But you can quite see this, that if you want to get a holding again in the Oa, it would be necessary for you to make it clear that you would be better in the Oa than you would be in Port-Ellen. Now, if you say that you cannot tell, then there is no reason for altering the present state of things?—We don't know what our condition would be if we got a holding in the Oa. I did not lack any since I came to Port-Ellen, but I had great trouble in getting my livelihood.

32,930. Your opinion seems to be that you would probably have been better in the Oa than in Port-Ellen?—If my future position in the Oa would be as good as before, I would go there.

32,931. And do you think it would be as good in the Oa?—Yes, I think it would.

32,932. Mr Sutherland.—Did I understand you to say, that if you got an opportunity of taking a holding in Oa, something like the size of the holding you had before, you would go there yourself?—I am getting too old now, and I have no children to go with me: they are all away from home.

32,933. Were you one of the fifty who applied to the County Council to put the Allotments or Small Holdings Acts into operation in this district?—Yes, I was.

32,934. Who was it that took the lead in the matter? Was there any particular person who got up the petition to the County Council?—The late Mr Campbell, minister of Kildalton.

32,935. So you cannot tell whether he had any communication from the County Council or not?—No. [Rev. Mr Maclean, interpreter.—It was after his death that the County Council refused the application.]

32,936. When you applied to the County Council, was it your wish to have an allotment near the town for growing potatoes, and winter fodder for a cow, or was it for the purpose of getting a larger holding?—I was wishing five or six acres to cultivate along with my present work.

32,937. How is the land let near the town now? You say there are a number of grazing parks?—Everybody can see that.

32,938. Are they put up to auction every year, or how are they let?—The people put in offers for them.

32,939. And those who give the highest offer get the parks?—Yes.

32,940. Now, do the poorer people in Port-Ellen consider the method of letting the parks a grievance?—I don't know about that.

32,941. Are they quite satisfied with the present method of letting these parks, or do they think there might be a better method?—Yes, they are satisfied.

32,942. Are there any allotments in the neighbourhood of Port-Ellen? Have any of the towns-people land that they can crop?—Yes, there are some who have four acres.

32,943. Is that let from year to year, or how?—At a yearly rent.

32,944. But everything is let at a yearly rent. Is it always the same people who have the same piece of land, or does the tenant change?—The same people always have it.

32,945. What is the rent of that land per acre?—I don't know about that.

32,946. Do you know what the parks are let at per acre?—I don't know about that.

32,947. Mr Munro.—Were you and the other tenants in arrear of rent at the times you were evicted from your several holdings?—I had not any arrears.

32,948. Do you know if the other tenants were in arrear?—Some of the others were not.

32,949. Do I understand you to mean that some were?—Some of the others had.

32,950. Had that anything to do with the eviction?—I don't know about that.

32,951. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Is it your opinion that the parks about Port-Ellen here should be subdivided into smaller lots and let to working people?—Yes, I would like a piece myself, and a piece to another man.

32,952. You think that that would be a great benefit to the working people of Port-Ellen?—Yes, it would.

ANGUS MACNAB, carter, Port-Ellen (60).
(Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

32,953. Mr Sutherland.—Are you also a carter in Port-Ellen?—Yes.

32,954. Had you ever any connection with land before?—Yes, I had. Port-Ellen, Islay, Argyllshire.

32,955. Where had you experience of land?—Down in Cragabus.

32,956. That is where Mr Macewan also was?—Yes. Angus Macnab.

32,957. Had you a holding in Cragabus formerly?—Yes.

32,958. What rent did you pay?—Between £15 and £16.

32,959. What stock had you?—Sometimes seven and sometimes eight cows.

32,960. How many horses?—Two.

32,961. And sheep?—About twenty sheep: sometimes more.

32,962. When did you leave that place?—About thirty years ago.

32,963. The same time as Campbell left?—I left a year before Archibald Campbell.

32,964. How many tenants are in Cragabus now?—Five crofters.

32,965. Why did you leave Cragabus?—My father died, and Mr Ramsay, the proprietor, would not allow the son to succeed the father in the holding.

32,966. Were you served with a summons in the usual way to leave the holding?—We got no summons, but Mr Scott, the factor, spoke to us, and I had to sign a paper before leaving.

32,967. And did you come to Port-Ellen then?—Yes.

32,968. Have you been in Port-Ellen ever since?—Yes.

32,969. Would you take a small holding yourself if you got it on reasonable conditions?—Yes, I would.

32,970. Could you direct us to a place where we would see land fitted in your opinion for such a holding?—I would like some ground near the village along with my present work.

32,971. Then you would like an allotment?—Yes.

32,972. Is there land in this neighbourhood that is now held as a large holding that would be suitable in your opinion for making into allotments?—There are large parks about the village, let.

32,973. Would you take such an allotment if you got it?—Yes.

32,974. And do you know any other person who, in your opinion, would take them too?—A good many talk about the matter: I don't know what they would do if they got the chance.

32,975. Supposing they got the opportunity, are you of opinion that they would take it?—Yes.

32,976. You have no doubt about that, have you?—No.

32,977. You have heard the evidence that was given to us by Mr Campbell?—Yes.

32,978. May I take it that you in a general way agree with the evidence?—Yes, I corroborate the evidence given by Archibald Campbell.

32,979. Mr Macleod.—Why would not Mr Ramsay give you the holding? Was there any reason assigned?—The reason I got was, that the son would not be allowed to succeed the father in the holding.

32,980. And who got your father's holding?—A man, William Maccuaig, got the holding.

32,981. Was he the neighbouring crofter?—Yes, a neighbouring crofter.

32,982. How many crofters were in Cragabus at that time?—Nine.

32,983. Is it under crofters now, or is it a large farm?—Part of it is let to a tenant of the farm, and the other part is under crofters.

32,984. How many crofters will there be there now?—Four crofters and a larger tenant.

32,985. What rent do the crofters pay?—The rents were reduced.

32,986. What do they pay now?—They were reduced to £15 or £14, 10s.

32,987. So that the holdings in Cragabus at the present time, are just about the same size as your father's holding?—Yes.

32,988. Can you tell me how many years ago this is that you speak about?—About thirty years.

Port-Ellen, Islay, Argyllshire.

Angus Macnab.

32,989. Has the method of cultivation been greatly improved since then? Are the crofters now following a better method of cultivation than they were thirty years ago?—Not much better.

32,990. You think the method of cultivation that they had then was as good as it is now for the land; there were as good crops being got?—Part of the crops were as good in my time.

32,991. What part of them do you think is better now?—The potato is now cultivated better than it was then, in some years.

32,992. What is the difference in the cultivation?—It depends much upon the weather and the year and such circumstances.

32,993. That is what I want to discover. What was the old method of planting potatoes?—The same method as to-day.

32,994. How do they plant potatoes to-day in Islay?—They make drills, and manure them.

32,995. But they did not drill and manure thirty years ago?—Yes.

32,996. You said there was a difference between the methods of thirty years ago and those of to-day: what is the difference?—The weather and the season make the difference.

32,997. It is the season that makes the difference, not the method of cultivation?—Yes.

32,998. Can you speak to any other land besides Cragabus?—I know about the Oa in general and can give information about it.

32,999. Are there any places that have not been mentioned by the other witnesses that you think would be suitable for crofter holdings?—Evidence was already given about the other places that I know of.

33,000. There is no other place that you would like to mention?—I don't know of any other place.

33,001. You said that personally you would like to have an allotment near the village which you could work along with your present employment. That is very natural in your case, but are there any others who would be inclined to take a holding outside Port-Ellen and depend entirely upon their holding?—There is a general talk about it.

33,002. But nothing definite?—Two or three I heard saying that they would take it.

33,003. Did those two or three have any means? Would they be able to stock places, suppose they got them at a reasonable rent?—Yes, a few have means for that purpose.

33,004. When you left your father's holding at Cragabus, did you get any compensation from the proprietor for the building, or for any other improvements?—No, nothing. The houses belonged to the landlord, and we paid rent for them.

33,005. The proprietor built the houses, did he?—I cannot say: they are of long standing.

33,006. Your father got the house when he came there?—Yes.

33,007. Where did he come from?—He had land in Lurabost.

33,008. You disposed of your stock when you left Cragabus?—Yes.

33,009. To advantage or to disadvantage?—The price of stock was not good that year.

33,010. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—You believe that there is among the working people in this village a general desire to get allotments of one to five acres?—Yes.

33,011. What is your own opinion as to whether the desire is real, and whether the need is real?—They have no land for raising potatoes or any other crop.

33,012. You have every reason, have you not, to believe that they are really desirous of getting the land and that they would be benefited by getting the land?—Yes, they would be better, I think.

33,013. Then, with regard to the demand there is for allotments, would it be possible to make some scheme by which that demand could be met? Is there land about here that could be so sub-divided as to meet the demand that exists?—The land about the place is in parks just now.

33,014. But you say that the lands which the villagers originally had were consolidated into larger parks?—Yes, that is the case now.

33,015. So that the villagers originally had the land better divided among them than now?—Yes, it was divided in lots for the householders.

33,016. And a process of consolidation of these small holdings went on to form these large parks that are now existing?—Yes, that was the case.

33,017. And these parks now, instead of being held by the working people, are held by well-to-do people, is that the case?—Yes, the richer people.

33,018. And it is the desire of the people now that the parks should be sub-divided and let to the villagers as originally was the case?—That is what I hear said.

33,019. Are these parks held in connection with the distillery?—No, not the whole.

33,020. But have the distillers got any of the parks?—Yes.

33,021. How do they use these parks? What have they got on them? [Mr Reid, factor.—The distillery has no park.]

33,022. Do you hold to what you say, that some of the parks are let to the distillers?—They are let to other people by the proprietor.

33,023. Are the distillers tenants of some of the parks?—They belong to the estate. [Mr Watson.—The distillery also belongs to the estate.]

33,024. It appears that the proprietors are also distillers?—Yes.

33,025. You have told us that it would be possible to meet the demand for allotments by having these parks sub-divided. Now, do you think that there is also a demand for holdings larger than these again by people who would be willing to leave Port-Ellen and go to other parts of the parish?—If they would not get houses along with the holdings they could not make much of them.

33,026. And you think they are not prepared to build houses on the holdings which they are asking for?—A good many of them would not be able to build houses.

33,027. Even if the land were available for being let in small holdings?—A good many of those who asked it or who would like to have it could not build houses.

33,028. In the evictions that took place in Islay generally the people had to leave their houses and go elsewhere. Did they not provide themselves with houses after being evicted?—Houses were already built in places that people went to.

33,029. Do you know how the houses in Port-Ellen were built; were they built by the proprietor, or by the people who were put out of their lands?—Every man built the house for himself on feu.

33,030. Why would they not be just as able to build houses on small holdings if the land were available?—I would require to work my holding at Oa, and would not have time to build a house.

33,031. Don't you think that if they got such an encouragement as land at a fair rent, and the privilege of building houses for themselves, they would get help, say from their friends, to build these houses; and would it not be quite as feasible a thing as to build a house on the feu such as was given in Port-Ellen?—If they got help from friends they would be able to build houses.

33,032. And do you think it likely that if these holdings were available they would get help from friends?—Some have friends for that purpose, others have not.

33,033. Mr Sutherland.—Are all the houses in Port-Ellen built upon feus?—As far as I know, that is the case.

33,034. What length of feu is common?—Three times nineteen years, or fifty-seven years. [Mr Greig.—A feu is a perpetual thing as every one knows; a lease is quite a different thing from a feu.]

33,035. Mr Munro.—On the expiry of your building lease, are you aware that the house you have built becomes the property of the proprietor, or are there any conditions in your building lease that allow you compensation for your building?—Yes, I know that when the lease is out the house would become the property of the proprietor. [Mr Greig.—He has no lease at all.]

33,036. Then you are subject to removal at any time?—I am a tenant myself.

JAMES ANDERSON, fisherman, Port-Ellen (59)—examined.

33,037. Mr Sutherland.—You are a fisherman in Port-Ellen?—Yes.

33,038. Are there many fishermen in Port-Ellen?—Yes, there are a few.

33,039. How many boats are there?—About seven boats.

33,040. What is the average length of keel of your boats?—24 to 28 feet.

33,041. What is the fishing mostly?—Flounder, cod, lobster, and herring.

33,042. Have you to go far out for herring?—We get them away on the north side here.

33,043. Do you go as far as the north of Jura?—Yes, up to Colonsay.

33,044. How many families will be interested in these seven boats? Are they held in shares, or do they belong to the skippers?—They belong to the skippers. Twenty-two families are interested in them.

33,045. And what do you do for assistance for the working of the boats? Is it done by your own families, or do you hire men?—Some have their own families and others go in shares.

33,046. Is there any desire on the part of the fishermen of Port-Ellen to have small pieces of land?—Yes.

33,047. Had you any talk among yourselves? Do you know the opinions of the other fishermen, generally, on the subject?—Yes.

33,048. Are your houses in the same category as those we have been hearing about just now?—Yes, just the same.

33,049. And you would like, would you, to have small allotments in connection with your holdings?—Yes.

33,050. What size do you think of?—Three or four acres.

33,051. Just the land we see in the neighbourhood of Port-Ellen?—Oh, there is land outside of it.

33,052. How far would you think it convenient to go in your case?—About eight miles from here.

33,053. Would you go eight miles?—Yes.

33,054. So that any land that could be found within a circle of eight miles of Port-Ellen would, in your opinion, be suitable for allotments for the people of Port-Ellen?—Yes.

33,055. The nearer the better, I suppose?—Well, we have got no harbours here about the town for our boats.

33,056. You have in your mind that not having a good harbour here you could select a good harbour elsewhere?—Yes.

33,057. And transfer there bodily?—Yes.

33,058. Have you any particular place in your mind?—Yes.

33,059. What is the place?—Ardmore.

33,060. Where is that?—On the east side, north of the mansion house.

33,061. Is there a good harbour at Ardmore?—Yes.

33,062. And it is on the present line of the steamer route?—Yes.

33,063. What are your objections to the harbour at Port-Ellen?—We cannot get our boats hauled up.

33,064. Would it be necessary if you had a good pier to haul up the boats?—Yes, but we are not allowed to haul them up on the quay.

33,065. But could not they lie in the dock?—Yes, if there was a dock made for them.

33,066. And if a dock were made in the harbour at Port-Ellen, would that meet you?—Yes.

33,067. But you want to go to Ardmore because there is a natural shelter there?—Yes.

33,068. Have ever any representations been made in any quarter to provide you with a sufficient harbour where you could let your boats lie? Have any steps been taken by the fishermen or others interested?—No, never.

33,069. You are aware that it is possible now for the County Council to get grants for the purpose of enlarging harbours and improving them, under a recent Act of Parliament, do you know that?—We heard of it.

33,070. You did not ever make any application under it?—No.

33,071. Is there any other reason why you would want to be transferred to this place, Ardmore, apart from the fact of the harbour?—No other reason.

33,072. Supposing you were to remain in Port-Ellen, do you still see it possible for allotments to be got in this neighbourhood? Is there land here that would suit you?—It was allotments formerly.

33,073. I was just going to ask about that? Do you remember that?—Yes.

33,074. And is it the case that the former allotments were consolidated and made into these large parks?—Yes.

33,075. Which are now let as accommodation land to merchants and butchers and others?—Yes.

33,076. You quite agree with that evidence?—Oh, yes.

33,077. Is there anything else you wish to bring under our notice?—Nothing.

33,078. Is it your opinion that the fishermen, if they got opportunities to take allotments, would take them?—Yes, I believe most of them would.

33,079. You will have some spare time, of course, ashore during certain seasons of the year?—Yes, we have plenty spare time.

33,080. And when the weather is too stormy to permit of your boats going out?—Yes.

33,081. Do such storms occur here often?—Very often.

33,082. Which is the most unsafe point of the compass for your harbour?—The south-west wind.

33,083. Have you ever heard any calculation made of the amount of money that would make your harbour safe?—No.

33,084. How often does Mr Macbrayne's steamer call at Port-Ellen?—Four times weekly.

33,085. Cannot that steamer moor at the harbour and remain there if the weather is rough?—No.

33,086. And do they exact dues from Mr Macbrayne for his steamer?—They do.

33,087. Do they exact dues for your boats?—No.

33,088. Under whose control is the present harbour?—The trustees.

33,089. The trustees of the estate?—Yes.

33,090. Is it a private harbour?—No, it is a public harbour. [Mr Greig.—Under a private Act of Parliament.]

33,091. And do you know if the trustees have ever made any efforts to enlarge the harbour, or to make it safe?—They put an addition to the quay; it was only a small pier formerly.

33,092. How much money do you think would be necessary to make it a good harbour?—It would take a few thousand pounds.

33,093. Have you taken into account that the material is very easily got here?—Yes, there are plenty of stones and quarries.

33,094. You would just quarry it off the quay and make piers of it?—Yes.

33,095. Mr Forsyth.—Do you find the fishing pay fairly well here?—At times.

33,096. But very uncertain, like most fishing?—Very uncertain.

33,097. You have no wish to give up the sea altogether?—Not at all.

33,098. But you want what is called the fishermen's holding?—Yes.

33,099. To keep one cow?—Yes.

Port-Ellen, Islay, Argyllshire.

James Anderson.

33,100. If you had three or four acres you would keep a cow?—Yes.

33,101. And you would want a bit of grazing too?—Yes.

33,102. And you would do with it here, in Port-Ellen, if you could get it?—Yes.

33,103. But if not you would prefer to go away to another harbour where you could get it, say at Ardmore?—Yes.

33,104. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—You say that the harbour at Ardmore is a natural one, and that around that harbour you have land suitable for small holdings?—Yes.

33,105. Mr Munro.—Where do you find a market for your fish?—Manchester, Billingsgate, and Birmingham.

33,106. Do you think it possible to prosecute the fishing successfully and pay proper attention to a small holding as well?—We have spare time enough for it.

33,107. But do you think you could do justice to both?—Oh, yes.

33,108. Mr Macleod.—How is Ardmore held at the present time, is it a large farm?—Yes.

33,109. A sheep farm?—Yes.

33,110. Were there small tenants there before?—There were small crofters at one time.

33,111. And it is presently held by a large tenant?—Yes.

33,112. Can you give any idea of the extent of land that there is there?—No, I could not.

33,113. There is no pier of any kind, I presume, there at present?—There is a small pier.

33,114. Would it require to be extended?—Yes.

33,115. Do the other fishermen in Port-Ellen agree with the view that you have been expressing about Ardmore?—They were speaking about it.

33,116. It has been a favourite scheme for some time with the fishermen, has it?—Yes.

33,117. Mr Greig, law agent for Kildalton Estate.—When were there crofters at Ardmore?—Say about sixty or seventy years ago.

33,118. Where were they situated?—At Ardmainish.

33,119. That is not Ardmore?—It is into Ardmore farm now.

Peter Reid.

PETER REID, factor on Kildalton Estate (36)—examined.

33,120. Mr Sutherland.—Are you desirous of giving evidence, Mr Reid?—Yes, I should like to make a short statement in connection with the farms which have been mentioned. But first, as regards the deer park. Some deer are kept in the policies about Kildalton House, and are confined to what is called the 'deer park.' The total area of land to which deer have access is under 1500 acres, and this consists principally of brushwood and waste land, quite unsuitable for cultivation. The only farms let solely for grazing purposes, which are at all suitable for division into small holdings, are situated in the Oa, and consist of the following lands:—

Lurabus:—

Green pasture,	271 acres
Rough „	518
	789 acres

Ballychatrigan and Strimnishmore:—

Green pasture,	425 acres
Rough „	1060
	1485 acres

Giol and Glenastle:—

Green pasture,	550 acres
Rough „	2060
	2610 acres

Tockmal and Grastle:—

Green pasture,	137 acres
Rough „	850
	987 acres

Port-Ellen, Islay, Argyllshire.

Peter Reid.

You have already had some evidence as to the old 'groat' lands. In olden times the whole of the island was divided into quarter lands, and these again subdivided into groat lands, twopenny lands, and penny lands. These lands were of equal value at the time, although not of equal area. The farms above mentioned contained the following divisions:—

Lurabus,	6 groats
Ballychatrigan,	8 „
Strimnishmore,	6 „
Giol,	6 „
Upper and Lower Glenastle,	6 „
Tockmal and Grastle,	5 „

As to the present rents, Lurabus being let with Cornabus and Tockmal, and Grastle with Kintraw, we do not know exactly the present rent of each of these holdings separately. The rent of Giol and Glenastle, according to the lease, is £325, which would represent a rent of £27 per groat land; a reduction of rent, however, has been made, and it is now £275. The rent of Ballychatrigan is £250, which makes the combined rents £525, or slightly more than £20 per groat land. No money has been expended on these farms, but, notwithstanding this, the rents are fully 20 per cent. higher than those fixed by the Crofters Commission for the adjoining crofts, viz.,—the Cragabus holdings which yield £15, 10s. per groat land. From this it appears that land under grass, even in the present day, is more profitable than when cropped. As is well known land has lately gone out of cultivation in one of the most fertile parts of Scotland, East Lothian, so that it is little wonder that some parts of the West Highlands should also go out of cultivation.

To convert these farms into crofts would entail a large outlay on the part of someone, without any adequate return. If the proprietor were to put up houses and reclaim land, surely he might expect some little interest on his outlay; if the tenant did it it would involve considerable expenditure of capital on his part. He might do it with very little actual money expenditure, but he could not do it without labour expenditure, which is equivalent to money. He could not do it at all without horse labour.

Ballychatrigan and Strimnishmore, having a southern exposure and being on the whole much better land than Giol and Glenastle, may be taken as the most suitable for crofter holdings. In Cragabus a groat land consisted as nearly as possible of 23 acres arable and 75 outrun; while on Ballychatrigan and Strimnishmore there are 30 acres green pasture and 75 acres rough pasture to the groat land, so that even if these lands were of equal value the areas come very near,—each has 75 acres outrun, but Ballychatrigan has 30 acres green pasture as compared with the 23 acres of Cragabus.

A groat land was supposed to carry six cows and their followers, and probably also a few sheep. The evidence brought forward to-day seemed to show about 20 sheep. In addition to this the crofters in Cragabus keep two horses, and we may assume that the supposed crofters in Ballychratigan would keep the same stock. In 1871, according to one witness to-day, there were four horses kept, and seven to ten cows; and it must be remembered that the horses of that time were very small and that the ploughs were wooden ploughs. They used four or more probably eight horses to a plough.

In order to make a groat land in Ballychatrigan of equal value to a crofter's holding of a groat land, as presently held in Cragabus, the following expenditure would require to be made.

The 30 acres (or at least portions of it) would require to be drained and made capable of cultivation, a very moderate estimate for which would be £200

The fencing might cost say . . . 50
The erection of the dwelling-house, byre, barn, stable, and house for young cattle could not very well be done under . . 160

£410

This estimate is only for thatched houses, which are not considered satisfactory, but the expense of putting up a slated roof would be very much greater. The class of work which would be done for the above sum would not justify the advance of money under any of the existing Land Improvement Acts, but interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. may be considered very reasonable. A lower rate of interest might be taken if the roofs were slated and the buildings more substantial. At 4½ this would add £18, 10s. to the rent, or in other words make the rent without putting any value on the land £3, 19s. higher than what is considered a 'fair rent' per groat land just now.

Another point to be considered is the amount to be paid for the sheep stock over and above their real market value in virtue of their being bred on the ground. This so called 'tenant right' is a serious question affecting the conversion of grazing land into small holdings. The sheep on all grazing farms have to be taken over at valuation, and in the event of the stock on Ballychatrigan and Strimnishmore having to be sold off, a loss of at least £500 would be incurred, or fully £35 per groat land.

In short, to convert the farm of Ballychatrigan and Strimnishmore into holdings of a size which is strongly advocated by many people, even by the witnesses here to-day, would involve an expenditure of over £6000, with the result that a reduction of about 15 per cent. on the present rent would require to be made in order to allow the tenants to occupy the land on the same terms as those whose rents have been fixed by the Crofters Commission.

I don't suppose it is of any consequence to advert to the question of how the people were removed, but I don't think we can admit that there were any evictions, and I think there is no need, unless it is wished to call forward witnesses to show that there were no evictions, at least in the ordinary sense of the word.

33,121. The only interest is whether from your point of view you desire the question to be gone into. But it has been suggested that, seeing you have given us a number of statistics and figures, it might perhaps suit your convenience to attend for cross-examination on the statement at Port-Charlotte, where we are to have a meeting on Monday. Is that on the estate of Kildalton?—No, this is the only sitting that you will have on this estate. I might read extracts to show that the great majority of those who left Oa went entirely of their own free will; and Mr Ramsay himself told me that he had a good cry over the head of a number of them going. He went and visited them afterwards, and reported that they were in a prosperous condition.

33,122. Mr Munro.—Do you deny that any of them were forcibly evicted?—I deny that any were forcibly evicted. The two cases that have been mentioned occurred about ten years afterwards, and these may have been removed against their will. I deny that there were any evictions; they may have got letters of removal, but I deny that there were any evictions in the sense of evictions.

33,123. Mr Macleod.—What you mean by eviction is forcible removal?—Forcible removal. No doubt there would be pressure brought to bear upon these two that were referred to, because I see they were in Ballychatrigan and Strimnishmore seven years after the others removed.

33,124. Mr Munro.—So you persuaded them to go?—I know nothing about it.

33,125. Mr Macleod.—You cannot speak directly from personal experience?—No, but I can speak from evidence. [Mr Greig.—It took place before our day.] I don't think it is of any consequence at all.

33,126. Mr Sutherland.—With regard to the statement you read, I take it you limited yourself to enumerating the difficulties there are in the way of sub-dividing large holdings?—Decidedly, that is the whole object.

33,127. I suppose it is incontestable that the large holdings which now exist were made out of smaller holdings?—Those that I have referred to were at one time under small holdings.

33,128. And new settlements of smaller holdings were formed somewhere else?—There appears to have been the removal, but I cannot speak of any other matter.

33,129. Have there not, as a matter of fact, been shiftings of the population in the island of Islay from certain places to certain other places?—I don't think there have been any unless those that you have heard of. I do not know of any except in the case of that one man, Mr Campbell.

33,130. But you know the former population of Islay, and the population at the present day?—They emigrated. There were about 400 people emigrated in 1863.

33,131. How old is Port-Ellen?—Fully sixty years.

33,132. Well, if we go back to sixty years ago, there was then no Port-Ellen?—I am not prepared to say that.

33,133. It would not, at all events, be anything like the Port-Ellen of to-day?—Decidedly not.

33,134. Is the difference in the population there due to the natural increase of the people, or is it due to people coming from other parts of Islay?—I don't know, the houses were built on ground leased from the late Mr Campbell of Islay.

33,135. But we had evidence from two or three witnesses here to-day who say they held such land at one time and cultivated it; you say there is no reason to doubt that evidence?—Not that they held small portions of land.

33,136. And you think also that it is a very reasonable conclusion for us to come to that it was a general policy all over the island, in operation for a long time?—I do not think so; personally I have had no application for the land.

33,137. But the County Council has, is that not so? you are not prepared to deny that?—Certainly not.

33,138. I understand there were 50 applications from Port-Ellen alone. Is not that an indication that there is a desire to get land?—There were 50 from the parish of Kildalton.

33,139. Principally in the neighbourhood of Port-Ellen?—I don't think any one would seek to deny that there is such a desire.

33,140. Can you account for their applying to the County Council and not to you?—No, unless they thought they would get the land cheaper from the County Council.

33,141. Or they might think that was the only way to get it at all?—Perhaps they were under the impression that they might get it cheaper.

33,142. Is it not reasonable for us to suppose that they thought it was no use to apply to you, in view of the teaching of past experience?—But if they had no past experience?

33,143. With regard to your estimate of the cost of putting up the necessary buildings, it seemed to me to be rather high. Don't you think so yourself?—I don't think so.

33,144. I have no doubt you gave the estimate based on your own experience?—Not from our own experience; it would cost us a great deal more.

33,145. You used to pay more?—It would cost us considerably more.

33,146. That is a point I would like to ask you about. Why should it cost you, who manage these large estates, more to put up the necessary buildings, &c. than to the man who actually occupies the land, for we have frequently had it in evidence that that is the case?—I think every one who has the management of estates is perfectly well acquainted with the facts. A man does not work nearly so well for another as he does for himself.

33,147. And then there is the question of fees, I suppose, to be added,—fees to professional men, which a man who does his own work would not require to pay?—That would not enter into the case.

33,148. Supposing you were making an arrangement with a tenant, the legality of which you were not perfectly certain about, would not you be likely to appeal to a professional man for legal advice, or are you a lawyer yourself?—If I were not certain about it I would apply to a lawyer.

33,149. And very often a man working for himself does not trouble himself about that?—That was not taken into consideration at any rate.

33,150. But you admit that there is a difference, and I think your explanation of it is a reasonable one, that a man would work very much better when he knew it was for himself than when working for another?—He would probably work overtime.

33,151. Have you any experience of any place where it was attempted to give larger holdings, and where the difficulties were found to be insuperable; have you ever heard of any such?—In the north of Scotland I have had experience of small holdings.

33,152. Where was your experience in the north of Scotland?—In Banffshire.

33,153. And did they not succeed there?—No, they were not successful.

33,154. When were these carried out?—Some fifteen years ago. They were not successful from a pecuniary point of view at any rate.

33,155. Were they done on a large scale?—No, they were on too small a scale.

33,156. You mean that the holdings were too small?—Yes.

33,157. Was it near a populous place?—Near fishing villages. The mistake made was that the holdings were only £5.

33,158. Can you give us an idea of the area rather than the price; the rent would be high no doubt in the neighbourhood of fishing villages?—The land was very poor.

33,159. Poorer than Islay perhaps?—Poorer than some parts of Islay.

33,160. You gave us some interesting information about the division of the land; and I think you gave us to understand that the basis of the valuation was not area but value?—That was the case with the old groat land; it was of uniform value.

33,161. Do you know anything about this historically, when the valuation was done?—It was done at a time prior to any record having been taken of it.

33,162. Was it, in your opinion, done scientifically? was it a good valuation?—It must have been, because in Cragabus we find that the old divisions are held at the present day.

33,163. Is that because they were found to represent the fact?—To represent equal values.

33,164. And do they still hold these values comparatively with one another?—In Cragabus they do, but I have no knowledge of any other township.

33,165. I can easily foresee this, and probably you can also, that for instance a groat land, or whatever equal division was made in Port-Ellen, would not hold now?—No, because there have been improvements and alterations on some more than others, and there have been alterations on the marches. But I refer to the division into groat lands in Oa, because that is a part of the estate where there have been practically no improvements made.

33,166. Don't you see then how that circumstance would affect the comparison you made between the rents fixed by the Crofters Commission and the rents paid by the large farmers?—But on the large farms I spoke of there has been no money expended on improvements; there is not a steading on them.

33,167. No money expended since the reign of William the Lion, when the 'groat lands' were fixed?—No money expended since the crofters left.

33,168. And no farm steading erected?—No.

33,169. In other words you took down the old farm steading and did not find it necessary to put up others?—There has been no steading erected, because the land is under sheep.

33,170. The land that was before under cultivation is now under grazing and there is no necessity to erect steadings?—They are simply under sheep at present. I am just pointing out the difficulty of converting them into small holdings. There is no doubt that the land is there, and if there is any land suitable for small holdings that is suitable.

33,171. The only difficulty, or at least the greatest difficulty you foresee, is the putting up of new houses by people if they were put there, is not that so?—The difficulty that I see is that it would not be remunerative.

33,172. Perhaps not according to your method of calculation; but don't you see that we have experience and evidence to show that when the people were taken from good land and put down upon worse they actually erected houses, and why should they not now, if taken back to the better land, do the same thing? Are the conditions that were in operation all over the country thirty or forty or fifty or eighty years ago not in operation now?—Not quite. There are differences now.

33,173. Would the difference not make it easier for them to erect comfortable houses now than they were able to do earlier in the century?—I don't think so; their ideas of houses are no longer the same.

33,174. The standard is higher in fact?—The standard must be higher.

33,175. And that is a good thing?—Decidedly.

33,176. The people would now aim at better houses?—It is to be hoped so.

33,177. Certainly, we have no reason to doubt it.—But they cannot put up the houses which would be sufficient for the present day themselves. They might put up houses of the old class, knocking them up without much expenditure. I don't know of any very good houses put up without money.

33,178. Did not you hear to-day evidence from gentlemen who built houses in Port-Ellen; are they not good houses?—No. The houses that have fallen out now were not put up in the same style.

33,179. But as opportunity arises, and they put up houses, they are better every year, is that not so?—If they have the capital to do it.

33,180. If not they don't build houses at all?—That is where the difficulty comes in.

33,181. But if they built houses in Port-Ellen, why should they not, if they got security of tenure and other favourable conditions, build also in more favoured regions?—I merely pointed out that to do so they would expend money without an adequate return.

33,182. That would be a difficulty if it existed; but the people surely know their own business. You also referred to what is known in the north country as 'hefting' in taking over stock. Is that in operation in this country?—Yes.

33,183. And I think you called it by a name I never heard applied to it before,—'tenant-right'; did I take you up wrong?—I used the expression but not quite in the sense of 'hefting.' That there is a tenant-right there is no doubt; a tenant-right for getting a higher valuation for sheep than the market value.

33,184. I don't wish to misunderstand you, or to misrepresent you in any way; I thought it was rather a happy term to call it by.—I said the so-called tenant-right.

33,185. Has it then grown into such a custom here?—Yes.

33,186. Is there provision made for it in leases?—Yes.

33,187. What do you think regarding it; is it fictitious in any way?—I don't quite understand.

33,188. Does it really represent the value that is put upon it?—Not quite. But still it has grown, and when one tenant has paid a fictitious value for his stock on entering he naturally requires to get it on leaving.

33,189. But there is no legal sanction apart from custom for it? It is not in the leases or conveyances?—It is the practice, and it is in the estate regulations that one tenant is bound to take over the stock from the other at valuation.

33,190. I think you said there is a small deer forest on the estate. How long has that forest been in existence?—I don't know.

33,191. It was before you came here?—Yes.

33,192. I was going to ask if there were sheep there before, and whether, when they were cleared off, there was any 'hefting'; but, of course, you cannot speak from personal knowledge?—No.

33,193. Can you give us any information about the harbour here?—Yes.

33,194. It is a harbour under a private Act of Parliament, is it?—Yes.

33,195. And under your management?—Yes.

33,196. Would you require additional powers before you could spend any money on it?—No.

33,197. There is already sufficient power?—We require the consent of the Lords of the Admiralty who have superseded the Commissioners of Woods and Forests. [Mr Greig.—I may say that the estate spent £3000 upon an addition to the quay within the last two or three years, without any assistance at all; and the original pier also was built by Mr Ramsay himself a number of years ago.]

33,198. That was, I suppose, for accommodation for breasting or lying alongside? It was not with the object of making it more sheltered, was it?—It was partly for that purpose also, but it was more for steam-boat traffic than for fishing accommodation.

33,199. Will you explain to us about the nature of the building leases here?—They were for sixty years, from 1834, and they all expire at Whitsunday next, or the great majority of them. But feus were offered to those who wished to take them some six of seven years ago, and a very large proportion availed themselves of this offer. The other houses now fall to the estate.

33,200. And is this offer for perpetual feus still open?—No, it was made by Mr Ramsay, but he is now dead.

33,201. Is it an entailed estate? [Mr Greig.—The trustee has lately obtained power to feu.]

33,202. Mr Forsyth.—I should like to ask you one or two questions with reference to your remarks as to the method of taking over sheep by valuation. You mean the ordinary sheep valuation common throughout Argyllshire?—Yes.

33,203. Do you claim that there is in that anything in the nature of a tenant-right? I have never before heard that advanced in this county.—There is the right of the tenant to get his stock taken over at valuation, and this has come to be a higher value than the market value, because it was impossible or very difficult to stock a farm afresh without great risk of mortality. The death-rate was so high that sheep which have been acclimatised to the ground are certainly far more valuable to an incoming tenant than sheep brought in. This is more especially the case where there are no fences.

33,204. I quite understand the principle of the valuation,—I am not unacquainted with it myself, but what I want to get at is as to this right. Is not the right merely a condition of the lease?—And the custom of the country.

33,205. In how far is it the custom of the country?—If there were no lease, and a tenant had got a sheep stock, he would be entitled to ask the proprietor to take it over at valuation.

33,206. Are you sure of that?—Quite sure.

33,207. Well, I beg to differ from you on that point.—I mean, of course, where there is a regular sheep stock kept.

33,208. I think it is an exceedingly doubtful legal point.—Possibly in Argyllshire generally, but I referred to Islay in particular.

33,209. I think you will find that he would not be entitled to it at all, except as a condition of a lease, and that it is simply a matter of ordinary bargain between proprietor and tenant. But your contention as to its being the custom of the country, I should like to take grave exception to?—It is certainly the case all throughout Islay.

33,210. Assuming that a man takes a large grazing without stock and puts a sheep stock upon it, would he at the end of his lease have any power to compel the landlord to take it over at valuation?—No, I don't think so, but he would if he proved he had taken a stock at valuation.

33,211. It seems to me that you have been going rather far in describing what may be a common case in this district as a 'tenant-right' in any proper sense of the term?—But wherever a tenant has taken over a sheep stock at valuation he is entitled to get it taken over at valuation by the incoming tenant.

33,212. You make that statement with great confidence, but I am by no means disposed to accept it.—Unfortunately, we are compelled to do it.

33,213. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—The chief difficulty, I think you say, in getting small holdings set up in this parish is the cost of the buildings and fences that would be required?—Yes.

33,214. You quite admit that there is suitable land, and that there are people who wish to acquire small holdings?—Yes.

33,215. Then, you say that when the small holdings were consolidated into the large farms in this parish, there was no outlay on the part of the proprietor?—On improving the land or building houses on the farms I referred to.

33,216. They took the land as it was left by the small tenants?—I cannot speak from personal experience. I make the statement that there has been nothing expended on reclamation of land, or on erection of steadings, but there may have been money spent by the proprietor in laying down arable ground into pasture.

33,217. But no fencing of any kind, or draining?—Practically none.

33,218. We do not know what 'practically none' may mean: the phrase may cover a good deal?—There are march fences. There is one farm with a march fence, and the others have none.

33,219. Were these fences put up by the tenants or by the proprietor?—Some by the proprietor and some by the tenants.

33,220. So there has been some outlay on the part of the proprietor?—On one march fence only: but that march fence applies also to the adjoining holdings which I referred to and with which I compared the farm.

33,221. The crofters got the benefit of that march fence?—Yes, as well as the large farms.

33,222. Then you must admit that the case here is an unusual one: that the usual thing is that steadings had to be put up, and fences erected for the large farmer?—I only speak of the farms I have enumerated.

33,223. You also raise the difficulty as to the valuation put upon the sheep stock: that the farmers are entitled to a higher price than the market value of the stock?—Yes.

33,224. Were the former tenants treated in that way? did they get for their sheep a higher price than the market value when they were evicted, or when they left?—Those who have entered during the last twenty or thirty years have had to pay a higher price for the sheep than the market value.

33,225. A question was put to one of the witnesses here to-day as to the stock that he had, and how he disposed of it, and he said he sold it. I understand from that that he did not get the fictitious value, but only the market value, when he disposed of the stock himself?—That is not a sheep farm: there is no such obligation in the case of a few sheep.

33,226. It only applies to big farmers and not to the small. Not only did the small tenants not get that fictitious value for their stock, but are you aware that they got anything for the houses they had built?—I don't know anything about it.

33,227. But you have no reason to doubt the statement that was made, to the effect that there was nothing paid for the houses?—I don't say there was.

33,228. So that the old tenants did not get the benefit you are now asking for the big farmers. Then I think you tried to make out that the tenants left

Port-Ellen, Islay, Argyllshire.

Peter Reid.

their holdings against Mr Ramsay's will?—No, I merely repeated what he stated to me, that he had a good cry over the going away of some of them. He stated that he did not wish them to go.

33,229. Are you aware of any steps he took to induce them to stay?—No.

33,230. How could the tears be very genuine then?—I don't think that is very relevant to your inquiry.

33,231. You are not the judge of that, you know.—I merely made the statement.

33,232. But you wished it to have some force, did not you?—Merely that they were not forcibly evicted. I said that we did not consider it necessary to bring evidence on that point, because, so far as I understood, it did not at all affect the remit of the Commission.

33,233. But you made the statement in reply to evidence given to-day, and I only wanted to test the value of that statement, and of this cry.—I don't think it is very generous, at all events towards a person who is dead, to discuss such a matter.

33,234. Mr Sutherland.—But you introduced the matter yourself.

33,234*a*. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—With regard to the former removal of people from their holdings, was it not the case that they had to go to make way for sheep?—I have got no personal knowledge of that, and I don't think I should be called upon to give evidence without personal knowledge.

33,235. But you have been making statements about it?—I made a quotation, and that quotation does not require to be put in as evidence.

33,236. These people, I take it, were not offered any reduction of rent?—As I say, I know nothing about it.

33,237. We were told that the rents were high and the markets low at the time when these people went, and you are not in a position to say that any reductions were offered to them, is that so?—I am not in a position to make any statement on the subject.

33,238. Mr Sutherland.—You decline to answer, is that it?—I don't know.

33,239. That is at your option?—Decidedly, because I don't know.

33,240. Mr Macleod.—You were making a comparison between the crofter holding where a Fair Rent has been fixed by the Crofters Commission and this farm or more than one farm. You say that the comparison was a fair one; you do not think there are any special circumstances in connection with those farms to make the comparison unfair?—I don't think so.

33,241. So far as your experience is concerned on the estate of Kildalton, the large farmers are paying a rent of 20 per cent. above what the small tenants are paying?—As the present rents stand.

33,242. Then do you consider that the rents of the large farms are too high now?—Very possibly they may be.

33,243. All that I am anxious about, and I have no doubt you are as anxious as I am, is to get at whether the comparison is a fair one. Are the large farmers complaining that their rents are still too high?—Nearly all the farmers are complaining that their rents are too high. It is very difficult to put a rent on that will satisfy the tenant.

33,244. But you said there has been a reduction on the large farms within recent years?—Yes.

33,245. How long is that since?—About seven years ago.

33,246. And was a reduction made on the crofter rents at the same time?—Yes, they were brought to the large farm rents, or very nearly so, at that time.

33,247. And that bears out what we heard to-day of a crofter's rent being reduced from £23 to £20 by the estate management, and then subsequently reduced to £15, 10s. by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

33,248. Is that a general case?—That is the case of Cragabus.

33,249. Does it refer to the whole of Cragabus?—Yes, to the whole of Cragabus alone. There is no comparison on any of the others.

33,250. Don't you think the large farmers might fairly claim that they were entitled to a further reduction of rent?—Well, supposing they did get the reduction of rent that the crofters got, that would be 20 per cent. off their present rents; it would allow nothing for interest on money expended on building or reclaiming the land.

33,251. Would you be prepared to say that the value as fixed by the Crofters Commission would be nearer what might be fairly considered the value as present prices stand of the large holdings?—It is rather difficult to know what is the value just now. Although I have had a good deal of experience of it I could not say what a holding was worth,—that is to say, that a man could make a living out of a holding. All I wanted to point out was that in order to make a living in a holding at Ballychratigan equal to the living that the Cragabus people are making out of their holdings, the rents would not require to be above the rents of the holdings in Cragabus, otherwise the people in Ballychatrigan would not be as comfortable as those who are at present in Cragabus.

33,252. But as I understood it you advanced as one reason against the formation of small holdings the fact which would naturally weigh very heavily with the estate management, that you were getting 20 per cent. more rent for the large farm than for the small holdings?—Yes.

33,253. Now, what I am anxious to know is this, whether 20 per cent. really represents the fair difference between what might be expected from small tenants and a large tenant?—I merely stated the facts of the case.

33,254. But the rent paid for the large farm was reduced seven years ago, and I want to know whether a rent fixed on the basis of the Crofters Commission rents now would not be nearer a fair rent than the rent fixed seven years ago?—I would not like to say.

33,255. There has been a considerable decrease in the value of produce and stock in that time?—I don't know that there has been any decrease; it has not improved however.

33,256. Now with regard to the buildings, no doubt if the responsibility were taken off the estate management in that matter it would remove a considerable number of your difficulties?—It was not the estate difficulties I was speaking about at all, but the difficulties of making a comfortable living.

33,257. For the tenant?—For the tenant.

33,258. But you could imagine a tenant being in possession of a certain amount of capital and being prepared to sink it along with his own labour in erecting the necessary buildings on his holding?—There is the question of the wisdom of his doing so.

33,259. But that is not what we are so much concerned about. If there was such a tenant, you do not see any reason why he should not be able to make a fair living out of it?—If he got a larger holding he would possibly do it.

33,260. A groat or two groats?—If he got more than two groats he would possibly do better.

33,261. I think you said you considered the manner in which the value of the groat lands was made could be looked upon as the basis of a fair comparison?—Fair so far as we are able to compare them.

33,262. So far as your experience goes it was a fair enough division that was made?—I think so.

33,263. The groat lands on that large farm you speak of compare very nearly with the groat lands of the crofters in the adjoining township?—Yes, that is where we have been able to compare them.

33,264. Mr Munro.—Have you many crofters on the Kildalton estate?—About thirty.

33,265. What is the condition of these crofters; are they fairly prosperous, or otherwise?—I think they are fairly prosperous.

33,266. Are they not in arrears of rent to any extent?—Not many of them.

33,267. Seeing that the present crofters are doing so well, is it not fair to infer that a further extension of the crofting system might be attended with advantages to the parties taking the crofts?—I don't think it is an advantage unless the holdings are larger than at present. I don't think the crofters are so comfortable as a man earning a decent wage.

33,268. That is a matter of opinion from your point of view; but you yourself admit that the crofters are at present doing fairly well?—Yes.

33,269. Might not an extension of the system be also attended with equally beneficial results to the holders of the land?—If it were practicable. These crofters are fixed, they have the houses there and they have the land along with the houses; it is a going concern.

33,270. I am not speaking of depriving the present crofters of their holdings; I am speaking of extending the present system to the large sheep farms or deer forests, or any other available lands.—It is purely a matter of whether the people will be comfortable in them or not.

33,271. What would you consider a fair standard of comfort?—I would call it a fair standard of comfort if it could show that they were making from 15s. to 20s. per week, or equal to it, out of their holdings. In the case of any that I have gone into I fail to see how a man with a small holding can have equal to 15s. per week, or even 12s. per week of profit out of that holding, putting money value on the whole produce and allowing him a good wage for his labour.

33,272. Yes, but if they are able to pay you a fair rent and to live themselves, does not that infer some standard of comfort?—One of the crofters said to-day that he was just making a livelihood.

33,273. And don't you admit that that is a very good thing to do?—It might be better if they could make more than a bare livelihood.

33,274. How do the poor rates in this parish compare with others?—They are very high.

33,275. What are they in the parish of Kildalton?—1s. 4d.

33,276. Do you know how that compares with other parts of the island?—I think it is rather higher, but I cannot say accurately.

33,277. You stated, I think, that large farmers paid 20 per cent. higher than the crofters as fixed by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

33,278. Are we to infer from that that the large farmers are too high rented, or the crofters too low rented?—I don't think large farmers would pay too high a rent; they would very soon let us know.

33,279. I think you said already that they were complaining of their rents?—They were complaining, but that is the only criterion that you have. The only test of the value of the land is what it will bring. I have got no other test.

33,280. Apart from the question of the general comfort of these small occupiers of land, do you not think it would be attended with considerable advantage to the island or the county generally to have the land occupied as much as possible by a class of small tenants who would cultivate the soil?—If they were prosperous, it no doubt would be: if they were active and had sufficient ground.

33,281. About these building leases which you say expire in sixty years. I think you mentioned that you had already taken possession of some of the houses?—We have taken possession of the ruinous ones; some were unfit for habitation.

33,282. Were they in ruins at the time the people were evicted from them?—I am not aware that there were any evictions.

33,283. They left voluntarily?—They left because the houses were coming down.

33,284. And they had no inducement to build them again?—They had not money to build them, in the case of a large number.

33,285. Mr Sutherland.—You said there were 30 crofters on the Kildalton estate?—Yes, about that.

33,286. We had some evidence here to-day about these holdings, the rental at any rate,—is that about the average size?—That is the average size in the Oa, but we have only got some seven crofters of that size. Others are very small.

33,287. What is about their rent?—From 25s. to £6. Port-Ellen, Islay, Argyllshire.

33,288. Where are those smaller crofts?—In the lots between this and Bridgend. It is land that was laid out in lots of 20 acres each. Peter Reid.

33,289. And are the smaller crofters in pretty good circumstances?—Not unless they get outside labour.

33,290. Not in such good circumstances as those who have a £30 holding?—No, they cannot possibly be.

33,291. What do you think is the plain deduction from that? Is it not that if they were made into the size of the £30 holdings they would be more comfortable?—They cannot produce on their holdings sufficient to maintain themselves and their families.

33,292. And if you gave them holdings of £30 they would be as comfortable as those who hold them now?—They ought to be.

33,293. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—You referred to the fact that crofters said that they made a livelihood out of their crofts. Now would you be prepared to say that the large farmers are making a livelihood in these years out of their farms, or are they not living upon their capital?—I have just the same objection as before, that I don't care to speak about a thing that I don't know about personally.

33,294. There is a general idea that farmers are not occupying to profit just now?—That may be a general opinion, but I could not give that as evidence.

[ADJOURNED.]

THIRTY-FIFTH SITTING.

Port-Charlotte, Islay.

PORT CHARLOTTE, ISLAY.

April 2, 1894.

Present:—

ANGUS SUTHERLAND, Esq., M.P. (acting as Chairman.)
JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq.
REV. MALCOLM MACCALLUM.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

DUGALD FERGUSON MACFADYEN, merchant, Port-Charlotte (27)—examined. Dugald Ferguson Macfadyen.

33,295. Mr Sutherland.—What is your occupation?—I am a merchant at Port-Charlotte and Tayvuilin.

33,296. I presume that you know the object of our inquiry, which you may have seen stated on the bills?—Yes.

33,297. Have you a written statement to submit?—No, I have no written statement.

33,298. Do you know such land as would be suitable for the purposes for which we are sent to inquire?—Yes, I will enumerate certain parts of land or farms that were previously occupied by crofters and small tenants, and which are now out of cultivation. These are Cultoon, Grimsay, Sunderland, Foreland, Rockside, Ballymony, Gruinard Flats, Killinallan, Gortantuir, Mulbuie, and Mulnaroan at Sandaig. There are also parts of Ben Taitivill.

33,299. Are these all in one parish?—All in this parish of Kilchoman, except Killinallan and Gortantuir which are in the parish of Killarow.

33,300. Are all these farms used principally for pastoral purposes now?—Principally.

33,301. Is there any cultivation on any of them?—There is a little cultivation on Killinallan farm.

Port-Charlotte, Islay, Argyllshire.

Dugald Ferguson Maciadyen.

33,302. And what do you say with regard to the others?—The others are out for pasture alone, so far as I am aware.

33,303. With little or no cultivation?—Little or no cultivation whatever.

33,304. And these were before in the occupation of small occupiers?—Yes.

33,305. How long ago was that?—I am not very sure, but there were fifteen crofters in Killinallan besides the large farmer about forty years ago.

33,306. Are there traces of the old small cultivation still to be seen on all these farms?—Yes, on most of them, indeed on almost all. There are other witnesses to follow me who will be able to speak to such facts with more minuteness than I can. Then there are a number of other farms (I don't know whether or not it is right to draw your attention to them) which were previously occupied by small tenants but are now occupied by large tenants.

33,307. But are they cultivated now?—Some parts are, and other parts are not.

33,308. The uncultivated parts being held as part of large farms?—Yes.

33,309. In longer than the ordinary rotation?—Yes, I believe it is so in some cases.

33,310. Is it more than a long rotation of five or seven years?—Yes, I consider it is in some cases.

33,311. But those other farms you have mentioned, with the exception of Killinallan, are all out for grazing purposes?—Yes.

33,312. What have you got to say with regard to the desire on the part of the people to take small holdings if they had the opportunity?—The desire to acquire small holdings has been very wide-spread in this parish. The people have been exceedingly desirous of getting small holdings: in fact, I sent in applications to the County Council for over 100 individuals who wished small holdings.

33,313. You are a County Councillor?—Yes.

33,314. Then you know very well the distinction between a small holding and an allotment as defined in the Acts?—Oh, yes.

33,315. For small holdings you say there were over a hundred applicants from this district?—Yes, from this district, Kilchoman, alone.

33,316. And you were unable to give effect to these wishes, I presume?—No, we happened to be in a minority in the Council.

33,317. But even apart from that, I presume, you would find the procedure cumbrous? The difficulty would be to get these small holdings under the present arrangements.—Yes, that is so.

33,318. Then there is the question of the ability of the people to take such holdings, what have you got to say with regard to that?—Well, there were a few of whose ability one could not say very much, but the majority of these people were quite able to take over small holdings if they got them.

33,319. Now, on these farms you have referred to as being nearly or altogether out of cultivation, are there farm steadings on them?—There are some.

33,320. Are there any of these farms without steadings?—I believe you cannot altogether say they are without them, but there are some which you cannot say have them either, because they are simply old ruins.

33,321. They are not working farm-steadings, are they?—No.

33,322. Could you give us an indication of the farms that have not got good steadings?—Yes; there is Cultoon where there is simply one house for the accommodation of the cattle and a shepherd's house.

33,323. Could you give us information to enable us to identify it on the map?—It is above Kilcheran [Cill-Chiarain]. Grimsay is right up on the flat above there, and on it there are only the remains of the old houses. In Sunderland there is a very large farm-steading and a very large farm, but there is a large part of that farm that has not been cultivated for years and years past.

33,324. And Foreland, what about it?—At Foreland there is really no farm-steading: there is a mansion house.

33,325. And on Rockside?—There is a large farm-steading.

33,326. And on Ballymony?—There is a steading there also, but not large in comparison with the size of the farm. At Gruinard Flats there are only the remains of the building. I cannot remember the name of the farm there, but probably some one else will be able to give it.

33,327. Then, with regard to Gortantuir, how does it stand for offices?—I don't think there is much of a farm-steading there.

33,328. And Mulbuie?—That is taken in along with another farm.

33,329. Along with what farm?—With Aoridh farm.

33,330. And what do you say as to Mulnarcan?—I have not seen it.

33,331. Is that in the south end of the island?—It is over at Sandaig.

33,332. Your opinion is that these people who applied to the County Council of Argyll for small holdings, or at least some of them, would be able to take small holdings and work them?—I believe there would have been about forty of them who would have been only too glad to take them if they had got the opportunity.

33,333. And if any means were obtained of getting some aid from the outside a larger number would be able to take small holdings?—Yes, a great many more would have taken advantage of it.

33,334. Has there been any application for allotments under the Allotments Act?—None, as far as I am aware.

33,335. So the desire in Islay seems to be rather for small holdings?—Yes.

33,336. You, of course, will have very good opportunities from your position as a County Councillor of knowing the opinions of the people on this matter?—Yes, I think I understand their desire very well.

33,337. And did this question of the desire of the people for land emerge during the election for the County Council?—Yes, the desire for land was the main issue at the elections.

33,338. And was it pressed upon you generally by the people from all sides?—From all sides. In fact, I attribute my return to it.

33,339. Supposing the small holdings,—this is a general opinion I am asking of you,—supposing these small holdings were obtained, do you think it would increase the comfort of the people and tend to their general welfare?—I consider it would increase their comfort very much if they got small holdings at a fair rent.

33,340. You are always, of course, assuming that there would be a fair rent?—That there would be a fair rent fixed.

33,341. Are you of opinion that from the very commencement they would be able to pay a Fair Rent?—Yes, I quite believe they would. That is more especially the case in those farms that I have mentioned, because there the land is very suitable for cultivation.

33,342. Do you suffer here at all from late harvests?—Sometimes; not very often.

33,343. Are you acquainted to any extent with the conditions in the Outer Hebrides?—No, I cannot say that I am.

33,344. But are you aware whether the harvest is earlier here than it is in the other islands?—I understand it is somewhat earlier here.

33,345. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—You gave us a list of farms that you thought suitable for small holdings. Can you tell us the names of the old townships on these farms?—No, I am afraid I cannot go into that.

33,346. Or the extent of arable land on these farms that is now let out of cultivation,—say on Sunderland which you describe as a large farm?—I could not give any idea; but I believe that even with the ground that is presently under cultivation a dozen small tenants might be placed upon it extra.

Port-Charlotte, Islay, Argyllshire.

Dugald Ferguson Macfadyen.

33,347. What size of holdings would these have?—I would consider they might run from 40 to 50 acres arable.

33,348. And a sufficiency of grazing ground in addition?—Yes.

33,349. Is that the sort of holding that the people generally desire?—Yes, that is what they would like.

33,350. Now, could you go over the other farms in the same way and tell us the number you think could be accommodated on each?—On Kiltulm I believe four might be accommodated very comfortably.

33,351. Would they have about the same acreage that you mentioned?—Yes, I am taking that as about the average. There might be more or less in some instances, but that is as near as I can go.

33,352. Grimsay was the next farm you mentioned?—I believe there might be room there for about six; in fact, I understand there used to be seven or eight crofters there before.

33,353. Then Foreland?—Foreland I included with Sunderland in giving my estimate of about a dozen.

33,354. They are held by the same tenant, are they?—Yes.

33,355. Next comes Rockside?—As to Rockside I cannot exactly state the number which it could accommodate in addition to the large farmer, because I have not been very much over that farm.

33,356. What size of farm is it?—It is a very large farm, somewhat similar to Sunderland.

33,357. Can you give us approximately the number of holdings that could be made?—Well, I should say not quite so many as in Sunderland, but very near it; say about ten.

33,358. And in Ballymony how many?—I should say there might be eight.

33,359. Then I think you mentioned Gruinard Flats?—I believe the remains on that place point to two small holdings. At Mulbuie there would be one; and at Mulnaroan there were ten crofters before.

33,360. But how many small holdings of the size you suggest could be placed there?—I cannot say, for I only saw Mulnaroan in passing.

33,361. And Gortantaoid?—I cannot say, but I understand there are any amount of indications down there that will show. And there used to be fifteen crofters in Killinallan.

33,362. Then what about Ben Tartigal?—I would think there might be other two there.

33,363. Mr Forsyth.—Are you calculating about holdings of 40 or 50 acres arable each?—Yes.

33,364. Then you consider there is this large amount of arable land available in these large farms?—Yes.

33,365. Sufficient to make so many holdings of 40 or 50 acres arable a-piece?—Yes.

33,366. Were the old holdings anything like that size?—I could not say.

33,367. They were probably very much smaller?—Probably.

33,368. Mr Maccallum.—And you think there are people in the parish who would be able to take such holdings?—Yes, from the applications that have been already sent in, and from the general desire of the people to have holdings I believe they would be only too glad to do so if they had the opportunity.

33,369. And do you think a sufficient number could be got who would be able to stock these holdings?—Yes, I think so.

33,370. Is there a desire for a smaller holding than such as we have been speaking of?—There is a desire for smaller holdings in the vicinity of villages such as this, where the people have dwelling-houses of their own already. They would like, if possible, to have land in connection with their houses which they could work along with them. But again there are a number who would be willing to leave. There is one place I find I have omitted, Carn; and there are also Gearrach and Oalistadh.

33,371. Are these large farms?—These are farms that were under cultivation at one time, but are not now.

33,372. Are they now separate farms?—Yes, separate farms. They are held by farmers who do not reside on them, but merely keep shepherds there.

33,373. Can you give us any idea of the old population?—In Gearrach there were at one time seven tenants, in Oalistadh eight, and in Carn six. At Toronay also there were formerly five tenants.

33,374. Do you think these farms would accommodate the same number of tenants now comfortably?—Well, not according to the numbers which I have been giving in the case of the others.

33,375. Are you well acquainted with these farms?—Yes. I have been over them pretty often. They are close to the village here, and there is a strong feeling in the village that these are the kind of places that would suit them for small holdings to be held in conjunction with the land which they already have.

33,376. These four, I understand you to say, are in the neighbourhood of this village?—Yes.

33,377. Then do you think it would suit better to divide these into smaller lots than we have been speaking about?—Yes, in order to give the villagers some additions to the ground which they already hold.

33,378. What extent of land is held by the villagers just now?—Some have 6 acres, some 8, some 10, and I think three or four have perhaps 20 or 30 acres. But they have no grazing.

33,379. You mean at Port-Charlotte?—Yes. The want of grazing is a great drawback. They have to pay extra for the grazing of their cattle, and are under an obligement to get it.

33,380. Have the people in Port-Charlotte made application for land?—Yes. There were, I think, over forty who made application in reply to the County Clerk's letter; these were from the village alone.

33,381. What sort of holding did these look for?—Some wished an additional lot of 8 acres, some 10, some 12, some 4. One or two went up to 15 or 20 acres.

33,382. And you think it is possible to accommodate these people from the land in the neighbourhood here?—In the district here, quite possible.

33,383. Would they be willing to pay as high a rent for it as is paid for the land just now?—They are quite willing to pay a fair rent, such as may be fixed by a competent arbiter: that is the view they take of it. They are desirous of having the land, but they are also desirous of having a fair rent.

33,384. Why do these people not apply in the first instance,—or am I wrong in supposing that they did not apply in the first instance—to the proprietor for the land?—I could not say: some may have applied, some may not. Although I have applied myself I have not got it yet.

33,385. Did you apply yourself before you went to the County Council?—Yes. I asked before I went to the County Council.

33,386. And you were not able to get it?—Because there is no land in the district except what is held in connection with large farms, and I understand these are under lease.

33,387. And there would be a difficulty in giving it?—Yes.

33,388. Because the land round about Port-Charlotte is under lease?—Yes. I cannot state that positively, of course, but that is my understanding.

33,389. Then do you think that there is a desire on the part of the proprietor to meet the demand on the part of the small tenants?—Well, there has been a desire expressed by Mr Morrison to meet the demand,—that is with regard to the County Council's small holdings work; but at the same time I consider that the places offered and the conditions imposed were simply another way of shoving it by.

33,390. They were willing to give land on certain conditions?—On certain conditions that it was impossible for the people to comply with.

33,391. What were these conditions?—There was one farm, Lossit, offered, and another Ardnave, also one in the Flats of Gruinard: they were to be given at so many years' purchase, and with compensation over and above to the outgoing tenants: and if all these things

Port-Charlotte, Islay, Argyllshire.

Dugald Ferguson Macfadyen.

had been complied with the price to be paid by the County Council would have been simply ridiculous, and then to tax the people over and above that was quite out of the question.

33,392. The proprietors are willing to give the land only under what you consider unreasonable conditions?—Yes.

33,393. And what the County Council consider unreasonable conditions?—Yes.

33,394. Then is it your experience that the proprietors of the county generally are willing to meet the demand which is so obvious throughout the county for small holdings?—No, it has not been my experience, but rather the opposite.

33,395. Was there a committee appointed by the County Council for putting the Small Holdings Act into force?—There was; I was a member of it.

33,396. And did that committee report in favour of putting the Act into force?—Yes, they did.

33,397. How was their report dealt with by the County Council?—When it came up for final issue it was knocked on the head by a number of landlords, factors, and large farmers; the direct representatives of the working people went for it, but were overruled.

33,398. There was a motion for adopting the report, which was to the effect that the Act ought to be put into force?—Yes.

33,399. That motion was lost, you say, by the votes of proprietors, factors, and large farmers?—Yes.

33,400. Did any proprietor on the County Council vote for putting the Act into force?—Not that I am aware of.

33,401. Are you aware that the ten proprietors voted against putting the Act into force, or giving it a trial?—No. I cannot say as to that, for I was not present at the last meeting when the matter was discussed.

33,402. But did not you get a copy of the minutes?—Yes.

33,403. Did you notice that three factors of the Duke of Argyll voted against it?—Yes, and I also observed that Mr Forsyth voted against it as well.

33,404. Then all the proprietors on the County Council voted against giving this Act a trial?—Yes.

33,405. But at the same time you think there is a strong desire on the part of the people to get land?—Oh, yes.

33,406. And that there is in this district from which so many applications went very suitable land?—Very suitable land.

33,407. Which can only be got under very unreasonable conditions?—Very unreasonable conditions. The people in this village have never had an opportunity of getting the land, because to expect a number of people to leave their dwellings and go to Lossit and take the land there I consider quite unreasonable.

33,408. There was no offer of land near where the people are?—None whatever.

33,409. And no attempt to meet the demand for land that comes from the village of Port-Charlotte?—None whatever.

33,410. Mr Forsyth.—With reference to the decision of the Argyllshire County Council on the report from the Small Holdings and Allotments Committee, are you aware that the great majority were much more influenced by the form of the report and the recommendations therein than by any desire to throw out the Small Holdings and Allotments Acts?—I cannot say that that was my opinion; it was rather to the opposite effect, because from the meetings which I had attended I always observed that there was a certain amount of shuffling, and trying to keep back the reports and keep the thing extended.

33,411. You mean that they wished to delay the procedure?—Yes.

33,412. Did you not hear that there was a good deal of difficulty as to the conditions on which the Allotments and Small Holdings Committee reported that land should be obtained, and that it was felt that these conditions were likely to prove very onerous to the ratepayer?—That was shown of course: owing to the conditions on which the landlords would give the land.

33,413. And has it not got a good deal to do with the conditions laid down by the Acts whereby the necessity for buildings and fencing are so clearly prescribed in a manner that is likely to cause very considerable expense to the ratepayers of the County?—Certainly, that was the view that was taken on the matter.

33,414. But you consider that the rejection of the recommendation of the Committee was intended to put an entire end to all proceedings under the Small Holdings and Allotments Acts in the County Council?—Yes, I considered that at the time.

33,415. Was it not suggested that there should be, after further consideration and after further consultation with the proprietors, some more feasible scheme to be brought up in future before the County Council of Argyllshire which must prove acceptable and must be workable?—I could not go into that, because not being present at that meeting I have only the minutes to go by.

33,416. There was a good deal of discussion, you know, that does not go down in the minutes?—Yes, I understand there always is at the meetings: we cannot take from the minutes a full and exact record of what takes place.

33,417. Therefore, on the whole, would you not consider that there was a tendency on the part of the Argyllshire County Council generally to go in for any reasonable scheme that would not entail too much expense upon the tax-payer of the county?—At the meetings which I attended previous to that I was always of opinion that it was exactly the reverse. My opinion was that there was a section of the County Council that simply wanted to knock this business on the head.

33,418. That was merely your opinion, and you were not at the last meeting when the discussion took place previous to the vote?—No.

33,419. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—As to the County Council being willing to adopt some more reasonable scheme than was proposed by the Committee, are you aware that the County Council dismissed the committee altogether?—Yes, I am perfectly well aware of that.

33,420. So that they have now no such committee at all?—No.

33,421. And is it possible, therefore, that the Council can be looking for a better scheme?—I don't see how they can be looking for it when they dismissed the committee, and abandoned the scheme, of course, in doing so.

33,422. Did the committee do their work very thoroughly?—I consider that they did.

33,423. They tabulated very carefully all the returns that were sent to them?—Yes.

33,424. And did the applicants send in all the information that could be reasonably asked for?—Yes, I consider that they did, at all events from this district.

33,425. And do you look to this that the County Council have absolutely rejected these Acts as being unworkable?—That is my opinion.

33,426. Do the minutes show that they have said that it would be unfair to impose upon the County the extra cost of carrying out the Small Holdings and Allotments Acts?—Yes, I think so.

33,427. Therefore, the Council absolutely gave up any idea of meeting the demand?—By going further in the matter.

33,428. Mr Sutherland.—I wish to ask you just one question on this matter of the action taken by the County Council of Argyllshire. What is your opinion generally as to whether it was the fault of the Act or of the County Council that there were no small holdings got in Islay?—Well, really from the manner in which the subject was brought up in the County Council—

33,429. I only want a general expression of your opinion with regard to where the fault lay?—My opinion is that it was the fault of the Act.

33,430. Then I would like to ask you with regard to the tenure upon which the tenants in Port Charlotte hold their land and houses. How are they held?—I understand they are held from year to year; the houses are leased, but not their lands.

33,431. Their houses are built on building leases, are they?—The land is not in connection with the houses.

33,432. They are separate subjects?—Yes; they are what are called in the Crofters Act 'village squatters.'

33,433. And, therefore, do not come under the operation of the Crofters Act?—No; which is a great hardship.

33,434. In this parish have you got any crofters at all under the Act?—Yes; there are a few.

33,435. Where are they to be found?—There was one crofter in Tormisdale who applied to the Crofters Commission and got a reduction of rent.

33,436. Are there not more than one?—There are; but one applied to the Commission and got his rent reduced.

33,437. To what extent?—I think about £5, and the arrears wiped off.

33,438. Can you tell us what rent he paid?—I do not remember just now. It was over £20, I think £24 or £25, and is now under £20.

33,439. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—With regard to these Acts which you have made such an attempt to put into force here, you have expressed the opinion that the Acts are faulty?—Yes.

33,440. But do you think that the County Council have given them a fair trial?—I don't consider that they have given them just the length of trial that they might have had: I think there was always some hindrance put in the way of adopting them.

33,441. That further inquiry ought to have been made?—Yes; I consider so.

33,442. Then seeing that they asked the applicants to send in the particulars as to the extent of land they wanted and the rent they were to pay for it, would it not be reasonable to expect that these people should get a reply from the County Council?—I would have thought they deserved to get it, in recognition of what they had done.

33,443. The people were put to a good deal of trouble in answering the communications from the County Council with regard to that, but did they get any definite reply?—They got no reply except what they saw from the newspapers.

33,444. That is, that the whole scheme was knocked on the head by the proprietors, factors, and big farmers on the County Council?—Yes.

lermid.

NEIL MACDERMID, farmer, Nerabus, Rhinns (80)—examined.

33,445. Mr Sutherland.—What is your occupation?—I have been a farmer since I was born.

33,446. And are you a farmer still?—Yes, ever since.

33,447. What is the size of the farm you hold?—It is not a big farm.

33,448. Do you know the acreage of it?—Not exactly, but I think it is about 66 acres.

33,449. Of arable land?—Mostly arable, not altogether.

33,450. Is 66 acres the area of your whole farm?—Yes, about 66 acres.

33,451. What rent do you pay for that?—£75, 15s.

33,452. Is it far from here?—Not far from here, more than two miles. It was hereabout that I was born in the year 1814.

33,453. Are there more farmers of that size round about you?—No; the hill was taken from us in the year 1867.

33,454. The hill pasture was taken away from you?—Yes.

33,455. And what was done with it?—They added it to another big farm, Kelsay, which one Macintyre had.

33,456. Have you a written statement that you would like to read?—Yes. Neil Macdermid, born in Carn in November 1814; came to Craigfad in 1832; left Craigfad and came to our present farm in Nerabus, in May 1850. The hill pasture was taken from us in the year 1867 and added to another neighbouring big farm to our great disadvantage and loss, which I hope the Royal Commission will be able to restore to us again.

Port-Charlotte, Islay. Argyllshire.

Neil Macdermid.

33,457. Was this pasture that was taken away from you added to the farm of Kelsay?—Yes.

33,458. Did you get any reduction of rent at that time?—The rent was fixed on us just on the small piece that we have.

33,459. Do you remember what you were paying before 1867,—was it more than £75?—Yes, it was more.

33,460. Then you got a reduction of rent when the pasture was taken from your farm?—Oh, yes.

33,461. May I ask you with regard to that rent, £75, 15s. for 66 acres, do you consider that a high rent?—Well, it is very high on us for such a small croft of land. It is only about one-third of the big farm altogether.

33,462. Have you made representations to the proprietor about that rent; have you ever applied to get the rent reduced?—No, never; it was the factor who made the rent at the time.

33,463. But it is the proprietor who gets it?—Oh, yes, it is the proprietor who gets it.

33,464. What would you like to tell us?—Just that the hill pasture should be restored to us again, so as to make us able to live somewhat comfortably and able to pay our rent. It was on the hill pasture that we depended for paying our rent.

33,465. Have you any sheep?—No, we don't keep any sheep. We have had a few hoggs wintering for some other person.

33,466. Is it dairy farming you carry on? do you make cheese or butter?—No, nothing of that kind.

33,467. What is the principal crop you raise?—Oats, potatoes, and turnips.

33,468. No barley?—No barley now. We used to sow some barley, but in these years past we have not done it.

33,469. Supposing your hill pasture were given back again to those from whom it was taken, would the farm of Kelsay still be a large farm?—Yes, it would be still a large farm.

33,470. Would it be larger than your farm after that?—Oh, yes.

33,471. Was this pasture taken from you alone, or did any other person have a share in it?—There was one person who was a neighbour of ours at one time; he lost the farm at the time the hill was taken from us.

33,472. When the hill was taken away from you, were there other farmers whose farms were taken up altogether; is that what happened?—The low farm was given us altogether, and what the other person had of the farm was taken.

33,473. And was it altogether added to the farm of Kelsay,—your pasture and the whole of that other man's farm?—Kelsay got the hill pasture.

33,474. Was it pasture in which other people had a share as well as you?—No, it was not; most of it was ploughed at the time.

33,475. At the time it was taken off?—Yes.

33,476. But I am asking you about the farm before it was added to Kelsay. Had any person a share in the pasture before it was taken away besides you?—There were three of us.

33,477. It was taken away from you and added to Kelsay farm?—Yes.

33,478. Perhaps you would prefer to be examined in Gaelic?—Yes, I would.

(Examined through an Interpreter).

33,479. Had three of the farmers a share in this pasture along with you before it was taken away and added to Kelsay?—Yes, there were three when we had the Ben.

33,480. There were no more than three?—No.

33,481. What has become of the other two?—There are two with me yet in the land.

33,482. So that if that pasture were given back, you would have your share in it, and the two others would have their share?—Yes.

33,483. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—You are not sole tenant of Nerabus, are you?—No, there is a brother of mine and nephews in the same farm.

33,484. And I suppose £75, 15s. is the rent of the whole?—Yes, all that we have.

33,485. How many tenants are there in Nerabus just now?—Three.

33,486. How is the rent paid; have they separate holdings in it, or are they in partnership?—Any one may go in with the rent, but each has a share of his own: we are joint-tenants. Each of us has a share of his own marked out.

33,487. What you state is that you desire to get back the hill pasture that was taken from you?—Yes, that is what we want if we can get it.

33,488. Were you appointed to give evidence before this Commission at a public meeting?—Yes.*

33,489. Then you consider that such an extent as you have would be a suitable size of farm for the people generally?—I have little enough as it is.

33,490. But the other people are looking for such places as you have,—not to be taken from you, but to be taken out of larger farms of course?—To be sure, no less would do them if they could keep it at all.

33,491. And do you think that small places such as yours are paying a higher rate of rent than larger farms?—I think so.

33,492. There is a great demand for such holdings when they are open for competition?—There are plenty asking for small holdings.

33,493. And is there a great demand for the larger farms just now?—No, I don't hear of any.

33,494. Are the rents of the larger farms coming down very much?—That is a thing I cannot enter into. At the time of paying the rent I was getting a reduction from Mr Ballingall, the factor.

33,495. Not a permanent reduction; the rent has not been permanently reduced, has it?—It is not permanent, but as long as the markets are low.

33,496. And during these bad times they have still kept up the higher rent?—No, I was claiming a reduction.

33,497. Have you got a lease?—No.

33,498. Had you ever a lease?—Not since I left Craigfad.

33,499. Where is Craigfad?—On this side of our farm.

33,500. You never had a lease of Nerabus?—No.

33,501. When did you enter Nerabus?—In 1849 or 1850.

33,502. What was the original rent when you went in?—Twice £18, 10s.—£37. There were a great many persons there at one time, and most of them went away to Canada, and then we got the other share.

33,503. When you got the whole of it how much did you pay?—I am not quite sure.

33,504. When did the other people leave?—In 1852 I think.

33,505. How many tenants were in it altogether when you went there first?—There were plenty.

33,506. Can you give the number any more definitely?—Seven or eight farmers.

33,507. Can you give us any idea of the rent that was paid by them for it?—No.

33,508. Can you give us any idea of the condition of the people when they held the land? Were they living in comfortable circumstances?—No, not anything like it.

33,509. You think their places were too small for them?—Yes, surely.

33,510. What was the reason of their leaving?—Just that they were not able to pay the rent.

33,511. Would they have been quite willing to stay if they had got it at a rent that they could be able to pay?—Yes, to be sure.

33,512. And you say that they were not in such comfortable circumstances as the people are now generally?—I think not. All the markets were very low at the time: they had to sell their cattle, and got very little for them.

33,513. When they went out?—Yes.

33,514. And they got no opportunity of staying by being helped with a reduction of the rent? they got no offer of a reduced rent during bad times?—No.

33,515. Mr Forsyth.—Under what name is your farm in the valuation roll?—Nereabolls.

33,516. Are the names of all three Macdermids in as joint-tenants of the farm?—Yes.

33,517. And you hold your stock together jointly?—Yes, mostly: as long as the hill was in our possession the stock was joint, but on the lower part every person on his own share was keeping what he thought the farm would keep.

33,518. But have you got separate cattle stock on the farm now?—Yes.

33,519. Have you separate houses?—Yes.

33,520. And do you work the arable land jointly?—No, not the arable land: each person has his own share.

33,521. And does one man pay rent for the whole of you, or do you pay separate rents?—One of us pays the rent for the whole, but each person contributes his share. I have only one-fourth of the farm.

33,522. Then if you obtained extra pasture in addition to what you have now, you would be very considerable farmers, would you not?—We would be far better off, surely.

33,523. But you have already got what many people in this district are seeking for, have you not?—Oh, yes, that is very true.

33,524. And you rather wish that other people should be in the same position as yourself, do you not?—No doubt; I would like every person to be comfortable.

33,525. Rather than seek any great advantage for yourselves?—Yes, I would like every person to be well-off. I would like that the honourable Commissioners should take a step to the hill and see for themselves.

33,526. Mr Sutherland.—We mean to go and see every place: you will show us the land when we go?—Yes.

33,527. Mr D. F. Macfadyen.—You have said that there were some tenants there previous to your going. Were there people in Nerabus by the name of Campbell when you went?—Yes.

33,528. Were they put out of the farm when you went? Was the farm taken from them?—It was taken from this man when the Ben was taken from us all.

33,529. Who got Campbell's farm?—We got it, the three of us, the lower part.

33,530. Why was Campbell put out of his farm?—I don't know; I cannot go into that.

33,531. Are you aware that he was not in debt for the farm?—I don't know; I cannot say.

33,532. You know Carn very well, I suppose?—Yes, pretty well; it was there I was born, and I remained there till I was eighteen years of age.

33,533. Is there a farm steading on it? And is the farm cultivated?—Yes, it was all cropped.

33,534. Is it cropped now?—No, nothing of it. It was all cropped at the time I was there.

33,535. Do you know Toronay?—Yes.

33,536. Is it cropped now?—Nothing of it, except what the shepherd has.

33,537. Did it use to give good crops?—Yes.

33,538. And did Carn also give good crops?—Yes, Carn was a good place for a crop.

33,539. Do you think Carn and Toronay would make suitable places for small tenants yet?—Oh, they would.

33,540. Mr Ballingal, factor for Mr Morrison of Islay.—Are you quite sure of the acreage you gave for your farm? I believe there are 82 acres arable and 81 pasture, making in all 163, whereas you said 66 acres?

* Macdermid has since written that he misunderstood this question. He represented the Nerabus people only.

—I do not think there are that number, but I did not measure it, so I cannot say.*

33,541. Did I not suggest that some of your nephews should leave your farm and take another?—Yes, that is quite true.

33,542. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Did the factor offer you a better farm instead?—Yes, he did, but the last farm was not to let at the present time: the farmers are still in the place.

33,543. When he asked you to clear out, did he offer you another vacant farm?—He did not, but a place that was not suitable to me, and I could not go.

ALEXANDER MACDERMID, Nerabus (31)—examined.

33,544. Mr Sutherland.—You have heard the evidence given by Neil Macdermid?—Yes.

33,545. Do you agree with that evidence?—Yes.

33,546. Can you give us any explanation with regard to the way in which the holding is held?—No.

33,547. Do you understand that you have a tack or a lease?—Not so far as I know.

33,548. How many dwelling houses are there on the holding?—Three farmers and three cottars.

33,549. Are the cottars employed in cultivating the land?—No.

33,550. Have you any idea of the extent of the holding?—No.

33,551. You heard Mr Neil Macdermid say that he thought it was about 66 acres?—I don't know about that.

33,552. But otherwise you agree generally with the evidence given by him?—Yes.

33,553. Mr Forsyth.—Do you hold a portion of Nerabus by yourself?—My mother does.

33,554. Does your mother pay rent?—The whole of the rent is paid by one.

33,555. Does she sell her stock separately?—Yes.

33,556. And farms a certain portion of the whole, can you not tell me how much?—One-fourth.

33,557. Is it the case that you want an extension of that farm?—Yes, we want more grazing.

33,558. Separately, or as a part of the whole?—Just the same.

33,559. Do you want that grazing to be attached to your portion of the Nerabus farm?—To the whole farm.

33,560. What do you consider your proportion of the rent to be?—I don't know—£18 odds.

33,561. But surely there must be some accounts kept among you if the rent is paid in one hand?—We pay £18 odds: the whole rent is £75.

33,562. Is it a fourth that your mother has?—Yes.

33,563. Then you come here to say that you, Macdermids, hold this farm in a sort of separate manner, but with one payment of rent made up among you, and that you wish that this joint-holding should have additional pasture?—Yes, that is what we desire.

33,564. Mr Sutherland.—Can you give us any receipts for rent from the factor?—Yes.

33,565. Is there anything else you wish to add?—No.

GILBERT MACARTHUR, fisherman, Port-Charlotte (64)—examined.

33,566. Mr Sutherland.—What is your occupation?—A labourer and fisherman.

33,567. Were you appointed by any meeting to give us evidence to-day?—Yes.

33,568. Were there many at the meeting?—About 80 or 90.

33,569. Were they all of one mind that you should come here and give us evidence regarding our inquiry?—Yes.

33,570. Have you any written statement?—No.

33,571. Which occupation takes up most of your time, labouring or fishing?—When weather suits, fishing.

33,572. Where do you go to fish?—Out in the loch. Port-Charlotte, Islay, Argyllshire.

33,573. Do you go up to Mull of Oa?—No, I was at the herring fishing at the Gruinard side, but I am getting too old for the cold nights at the herring fishing. Gilbert Macarthur.

33,574. Is there a herring fishing there?—Yes, on the north side of Islay.

33,575. Have you a harbour there on which you can land herring?—Not very good.

33,576. Is it in Gruinard Bay?—Yes, but there is a bar across which makes it very dangerous when there is a swell on the sea.

33,577. It is very shallow?—Yes.

33,578. What size of boats do you use at the herring fishing?—Big and small boats: small skiffs first and then bigger luggers.

33,579. What is the length of keel of the biggest?—About 28 feet.

33,580. Where do you get a market for your herring?—There are some buyers here, and some at Bruichladich, and some ship them to Glasgow.

33,581. Has there been a good herring fishing at Loch Gruinard?—Yes, last season, but it was very stormy, and the fishing was not very prosperous. A good many boats were wrecked by the storms.

33,582. Is the quality of the herring caught there good?—Excellent.

33,583. As good as the Loch Fyne herring?—The same quality, but larger fish.

33,584. Where do you find labour when you are not fishing?—I generally plant potatoes for myself, and cut peats, and so on.

33,585. Have you any land at all?—Not an inch.

33,586. And you would like to have some?—Yes.

33,587. How much do you think would be suitable for you?—Between 12 and 15 acres.

33,588. Would you remove from your present house, or would you like to get the land in the neighbourhood of the village?—In the neighbourhood of the village if I could.

33,589. Is that because you would not be under the necessity of building a new house?—Of course, that is natural.

33,590. You are not one of those who have got the small holdings Mr Macfadyen spoke about?—No.

33,591. Is there any distinction in the village as to who have land and who have not? Is it a certain rental that gets the land, or is there any rule?—When the houses in the village were built first of all there were four acres laid out for each house. But some of the people went to America, and others lost their land, and some had bad lots, and they were too dear.

33,592. They gave them up?—Yes, and went away to America.

33,593. What was done with these?—They were given to the rest, so that they have a patch here and there scattered throughout the village.

33,594. And the tendency of the holdings has been to get larger?—Yes.

33,595. But they were of one uniform size at first?—Yes, four acres were laid out for each house.

33,596. The whole village was laid out on that plan?—Yes.

33,597. Do you have your house on a building lease?—I have not a house at all: my eldest brother sits in the father's place.

33,598. Are you of opinion that there is sufficient land in the neighbourhood to give small holdings like that to the people round about?—Plenty of land.

33,599. Within easy access of Port-Charlotte?—Within a mile or a mile and a half.

33,600. Would that give a small holding of that size to every person who would like it in Port-Charlotte, do you think?—Well, it would, I think, in this manner; Griamandary would make six good small holdings, and then some of the Port-Charlotte people would remove there, and give their lots to the like of me.

33,601. There are people who would like to move and become small farmers, and that would leave more land for allotments?—Yes.

33,602. You anticipate that the pressure upon the

* Macdermid has since written:—In 1867 all the pasture land was taken from us and added to Kelsay. So far as I can judge all we have now is between 70 and 80 acres.

Port-Charlotte, Islay, Argyllshire.

Gilbert Macarthur.

land round about Port-Charlotte would be relieved by some people wishing to go away and taking small farms?—Yes, they would make room for the rest.

33,603. Are there many in the same position as you?—A good number.

33,604. How many fishermen are there in Port-Charlotte? How many families?—About 14.

33,605. Have any of these land?—Yes, some of them have, but at the time of the fishing they go to the fishing, and then work their wee farm again.

33,606. Are the fishermen who have got pieces of land better off than those who have not?—Of course, they are. The like of me when I have to pay £6, 4s. an acre for planting potatoes in, of course, the farmer ploughs the ground for me, but I have to put in my own manure, and cast it up.

33,607. You think you would be far better off if you had some land yourselves at a reasonable rent?—I am sure of it.

33,608. Have you any difficulty in getting it sometimes?—Yes, it is a growl, and put your hand to your cap before you get it.

33,609. Are there many fishermen who have got no land at all?—There are.

33,610. How many?—Five.

33,611. Do you think they would be all as willing to get a small piece of land as you are?—Yes.

33,612. And they would be perfectly prepared to pay a reasonable rent for it?—Yes, a fair rent.

33,613. Can you give us any information about the length of the lease upon which the houses are built in Port-Charlotte?—It was three nineteens at first, but that period has expired now, or is just about it.

33,614. And what is the new arrangement, do you know?—I am not sure; Mr Ballingal and those who get new leases will be able to agree. My father had a fifty-seven years' lease, and he was about the first.

33,615. When was Port-Charlotte built?—Sixty-two or sixty-three years ago: I was nine months old coming to Port-Charlotte from Tormisdale where my grandfather was a small holder.

33,616. Are there many people now living in Port-Charlotte who held land in the country round about?—Yes, a number.

33,617. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—How were the houses of Port-Charlotte built,—by the tenants or by the proprietor?—By the tenants. Every man built his own house, and they helped one another and got the village up.

33,618. And it was built about the same time?—Yes, sixty-three years ago.

33,619. Where did the people come from?—From all the farms round about. At Kilchiaran there were 14 farmers at one time, and at Lossit 13 or 14, and Tormisdale there was a good number. My grandfather and my father came from there: my father being the eldest, he left my two uncles in the farm and came to Port-Charlotte; and that is the way all Port-Charlotte gathered in from the farms: no strangers.

33,620. They were allowed to build houses at this place?—Yes.

33,621. Why was this place chosen for the village?—Walter Frederick Campbell of Islay laid this place out for them: he wanted to make it attractive, and he gave them this ground to build their houses on; and every man built his own house, and had four acres of ground to cultivate.

33,622. It was because it was supposed to be a convenient place for fishing?—Yes, and it was in his mind to erect some public work, so that along with their four acres the people would have some employment: but that scheme was never carried out.

33,623. What sort of industry was he contemplating?—He had in view at one time to put up a cotton mill: for at that time it was thought to drive the mill by the water-power of a small stream.

33,624. What rent did the settlers pay for their four acres?—Those in the low row pay 35s. to 36s. or 40s., —that is the best: but two or three rows up the rent comes down to about 15s. an acre.

33,625. And when the leases are running out, you don't know particularly, I think, as to the arrangement come to?—Not as to the new leases.

Port-Charlotte, Islay, Argyllshire.

Gilbert Macarthur.

33,626. Are you able to say whether there is a considerable increase in the rental?—No, the rent has not been increased, but it is too dear; there has been little or no reduction.

33,627. You say that the people have come from the farms round about and settled down here?—I said that, which is truth.

33,628. They were able to build houses for themselves here after being put out of the farms?—Yes.

33,629. Is it the case now that you would like to see that process reversed, and that the people should be allowed now to settle upon the land originally occupied by these tenants,—that some of them should leave Port-Charlotte and settle on these lands?—To my mind those who have families in Port-Charlotte, and pretty well off, that could stock a small holding, are quite willing to leave Port-Charlotte and go into a small holding and settle there again, the same as their forefathers were, for this place is too narrow for them.

33,630. Do you anticipate that they would be unable to stock these holdings if they were made available?—There are a good many in Port-Charlotte who are able enough to take a small holding now, and willing to go.

33,631. And you think that that would also be for the benefit of those who remained?—I am quite certain of it.

33,632. They would be quite as well able to build houses now as they were when they built Port-Charlotte?—And better.

33,633. These farms you state are going out of cultivation?—Yes, and getting wilder with rushes, heather and fern.

33,634. That is the result of consolidating the small holdings under a large farm?—Yes. You will see for yourselves places that I have seen, where I weighed barley out myself at 53 lbs. the bushel, now under fern. Fern will never grow but in good soil, that is virgin soil, where barley would grow.

33,635. You are clear that the land has very much deteriorated under large farmers?—Yes. You will see whole stretches where formerly the small tenants cultivated, but to the moss are now useless, under rushes and heather.

33,636. Mr Sutherland.—Was your father a fisherman?—No, he was a crofter here, and a small holder in Tormisdale. My grandfather and great grandfather and all were tenants in this parish, from the eighth century.

33,637. Mr Macfadyen.—You know Kiltulm very well?—Yes.

33,638. Do you think it would be a proper place for small holders?—It would hold four good small tenants.

33,639. You also know Grimsay?—Yes.

33,640. Do you consider it a suitable place?—Yes.

33,641. I understand from what you have said that this barley you spoke of was grown in Carn?—Yes, and produced 53 lbs. a bushel.

33,642. Is Carn cultivated now?—Not an inch.

33,643. There is a little bit of cultivation goes on behind the house, is there not?—Yes, a mere corner.

33,644. For the family?—Yes.

33,645. You consider Carn then would make a very good place for small holders?—Yes, four in Carn, and two in Torony.

33,646. Do you know Gearach well?—Yes.

33,647. Do you consider it would make a suitable place?—Yes.

33,648. And Lossit?—Yes.

33,649. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—How is Gearach held at present?—One half is cultivated in part, and the other half is wild, back into its original state of heather.

33,650. Is it held in conjunction with another farm?—It is divided; there is a farmer in one half of it and a sheep run.

33,651. Who has the sheep run?—Mr Mactaggart.

33,652. And that part is allowed out of cultivation?—Yes.

33,653. There is one other holding on it that was cultivated?—Yes.

33,654. And the part of it that is out of cultivation is, you say, fit for cultivation?—Yes, it was cultivated in the past. I have seen three or four carts going to the mill at once with fine oats from the same place.

33,655. Mr Sutherland.—You have heard Mr Macfadyen's evidence?—Yes.

33,656. Do you agree with it generally?—Yes.

DONALD MACARTHUR, Port-Charlotte (66). (Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

33,657. Mr Sutherland.—Are you also a fisherman?—No.

33,658. Have you any land?—Yes.

33,659. How much?—Nine acres.

33,660. Where is it?—In Port-Charlotte.

33,661. Have you a house also?—Yes.

33,662. Did you hear the evidence of the previous witness?—Yes.

33,663. Do you agree with it?—Yes.

33,664. Is there anything in addition that you would like to say?—No, nothing.

33,665. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Can you mention any other place that is suitable for small holdings not mentioned by the previous witnesses?—I don't know; but some of the parks nearer hand could be divided among the people of Port-Charlotte.

33,666. What rent do you pay for your nine acres and house?—£8, 3s. odds for the grazing and all.

33,667. That is the rent of the holding with the house and pasture and all?—Yes, but as to the grazing, it is in proportion to the number of cattle that I pay rent.

33,668. Are you a crofter under the Act?—No, I am not under the Act.

33,669. So you could not apply to the Crofters Commission?—No.

33,670. The house was held under a long lease?—I never got a lease.

33,671. And is it the old rent that you are paying?—No, the lot has been drained, and I pay interest on the money spent in drains.

33,672. Does the £8 cover the interest?—That is the whole rent including everything. The rent was only 10s. at first, but it increased every time the land was drained.

33,673. Your father had the house before you?—Yes.

33,674. By whom was it built?—By my father. I was the eldest and succeeded him.

33,675. Mr Macfadyen.—Do you pay ground rent for your house?—Yes.

33,676. Do you pay £8 rent for your cropping land?—The rent includes everything.

33,677. Do you pay £2 to graze every cow that you put out to grass over and above that?—No, that includes grazing the cattle at £2 a head.

33,678. How many cows have you?—Two cows; I pay £2 for the one I graze, and keep the other tethered on my own lot. I have other cattle on the hill, for which I pay 10s. to £1.

33,679. How many cattle have you got?—I have got six head of cattle just now, but sometimes more and sometimes less.

33,680. How many do you graze on your own lot?—I only graze one on my own lot.

33,681. Do you graze five in the glen, or in the marsh?—I graze five head, between stirks and young beasts.

33,682. What do you pay for them?—From 10s. to 20s.

33,683. What is your separate rent for the house, what for the lot, and how much do you pay for the grazing of your cattle?—I pay 17s. 6d. for ground rent: I am not sure what I pay for the land itself, as it is all in one, but for grazing I pay £2 for the cow, and 10s. to 20s. for those in the glen.

33,684. Mr Sutherland.—Have you got a receipt for the rents that you pay?—Yes, I can put it in.

33,685. Mr Maccallum.—Leaving out of consideration the rent of your house and the grazing of the cow, do you pay £5 for the land?—Yes, and more. Port-Charlotte, Islay, Argyllshire.

33,686. You say you pay 17s. 6d. for the house, and £2 for the cow's grass, that is nearly £3: does that not leave £5 for the land?—I think it is higher than that. Donald Macarthur.

WILLIAM MACKECHNIE, fish dealer, Conispy (50). (Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.) William Mackechnie.

33,687. Mr Sutherland.—What is your occupation?—I am a fish dealer.

33,688. Have you got any land?—I have no land.

33,689. Would you like to get some?—Yes, I would.

33,690. Have you ever applied for any?—Yes.

33,691. To whom?—I applied to Mr Ballingal, the factor.

33,692. And what reply did you get?—That he had no land to give.

33,693. Did you apply to the County Council also?—Yes.

33,694. And did you get any reply?—No, I did not.

33,695. You are in the same position as the others who applied?—Yes.

33,696. Is there any land in the neighbourhood of where you live that would be suitable for holdings?—Yes, there is land in the neighbourhood, plenty of it.

33,697. Do you speak for other people besides yourself?—Yes, I am speaking for others.

33,698. Had they a meeting?—They had a meeting among themselves.

33,699. And were they pretty unanimous in their opinions?—Yes.

33,700. Are you of opinion that there is land suitable that would make such holdings as you ask for in your neighbourhood?—Yes, plenty.

33,701. What size of holding do you consider suitable?—From 12 to 20 or 30 acres.

33,702. How many people in your neighbourhood, do you think, would take such holdings if they got the opportunity?—Six.

33,703. Would some of them have to remove from their present houses?—Yes.

33,704. And would they be willing to do so?—Yes.

33,705. How are they mostly engaged at present?—Labouring about in the neighbourhood, every place they get work.

33,706. Have any of them got land?—No, none of them.

33,707. How many families are there in Conispy altogether that have no land?—I think there are 21 families without land.

33,708. And what use is the land put to?—Foreland is the name of the place: it is a large farm.

33,709. That is the same farm that we heard about already?—Yes.

33,710. Have you any doubt that these families, if they got land the size you wanted on reasonable terms, would make a much better living than they do now?—There is no doubt they would.

33,711. Mr Macfadyen.—Do you know the Sunderland farm well?—Yes.

33,112. And you know Foreland also?—I do.

33,713. Do you consider that these farms would make suitable places for small holdings for crofters?—I do think they would be very suitable for small holdings.

33,714. Do you know the farm of Grimsay?—Yes.

33,715. Do you consider that that would make a suitable place also?—I think it would be suitable for small holdings.

33,716. Mr Sutherland.—You heard Mr Macfadyen's evidence?—Yes.

33,717. Did you follow it?—Yes.

33,718. Do you agree with it generally?—Yes.

33,719. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—I think you said you were a fish dealer: have you had any experience in farming?—I was farming all my life.

33,720. Where did you work at farming?—In Islay with my father; and I was in the south.

33,721. Where was your father?—In Conispy.

33,722. Had he a farm?—Yes.

NEIL MACNAB, fisherman, Port-Wemyss [Bun-Amhunn] (67).
(Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

33,723. Mr Sutherland.—What is your occupation?—I am a fisherman.

33,724. Have you any land?—Yes.

33,725. How much?—I have six and a half acres.

33,726. What rent do you pay for that?—About £4.

33,727. Is there a house on that land?—The house is not on the land; it is in the village.

33,728. And do you hold the two subjects separately?—Yes.

33,729. From the same proprietor?—Yes.

33,730. Is your tenure of the house and your tenure of the land the same?—I have no lease for the house nor for the land.

33,731. You are a tenant from year to year?—Yes, I got land not long ago from the factor, two and a half acres.

33,732. So the original holding was four acres, was it?—Yes.

33,733. How was the additional two and a half acres used before you got it?—It was grazing land, uncultivated.

33,734. Did you yourself improve it?—I have done all the improvements on it.

33,735. And are there many in the same position as yourself?—Yes, there are.

33,736. How many fishermen are there in Port-Wemyss?—There are about 50 tenants.

33,737. Are they all fishermen in Port-Wemyss?—All fishermen.

33,738. And have they all got land?—All except two or three.

33,739. Would the two or three who have no land like to get the same as the rest?—Yes, they would like land; but when the factor was putting out this new land, some of them would not take it, as it was so poor.

33,740. Was it land adjacent to the other land the fishermen have?—Yes, beside it, and on both sides of it.

33,741. And where is the better land that could be given to you?—There is plenty of good land if it could be given.

33,742. Is it near Port-Wemyss?—About half a mile from Port-Wemyss, from the boundaries of the village.

33,743. Are there many fishermen in Port-Wemyss who, if they got land, would cease to be fishermen?—That is what they say.

33,744. Would you yourself prefer to be a farmer, without having anything to do with fishing?—I would like it.

33,745. And is that the general object you have in coming here to give us evidence?—I would like to get more land, but I was sent here to represent others.

33,746. Had they a meeting?—Yes.

33,747. Were you appointed along with Mr James Macnab to represent the people of Port-Wemyss?—Yes, I was.

33,748. What is the general desire of the people of Port-Wemyss with regard to land?—That they should get land.

33,749. What is their opinion with regard to the size of holdings that would be most suitable?—Some would take 100 acres, some 80, and others from 50 down to 30 acres.

33,750. So that what they desire is a graduated system that would give an opportunity to every person according to his means?—Yes, that is my idea.

33,751. What are the names of the large farms in the neighbourhood of Port-Wemyss?—The farm that is a desert and uncultivated is Ballymony sheep farm.

33,752. Is Port-Wemyss an old village?—It is about sixty years since it was built.

33,753. Was it formed about the same time as Port-Charlotte?—Yes, about the same time. Port-Charlotte may be a year or two older.

33,754. Was it founded under the same circumstances as we heard to-day in reference to Port-Charlotte?—Yes, the same.

33,755. How long have you been a fisherman?—Over forty years.

33,756. Were you always engaged in the fishing from your youth?—Yes.

33,757. And was your father before you?—My father was a farmer.

33,758. Are most of the people in Port-Wemyss in the same condition in that respect as yourself?—Some are, and others are not.

33,759. Have you heard what Mr Macarthur said about the fishing?—I heard, but it is different from the fishing I was acquainted with.

33,760. Wherein does it differ?—We follow deep sea fishing, for ling; we leave this district and go away to Barra and to Lewis and over the Mull of Cantyre.

33,761. Then you require to have large boats?—We do.

33,762. Are there many large boats in Port-Wemyss?—There are six or seven big ones just now. They are not so big as those that went to Barra to the deep sea fishing.

33,763. Did you ever go to the east coast?—I have not been fishing at the east coast, but others from the village have done so: and I have been on the east coast.

33,764. Do any fishermenf rom Port-Wemyss go to Ireland?—There is one here who was fishing in Ireland: I myself was never there.

33,765. Have they been successful lately in the fishing?—The herring fishing was not so good this year: it was a failure, and the trawlers have spoiled it. The deep sea fishing was not so good either.

33,766. But you think there are a number of people who are now fishing in Port-Wemyss who would like to get back to work at the land again?—They say so.

33,767. What is your opinion regarding the fishermen: have they been fishing for love of the work, or because they had no other means of livelihood?—They were forced to follow it: it is not for the love of it.

33,768. Mr Forsyth.—Do the fishermen at Port Wemyss make a fair living at the fishing one year with another?—There is not a fisherman at Port-Wemyss that will support himself by fishing alone.

33,769. You require some other help?—Yes.

33,770. What other help are you getting?—Work sometimes, and doing the best we can.

33,771. But you cannot make a living entirely by fishing?—No, we cannot live by fishing alone.

33,772. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Is that about the general size of holding, the one that you have?—I am amongst those that have the largest share: some have only two or three acres.

33,773. How many holdings are there altogether?—I think there are about 52 holders of land.

33,774. What stock do they keep?—They keep a cow each generally.

33,775. What stock have you yourself?—I have four just now, two cows and two followers.

33,776. How many others will have two cows?—A large number of them.

33,777. From what farm was the land taken that was given to you?—It came from Mr Morrison.

33,778. But what is the name of the farm?—Ellistermore.

33,779. Did you not say that there was land in the immediate neighbourhood that was suitable for holdings?—The farmer has it, and we have got some of his land already.

33,780. How far distant is Ballimony from you?—It is about a mile straight from our place through the moor.

33,781. Would it suit you to get grazing land from Ballimony?—Excellent.

Char-Islay,
lshire.

Macnab.

33,782. Then about the fishing: have you a good harbour?—We have no anchorage, and we have no quay.

33,783. Has there been a proposal to build a quay?—Yes, but it did not proceed.

33,784. Would it be a benefit to the fishermen there?—Yes, it would; it is the very thing that would do them good, and bring trade to the place.

33,785. Do you know what steps have been taken to get a harbour built?—We applied to have a quay, as there was Government money.

33,786. Were the fishermen willing to contribute towards the building of it?—Yes, they were: they were to give about a third of it, or eight days of their labour.

33,787. Has that matter been before the County Council?—Yes.

33,788. Do you know any reason for the delay in building it?—I do not know, further than that the sum they were setting apart for it was not large enough.

33,789. The sum contributed by the people, do you mean?—No, the sum the Government allowed was not sufficient to build a suitable quay: it would not do at all.

33,790. It is at Portnahaven that this pier is wanted?—Yes.

33,791. That is close to Port-Wemyss?—Yes.

33,792. And would it serve the purpose of the Port-Wemyss people?—Yes.

33,793. But it has been delayed from time to time by the authorities?—Yes. I don't know whether it was the County Council, or the Government, or who it was, but it has been kept back at any rate.

33,794. But you have not got an absolute refusal yet?—I don't know that it is utterly cast aside.

33,795. But you think it is a scheme that ought to be encouraged in every possible way?—I am quite sure of that.

33,796. Do you know what sum the Government offered for the building of the pier?—First they thought of £1400, and then they came to £1000, and again down to £500.

33,797. That was the last offer, £500?—Yes.

33,798. Who inspected it on the part of the Government, do you know?—There was one from the Crown.

33,799. Are you aware what report he sent in?—I don't know; it is the County Council that should know that.

33,800. But are not you interested in this scheme yourselves?—Yes.

33,801. And the County Council never communicated with you as to the terms that Government were willing to grant, did they?—I never heard much about it; some would say this, and others would say that.

33,802. Mr Ballingal, factor for Mr Morrison of Islay.—I rather think you have fallen into an error in saying that you have no lease. There is a building lease, is there not, in name, I think, of Agnes Macnab?—It must still be in the office then; I have not got it.

33,803. Mr Macfadyen.—Perhaps I may be allowed to make an explanation as to the pier at Portnahaven. The matter came up before the County Council, and the Scottish Secretary has given a grant (at least it was to be given) of £750. Now the people of Portnahaven have promised to contribute labour to the extent of £250 in value, and if that pier had been gone on with it would have been found to be a great benefit in fostering the industry of the port.

33,804. Mr Sutherland.—Why has it not gone on, Mr Macfadyen, if the Secretary for Scotland has given the grant, and the people are willing to contribute their labour? [Mr Macfadyen.—I was just going to ask that question. I, as a member of the Piers and Harbours Committee of the County Council, cannot give any information as to where the plans of the pier have gone, but they have disappeared.]

33,805. Do you happen to know the reason, Mr Ballingal? [Mr Ballingal.—The Government offered either of two sums, £1000 or £700, according to whether it was to be a boat quay or a steamer quay. That was the provisional offer, but latterly the Government told us that they could only afford £540 for building this. I thereupon wrote to Mr Brand, Glasgow, asking him to draw up plans and specifications for a quay to be built for £550; and I asked if he considered that a permanent structure could be built for the money. I offered him £20 to pay for those plans. Well, I never heard from him from that day to this. I wrote him again two months afterwards asking him whether he thought the £540 was too little, or my renumeration for the plans; but I never heard a word from him.]

Port-Charlotte, Islay, Argyllshire.

Neil Macnab.

33,806. It has not gone beyond that stage? [Mr Ballingal.—No, there the matter lies]. [Mr Macfadyen.—In explanation of that, I might be allowed to say that Mr Brand says now that the plan that has been adopted was not for a pier at all but simply for a slip.]

33,807. Can you tell me upon what representation the Government offered the £540? [Mr Macfadyen.—It was upon a misrepresentation; because the plans that were sent to the Government were never submitted to the County Council at all.]

33,808. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Were not plans submitted to Government before they gave a provisional promise of the grant? [Mr Macfadyen.—Certainly, but this plan has been lost.]

33,809. Do you say that those plans that were originally submitted to the Government have disappeared?—They have disappeared: they cannot be accounted for even by the County Clerk. Col. Malcolm says he has not the plans and never handled them.

James Macnab.

JAMES MACNAB, fisherman, Port-Wemyss [Bun-Amhunn] (60).

(Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

33,810. Mr Sutherland.—Are you a fisherman also?—Yes.

33,811. You have heard the evidence given by the previous witness, Mr Neil Macnab?—Yes.

33,812. Do you agree with that evidence?—I agree with all he said.

33,813. Is there anything you would like to add to it yourself?—I don't think there is: he was speaking about everything that would do us good.

33,814. Has your experience as a fisherman been very much like his?—Yes, about the same.

33,815. Then we may hold you as generally concurring in that evidence?—Yes.

33,816. Mr Maccallum.—There is perfect unanimity among the people of Port-Wemyss in reference to this question?—We are of the same mind about it.

33,817. And you think the matter has been sufficiently represented to us by previous witnesses?—I think so.

Hector Bell.

HECTOR BELL, fisherman, Portnahaven (60)—examined.

33,818. Mr Sutherland.—Are you a fisherman?—Yes.

33,819. Is the fishing industry at Portnahaven very like that at Port-Wemyss?—Yes, it is just the same.

33,820. But I understand you are on different estates?—Yes.

33,821. Is there a desire on the part of the people of Portnahaven to get additional land?—Yes.

33,822. Have they got some already?—Yes.

33,823. Are the conditions the same as we heard with regard to the other estate?—Near about.

33,824. Did you get any recent enlargement of your holdings there?—Yes.

33,825. The same as those at Port-Wemyss?—Yes, or rather more perhaps.

33,826. Would some of the people in Portnahaven like to leave the fishing altogether and settle as cultivators of the land?—Yes.

33,827. Is that the desire of the greater part of them?—Yes, most of them.

Port-Charlotte, Islay, Argyllshire.

Hector Bell.

33,828. How many fishermen are there in Portnahaven?—Perhaps eighty.

33,829. The population of Portnahaven then is greater than the population of Port-Wemyss?—Yes, there are 84 houses altogether.

33,830. Would some of the fishermen at Portnahaven like to remain, and others to take separate holdings away from where they are now?—Yes, those that have a fair share of what is there already; but some of them have very small pieces, one acre and so on.

33,831. As small as that?—Yes.

33,832. Is the whole of the estate held as one farm outside Portnahaven?—Yes, Cladville.

33,833. Who occupies that farm?—One Dr Johnson.

33,834. That is not the proprietor?—No, the proprietor is Mrs Baker.

33,835. Does she reside there?—No.

33,836. And she lets the place?—Yes.

33,837. So it is a tenant farmer that is there?—Yes.

33,838. Is there land on that farm that would make some small holdings?—Yes.

33,839. But not so much, of course, as would accommodate all the people in Portnahaven who wish land?—No.

33,840. But there is plenty land in the neighbourhood, is there, on the other estate?—Yes, Ballimony, on the march.

33,841. And you would like that we should look at that land and judge for ourselves?—Yes.

33,842. You would be willing to show us the land you refer to?—Yes.

33,843. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Is there a resident tenant in Cladville?—No, only a grieve.

33,844. Mr Forsyth.—What sort of holding would you want if you left the sea?—From 50 to 100 acres.

33,845. As much as that?—Yes.

33,846. Of arable land?—No, between arable and pasture.

33,847. Have you any experience of what they call in other parts of the island, a groat holding? Is that about the size you want?—Yes, something about the size of the groat land.

33,848. It was the old custom in Islay to measure land in that way?—Yes.

33,849. You understand that when 70 or 80 families want holdings of that size, it means a great deal of land altogether?—I do not mean that they should all go.

33,850. But that some should go?—Yes.

33,851. Would they be willing to move entirely away from Portnahaven?—Yes, those who have not enough to hold them where they are. The fishing is going back, and the trawlers coming about the west of Islay here spoil the fishing altogether, so that in a short time we will have no fishing there at all.

33,852. Are you blaming the steam trawlers?—To be sure.

33,853. Do you see them passing?—Every day in winter.

33,854. Can you catch them within the three mile limit?—Yes, we see them.

33,855. But you cannot catch them?—No.

33,856. Do you want some help from Government to keep the trawlers in order?—Yes.

33,857. Have you heard anything about that?—Oh, yes, we did. We see them passing by quite close in winter, half a dozen or a dozen every day.

33,858. How do you hold your houses? Have you long building leases?—We have no leases at all.

33,859. But you have built your own houses?—Yes.

33,860. And you have land varying from one acre to good sized pieces?—Yes.

33,861. And they have given more land lately to some of you?—Yes.

33,862. Was there much given lately?—In Portnahaven we got about 120 acres.

33,863. Divided among you somehow?—Just so. Some get none, some get one acre, and some two.

33,864. But you want more still?—Yes.

33,865. Mr Maccallum.—Do you find the additional land a benefit?—Yes, but we would like a quay: we are not going to get it at all, it appears.

Port-Charlotte, Islay Argyllshire

Hector Bell

33,866. Mr Macfadyen.—Had you applied for more land previous to your getting it from the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

33,867. But you never got it till the visit of the Crofters Commission?—No.

33,868. Mr Sutherland.—Was it an enlargement of holdings given you by the Crofters Commission?—No, no. We made application to the Commissioners, but all the applications that were heard were dismissed, and we were placed as cottars.

33,869. Mr Maccallum.—Would it not be on account of the house not being on the holding?—Most likely; but we pay our rents in full.

33,870. Do you desire to get the benefit of the Crofters Act?—Yes.

33,871. And was it after you had sent in an application to the Crofters Commission that the land was granted?—No.

33,872. You got the land before?—Yes, we got the land eight years ago.

33,873. But after that you desired to get the benefit of the Crofters Act?—Yes.

33,874. And applied?—Yes.

33,875. Mr Macfadyen.—Had the people in Claddich applied for more land before?—Yes.

33,876. Did they get it?—I don't know.

33,877. They got more land when the Crofters Commission came?—I don't know whether they did or not. They made application, and they gave up their applications in hopes of getting another piece from the factors, but it is never settled yet.

33,878. Do you know if Currie and those other people in Claddich got more land for grazing after the Crofters Commission came?—No, I cannot say that they did. It was promised to them by the factors, but the Commissioners did not fix fair rents for them so far as I know.

33,879. Mr Maccallum.—There were applications, then, from Claddich, which is different from Portnahaven?—Yes.

33,880. Do you say that these applications were withdrawn?—They got a reduction of rent. [The Secretary.—The blue-book is not yet published, but I can state that land was assigned in this district.]

DUGALD DUNCAN, fisherman, Portnahaven (54) —examined.

Dugald Duncan.

33,881. Mr Sutherland.—Are you also a fisherman in Portnahaven?—Yes, and I have a piece of land.

33,882. How much land?—Two acres.

33,883. Did you get any enlargement recently?—Yes, I had only one acre before that.

33,884. You also have a house in Portnahaven?—Yes.

33,885. What rent do you pay for the two acres and the house?—About £3, 4s.

33,886. You have heard the evidence that was given to us by Mr Bell?—Yes.

33,887. Do you concur in that evidence generally?—Yes.

33,888. You agree with what he has said?—Yes.

33,889. Is there anything beyond that that you would like to say to us?—Yes, I believe there is a good number of our people who would require some assistance for taking more land.

33,890. You mean if they got land and formed new holdings away from their present houses?—Yes; they would require a little assistance in the way of a loan of money to put them on a proper footing.

33,891. What is your opinion regarding the size of holdings that would be necessary or desirable, or wanted by the people?—My opinion is that they would need to be of different sizes.

33,892. From what size to what size?—From 100 acres down to 20.

33,893. Are you counting in arable acres?—Yes.

33,894. Now taking the bigger size of holding, 100 acres arable, how many would, in your opinion, be able to take without any assistance a farm of that size?—I cannot exactly give you the number, but I know there are some.

33,895. There would be one or two?—Yes.

33,896. Supposing the holdings were about 50 acres arable, would there be a greater number able to take that size?—Yes.

33,897. And so on downwards?—Yes.

33,898. Do you think there would be a number in Portnahaven who would be able to take some of the smaller holdings without assistance?—I don't know if they would; I think they would be the better of assistance.

33,899. Of course, you keep in view that these people would have to leave their present houses: you see if any of those people who have got two acres and a house were to leave and go to a new place, they would get compensation for the house and land they leave behind?—I think if they were to get land in Ballimony, which is only about a mile from Portnahaven, they could do well enough without leaving their present houses, some of them.

33,900. You do not think one mile too far for them to go in the morning and come back in the evening?—No, but I think that anyone taking the 100 acres holding would be the better of a house up there.

33,901. There is a desire for such holdings?—There is.

33,902. Would you yourself, now, be willing to take one of these?—Yes, I would.

33,903. And give up the fishing altogether?—Give up the fishing entirely.

33,904. Is the fishing a very laborious and precarious occupation?—Very.

33,905. You heard what the last witness said about the people not being hereditary fishermen: they have not been for many generations fishermen, but are the descendants of people who lived upon the land and cultivated it?—Just so.

33,906. Would that, in your mind, be an element in encouraging them to go back upon the land again?—Yes, a good many of them would go back.

33,907. Have they ever lost the desire to go back to cultivated land?—Some of them.

33,908. Are you a native of this place?—I was not born on this island, but my mother was a native.

33,909. Mr Forsyth.—Have you any idea of the amount of capital required to start and work a hundred-acre arable farm?—No, I cannot give that.

33,910. But you think in spite of that that some of your fishermen could tackle a holding of that size?—Yes.

33,911. But you would need large advances of capital, would you not? You know that a farm of 100 arable acres would require a good deal of stock, implements, horses, and so on?—Yes.

33,912. And you wish to become farmers of that size?—A few of them: the smallest number, I believe.

33,913. It would be a very small number, would it not, who could take a farm of that size?—Yes, perhaps three or four.

33,914. But these men would require assistance in the way of capital?—Some of them: I think there are one or two who would manage to make a start without assistance.

33,915. These would probably be men with £500 to £1000 of their own?—Yes.

33,916. Don't you think such men might possibly get farms by ordinary offer in the country? Or are they too scarce?—I don't know, I am sure.

33,917. Could not men of capital like that obtain farms nowadays on fair terms in the ordinary way? Men who wish a farm, and who have plenty of capital?—I think they might, too.

33,918. This hundred-acre arable holding is, I think, the largest that has been brought before us since this Commission commenced its work, and that is why I make inquiry. A holding of 100 acres arable with anything like an outrun is simply a large farm?—Yes.

33,919. And if you have men of capital who are willing and able to stock such farms, it appears to me that they might possibly find them nowadays?—Yes. Port-Charlotte, Islay, Argyllshire.

33,920. But the majority would require small holdings?—Small holdings, and assistance to make a start. Dugald Duncan.

33,921. Such holdings would probably be four or five cows?—Yes.

33,922. What you call the groat holding?—Yes.

33,923. That seems to be the most common form of holding desired here?—Yes.

33,924. Mr Maccallum.—The scheme that you would favour is a graduated scheme of holdings, down from 100 acres?—Yes.

33,925. Now as to the assistance required, would they require more assistance on account of the land having now been allowed to get into a wild condition?—Oh, to be sure.

33,926. A good deal would be required to bring it first of all to a good condition?—Yes.

33,927. And you think that that is the most effective way of getting the land into cultivation again, to advance money to small holders rather than advancing it to proprietors to be spent through their agencies? You think that would be a more effective way of improving the land than by giving it to large farmers through the factors?—Yes.

33,928. Is there a keen competition for all small holdings that are offered?—I cannot say anything about that, but other people tell me there is a very keen competition all over Islay.

33,929. There is a strong desire for getting holdings, you told me?—Yes, but they are scarcely small enough to suit us. Some of the holdings offered are pretty large sizes of farms: we would call them small farms.

33,930. But you do not think there is an opportunity of getting small holdings at all just now, supposing they had the capital?—No.

33,931. They cannot get small holdings, because they are not numerous?—No.

33,932. So that however willing and however well equipped they might be for a small holding, they have no opportunity of getting such a thing?—No.

DUNCAN CAMPBELL MACEWAN, feuar, Bowmore (52) —examined. Duncan Campbell Macewan.

33,933. Mr Sutherland.—What is your occupation?—My occupation is various.

33,934. Do you cultivate any land?—I do.

33,935. May we call you a farmer?—A feuar.

33,936. You are a feuar in Bowmore?—Yes.

33,937. Have you a written statement to submit to us?—Yes, I shall hand you evidence to show that Killarow, the central parish, is not being represented, and I have a list of 75 persons who would like you to hold a sitting in Bowmore.

33,938. Is it your business here to-day to get us to go to Bowmore?—Yes, principally, for the parish of Killarow and Kilmeny.

33,939. But, I presume, you are prepared to answer any questions that we may put to you?—As far as in my power.

33,940. You understand, of course, that every day we hold a sitting for taking oral evidence is taken away from the inspection of land, and it is a matter for you to consider which is the more important, that we should see the land and decide for ourselves, or that we should sit and hear evidence?—I coincide with everything you say.

33,941. We will take your application for a hearing at Bowmore into consideration. Meantime, can you tell us what the population of Bowmore is?—About 800.

33,942. It is a much older town, I understand, than the others?—It is the first ever formed in Islay.

33,943. It is not a burgh, is it?—Not yet.

33,944. But it is a very much older place than Port-Ellen?—Yes.

33,945. What is the main industry of Bowmore?—We have a distillery, but there is nothing doing there.

33,946. Is it permanently closed?—Not permanently, it is open, but all they do in the twelvemonth could be done in a week.

Port-Charlotte, Islay, Argyllshire.

Duncan Campbell Macewan

33,947. Is the result of that that a number of people are thrown out of employment at present?—The fishermen and crofters, and others have nothing to do, and it is to-day the poorest parish in Islay.

33,948. Is it the case that a great number of people who used to find work at the distillery are at present out of employment?—Yes, that is the case; I estimate that at the very least £30 or £35 a week used to be earned in Bowmore, but now there is not £5 a week.

33,949. And so far as you know is there any prospect of the distillery being re-opened or kept going at its full productive power as before?—Not the least, so far as I know.

33,950. Were the houses in Bowmore built upon feus?—Yes, I am the oldest feuar in Bowmore.

33,951. What is the duration of your feu?—Life,—while water runs and grass grows.

33,952. It is a perpetual feu?—Yes.

33,953. Are these mere building feus, or is there land held in connection with them?—That is for those who have thirty-nine or forty years' lease. There are not many who have perpetual feus.

33,954. What is the extent of your own feu?—About twelve acres freehold. The arable extent is ten acres. This is the first feu ever granted by Daniel Campbell of Islay.

33,955. You have ten acres arable and the site of the building?—Yes.

33,956. Then you are a freeholder of that?—Yes.

33,957. How many are in a similar position?—Not above three or four.

33,958. What feu-duty do you pay?—£4, 19s. 4½d.

33,959. The great majority hold yearly feus?—Yes.

33,960. We saw in the neighbourhood of Bowmore small allotments: how are these held?—Mostly from year to year; they took in the land from us and cultivated it.

33,961. When did they get these allotments?—Eighty or ninety years ago. It was then banks and pits, and whenever it was brought into cultivation the laird increased the rent.

33,962. What is the average rent now: are they all about the same size?—They are different sizes.

33,963. What would you propose yourself with regard to these people who have such small holdings at Bowmore?—As far as I know, some of them could do with more, but some have none at all. There are a number of fishermen who would like when the fishing is not prosperous to have cultivated land; and whatever the Commission would like to put on that land they would be willing to pay.

33,964. Are there many fishermen in Bowmore?—Yes, about 80.

33,965. Have any of these gotl and?—None whatever.

33,966. And is there a general desire among them to get small holdings?—All that I have heard are desirous of getting a large or small holding.

33,967. None of the fishermen have got the allotments we saw round about Bowmore?—No.

33,968. Are there any of those who have these allotments that are, in your opinion, fit to take small farms away from Bowmore altogether?—When the land is available for cultivation.

33,969. There are a number?—Yes, 78 that I marked down at a meeting they called there.

33,970. What land is there that is, in your opinion, available for that purpose?—Within half a mile or a mile of Bowmore.

33,971. On what farm?—On Ardlarach. But there is the cottage farm, Raineach Mhor, adjoining Bowmore; that was Bowmore at one time. Miss Carmichael is the present tenant; 28 lots were taken into that, and that house was put up at one time for a sister of Captain Campbell down there. They put one farm to another making altogether about 100 acres.

33,972. Do I understand that this farm of Raineach Mhor was made up of small holdings?—Yes, taken from the crofters.

33,973. How long ago is that?—Thirty years ago.

33,974. And that land is, in your opinion, suitable for small holdings?—For any size of holdings you choose.

33,975. Is there very much of it?—About 180 acres. I offered for that farm, but could not get it.

33,976. Is there much of that farm of Raineach Mhor under cultivation now?—Under rotation, it is. It is all arable.

33,977. What is the next farm to Raineach Mhor?—Ardlarach, young Macmillan's farm.

33,978. Is that a large farm?—About the same size.

33,979. It is not as good land as the Rhinns of Islay, is it?—No; it is stoney and gravelly, but good for potatoes, and it is adjacent to the town.

33,980. People who have got no land would be glad to get it?—Yes.

33,981. Is there any other farm in the neighbourhood you would like to call our attention to?—Corrary, Lonban, Kyngarry, Neraby, Cattadale, Barr, Knockleanach, Daill. These have been neglected by not being represented.

33,982. We have been over these and seen them for ourselves; are these the farms you would recommend to our notice?—By all means.

33,983. Take the farm of Neraby. How many holdings do you think could be made there, of a size to suit small holders?—I should say there would be a nice farm for a man having a horse or two.

33,984. But take the whole stretch up to Loch Bharradail, from the school up to the loch?—I think about 100 holdings from the parishes of Kildalton, Killarow, and Kilmeny.

33,985. You mean both sides of the river?—Yes. If you were to have a sitting in Bowmore I would give you details of them all.

33,986. But you could not give us more details than we saw. You take in both sides of the river, and back to the hill?—Yes. Neraby on the one side, and Kyngarry and Cattadale on the other, and away down to the hill.

33,987. You think there could be 100 people put there?—I am sure of it.

33,988. How many do you think there were before?—There has been that number, from Torry Bridge to Knocklearach, in penny, twopenny, and fourpenny lots.

33,989. Would you put in now as many as were there before?—I would.

33,990. We did not see the remains of nearly as many houses as that?—The foundations were cleared. The stones were put into drains and dykes, but I am satisfied the land would maintain as many soldiers and sailors, of the best kind, as could be reared for the Crown, as was the case formerly.

33,991. How long is it since the people were cleared out of these farms?—I cannot say, for I was in Australia for about ten years at the time of the gold mania in 1853.

33,992. Were you in Bowmore before that?—Yes, I went out and returned with a few pounds and spent it here. But I am sorry to say I am losing; I am getting behind, I cannot get in my rents, and without many people being located on the ground you will not have trade there, blacksmith, or joiner, or anything. I have been on a station larger than the whole of Islay, with sheep, cattle, and horses, and I am happy to say I managed it.

33,993. Did many people go from Islay in 1853?—Yes, I knew hundreds.

33,994. Do you think that in Bowmore and among these people that you represent here to-day, there would be a number of people who would be willing to take advantage of getting holdings if these farms were broken up?—By all means, and they would try to pay better for the landlords than they do at present.

33,995. And do you think that many of them would require assistance before they could take small holdings?—I hope there will be assistance offered. Money is freely sent to the wilds of Africa, but why not look at home before you go abroad.

33,996. Then you think some of them would require some assistance?—By all means. Most of the holdings in my parish cannot support the people.

33,997. Then with regard to the security, are you of opinion that there would be any danger as to the repayment of the money?—Not on loan from Government.

33,998. Can you give us any information regarding the progress of retrogression of the people in Islay for years past?—I read a statement to the Commission five years ago, but if you will grant us a sitting in Bowmore I shall be able to give you full information. You are sitting in Kilchiaran and Kildalton, but we are left out in the cold though we pay more rates in Kilarrow.

33,999. If we were to hold a sitting at every place, we should not be able to report to Parliament for five years?—You could extend your visit.

34,000. I think the evidence you are giving us is very full?—But there are others to give evidence also.

34,001. We were talking just now of your opinion as to the advance of capital for making holdings. Do you think that there are some people in Bowmore who would take holdings without any assistance?—I am certain sure of it.

34,002. How many do you think there are in that position?—I have got 75 signatures here for that, although I have not had time to prepare details.

34,003. Some would be able to take larger holdings and some smaller holdings?—Yes.

34,004. Would the greater number require assistance or the lesser number?—The lesser number. I am sure the majority do not require it. These signatures have all been obtained at one meeting, although we were taken unawares.

34,005. You cannot hold that, seeing you had several months' notice of our visit. Would all these signatories be desirous of taking holdings?—Yes, small holdings.

34,006. The fishermen would take the smaller holdings?—Yes, even this cow park they would like for potato ground.

34,007. And the remainder would take larger holdings?—Yes, of 10 to 12 and up to 50 acres, according to their means, if they get them at a fair rent.

34,008. And these holdings could be obtained on the large farms you have already mentioned?—Yes. The others can corroborate me if I am wrong.

34,009. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—You gave us the names of several large farms. Can you give us the names of the townships that were on these farms separately,—say on Corrary? Could you tell us the names of the old townships and the number of tenants?—At Lower Corrary, which is about a mile from Bowmore, one Macdougall had to emigrate to America.

34,010. But can you give us the numbers?—No. You must recollect that I was ten years in Australia.

34,011. But in your earliest recollection?—I remember this Macdougall and others, perhaps four or five of these small tenants, and it is under one now.

34,012. How much cultivation is there on that farm of Corrary now?—I could not go into detail.

34,013. The next farm you mentioned is Lonban: how many tenants were on that farm?—Four or five tenants were knocked into the farm of Laggan.

34,014. Do I understand from you that there were five tenants on Corrary, and that it is now one farm?—Yes.

34,015. Is it held now as a separate holding, or is it attached to another farm?—A separate holding. There are two farms, Upper and Lower Corrary.

34,016. But did the five tenants hold Upper and Lower Corrary?—Yes.

34,017. Then coming to Lonban, how many tenants were there?—Lonban is only a small spot: there were two there.

34,018. The next place you mentioned was Kyngarry?—Between Kyngarry and Cattadale there were 18 tenants.

34,019. Do you include Cattadale in the 18?—No.

34,020. How many tenants now hold what was occupied by these 18?—Two tenants.

34,021. Then in Cattadale, how many tenants were there in your earliest recollection?—Two.

34,022. And in Barr, how many?—Only one, John Currie and two Maccachans. Of course, there might be more, but others will be able to speak about that better than I can. Port-Charlotte, Islay.

34,023. Then on Nereby, how many do you recollect there?—There were eight to my knowledge, taking the district up to Nereby and Rosgary. Duncan Campbell Macewan.

34,024. And about Daill?—Taking Dluich and thereabouts, I cannot say for certain, but I am sure there would be other eight.

34,025. Do you remember Knocklearach being under tenants?—Yes, that is where Charles Macneil was.

34,026. How many do you remember in it?—I cannot say. There is Lossit in the same farm. I would say four for Knocklearach, but perhaps some of the others will be able to tell you better than I can.

34,027. Do you think it would be a good thing to advance money to those who are applying for land just now in order to enable them to stock their holdings?—In my opinion Government never passed an Act since the Reform Bill of 1832, that would be better than giving such advances.

34,028. It is your opinion nevertheless that the people would be able themselves to take the holdings without that assistance?—Most of them; the majority would.

34,029. But they would all be better of getting assistance?—Yes. They may in a year or two get their sons to help them, even suppose the Act passed.

34,030. And you think that would be a better way than using Government money for colonisation elsewhere?—Yes.

34,031. How is Bowmore affected by the removal of the small tenants round about it?—There is not a young man to be seen, and there is nothing doing.

34,032. Do you think Bowmore would be the better of some leaving it and going to occupy these farms?—Certainly.

34,033. And the business of Bowmore would be all the better for having the land round about it cultivated?—Yes.

34,034. Mr Forsyth.—You are a considerable proprietor of houses, are you not, in Bowmore?—Yes.

34,035. I see by the Valuation Roll that you have a good many?—But I am very sorry to say I get no rent.

34,036. You find Bowmore is not prospering?—No, it is a dead hole altogether.

34,037. And you cannot get your rents in?—No, nor anything else, but I have to pay my taxes all the same.

34,038. But you are of opinion that there would be prosperity if there was an additional quantity of land provided for the people?—By all means. The people would work instead of being idle and having to go to the poorhouse.

34,039. In fact you would rather reduce the size of Bowmore itself and get the people out to the land, is that your cure?—Yes: they were forced into this little village when they were evicted from their farms, and here they are paupers.

34,040. Then there is no business of any kind carried on?—No business whatever.

DUNCAN CARMICHAEL, feuar, Bowmore (58) —examined. Duncan Carmichael.

34,041. Mr Sutherland.—Are you a feuar?—A feuar and a crofter, or a cottar.

34,042. You have a feu in the town of Bowmore, and a lot of land outside it?—Yes, paying a feu and tax on it.

34,043. Do you pay for the feu and for the allotment separately?—We pay them all together.

34,044. How much do you pay for them altogether?—When it is in full, £12, 8s.

34,045. Do you include the rates?—No, the rates are in addition.

34,046. Are the feu-duty for the house and the rent for the land cultivated separate in the receipts you get?—No, they are not separated.

34,047. How much land have you?—I never measured, but I calculate about 15 acres.

Port-Charlotte, Islay.

Duncan Carmichael.

34,048. What stock do you keep on that?—Three cows and three stirks.

34,049. Would you take a bigger holding than that if you got the opportunity?—I am considering that I would: it is big enough at the rent, until we get the Act extended to cottars.

34,050. But supposing the Act to be extended, and fair rents to be fixed by an independent body, would you be prepared to take a larger holding than the one you have at present?—Perhaps I would take a field or two more.

34,051. Are there many people in Bowmore who, in your opinion, would take holdings like that?—There are plenty of them crying for holdings, small bits.

34,052. Especially the fishermen?—Yes, fishermen and workmen.

34,053. Who have got no land at all?—Yes.

34,054. Do they get land from the large farmers round about to plant potatoes in, the same as we heard of elsewhere?—No, not to my knowledge.

34,055. You have heard what Mr Macewan said about the large farms round about Bowmore: do you know these farms yourself?—I should know them.

34,056. Have you been over them often?—Yes.

34,057. And are they, in your opinion, fit to be made into small holdings?—The small holdings or lots are not workable at the present time.

34,058. But larger holdings,—small farms?—Yes, small farms.

34,059. You think these large farms are suitable for that?—Yes.

34,060. And you are also of opinion that there are people about Bowmore and other places who would be glad to get them?—I think there are a few: I have heard them say they would.

34,061. And you have no reason to doubt that they mean what they say: that they would take them if they had the opportunity?—I cannot justify them, but that is their talk.

34,062. Now with regard to allotments, do you consider that you are paying too high a rent for them?—Yes, we think so.

34,063. Do you think you are paying less or more per acre than the large arable farmers?—Oh, we are paying far more.

34,064. And, of course, you are certain that you are paying more than the people who pay for grazing only, those who have allowed the land that was before cultivated to go out of cultivation?—I do not go into that: I cannot say what a big farmer out in the country pays.

34,065. Have you a general belief that they are paying less than you?—I think they are cheaper.

34,066. Have you been in Bowmore all your lifetime?—No, I have been fourteen years in it. I succeeded my uncle.

34,067. Have you seen land in large farms in this island let out of cultivation since you came?—Yes.

34,068. There are a number of fields which you knew bearing crop that now are uncultivated?—A number of the small farms are now put into one large farm. I could name them if you like.

34,069. We have a list from Mr Macewan: have you any others to add to that list?—Grobolls. It is into Tallant farm between Bridgend and Bowmore.

34,070. And is that a farm that would be suitable for making into smaller holdings?—There were crofters in it before.

34,071. It is a farm that was made out of crofters' land?—There were three crofters in Grobolls altogether, and it was made part of Tallant.

34,072. But you think the case of the fishermen in Bowmore is the most pressing case, as they have no land at all?—I think they ought to get it if possible: but land is too dear; they are better without it.

34,073. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—There is a large number of fishermen in Bowmore who have no land?—Yes, nearly all the fishermen have no land at all.

34,074. And they are asking for land?—They were asking for allotments.

34,075. Do you think that there is land in the immediate neighbourhood that would satisfy their demands?—Yes, give Bowmore back what she had, and it would nearly satisfy all the fishermen there: that is 18 to 20 lots of between two and a half and three acres apiece. These were taken from them and added to the cottage farm.

Port Charlotte, Islay.

Duncan Carmichael.

34,076. Has there been any land granted lately to the Bowmore people at all?—No, except three or four, giving them a few rows here and there for potatoes.

34,077. But has the proprietor given land for allotments recently?—Not that I heard of.

34,078. Are you aware whether they made application to him?—I suppose they did, or to the Crofters Commissioners: I don't know.

34,079. Do you mean to the County Council?—Yes.

34,080. But in any case they did not get any additional land lately?—No, not to my knowledge.

34,081. Mr Macfadyen.—You have just said that the people in Bowmore were desirous of having allotments. Do you mean more than one acre of ground? You do not mean simply gardens, but two or three acres?—I mean an acre, or two or three acres: that is what they told me. That is allotments: three acres and a cow is an allotment.

DONALD MACGILLIVRAY, mason contractor, Bowmore (48)—examined.

Donald Macgillivray.

34,082. Mr Sutherland.—Are you a feuar in Bowmore?—No, I cannot say that I am a feuar: but I was appointed by a meeting to come here.

34,083. What is your own occupation?—I am a mason, a crofter.

34,084. May we designate you a crofter?—I was brought up a crofter.

34,085. But are you a crofter under the Act?—No, just a cottar in Bowmore.

34,086. You have one of those allotments outside Bowmore, have you?—We have two or three fields.

34,087. What is the acreage?—I think about 11 acres. Then we have another place which is 50 acres.

34,088. Yourself?—My brother and I.

34,089. But you have the 11 acres by yourself?—Yes.

34,090. What rent do you pay for these 11 acres?—£12 or so.

34,091. Is your house in Bowmore?—Yes.

34,092. Separate from the 11 acres?—Yes.

34,093. And do you pay a separate feu-duty for it?—That includes the feu-duty.

34,094. Do you remember how much the feu-duty is?—About 27s.

34,095. Is there a strong desire on the part of the people in Bowmore, those who have no land, to get small holdings, and those who have to get larger holdings?—Yes, there is a great desire, excepting in the case of the fishermen.

34,096. You heard the evidence given to us by Mr Macewan about the number of fishermen: is that in your opinion correct?—As near as may be.

34,097. Would you in your own mind have any doubt as to the ability of these fishermen to cultivate small holdings to advantage if they got them?—They say they would; and they would be the better of getting them too.

34,098. Have you heard the evidence from Port Wemyss and Portnahaven to-day, where there are small holdings already?—Yes.

34,099. And you think it is only reasonable that if Bowmore had the same opportunities they would do as well?—It is quite reasonable.

34,100. You heard the desire of the Portnahaven fishermen to get bigger holdings?—Yes.

34,101. Is it your opinion that there should be graduated holdings to give every one a chance?—Yes.

34,102. Do you see an argument in favour of that, in the experience we have had here to-day of people in Bowmore who have no land wanting small holdings, and people in Portnahaven who have small holdings wanting larger ones?—Yes.

34,103. You think it is a reasonable want, don't you?—Yes.

34,104. In your opinion there can be no doubt as to the desirability of the fishermen in Bowmore getting small holdings if they can be got?—None.

34,105. With regard to those who have got small holdings already, are there many of them who would like larger holdings?—Some of them have been talking of it.

34,106. You understand that they would have to transfer themselves bodily?—Yes.

34,107. Are there many, in your opinion, who would be prepared to do that?—There are a few; I cannot say there is a great number.

34,108. Would that be those who have the larger allotments already?—I believe so.

34,109. Would you be disposed to do that sort of thing yourself?—I believe I would.

34,110. Do you know those farms mentioned by Mr Macewan and the last witness?—Yes.

34,111. Are they suitable for the purpose?—Yes, some of them are.

34,112. Which are the most suitable?—I believe those that were mentioned.

34,113. Take first of all those that are, in your opinion, suitable for allotments. These must be near Bowmore?—Yes.

34,114. Which are the most suitable?—Grobolls and Gartmain. The latter is about one and a half miles from Bowmore.

34,115. You also heard the statement that these farms were made out of what were small holdings before. Is that within your knowledge?—Some of them are.

34,116. And have you heard the same regarding others?—Yes, I have heard that that is the case.

34,117. Those in the neighbourhood of Bowmore would be suitable for allotments. Now, which would be most suitable for small holdings?—I suppose Avenvogie, Kyngarry, and the others that were mentioned,—Nereby, Daill, &c.

34,118. What size of holding would you recommend, provided small holdings were to be made?—It depends altogether upon the kind of ground.

34,119. Take the average ground in the farm of Nereby.—If you get the best land there, you could do with perhaps 40 or 50 or 60 acres; and then you would have to extend the holding over the hill for pasture.

34,120. About 40 acres of arable?—You could not get 40 acres of arable.

34,121. For how many holdings?—I am not very well acquainted with the farm, but I believe it has about 1200 acres altogether.

34,122. You would take it as far as it would go, and then go on to the next farm?—Yes.

34,123. But, of course, in dividing the farm, would it not be reasonable to suppose that you would leave to the present steading a sufficient amount of land?—You would have to do something to it.

34,124. Do I understand that the greater part of the various farms mentioned by Mr Macewan are out of cultivation?—Lower Corrary is out of cultivation just now, but it is taken in rotation. It has been added, what they call the Home of Corrary, to the farm of Laggan, which belongs to Mr Ramsay.

34,125. Has the fact that the distillery at Bowmore has not been in full operation told upon the place very much?—It has.

34,126. Are there many people employed in it when it is in full operation?—There used to be a good number of people. I heard the manager say they used to spend £30 to £35 a week in wages.

34,127. And is the most of that stopped now?—Well, there are still the manager and one or two men working about it, but that is all.

34,128. With regard to the fishing, what is the principal fishing there?—Only flounders and cod.

34,129. There is no herring fishing?—Not in the loch here; but they go outside.

34,130. Has the fishing been unsuccessful lately, or about the average?—No, it has been a success lately.

34,131 Rev. Mr Maccallum.—You state that there are some people in Bowmore,—and I think you yourself are one of them,—who would be willing to take small holdings, and who would be able to stock them?—Yes. Port-Charlotte, Islay

Donald Macgillivray.

34,132. Such holdings are not frequently in the market, I suppose?—Very seldom.

34,133. But whenever any such holding is in the market there is a great run, is there not?—Yes, and a high rent put upon it.

34,134. These small holdings are not coming down in rent?—No, I think it is the other way.

34,135. And the large farms are coming down in rent, are they not?—Yes.

34,136. Very much; to nearly half?—Some of them are, and perhaps a little over the half.

34,137. And very little demand for these?—Yes, becau e only capitalists can go in for them.

34,138. You are not at all afraid but that there would be quite a good demand for such holdings as you have been speaking about?—I am certain there would be.

34,139. Mr Macfadyen.—I would like this matter of allotments to be cleared up. Allotments mean an acre or less; but the people want more than that, do they not?—Some of them say they would not take more than an acre, and others say they would take three acres.

34,140. The majority go in for those over the acre?—Yes.

34,141. As to the fishing, I think you said it had been successful?—The herring fishing.

34,142. Is it not the case that in Loch Gruinard this year the herring fishing has been anything but successful?—I heard that.

34,143. It has been pretty successful on the Jura side, but not on the Islay side?—But they were sold in Islay.

34,144. No, they were sold in Glasgow; many of them did not come to Islay?—I understood it was successful.

MALCOLM MACMILLAN, steamboat agent, Bowmore (38)—examined. Malcolm Macmillan.

34,145. Mr Sutherland.—What is your occupation?—Generally, I am a steamer agent.

34,146. Are you a native of Bowmore?—Yes.

34,147. Have you lived there all your lifetime?—I was two or three years away south with the farmers.

34,148. Have you any connection with land at present?—My father has.

34,149. Is your father a farmer, or has he one of the allotments?—Yes.

34,150. You have heard the evidence that has been given by Mr Macewan, Mr Carmichael, and Mr Macgillivray?—Yes.

34,151. Do you agree generally with that evidence?—Yes.

34,152. You are quite able to corroborate it from your own personal knowledge?—Yes: there are plenty of farms that would do for holdings.

34,153. Is there anything additional to what they said that you would like to bring before us?—No.

34,154. You will, of course, know all about the trade of Bowmore by sea?—Yes.

34,155. What is the principal trade at Bowmore?—I think there is little or no trade at all just now.

34,156. But when there is any?—The fishing, and the distillery.

34,157. You export fish and whisky?—Fish and whisky.

34,158. Then, of course, you would import all the requirements of the people of the village?—Yes.

34,159. Is it from Glasgow principally?—Yes, the bread and everything comes from Glasgow.

34,160. Do Mr Macbrayne's steamers call at Bowmore?—Yes. I am agent for them.

34,161. How often does the steamer call?—Once a week, every Tuesday.

34,162. Is the access to Bowmore easy? Does the steamer get in quite safely?—No, there is no pier, just a ferry-boat.

Malcolm Macmillan.

34,163. Has there never been a pier at Bowmore?—There is a sort of pier, but it has not enough of water.

34,164. It is only at certain states of the tide that the steamer can get in?—She never gets in at all, nearer than a mile and a half. We have to take everything in in boats. But I was mostly at farm work: I am only a few years at this.

34,165. Did you work your father's holding?—Yes, regularly, and also kept a few cattle. I had to go to the annual roup of grass parks at Islay House.

34,166. They are put up for auction annually?—Yes.

34,167. How much do you pay for the grazing of a cow?—It is the whole field I take.

34,168. Each person takes a field?—Yes.

34,169. Is that still continued?—Yes.

34,170. Where do you get the parks?—They are auctioned in Islay Square. I would like if I could get a holding.

34,171. Mr Maccallum.—You are one of those who would be quite willing and are quite ready to take a small holding if it were available?—Yes, at any time.

34,172. And are there several people in Bowmore in the same position?—I believe there are.

George Campbell.

GEORGE CAMPBELL, Port-Charlotte (66)—examined.

34,173. Mr Sutherland.—You are now living in Port-Charlotte, are you?—Yes.

34,174. Where were you before you came to Port Charlotte?—I was in Nerabus.

34,175. When did you leave it?—Twenty-seven years ago, I lost the land.

34,176. Why did you lose it?—When my father died I lost it; I thought I was strong enough to do for myself as my name was not in the books.

34,177. Did you wish to have a holding?—To be sure I did.

34,178. When your father died, what became of the land?—The lower part was given to those who were there, and the upper to Kelsay.

34,179. And is the land used for these purposes to this day?—It is.

James S. R. Ballingal.

JAMES S. R. BALLINGAL, factor for Charles Morrison of Islay (60)—examined.

34,180. Mr Sutherland.—Do you wish to give us any evidence, Mr Ballingall?—I have an abstract of the holdings on the estate, and a statement showing the acreage of the principal farms.

34,181. Have you anything to say beyond that formal information?—Nothing beyond that.

34,182. You will hand it in to the Secretary?—Yes.

The statements handed in were as follows:—

4th April 1894.

[ADJOURNED.]

THIRTY-SIXTH SITTING.

JURA, April 6, 1894.

Present:—

ANGUS SUTHERLAND, Esq., M.P. (acting as Chairman).
JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq.
GEORGE GORDON, Esq.
REV. MALCOLM MACCALLUM.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

JOHN KEITH OR MAC-CICH, crofter, Knockrome, [Cnoc-Crom] Jura (64).
(Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

34,183. Mr Sutherland.—What is your occupation?—I am a crofter.

34,184. Are you a crofter under the Act of Parliament?—Yes.

34,185. Have you applied to the Crofters Commission to fix your fair rent?—Yes.

34,186. And did they do so?—Yes.

34,187. When was that?—Three or four years ago.

34,188. How many crofters are there in Knockrome?—Six.

34,189. How many families are there altogether?—Ten.

34,190. And are there four families that have got no land?—No.

34,191. What land have the four got who are not crofters?—Three of them are double tenants, and one is a poor woman.

34,192. What were you asked to lay before us here to-day?—I was asked to say that we have scarcely any water for our cattle; and to speak about the boundaries that we used to have.

34,193. Were the old boundaries made narrower?—Yes.

34,194. When was that?—There was a wire fence put up which narrowed the bounds; of old we used to have liberty to go over to the back of the island.

34,195. How many years ago was that?—A great many years ago. It was in 1852.

34,196. More than twenty years?—Yes.

34,197. Thirty?—I suppose so.

34,198. Do you remember it yourself?—Yes, I was there myself.

34,199. What was done with that land that was taken from you?—Put into the deer forest.

34,200. And is it the desire of the people of Knockrome, if possible, to get the land back?—We do not ask to go to the back of the island, but if we got to the top of the hill that would do.

34,201. Up to Maol-na-Fineag?—We go as far as that just now.

34,202. How far were you thinking it would be desirable you should get?—Before the wire fence was put up our cattle used to go to the watershed.

34,203. Was that the old boundary?—For a while; but when I was a boy they used to go up to the back.

34,204. Do you know Beinn-Tarsuinn?—Yes.

34,205. Did the old boundary go as far as that?—It went to that.

34,206. Could you show us the land you refer to if we went to see it?—I myself am troubled with rheumatism or I should be glad to accompany you.

34,207. But some one else who knows the land could show us it?—Yes.

34,208. Is there anything else you would like to state to us?—No.

34,209. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—You stated that you were deprived of water for the cattle, I think?—Yes.

34,210. When were you shut out from the water?—When the last fence was put up.

34,211. When was that?—I am not sure of the exact year. It was in 1879. This was the fence that cut off our water-supply and a portion of our grazing.

34,212. What is the name of the water you speak of?—The Corran river.

34,213. What stock have you just now?—Seven cows.

34,214. Have you a sheep stock?—There are 150 sheep in the township divided among the nine.

34,215. What rent do the crofters pay?—£12.

34,216. Does each of the six crofters pay the same?—Yes.

34,217. What was the rent before you applied to the Crofters Commission?—A few years before the Commission came it was £15, but previously it was £20.

34,218. Did you get any reduction when the fence was put up that deprived you of a good deal of your grazing?—No.

34,219. Was your stock of sheep reduced when your boundaries were diminished?—Yes.

34,220. What stock had you when you went to the other side?—I don't remember, for I was only a boy.

34,221. Was the application for fair rent lodged by each of the crofters?—Yes.

34,222. Was it the crofters who applied, or the proprietor?—It was the laird who applied.

34,223. Is there any desire among those tenants for new holdings away from their present holdings?—No.

34,224. All your desire is to have the boundaries of your present pasture extended?—Yes, only an extension of pasture.

34,225. And access to the water for your cattle?—Yes; we would like to have access to the water referred to, as we are very scarce of water in the dry season.

34,226. Was the pasture of which you were deprived a good sheep pasture?—Yes, it was good sheep pasture, and part of it was old arable land near the river.

34,227. Mr Robert Cullen, writer, Bridgend, Islay, on behalf of Mr James Campbell of Jura.—Were you desired by the crofters to come here and represent them, or do you merely speak for yourself?—Some of them sent me to speak on their behalf.

34,228. Do you definitely state that you were asked to come here by the crofters who are not present here to-day and who reside in the township of Knockrome?—Yes.

Jura. John Keith or Mac-cich.

34,229. Can you not remember, even as a lad, what number of sheep were upon the township of Knockromé?—No.

34,230. Would there be 200?—There were a good many [Dorlach math] when the two townships were together.

34,231. What idea do you intend to convey to the minds of the Commissioners by a good number 'dorlach math'?—I do not remember the exact number.

34,232. You have already said that it was not the crofters who applied to the Crofters Commission, but the laird, and you say that the rent was £20 before that. Is it not the case that the rent was reduced to £18 before the Commissioners came? [Miss Isabella H. Campbell of Jura.—Did not the laird reduce the rent to £18 in 1888?]—Yes.

34,233. And were the tenants also relieved of twenty days' duty work by the laird before the Commission came?—Yes.

34,234. Was that work valued at £2?—I believe it was; but it was great slavery.

34,235. Is there sufficient water for the cattle just now upon the township?—Plenty.

34,236. Was there sufficient during the most of last summer, except for a very short period perhaps?—Except when it was dry, as it was the whole summer.

34,237. Do you ever recollect, in all your lifetime, such an exceptionally dry summer in Knockrome as you had last year?—Yes.

34,238. And was there water then?—At a long distance water could be had. [Mr Sutherland.—Were you in want of water for your cattle last summer?—Yes.]

34,239. Were you any worse off here than you were in the dry season of which you remember before the march fence was shifted?—On every occasion when there is a dry summer we are badly off.

34,240. Whose sheep and cattle were upon the hill at the time you had the pasture that was cut off?—They belonged to the crofters of Knockrome.

34,241. Was other people's stock upon the land when you had it?—No.

34,242. Had the laird not sheep upon that portion that was taken off at that time?—No.

34,243. Was that portion added to the deer forest?—Yes.

34,244. Mr Maccallum.—About this water you speak of, what was the name of it?—Amhuinn-a'-Bhile.

34,245. Was it dry last year? Or if you had access to it, could you get water for your cattle there?—Yes.

34,246. Mr Cullen.—Have you got into arrear of rent since your fair rent was fixed?—No.

34,247. Are you not in arrear of judicial rent?—A little of the last rent.

34,248. What do you mean by the last rent?—Some of the rent for the last half-year.

34,249. Mr Sutherland.—Are the rents payable in advance? [Miss Campbell.—The rents are not payable in advance.] [Mr Cullen.—I may state that the balance of arrears due by the witness since last Whitsunday is £8, 19s. 3d.; there is also due the half-year's rent to Martinmas 1893, £6, and the current half-year's rent to Whitsunday 1894 will be due shortly, £6. He has paid £3 to account, so that his arrears are left at £17, 19s. 3d.]*

34,250. Had you any arrears of rent before the Crofters Commission fixed your rent?—Yes.

34,251. And what arrangement did you make with the Commission regarding these arrears?—They reduced some of the arrears. Jura. John Keith Mac-cich.

34,252. How much did they cancel? [The Secretary.—The total arrears were £58, 7s. 8d., whereof there were cancelled £38, 7s. 8d., and balance ordered to be paid in two instalments of £10 each at Martinmas 1890 and Martinmas 1891. The fair rent was fixed on 10th May 1890.]

34,253. You said that the rent was reduced before the Crofters Commission came here. How long was it before their visit?—A few years.

34,254. Would it be five years?—About three or four. [Miss Campbell.—It was in 1887.]

Neil Darroch, crofter, Knockrome (34). (Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

Neil Darro

34,255. Mr Sutherland.—Are you a crofter in Knockrome?—Yes.

34,256. Did you hear the evidence given by Mr Keith?—I only heard a part of it.

34,257. Do you agree with the part of it that you heard?—Yes.

34,258. And is there anything of your own that you would like to add to his testimony?—I did not hear the earlier part.

34,259. Were you asked by the people of Knockrome to come here?—No.

34,260. Do you come to give us your own opinions?—Yes.

34,261. Did you hear Mr Keith say that the people of Knockrome would like to have an enlargement of their present grazing ground?—Yes.

34,262. Do you agree with him that that is the mind of the people so far as you know?—Yes.

34,263. You are of opinion that they all desire that?—Yes.

34,264. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Can you speak with regard to any other part of the north of Jura? Do you know about the Ardlussa Estate?—No.

34,265. Three tenants, I think it is stated, hold half of the farm of Knockrome?—Yes.

34,266. Do they concur in asking an extension of holdings as well as the crofters?—I cannot say as to that.

34,267. You speak only for those who are under the Crofters Act?—Yes.

34,268. Mr Sutherland.—Do you know anything about the reduction of rent, and the arrears of rent in Knockrome? Might I ask if you yourself are in arrear of rent?—Yes, to some extent.

34,269. What was your rent before you got any reduction at all?—£20.

34,270. And what is it now?—£12.

34,271. Did the arrears gather during the time you were paying the £20, or during the time you were paying the £12?—When we were paying the £12.

34,272. Have you then paid on an average £12 of rent for a number of years past?—Yes.

34,273. Even when you were getting into arrears?—Yes.

34,274. Mr Robert Cullen, writer, Bridgend, Islay.—Since the fair rent was fixed on your croft by the Crofters Commission, have you gone into arrear on that £12 rent?—Yes, but we were paying the arrears as well as the rent; we could not pay them both.

34,275. What was the arrear left on you by the Commission? [The Secretary.—The arrears in this case amounted to £90, 5s. 7d. The sum of £60, 5s. 7d. was cancelled, and £30 ordered to be paid in three yearly instalments, £10 at Martinmas 1890, £10 at Martinmas 1891, and £10 at Martinmas 1892.]

34,276. Did the laird reduce your rent in 1887 to £15?—Yes.

34,277. And take off the duty work, which is equivalent to £2?—Yes.

34,278. So that your net rent was £13?—We were paying the £15 laid on us.

* With reference to the above statement, Keith has forwarded the following explanation:—"There is no mention of half-year rents in our rent-book. The rents are only paid once a year, although we meet the laird or his factor twice a year. There is only one market held in this island during the year. That is on the last week of June, and the rents are not paid till after that date. The arrears mentioned are not correct. The current half-year's rent (which is not due till May 28th) cannot be counted as arrears. As the rents are only taken from year to year, my rent from 1893 till 1894 is not arrears, and that leaves the arrears at £5, 19s. 3d."

34,279. And he took off twenty days' labour, did he not, at the same time?—It was only twelve days.

34,280. Well, say twelve days; what do you consider the value of your duty work which the laird had formerly obtained? [No answer.]

34,281. Mr Maccallum.—Your rent was at one time £20 plus so much work?—Yes.

34,282. If the work was valued at £2, your rent was, therefore, £22 originally, is not that so?—Yes.

34,283. The laird did not pay back the £2 for the work which you did not perform?—No.

34,284. Mr Cullen.—Do you remember a piece of land being taken off and added to the deer forest?—I do not remember.

34,285. Whose stock was grazed on the forest?—I suppose they were Knockrome and Ardfernal cattle, but I do not remember.

34,286. Had the laird no stock in the forest?—I do not know.

34,287. Mr Sutherland.—With regard to your rent I understand you to say that it was reduced from £20 to £12?—Yes.

34,288. Then you were ordained to pay £10 of arrears?—Yes.

34,289. So that the £10 of arrears added to the £12 of rent made £22 which you had to pay?—Yes.

34,290. Therefore, what you have had to pay during the last two years was more than your original rent?—Yes.

JOHN KEITH OR MAC-CICH, senior, crofter, Keils (67).

(Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

34,291. Mr Sutherland.—Are you a crofter under the Act?—Yes.

34,292. What rent do you pay?—£8, 5s.

34,293. Were you asked by the people of Keils to come here to give us information?—They are all here themselves.

34,294. Then what do you wish to say to us; have you a written statement?—No.

34,295. What would you like to tell us?—About Keils old bounds.

34,296. What were the old bounds?—The boundaries that the township used to have, and that we ourselves have had.

34,297. Are they narrower now than they were formerly?—They are twice as narrow as they were.

34,298. Where do they extend to at present?—There is a wire fence up to where we go, at Aonach-Cheinn.

34,299. And is there a desire on the part of the people of Keils to get that old boundary restored?—Yes.

34,300. What is the land used for at the present time that was taken off your bounds?—For deer.

34,301. Can you give us the date when this change was made in your boundary?—About twenty-six years ago.

34,302. Was it a deer forest then that bounded with you formerly?—There were deer going over the ground where the cattle are, but the fence was put up in that year.

34,303. Were there sheep at that time upon the ground that is now a deer forest—I mean outside of what you held?—Yes, the laird of Jura had sheep.

34,304. But are there any sheep there now?—No.

34,305. Could you point out these old boundaries that the people of Keils want restored, to the Commissioners or to their surveyor, if they went to see the place?—Yes.

34,306. Mr Forsyth.—What kind of fence is it that divides your pasture from the hill now occupied; is it a deer fence?—It is a fence that keeps us out of the forest, but does not keep the deer from going in, and a few of them were in our stackyards last winter.

34,307. How many wires has the fence?—I think it has five.

34,308. Then it is an ordinary sheep fence?—I don't know what is the height of a deer fence.

34,309. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—How many crofters are in Keils?—There are four that have holdings the same as mine, and there are fourteen who have one cow each. Jura. — John Keith or Mac-cich, senior.

34,310. Do the four crofters pay an equal rent?—Yes.

34,311. Those who have grazing, I think you say, have one cow each?—Yes.

34,312. Have they any land to cultivate?—They have: some of the ground was taken from us and given to the small holders.

34,313. Are they able to winter their cows from the produce of the land they have?—They require like ourselves to buy feeding stuff to supplement it.

34,314. What stock have the larger crofters got?—Five cows.

34,315. And what sheep stock?—Five sheep.

34,316. Before they were confined so much as they are now, that is twenty-six years ago, what sheep stock had they?—One hundred and fifty between the four.

34,317. Is it well suited for sheep?—Better for sheep than for cattle.

34,318. Were you before the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

34,319. What was your rent before they adjudicated on it?—It was reduced by the proprietor from £13, 10s. to £12, and the Commission reduced it to £8, 5s.

34,320. Have you been paying your rent regularly since it was fixed by the Commission?—I am not owing much, and I could not pay even the fair rent were it not that I get help from my family.

34,321. You could not take it out of the land?—No, it would be impossible, it is so small.

34,322. How many acres arable have you got?—They say it is ten, but we do not consider that there are ten in it.

34,323. Do you think it would be a great advantage for the crofters to get this additional land that they are speaking about?—Yes.

34,324. Would it be possible to add any arable ground to your holding?—There is a field above the schoolhouse here that used to be in, and that could be utilised if we had outrun in proportion for grazing.

34,325. Who occupies that field just now?—We ourselves have it, but we have no power to change it from grazing.

34,326. You could cultivate that to profit if you had more grazing?—If we had more grazing we would, of course, require more arable.

34,327. And would you cultivate more if you got additional grazing?—Yes, a lot of the ground is nothing but bog now for want of cultivation.

34,328. Mr Gordon.—Did your pasture, before the other ground was taken off, extend to the watershed? Did it go down into Glen Asdale?—Glen Asdale is a long distance from our present bounds.

34,329. Did it formerly go there?—Yes, we have been gathering sheep up at Beinn-a'-Chaolais. The former tenant was factor for the laird of Jura, and he had the home farm.

34,330. Did his sheep come up to the top of the hill, or did you go down to meet him half way down the other side?—Mr Campbell's sheep were coming up to Glen Asdale, and our boundaries went up near that.

34,331. Was the march at the top of Glas-Bheinn?—It went over the back of Glas-Bheinn.

34,332. Mr Cullen.—With reference to that ground that Mr Gordon has mentioned, did the laird's sheep not go over all that ground?—No.

34,333. You have five cows and five sheep; how many heifers have you?—Four.

34,334. Have you a horse?—Yes.

34,335. Any calves or stirks?—Five.

34,336. Is it not the case that all the draff and the meal and other feeding stuff that you buy is used for the five cows and five sheep?—The croft was quite sufficient to maintain them without the draff.

34,337. Is that the number of stock you gave in to the Crofters Commission?—Five cows and followers. When these cows had calves we were allowed to keep them till July when they were sold as stirks.

34,338. You say there were 150 sheep amongst the

Jura.

John Keith or Mac-cich, senior.

crofters of Keils. How many crofters were there at Keils at that time who were joint owners of that sheep stock?—There were only four.

34,339. Were there not twelve?—We have once seen twelve crofters in the township, but they were disbanded because there was no room for them.

34,340. You have stated you are desirous of getting more land. Do you know the hill of Dubh-Chreag?—Yes.

34,341. Is it contiguous to the Keils boundaries?—Yes.

34,342. Were the Keils tenants offered the whole of Dubh-Chreag?—Yes, but we would not be much the better of it.

34,343. But you refused to have it?—I cannot say whether they refused it or not.

34,344. Do you know the croft at Ardmenish that was occupied in 1893 bywidow Catherine Macdougall?—Yes.

34,345. Were you offered that croft?—Yes.

34,346. Did you refuse it?—Yes, I did not want to put any poor widow out of her holding.

34,347. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Was it a vacant croft that you were offered?—No, it was November last.

34,348. The person who was then in the croft is there still?—Yes.

34,349. Was it because you did not wish the widow to be put out of the croft at Whitsunday 1894, that you would not take it?—Yes, everybody requires to make a living.

34,350. How high is the deer fence?—Not very high.

34,351. Can you tell me when a deer was last seen in your stackyard?—About two months ago.

34,352. Did you ever get compensation from the laird for damage done by deer to your crop?—We had to be watching the deer, and we got 2s. 6d. a night for that; but there has been twice as much damage done to the crop as we got in compensation for watching.

34,353. What was the amount you got in compensation from the laird for the damage done by the deer?—I don't remember whether it was £2 or £3.

34,354. In your opinion did you get full compensation for the damage done?—No indeed.

34,355. And your time was also taken up in watching?—Yes.

34,356. Mr Cullen.—Did you lodge a claim with the proprietor for the damage that had been done?—No.

34,357. To your knowledge, was the laird aware of the extent of the damage that was done to your crop?—I cannot say anything about that.

John Keith or Mac-cich, junior.

JOHN KEITH OR MAC-CICH, crofter, Keils [Cill-Arnadail] (67).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

34,358. Mr Sutherland.—Are you a crofter in Keils?—Yes.

34,359. Did you hear the evidence given by the previous witness?—I caught cold while keeping the deer out of my stackyard, so that I am somewhat deaf, and did not hear his evidence.

34,360. Is the deer fence not sufficient to keep out the deer?—They run out and in as they like. The fence is large enough to keep our stock out of the forest, but not to keep the deer in.

34,361. Did you hear what the previous witness told us about the old pasture they used to have?—I did not hear, but I presume he has told everything.

34,362. Are you desirous of getting that pasture back that was taken away?—Yes, the cattle are starving, and there is no market for them. The cow will cost me in hand-feeding before she takes the bull more than the market price of her offspring as a year old.

34,363. Mr Gordon.—Did the former boundary of the crofts go beyond the watershed of the hill, that is beyond Glas-Bheinn?—The boundary was the watershed at the back of Glas-Bheinn, and the sheep went backwards and forwards. There was no fence, and they went over the hill occasionally. It was the fence that caused the poverty. Our sheep went among the laird's, mixing with them.

Jura.

John Keith Mac-cich, junior.

34,364. Coming up Glen Asdale?—Yes.

34,365. Mr Maccallum.—Are there any sheep now on that ground?—No.

Alexander Keith or Mac-cich.

ALEXANDER KEITH OR MAC-CICH, crofter, Keils [Cill-Arnadail] (42).
(Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

34,366. Mr Sutherland.—Are you a crofter in Keils?—Yes.

34,367. Have you heard the evidence that has been given with regard to Keils?—Yes.

34,368. Do you agree with that evidence?—Yes.

34,368*a*. And is there anything further you would like to state yourself that they have overlooked?—Only that we have to buy feeding stuff for our beasts; we have no wintering or summer grazing for them.

34,369. And do you require to buy food for your cattle in summer as well as in winter?—Yes. I give them meal in summer.

34,369*a*. Have you any idea of the number of acres in your pasture?—No, I cannot say; but we know the boundaries, and can show them.

34,370. Are you in the habit of seeing a measured acre?—Yes.

34,371. Have you any idea how many of them would be in your pasture?—I cannot say.

34,372. Have you 500 acres of pasture, do you think?—We cannot say, because there are so many others besides us.

34,373. You heard what was stated as to the old boundaries?—Yes.

34,374. You, of course, can have no personal recollection of the time when you had these old boundaries?—Yes, I was guarding sheep there myself.

34,375. Do you think it is a desirable thing that you should get back these old boundaries?—Certainly.

34,376. Have you read the notice convening the meeting here? Do you know the object of our inquiry?—Yes.

34,377. And do you know any land outside what was spoken to here to-day that it would be desirable we should see in pursuance of our remit?—Yes.

34,378. Where is the land that would be suitable for small holdings?—Sanaig and Strone.

34,379. Is that north or south from here?—South. It is next the shore side.

34,380. Besides Sanaig and Strone, do you know any other place that you think it would be desirable we should visit?—Yes, Learganbreac, north of here.

34,381. Any other place?—Cnocbreac, on the west side.

34,382. Any places in addition to these?—No.

34,383. Are these places, in your opinion, localities in which new small holdings of a reasonable size could be made?—There are plenty places in the island suitable for that.

34,384. But are these suitable places?—They are.

34,385. And what other places do you refer to?—There are many places that have no name which I know would do for cultivation.

34,386. For cultivation with grazing attached?—For both grazing and cultivation.

34,387. Are they mainly on one side of the island, or partly on one side and partly on the other?—On both sides.

34,388. And, speaking generally, what use are these lands put to now?—Sanaig and Strone are used for grazing cattle.

34,389. And Learganbreac?—In the deer forest.

34,390. And Cnocbreac?—In the deer forest also.

34,391. And you are of opinion that holdings could be made there?—Yes.

34,392. Would they be better or worse than the holdings at Keils do you think?—Far better.

34,393. Would you yourself take such a holding if you had an opportunity on reasonable terms?—Yes, and able and willing to pay for it.

34,394. Do you think it would be easier for you to pay a larger rent out of a moderately sized holding than your present rent out of a small one?—I am certain it would be far easier to pay rent for a good sized holding than for small bits.

34,395. Even in the arithmetical proportion of rental to acreage?—Yes.

34,396. So the larger the holding is the higher the rent ought to be on that principle?—Of course.

34,397. And is it the case that the large holdings are paying more per acre than you?—The small holdings pay more per acre.

34,398. How does the rent you pay per acre compare with the rent paid for the deer forest, do you know?—I think we pay twelve times as much for an acre.

34,399. Was your case before the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

34,400. Did you get a reduction of rent?—Yes.

34,401. Have you any arrears?—No.

34,402. And have arrears accumulated since the fair rent was fixed?—I paid them all.

34,403. Were there any arrears upon you?—Yes.

34,404. What was your old rent?—£10, 16s. before the Commissioners came.

34,405. And what did the Commissioners do to it?—They brought it down to £8, 5s.

34,406. What arrears had you at that time?—I paid £20 of arrears. [The Secretary.—The holding was in name of Widow Marion and Alexander Keith, the total arrears were £51, 12s. 4d., of which there were cancelled £31, 12s. 4d., and the balance of £20 was ordered to be paid in three instalments, £7 at Martinmas 1890, £7 at Martinmas 1891, and £6 at Martinmas 1892.]

34,407. Did you get the benefit of the reduction before the Crofters Commission came here?—Yes.

34,408. How much was your rent before that?—I think it was £13, 10s.

34,408*a*. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—If you got the land that you were referring to and the old boundaries, would you be able to winter the stock you have?—No, not without more arable.

34,409. And is there arable contiguous to you that might be added?—Yes, if we got more grazing there is plenty of ground we could cultivate.

34,410. That is not at present in your possession, is it?—Yes.

34,411. Or do you refer to the pasture you have at present; you would cultivate it if you get more grazing?—Yes, certainly.

34,412. Is it your opinion that the land in these places you have mentioned is well suited for small farms?—Yes, very good land.

34,413. There is a large forest in the island?—Yes, most of it is forest altogether.

34,414. When was the last addition made to that forest, do you remember?—Indeed, I am not certain of that.

34,415. But you remember an addition being made to it, don't you?—Yes, I remember a bit being cut off from our holdings and added to the forest.

34,416. But it was a forest when you remember it first?—Yes.

34,417. Then you cannot state of your own knowledge what use it was put to before then; but has it come to your knowledge that the land that is now in the forest was used for rearing cattle and sheep?—Yes.

34,418. Could you tell us the names of the old farms that are now included in the forest?—Most of it is pasture ground that was cut from the other holdings, Knockrome, Ardmenish, Learganbreac, and Keils.

34,419. The pasture was taken from the small holdings, was it?—Yes.

34,420. But was there a farm at Learganbreac?—Yes.

34,421. And Cnocbreac?—Yes.

34,422. These are old farms?—Yes.

34,423. And it is your opinion that these old farms might be converted into small farms, and that these would let well, that there would be a competition for such farms as these; I think you said that you yourself would like to take such a farm as that?—Yes, I know it is good land.

34,424. And are there others in the same position as you?—Plenty.

34,425. Mr Gordon.—What stock have you?—Five cows and five sheep, two stirks and two heifers.

34,426. What extension would you suggest for the grazings of Keils?—It is not convenient to add more to it than the old boundaries at the west side of Glas-Bheinn.

34,427. But would you cross over the hill down to the other watershed?—Yes.

34,428. Is there anything on the ground that would make a good march there after you cross the hill?—Yes, it is good pasture to the other shore.

34,429. Possibly, but how would the men do that are upon the other shore; where would you make their march?—It was of old at the top of the hills where the march was; part would fall to each side.

34,430. Do you know Aon-Bheinn?—Yes.

34,431. Was that the old boundary?—Yes.

34,432. Glas-Bheinn is the highest hill?—Yes.

34,433. Do you suggest that your township boundary should go beyond the watershed, or to the top of the hill?—It was a little to the back of Glas-Bheinn.

34,434. You did not go down into Glen-Asdale?—No.

34,435. Do you live on your croft?—Partly.

34,436. What do you work at?—Just any kind of work I get.

34,437. Are you working at the distillery?—No.

34,438. Did you ever work there?—Yes, I have worked at the steamers and vessels there, and at cargoes.

34,439. At the shore here?—Yes.

34,440. Is that your principal employment at present?—No.

34,441. What is your principal employment just now?—In the meantime I am working at my croft.

34,442. Mr Cullen.—Are you a mason by trade?—I was never a day learning to be a mason.

34,443. But you are a mason?—Yes, of course, I am.

34,444. If you took a croft at Cnocbreac, would there be any possibility of your getting anything in the shape of work, discharging vessels, or mason work there?—It would not matter if I could live on the croft.

34,445. You say that you pay twelve times as much per acre as is paid per acre for the deer forest. Is your acre not worth twenty times more than the average acre in the deer forest?—It is not.

34,446. Do the crofters put seaware on their crofts here for manure?—Yes.

34,447. Is there plenty seaware to be got at Strone and Sanaig?—Yes, they could get it there too, on the shore.

34,448. How far away is the shore?—Just next to the farm.

34,449. Are there plenty of peats at Strone and Sanaig?—Yes.

34,450. On what part of Strone are the peats?—There are peats on every part of it.

34,451. About Learganbreac,—is it not an essential appendage to the deer forest?—Oh, I think they could do without it.

34,452. Whose stock was on it before it was put into the deer forest?—The laird's.

34,453. Whose stock is on it just now?—It is the deer, the stock I see on it.

34,454. Are there not people living there?—Very few.

34,455. How many?—I did not count them.

34,456. What do they do?—They are gamekeepers.

34,457. How many families were there when it was a township?—Four.

34,458. And how many are there just now? Is it not the case that there are four there now?—I believe there are.

34,459. Mr Sutherland.—You still hold the opinion, I think, that you pay a large sum more per acre for your holding than they get for the deer forest?—Yes, that is my opinion.

Alexander Keith or Mac-eich.

34,460. And you also stated, in reply to a question, that you thought the land in the deer forest was better?—Yes, some of it.

34,461. But there is a good deal of the land in the deer forest that is not so good as the land you cultivate?—Yes, the high part of it, of course.

34,462. But who made your land worth so much? Who gave the value to the land you now occupy?—I did a good part of it myself.

34,463. And were your father and mother there before you?—Yes.

34,464. Did they work on that land?—Yes.

34,465. What was it worth, do you think, when they went there first,—was it worth as much as it is now?—No, there were no houses at all then.

34,466. Who gave it the value it has now?—The people made a great improvement on the ground.

34,467. And who gave the value to the deer forest that it has just now?—It has it by nature.

34,468. What was the occupation of the four families who used to live at Learganbreac?—Crofters.

34,469. Mr Maccallum.—Can you tell us the present population of the island of Jura?—About 600.

34,469*a*. And do you know what its population was in former times?—No, I cannot say, but I know there were far more inhabitants in Jura then than there are now.

34,470. Are you aware that, according to the Statistical Accounts of 1841, there were then 1228 people in the island?—No.

34,470*a*. The present population is the half of that?—Yes.

34,471. Mr Cullen.—Was there a kelp industry, do you know, in the island at that time?—I never saw kelp worked here in my lifetime.

John Black. JOHN BLACK, crofter, Keils (32)—examined.

34,472. Mr Sutherland.—Are you also a crofter in Keils?—Yes, along with my father.

34,473. A joint tenant?—Yes.

34,474. Is your case in any way different from what we have heard the others say?—It is much about the same.

34,475. Then do you corroborate the evidence they gave?—Yes, my father lived in Learganbreac, the place that was mentioned.

34,476. Were you born there yourself?—No, I was not. It is forty years since they left it.

34,477. And do you concur, generally, with the evidence you have heard the other witnesses give?—Yes, most of them. If I could get there on reasonable terms I would go on chance. My ancestors were in Sanaig as well.

34,478. And you think these townships would be well adapted for new settlements?—Far better.

34,479. Would they be better than the place you are in now?—Yes, for we are quite closed in: there is no grazing for our cattle or anything, and they are half starved.

34,480. But supposing you were to get your present grazing extended?—Well, it would be always so much; but I would rather go to another place, if I could get it, where I would have arable land. My brother would go along with me.

34,481. Is the desire to get larger holdings general in your opinion?—Well, I would like to get them.

Neil Clark. NEIL CLARK, care-taker, Learganbreac (about 60)—examined.

34,482. Mr Sutherland.—What is your occupation?—I live at Learganbreac, working at the village.

34,483. May we describe you as a labourer?—I am care-taker on the deer forest of Learganbreac.

34,484. What would you like to say to us?—Oh, I have nothing particular to say.

34,485. Mr Cullen.—Do you know Keils Glen?—Yes.

34,486. Are the deer wintered there?—Yes.

Neil Clark.

34,487. Is it a good place for wintering deer?—Yes.

34,488. Could they be wintered in the forest very well without Keils Glen?—Well, no, not on this side.

34,489. Do you remember seeing the laird's sheep on the forest?—Yes, I herded the laird's cattle and sheep there.

34,490. Were the Keils and Knockrome crofters sheep running along with the laird's sheep?—Not since I went to Leargan.

34,491. But before?—Before that they went back and forward there.

34,492. What is Learganbreac used for at present?—It is used for many a thing: for feeding sheep, cattle and horses and deer; and for people. There are five families in Learganbreac.

34,493. In your opinion is there available land at Learganbreac for more crofters or for more residents than are there just now?—No, I don't think so. There used to be five families, four crofters, and a herd in Learganbreac, and there are five families in Learganbreac just now.

34,494. Is it necessary to the deer forest to have Learganbreac along with it?—What would the deer forest do without it?

34,495. Mr Sutherland.—When was Learganbreac added to the deer forest?—About fifteen years ago.

34,496. Was there a deer forest before that?—Well, there were deer in Jura, but there were also sheep and cattle; the old laird kept sheep and cattle and deer there.

34,497. There were deer in Jura when Learganbreac was in possession of the crofters?—Yes, but I believe deer were in Jura since Jura was—

34,498-99. So that Learganbreac will not be absolutely necessary to the deer?—To the deer forest.

34,500. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Is it only fifteen years since that was added to the deer forest?—Well, it was under sheep and cattle before that.

34,501. And the deer forest existed then and was in good working order without Learganbreac?—But that was only putting a little cattle on it to graze in the summer time and a few hoggs in the winter time. The deer were among them there. We have cattle and horses on now.

34,502. When the tenants were there, did the deer come?—No. There were a few deer stopping in the hill and going back and forward.

34,503. And you state that it is a very good place for sheep and cattle?—Yes.

34,504. You say there are five families in it just now?—Yes.

34,505. Do they cultivate it?—No, very little.

34,506. And it is just simply devoted to the deer?—Yes.

34,507. But it was formerly cultivated?—Well, we had a park for wintering our horses and cattle.

34,508. But the tenants who were there cultivated it, I suppose?—Yes.

34,509. But now it is not cultivated?—No.

34,510. And it is well adapted, according to your view, for cultivation and for stock raising?—Yes.

34,511. Mr Cullen.—Do you know what the rent of the deer forest is?—No.

34,512. Were the deer done away with entirely, and the green patches or the good patches devoted to crofters, would Jura as a whole, or would the people as a whole, be better than they are just now?—No, I don't think so

34,513. Why?—Where would they get work then, or how would those get work who now get it from the shooting tenant? The crofters could not give them work.

34,514. So that you could not make as good a livelihood by getting that land at Learganbreac or Cnocbreac as you do just now?—No.

34,515. Mr Sutherland.—But you are not the people of Jura?—No, but I belong to Jura, and I have been twenty-five years at Learganbreac.

34,516. Mr Maccallum.—In your early recollection were there more people in Jura than there are now?—Oh, yes.

34,517. It supported a bigger population in former times when it was under tenants than now when it is under deer?—Yes.

34,518. And there was more produce sent out from the island?—Yes.

34,519. Do you know the number of cattle that used to be sold yearly out of this island?—No.

34,520. Do you know that the Statistical Account states that between 1000 and 1200 cattle were sold from this island annually?—No, I cannot say.

34,521. But there is no such produce sent out now?—No.

34,522. What does it produce now?—I cannot say. The people have now double the land they had at that time. There were then twelve families in Keils, twelve in Knockrome, twelve in Ardfernal, and three in Cnocbreac.

MISS ISABELLA H. CAMPBELL of Jura—examined.

34,523. I should like to say that Ardmenish, which has been referred to and which is now under four crofters, was in the proprietor's own hands formerly, and his factor lived there. In 1847, he made it a crofter township, and removed the crofters from Learganbreac, distributing them on other parts of the estate where there were vacant crofts; and put his factor to Learganbreac, giving him a sheep stock and grazing his own cattle at Learganbreac. The laird had sheep all over the forest ground. Keils, Knockrome, and Cnocbreac people's stock grazed along with the laird's stock, but simply as a privilege, not as a right—and as Neil Clark has told you, he was the herd at Learganbreac, where the laird summered some of his cattle, and Clark usually went along with the shepherds to gather the laird's sheep on the forest ground. At Cnocbreac there were four tenants, and Neil Clark's mother, who was a widow, was also there: but these four tenants were at the same time herds to the proprietor and watchers of his salmon river there; and received their crofts as part of the wages they thus earned. When he removed them, only one left the island; the others got crofts in other parts.

In 1868, Keils Glen was formed into part of the forest. Half of that was in the hands of the Keil's tenants; the other half was in the hands of the laird's own factor, who was removed at that time from Feoline, the home farm that is now let with the forest to Mr Evans. Learganbreac, as I said before, is now under the same number of people as there were before, viz.:—four families, and Neil Clark, who was the laird's own herd for the cattle. The population was very considerably larger than it is at present: that was entirely owing to the kelp industry, which yielded the proprietor from £1500 to £2000, and when that was done away with several hundreds of the people emigrated themselves, because there was no occupation for them. There was not a single eviction from this place. At the present moment, one of the tenants at Knockrome has resigned his double share: the laird would be willing to divide the township of Knockrome into eight shares, equally, if he could do so, but the difficulty is to divide it to the satisfaction of the tenants; and if a Commission would come and divide that among the tenants equally we would only be too pleased. There will be another croft vacant at Ardmenish at the May term; we wanted one of the Keil's tenants to go there, for the reason that it would have made a vacancy in Keils, and the people of that place would have got a bigger farm, with the fourth share divided among them. I have heard several of the Keil's tenants maintain to-day that they have not sufficient provender to maintain their stock, but they keep a very large stock in excess of what they are entitled to do, and for that reason they are short of provender.

All I have to say in conclusion is, that up to the present day the feeling between the tenants and the proprietor has been a very friendly one, and, I think, if you ask them, one and all would be sorry to see Mr Evans compelled to leave the island, although they may wish to get a little more land.

I should like if you would allow a short statement to be read, and then lodged with your Secretary. It is signed and dated.

34,524–25. Mr Sutherland.—By all means. You will, of course, understand that when read it is admitted as evidence, upon the usual condition that questions may be put in elucidation of any of the points raised. Meantime, I should like to ask you one or two questions on the statement which you have already made. But first of all, I think you invited us to go and see the land at Knockrome, and I rather think that statement must have been made under a slight misapprehension of our duties as a Commission?—No, I did not say 'you;' I said I wished some Commission would come and divide it equally among the tenants, as we could not do so to their satisfaction, because they declare that some of the land is poor and some good.

34,526–27. I quite follow you now: I was under the belief that you thought we had anything to do with the division of land. You understand that what the crofters have already is their own to a certain extent?—But I only meant that I wished some Commission would do it because we cannot.

34,528–29. You did not mean that to invalidate any of the statements that were made here to-day, or to suggest that the want of agreement among the tenants would be any bar to their occupying new land, provided they got the opportunity?—I do not quite understand you.

34,530. Was the statement made with the intention of giving us the idea that there would be any difficulty in getting new tenants to agree as to new holdings?—There is a very great difficulty in the way of our making the holdings equal for them, because they declare that the ground is not equally good; and if we divide it ourselves, the one would say he had got a better portion and the other an inferior portion.

34,531. But did they say so?—Yes, they say that portions are bad, and that is the difficulty we have in dividing it.

34,532. And did it absolutely prevent a proper division being made?—It has prevented my father and my brother from doing it. They have wished to do it, and would like to do it to-morrow if it were possible.

34,533. In consequence of that expression they refrain from dividing it?—From dividing it.

34,534. May I ask, did the tenants ever ask to get their bounds enlarged?—No, they have never asked that; and they did not apply to have them enlarged when the Crofters Commission was here.

34,535. You said, I think, that there was a tendency on the part of the crofters to keep more stock than they were entitled to keep?—Yes.

34,536. Does the one complain of the other in that respect? Do you ever hear any complaint?—Oh, yes, there have been complaints.

34,537. Are you aware of the existence of provisions that have been formed to regulate these things? There is an Act of Parliament recently passed which, if put in force, would prevent that.—These rents were fixed according to the applications made under the Act.

34,538. But there is another Act of Parliament which allows arrangements to be made for the regulation of stock and rules for grazing; was there any attempt made to put that in operation?—None.

34,539. May I ask, as a matter of opinion coming from you, whether that desire of theirs to have more stock is not to a certain extent a laudable one?—Certainly, and that is the very reason why we should have liked that one of the tenants from Keils would be removed, so that the stock of the others could be increased by the fourth share.

34,540. Is not the most evident way to enlarge their bounds seeing there was so much land available?—Did we not offer it, and was it not refused?

34,541. Where is that?—It is contiguous to their holdings and can be easily seen from the road. It is where we have our own sheep and cattle.

34,542. When, may I ask, was that offer made?—

Six or seven years ago. My brother wrote authorising it to be offered, but it was refused.

34,543. Did they assign any reason for refusing that offer?—No, I did not hear any reason.

34,544. Or, in your opinion, were there any conditions that would make it unacceptable?—There were no conditions whatever; they were to be given the grazing of Dubh-Chreag. There was not even a fence, and their stock would have gone a great deal further than the actual hill,—in short, they would have come on to our ground very considerably.

34,545. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—With regard to Knockrome, I think it has three tenants who are not under the Crofters Act?—Three double tenants.

34,546. What is the rent of these tenants?—The rent of these tenants is £30, 10s.; but the laird only exacts from them the same rent as was fixed by the Crofters Commission in the case of the others, viz., £24 for the double share.

34,547. And one of these has resigned?—Has resigned one of these shares, being so very heavily in arrears, although he had £60 lent to him by the laird to try and help him. Instead of being able to pay any of that back, he has got so much further into arrears that he is now £148 in debt. On two other occasions my father has advanced sums of £50 and £100, and in each case instead of the money being repaid the debt has very considerably increased.

34,548. And is it the intention to divide the holding among the crofters?—Most willingly, if they can manage it among themselves to their own satisfaction.

34,549. Would they have any feeling about taking the holding that was in the occupation of a neighbour?—Well, the holding is thrown upon our hands; what is to become of it?

34,550. But they have made no application for that holding?—No, because they have not yet been told that it is vacant.

34,551. But you are aware of the strong feeling that Highlanders have about taking land that was in the occupation of another person unless they are perfectly sure that the removal is absolutely voluntary?—But if they know that he has relinquished the holding they cannot have any such feeling. If we are unable to divide it equally among them, my father intends to offer it to the tenant who has no arrears.

34,552. Is the rent of these three tenants taken down permanently? Is it returned to the Valuation Roll at the lesser figure?—Yes, it is in the Valuation Roll at £24, although it is nominally £30, 10s.

34,553. When was that done?—After the Crofters Commission was here. The laird also cancelled their arrears to the same extent as had been done by the Commission in the case of the other crofters whose rents had been adjudicated on.

34,554. You said that the Keils' tenants refused to accept additional grazing?—They refused to accept Dubh-Chreag, which was offered to them unconditionally; and a croft at Ardmenish, which will be vacant in May, was offered in succession to each of the four tenants.

34,555. How can their refusal to accept that be reconciled with their application to-day for more land?—I cannot tell you, except that they never wish to vacate where they are, and this, I conclude, is owing to the low rents they pay for their present crofts.

34,555*a*. Is it the case that Dubh-Chreag would not increase the value of their holdings to any considerable extent?—Well, we consider it very good grazing for our own stock.

34,556. Is it not under deer just now?—There are deer all over Jura, and always have been.

34,557. But must it not have been the case that in the opinion of these crofters the land was valueless,—the particular part that was offered?—No, I think they wished to get one particular spot and won't take anything else.

34,558. Is it reasonable to suppose that if the land was of any value they would not take it?—I don't pretend to know anything about the value of land: but there are three farmers here, and you can ask them what they consider the value of that land to be.

34,559. I think we got an opinion from some of the witnesses here to-day that the land would not really benefit them?—But ask some one else and you may get a different opinion. Our best wedders are taken off Dubh-Chreag every season, and giving it up would mean a loss to the laird for his own sheep.

34,560. Don't you think these people are intelligent people, and that they ought to know what would be for their benefit?—I think they are very intelligent people, and I think they are very nice people and very hard-working people.

34,561. And perfectly capable of forming an opinion as to the value of the land offered them?—But I think when other land is offered to them it is rather hard that they won't take it, but wish to spoil another place which would become utterly valueless.

34,562. But you don't think they have any desire to spoil it?—But it would spoil it.

34,563. Yes, in your opinion?—Well, I think it is the opinion of a good many people.

34,564. The following statement was then read on behalf of the witness:—

ARDFIN, 6*th April* 1894.

The very name of this island, Jura, from Dhiura or Dera,* is, in itself, significant that deer have always been abundant; indeed they are prehistoric, for a fossil stag's antler was dug out of Jura gravel not very long ago. In olden times they were able to roam wherever they liked, no part of the island being fenced off from them.

In 1875, the late proprietor, Mr Richard D. Campbell of Jura, let some 27,000 acres as a deer forest. To do this no crofters or cottars were turned out of the island, or even removed, and it was Mr Campbell's own stock that had to be taken off the ground. The stock (sheep and cattle) kept by Mr Campbell on what is now called deer forest was never large: part of it was only summered there; the ground being chiefly high bleak land is poor and only suited for deer, and if the small particles of better ground were taken from the deer forest and converted into a few indifferent crofts, the rest of this large tract of poor land would become utterly valueless even for deer, for unless hinds get a little better feeding in winter they cannot rear their calves, and in a short time the stock would be nil.

Doing away with the existing deer forest would injure the Jura crofters instead of benefiting them, as the few facts hereafter stated will go to prove:—

1st. The yearly rates paid by Mr Evans, lessee of the deer forest, in a great measure reduce what must otherwise fall on the crofters.

2nd. A large portion of from £5000 to £6000 spent annually by Mr Evans in Scotland is circulated in this island. The sum of £1300 is paid in wages alone per annum to outdoor servants, all Highlanders.

3rd. Mr Evans distributes venison freely among the Jura people. He has fenced, gratis, a good many small crofts, and put wooden lofts and partitions into houses, besides helping the people in many other ways too numerous to mention. In 1892, Mr Evans spent £105 in providing cement, which, with some additional help from Mr Campbell, laid floors in every house from Lagg to Small Isles. If these few facts are taken into consideration, it will, I think, prove that the deer forest is a decided gain to each and all of us in Jura.

The farm of Tarbert, some 24,000 acres in extent, which is under sheep and deer, used to be farmed by the proprietor, but is now let. The present tenant, Mr Dugald Fletcher, a well known farmer, will, I think, be present himself to state how impossible it would be to settle crofters on any part of Tarbert excepting the few fields close to his own house, without which the farm could not be worked. This farm when first let returned a rental of £800 a year, but owing to the poor prices for sheep and wool the rent had to be reduced to £500 a year.

Keanuachdrach farm, about 3500 acres in extent under sheep and deer, situated at the north of Jura, is let to Mr Archibald Maccormick at a rent of £135.

* Norse, Dyr = a wild animal, a deer; and ey = an island. Therefore Dyr-ey means "Deer-Island."

Isabella ampbell.

This farm in better times returned a yearly rent of £200. The present tenant maintains that he cannot make the farm pay, even at the present reduced rent, unless Mr Campbell gives him the shooting and fishing along with it at the nominal rental of £15 a year. This shooting includes three deer as well as other game.

The farms of Ardfin, Strone, and Sanaig, in all about 9000 acres in extent, are farmed by Mr Campbell of Jura himself. Sheep, cattle, and deer graze all over them together as in olden times.

Mr Campbell, shortly after succeeding his late brother in the management of these estates, with a view to lighten the burdens on the people in such depressed and altered circumstances of the times, voluntarily dispensed with the duty work which every tenant was bound to render him, valued at £2 a year as estimated by themselves.

Mr Campbell, a few years ago, was reluctantly compelled to part with his fine well-known herd of Highland cattle, the expense of labour to provide wintering being so high that it far exceeded the prices they realized. Even with his three farms Mr Campbell has to winter from 300 to 400 of his hoggs away from Jura; and, those wintered at home having to be artificially fed, the expense is great. Besides this the heavy death-rate makes the keeping up of stock extremely difficult, and to obtain anything of a price for sheep or wool, fresh blood must be continually brought in. This the crofters do not seem to realize, which perhaps accounts for the fact that sheep sold by crofters invariably fetch the very lowest price in the market. Farms of even small size can only be worked by men possessed of a certain amount of capital. Crofters do not (at least in Jura) care for working a farm together; each and all of them prefer a croft entirely to themselves.

If the better spots of land were taken from Mr Campbell, Mr Evans, and Mr Fletcher, thus rendering the rest of the ground valueless for any purpose, some thirty to forty families, almost entirely Jura people, at present employed as servants by these three gentlemen, would be thrown out of work, and the local rates, which are high enough already, would be very greatly increased.

The distribution of compulsory rates was for the year to Whitsunday 1894 as follows:—

Mr Campbell of Jura's proportion, . .	£402
Mr Evan's (Jura forest), ...	120
Mr Fletcher, farmer, Tarbert, . . .	44
Mr Archibald Maccormick, farmer, Keanuachdrach, ...	13
Crofters, ...	20

Mr Campbell will be glad to show the return of his farm for 1893, and although worked as economically as possible his loss is very considerable.

Mr Campbell for the benefit of his people keeps up three ferries, and a meal mill at a great loss to himself; and if the large tracts of bare bleak land are left valueless on his hands through picking out a few spots where imported crofters might manage to exist, it would be impossible for him to continue to do so.

No crofters have ever been sent out of the island by Mr Campbell or his predecessors.

Mr Campbell advanced considerable sums of money to several tenants and crofters. In every case the money advanced is still unpaid, and a large sum in addition is owing. One of these parties, just declared a bankrupt, has run his debt into hundreds of pounds. Out of 14 crofters who, in 1890, had their rents fixed by the Crofters Commissioners, several are very considerably over a year in arrear of rent; this will prove that even with ready made crofts, money lent and every advantage for procuring seaware, &c., the crofters rarely succeed in eking out a bare subsistence. How would it, therefore, be possible for them to do so where everything had to be made, no seaware convenient and no roads to their crofts? Then who is to take over the existing sheep stock which could not be kept on by Mr Campbell or Mr Fletcher without the better grounds for wintering? And what is to become of the large number of Jura people who would be thrown out of work by Mr Campbell, Mr Evans, and Mr Fletcher?

Jura.

Miss Isabella H. Campbell.

Except for the distillery, which does not afford work to many, people have no means of earning money in Jura; and I have no hesitation in saying that the young people, male and female, as a rule, all wish to get away to the low country. Regular wages paid by Mr Campbell, Mr Evans, and Mr Fletcher to Jura people amount to about £1200 per annum, and extra labour to about £200.

Mr Campbell can show the Commissioners a field on his own home farm about 15 acres in extent reclaimed by his late brother some fifty years ago; and though labour was to be had at that time for very little it cost £1100 to reclaim the same and build a dyke round it.

The rainfall in Jura is very heavy, the yearly average being 65 inches (one year was as high as 94 inches), which is greatly against stock of all kinds. The distance from markets and the scarcity of transit reduces the value of all produce very considerably. Steamer freights are high, which also adds greatly to the expense of goods coming to or going from the island. Stock has often to be kept in towns for several days, having arrived either too late or too soon for the markets.

(Signed) 'I. H. Campbell.'

34,565. Mr Sutherland.—I should like to ask a question with regard to the assessments, Miss Campbell. It was stated that the rates paid by Mr Campbell, the proprietor, Mr Evans, the shooting tenant, and Mr Fletcher were so much: but do they pay more in proportion than the crofters do?—No, not more in proportion,—the same.

34,566–67. So that all that is shown by the information given is that these have a great deal of land and the crofters have very little, is that not so?—Yes, but what we mean is that if there is no deer forest, and nothing on the land there can be no rates charged, seeing the land would not be used for any purpose: hence the assessments would be heavier.

34,568. Provided it was not occupied in any way?—A great deal of it could not be.

34,569. But you will understand that it was never intended that the land should not be occupied under any arrangement whatever: so that the comparison just proves, as I say, the actual distribution of the land.—But do you consider that if the 27,000 acres of deer forest were to be put under crofters it would return anything like £1348?

34,570. I was just going to suggest a question with regard to that. Have you any means of comparing the value of the land per acre held by the crofters with the land per acre held as a deer forest? We have had statements here to-day which were not materially shaken, that the crofters pay a great deal more per acre for their land at present than is paid for the deer forest; and is it not reasonable to suppose that provided they were put in possession of this other land they would pay just as much?—That is a question I cannot calculate out at this moment, but I think if any of the Commissioners take the trouble of walking over the deer forest they will find a great part of it is nothing but stones where nothing could exist. When an experienced and practical farmer will only pay £500 for the farm of Tarbert, size 24,000 acres—very superior ground to what is let as a deer forest, is it at all likely crofters would or could pay £1348 for 27,000 acres, of which a large portion is 1500 feet above sea-level? All these acres would be useless and valueless to crofters and would fetch nothing.

34,571–72. Quite so, if they were selected and taken out from the rest; but that has never been done in any rational distribution of the land?—Still I think the rates must necessarily be much heavier if that land is put under crofters.

34,573. That is a point that has been frequently brought before us, and the same statement has been made over and over again: but I think a little reflection will show that the crofters, wherever they are, pay higher per acre, or at least as high, as any large occupier whatever, and that rates would follow distribution of land, so that if the occupancy simply was changed nothing would be lost?—The land held by the crofters is very superior to what is let as a deer forest in this island, and I don't think you will get crofters that will pay rates on £1348 as the forest does.

34,574. Simply because they have not got the land?—No, but even if they had the land. My uncle having had stock on the land, we know that it will not maintain much stock. He could not keep his cattle there except in summer, and we were obliged to part with our own cattle because the expense of providing wintering far exceeded the price we got for them. A large portion of the stock referred to by the Rev. Mr Maccallum as leaving the island were the laird's own cattle. My grandfather and great-grandfather had enormous folds that were on the low ground and in different places, but which we cannot now keep on.

34,575–76. That is a point that requires some explanation. What is the difference between now and then when they could keep and export a large number of cattle? Have you any idea why it should not be so now?—The prices are so much lower.

34,577. But that would not affect the maintenance of the cattle?—Yes, because you have to spend much more in providing the wintering for them. Labour costs double what it used to be here.

34,578. But that is a question of value, not a question of being able to maintain the stock?—Well, another point I can tell you is that the ground has deteriorated. We have had three competent men to come and examine our own farms, and they all said that the ground now was not in a fit state to maintain the amount of stock that it had.

34,579. To what cause did they attribute that?—The climate.

34,580–81. The climate has changed?—I think the climate has got worse. Look at our heavy rainfall and the wet weather we have.

34,582. Unfortunately that is prevalent all over?—I suppose it is prevalent all over Scotland.

34,583. There was a sum of £1100 mentioned as having been expended upon reclamation?—Yes, you will see that field on your way back to-day.

34,584. I could perfectly well believe that that is a sum which would never return a profitable interest upon a park or a field unless it were very large and very fruitful. But did the proprietor expend any money in reclaiming the land in occupation of the crofters for which there is rent paid?—Yes, the proprietor reclaimed Ardmenish where there are crofters now.

34,585. But not the places at Keils and Knockrome?—No, that was never in the laird's hands, but the laird paid for the draining of the whole of Keils and Knockrome.

34,586–87. Does that not point to the fact that crofters are very profitable occupants of land, when land upon which the proprietor spent £1100 pays him no return, and land upon which he spent nothing gives him a rent of £12, as we heard to-day? Putting it very generally,—I don't wish to press it very much,—but is not that a point that must be kept in view?—But I consider that a great portion of what they pay the rent for at Keils is not arable land cultivated; it is what they graze their sheep and cattle on, and nothing was done to that.

34,588. But that would be a high rent to pay per acre for grazing. There was also a statement made to the effect that the crofters' cattle fetched a lower price than other cattle?—Sheep: I did not say cattle.

34,589. I beg your pardon,—sheep?—It may go for both sheep and cattle, perhaps.

34,590. It is quite possible; unfortunately, it agrees with our experience that cattle and sheep are in a great many places inferior. But did you never think that that was owing to the want of facilities they have owing to the narrowness of their bounds?—No, I think it is very often that they have not good enough blood. My father and uncle always tried, if possible, to help the crofters in the way of giving them fresh blood from their good stock, at moderate prices, to improve their stock.

34,591–92. But would it not, in your opinion, be a pretty good thing to put them in a position to help themselves, if they are intelligent people as we have seen to-day?—We are anxious to do so; whenever there is a vacant croft we would like to give it to them.

Jura.

Miss Isabella H. Campbell.

34,593. I think we have not heard a statement of the comparative acreages of the farms on this estate, such as we have received on most others?—Without having somebody to come and measure them off we could not give that: but if any of the Commissioners are able to do so from the Ordnance Survey Map, we have a large one. I very much regret that my father was unable to be present to-day, and my brother also could not attend.

34,594. If I may be allowed to say so, I do not think their interests have suffered in any way by their absence; but if you would be kind enough to allow our surveyor to have facilities for seeing the boundaries of the farms?—Certainly; the whole of our farms are on the way to the ferry.

34,595. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—The money that is spent in the island now is, of course, brought from outside; there is very little wealth produced in the island itself?—Do you mean that the crofters can make very little wages?

34,596–97. I mean that by the use to which the land is presently put, there is very little produced in the island?—Very little.

34,598. It is a waste now?—I don't quite understand: it is much more remunerative.

34,599. Ah, but that is money spent in it, not money produced by it. People come here to spend money, but the island itself is worthless as a wealth-producing subject?—I don't see what you are going to produce out of the island.

34,600. But did you not say that enormous herds of cattle were at one time maintained on the island?—When I say enormous herds, I mean that the laird had a herd of 200 to 300 head.

34,601. And these were noted herds?—It was a well known herd; it was considered to be one of the finest Highland herds in Scotland. My father parted with that herd very reluctantly.

34,602. That was a valuable produce that the island gave?—Yes, but at such a heavy loss that we could not keep it.

34,603. But still the island did maintain these enormous herds?—The herd was maintained at such a loss that we could not continue to do it.

34,604. But was feeding stuff taken from elsewhere to keep up these cattle?—Yes, we had to import feeding stuff to a great extent; and now even with sheep stock we have to do the same.

34,605. Yes, now, because it is laid waste; but when the herd was formed, was there much wintering bought?—In the olden days when the ground was better the feeding had not to be imported; but latterly owing to deterioration of the ground or other causes it went back, and feeding stuffs had to be imported. And another thing is that, from whatever cause, the animals reared were no longer so strong, and they required more housing and altogether more attention than they received in olden times.

34,606–07. You stated that a good deal of capital would now be required for setting up small farms?—Well, I think there must be a certain amount of capital to build a house and fence the land and do all that sort of thing.

34,608. But these crofters have a good deal of stock already?—They have all stock.

34,609. And if they got larger holdings the stock would soon increase to a sufficient amount?—Exactly; we are willing to give them that. We have shown our willingness by offering a very much larger croft at Ardmenish as also Dubh-Chreag for grazing their sheep stock.

34,610. So that the difficulty might be got over in that way?—A great many of them are already in arrears, and I don't know how they are to get money to set up in larger holdings.

34,611–12. But still they happen to have stock?—They have the stock on their present holdings.

34,613. Then as to the statement that it would not do to cut off all the green spots and leave the rest for the forest, of course, you are aware that no such proposal was ever made by any person?—Well, you have gone over all the green spots here that are suitable for cultivation.

34,614. But was it not the intention of those who were speaking of that, that there should be grazing ground along with it? Did they not want the pasture as well as the green spots?—They could not cut sufficient provender to maintain the cattle out of the small patches.

34,615–16. But you see enormous herds were maintained before; and besides that, would they not have sheep which would not require to be hand fed?—The laird had his own sheep in the forest.

34,617. And is not that rather the process that has been going on already, confining them to a few green spots, and taking the pasture from them?—I don't think they can complain of that in Jura.

34,618. There has been a statement made to us to-day that they were deprived of their pasture?—You will see for yourselves whether they were deprived of it.

34,619. And you yourself object to them being confined to narrow bounds?—I don't think the crofters in Jura are confined to narrow bounds, and I think, as I have said, that where they pastured out they pastured simply as a privilege on the ground where the laird had his own stock; as Neil Clark himself told you he gathered the laird's sheep off that ground.

34,620–21. Of course, we know this, that cattle were allowed to cross boundaries; there were not fences, and they have stated that although these boundaries were set out and declared still they were not rigidly kept; the laird's cattle wandered upon their ground, they don't deny that?—Yes, but we do not admit that they had these boundaries; we say their stock just grazed on the laird's ground where he had his own stock.

34,622. You say it was yours, and they say it was theirs?—They say it was theirs.

34,623–24. But still the stock of both were there, and they are not there now; they have been confined now to a small spot, which was not the old condition of affairs?—Yes, but there are very few now in comparison with what there used to be in the island; and that was not through any fault of ours, but owing to the failure of the kelp industry.

34,625. I think you said the proprietor made a large profit out of the kelp?—It yielded from £1500 to £2000 a year.

34,626. Was that a profit off the people's work?—The people worked at wages to him. He paid them wages for making the kelp.

34,627–28. I was rather astonished at hearing that the proprietor got out of the labour of these people £2000 a year?—It was not out of their labour but out of the kelp.

34,629. Did not he make that profit out of it? What did he contribute to it?—He paid them wages the same as anybody else pays a servant wages.

34,630. He made that as profit out of the labour of the people?—It was just like any other industry; it is just as if you had a coal-pit and paid wages to the miners for working it

34,631–32. It was not a patriarchal system; it was just a commercial transaction?—Yes, it was simply a commercial transaction, the same as if there had been a coal-pit and wages were paid to the miners, and the people of Jura would be very thankful if the laird would employ them again in the same manner. The people emigrated of their own free will, because they found they could not live here.

34,633. I think you also stated that they all wanted separate crofts?—I did not say they wanted them. I said they preferred them.

34,634–35. I did not see any indication of that to-day: I think they have a common pasture as it is?—They have, but I go a good deal among the people, and I hear them say they would like to get a separate croft for themselves, I think if you ask them they would say the same thing,—that they prefer it. Jura. Miss Isabella H. Campbell.

THIRTY-SEVENTH SITTING.

BRIDGEND, ISLAY, April 9, 1894. Bridgend, Islay.

Present:—

Angus Sutherland, Esq., M.P. (acting as Chairman).
James Noel Muller Forsyth, Esq.
Rev. Malcolm Maccallum.
William Mackenzie, Esq., Secretary.

John A. Nicholls, mines manager, Robolls (47)—examined. John A. Nicholls.

34,636–37. Mr Sutherland.—You are described here as a mines manager, is that correct?—Yes.

34,638. You are kind enough to offer to give us information regarding our inquiry. Have you a written statement?—No, I have not a written statement. I have resided on the island of Islay for the past eighteen years. During that time, I have, of course, been situated right in the midst of the agricultural districts in connection with our works, and my experience has been that during that period farming carried on under the present system of large sheep farms has proved rather disastrous than otherwise to the interests of the island as well as perhaps to the interest of the community at large. I may state that the gentleman who owned the farms on which our works are situated (the combined farms of Finlaggan and Robolls), stated to me that after fifteen years farming upon the large sheep farm principle he had not made "a brown penny." These were his own words on the occasion of his sale when he sold out at Finlaggan. At that particular time there were some cottars living in close proximity to our works; these, I think, applied to the present factor, Mr Ballingal, and obtained a park about 13 acres in extent. At the time they got this park it was overgrown with rushes, heather, and rough grass, with a good deal of lime rock jutting out here and there. These men at that time were kindly granted the park, and by their industry and cultivation of the land they have made a splendid park of it. Another portion of this little farm, about six acres in extent, was given over to another small crofter, who is to-day charged an enormous rent for it,—£12 for the six acres and the house. The house is no doubt rather a good one,—too good for the small patch of land; hence that man is claiming or asking to get if possible a little more land added to what he has already. He is, in my opinion, quite capable of paying rent if he got the land, and it would be difficult to find a more industrious man: in fact, he is quite a model crofter. He works his land admirably, and I, for my part, should like to see that encouraged. Then again in travelling over the island otherwise, I look around me and see the ruins and the great havoc that have been made by evictions in the past (I am not prepared to say whether justifiable or otherwise), and I see the amount of arable land now under large sheep farms, and so many people in our midst hungering and thirsting as it were for the land that they to-day are not in possession of, but which their forefathers held, and held advantageously and beneficially for themselves and their country. These men reared up big families and sent them out into the world, and to-day they fill all sorts of professions and occupations, noble and hardy and strong men. I should really like very much to see these farms broken up once more and placed in the hands of the people, who would utilise the land and obtain from it a much larger product than it yields to-day. To-day our importation is very great, consequently impoverishing our island. We have to pay for importing feeding stuff when we should really be drawing money for exports from such a beautiful and lovely island as Islay. I am fully persuaded that if the land was once more handed back to the people it would benefit the community at large, and I am convinced that the only royal route to agricultural prosperity is the breaking up of the land. Only a few sheep are at present exported, and we are importing a great quantity of things for the sustenance of the people. In the year 1820, if I am rightly informed, this island maintained no less than about 17,500 people. The island has not diminished in size; the land probably has degenerated under the sheep farming system, and I believe it now supports only 8500 or so. I was told by one of the leading sheep farmers in the island not very long since that one acre of land newly laid out under grass was capable of feeding and sending off better sheep and cattle than three acres of land that had lain out for a number of years. If this information is correct (and I have no reason to doubt it, seeing I got it from one of the leading authorities), the land deteriorates after lying out of cultivation for fifteen or twenty years, and the stock falls off considerably in number, to the extent I am told of no less than three-tenths. Then again the weight of the stock has to be considered as well as the amount, and I understand that in place of 65 lbs. (the weight of the sheep formerly produced and sent to market from new land), 40 or 45 lbs. is now the extreme weight of the sheep, after fifteen or twenty years. If stock degenerates in such a manner, and land also, under the big farm system, I am fully persuaded that it is high time another system or plan should be adopted, in the way of giving it to the farmers who would once more cultivate it and raise large crops out of it.

34,639. You have given us a very interesting statement, and upon the whole, I think, you have limited yourself strictly to the points under our consideration. I would like to ask you one or two questions relative to your statements. You intimated that in one case within your own knowledge land was given to a person who had previously had some?—Yes.

34,640. I suppose I need hardly ask you the question whether, in your opinion, that man was benefited very considerably by getting that land?—Very considerably, and he would derive still greater benefit had he more land granted him.

34,641. What was the state of the land when he got it?—It certainly had been under crop previously, and owing to mismanagement (I daresay I may use the word honestly) the croft did not perhaps yield such returns as it does to the present tenant. He has dug out the large pieces of rock, and greatly improved the land in many respects. Nevertheless there are some parts of these six acres I referred to still uncultivated, because they are not capable of being cultivated; a plough cannot pass through the land. All that could possibly be brought under cultivation he has ploughed.

34,642. Immediately before he got possession of it, was it being cultivated?—Partly, but not to the same extent as it is now. He has brought in new land.

34,643. Do you know any holding that has been given to any small holder, which had lain waste some time before?—I don't know of any at the present moment except the croft that I spoke about as given to the eight families.

34,644. You spoke of the rent that was paid by another small holder, is that the same case?—No.

34,645. I think you said it was upwards of £1 an acre?—It was £2 an acre, not taking the house into consideration.

34,646. What did you say was the extent of the holding?—About six acres.

34,647. In your opinion, is there in the neighbourhood of your locality plenty land of that description?—Decidedly; very large tracts of land.

Bridgend, Islay.

John A. Nicholls.

34,648. And is there a general desire, within your knowledge, among the people to get possession of such land?—There is a very strong desire.

34,649. Have you anything to say on the point of having the desire for land on the one hand, and the land on the other, why they have never been allowed to come in contact, the land and the people?—I have not, further than that the landlord does not seem to encourage the small holder, for he charges twice and sometimes three times the rent he charges the large farmer for the land, and again, he almost always refuses to renew the expiring lease of the small farmer, preferring to add the land to the next large farm; so the small holder has either to become his neighbour's servant or leave the country. Thus the landlord is to blame for the present state of affairs.

34,650. What are the difficulties do you think in the way?—I can hardly say; probably the factor may be able to give some explanation as to that by-and-bye. Whether the people have applied for the land or not I cannot say, but one thing I know, that a large number of people applied through the County Council, and I was informed that previously there had been an application direct to the estate, made if not through Mr Ballingal, to some higher official, who recommended that they should go through the channel of the County Council.

34,651. I think you stated that, in your opinion, the island of Islay ought to be an exporting island?—I think it should be a self-supporting island if not an exporting island.

34,652. Does it export anything?—A little in the way of sheep and cattle. I think it has no other exportations, but it has large importations of all kinds.

34,653. Have you seen the agricultural statistics that have been collected of land under cultivation in this country, may I ask?—I have not, in respect to the island of Islay.

34,654. Is there less or more land under cultivation in Islay now than there was fifty or sixty years ago, do you think?—Far less under cultivation now.

34,655. Have you any idea of the proportion?—I have not.

34,656. Judging from the indications you see on the face of the country?—That is the only thing I can judge from. Plough furrows are to be seen all over, showing that at one time the land was under cultivation.

34,657. Have you formed any estimate of the proportion that is waste now which was at one time cultivated?—In the Kilmeny district I would say there are hundreds of acres, perhaps thousands.

34,658. In that one locality?—In the district between Bridgend and Bun-na-h-abhuinn.

34,659. You spoke of the population having decreased from 17,500 to about 8500?—Yes, the decrease was about nine thousand.

34,660. Are you aware that that is looked upon in some quarters as a sign of prosperity?—I would not say it is a sign of prosperity, the depopulation of the island. It naturally tends to drift the people into other places and to open up foreign competition.

34,661. Has it that effect, do you think?—It has, in my humble opinion. I think that is where the great disaster comes in to-day; the foreign competition we have to contend with is almost destructive to our prosperity.

34,662. I think then I may take it generally from the whole gist of your evidence that you believe there is the desire for land on the part of the people, and that there is the land there to give them?—The land is here for the people and the people for the land, provided some scheme was adopted to compel landlords, if not otherwise willing, to grant it.

34,663. And that you know of a concrete example which you have given us where it has been followed by good results?—Yes.

34,664. Now may I ask you to indicate more exactly, so that we may go and see them for ourselves, the particular spots upon which you think this land can be occupied?—I would say there are large tracts of land, over a portion of which I purposed accompanying your honourable Commission, but owing to a misunderstanding as to the meeting place we missed each other. I think you have now gone over that district, but there are several tracts that are now going to waste over at Ardnahoe and away to Bunnahabhain. That land is to-day covered with heather, and there is a very strong desire among some of the people to be settled there as a crofter township in order to reclaim the land.

34,665. Mr Forsyth.—Supposing a good deal of this land were successfully cultivated in the future by small holders, do you think the exports from the island would be largely increased?—I think they would, or the imports would be lessened a great deal at all events.

34,666. I am coming to that; but take the exports first. You think a great deal more stock could be turned out of the island?—I think there might be.

34,667. Do you know what is turned off now?—I am not in a position to say how much there is turned off now. I am only basing my calculations on the ground that is lying waste to-day, and the way in which I see it uncultivated.

34,668. Then your opinion generally is that the exports of stock would be largely increased?—I think so.

34,669. Then as to the imports, you understand, do you not, that the imports are very largely articles which are now considered as necessary (and very properly so) in the way of food and such like, which in the old days were more or less regarded as luxuries and which were not imported: that is the case, is it not?—Yes; but large quantities of what might be grown here in our own island are to-day imported.

34,670. To what articles do you refer?—To such as oats and feeding stuff generally; also butter, oatmeal and condensed milk.

34,671. Do you think then that the imports of oatmeal might cease?—I think it should, and I think we should be in a position to export.

34,672. To export oatmeal in addition?—Yes.

34,673. But you would have an increased import of such articles as groceries, tea, &c., would you not, with a larger population?—As the population would increase probably there may be a little of that, but I hold that the increased exports would at least balance the imports.

34,674. Do you think you could get your exports and imports to balance?—I think the exports would be more than equivalent to the imports.

34,675. Keeping in mind that the imports would be enormously increased in the case of groceries and such commodities?—Certainly, I am taking that into consideration.

34,676. Then you think the exports of stock would be so much increased as to balance all the increased imports?—I think it would be more than equivalent in that respect.

34,677. You are aware, of course, that a good part of the imports would consist of feeding stuff, manure, and such like, which are used to increase the export in the way of stock, &c.?—Yes, I am aware of that.

34,678. So that you could hardly take your accounts strictly upon that?—Not strictly upon that point, but I maintain that if the land were properly cultivated, a sufficient or almost sufficient quantity of feeding stuffs could be raised on the island, and so minimise the import, and also by the increased stock of cattle for export a much larger amount of manure could be made at home to keep up the land, and so the need of artificial manure would be lessened greatly, if not superseded, and likewise the import of it.

34,679. Mr Maccallum.—You say that some cottars got 13 acres of land. How many cottars got these acres between them?—I believe the number is six, but there are some present who are able to say more definitely.

34,680. Are their houses on that land?—The houses are in close proximity to the park, but not directly on it.

34,681. Are these people among those who wish to get more land?—These people are among the parties who have made a demand for more land.

34,682. They do not consider that they have enough?—They do not. They have all that they asked for at the time; the factor kindly granted them all they asked for, but they desire more.

34,683. Do you know how much they pay for these 13 acres?—I am not in a position to say, but you will be able to get that information from some of the delegates present.

34,684. What stock do they keep?—Little or none. They have not any hill pasture, which it is very desirable they should have, in order, I suppose, to make dung to keep up the strength of the land. I don't think it is beneficial to the land to put so much artificial manure into it. One or two of them have a cow, I think, but others have none, as they have no place to keep one, and it is not a very easy matter to get grazing. It is both difficult and expensive to get grazing outside.

34,685. What is the occupation of these crofters?—They are generally labourers, I think; they work anywhere they can get work to do.

34,686. And you think there is a demand for land in this parish which has not been met by the proprietors?—There certainly is, and ample land for the people, but their cry has as yet been unheeded.

34,687. When did this desire show itself? Was it brought prominently under your notice at the time of your candidature for the County Council?—It was brought under my notice about that time, and also prior to that; and since that time the desire has been increasing.

34,688. It showed itself, did it, after they became acquainted with the Small Holdings and Allotments Acts?—Yes, it came more particularly to the front at that time. But there was a strong desire among some prior to that.

34,689. They thought these Acts gave them an opportunity to get land?—Yes.

34,690. And do you think that it was perhaps the most important question at the County Council election time?—Oh, I think so. About my return, do you mean?

34,691. Yes, in determining the votes at the election?—I don't know that it had so much to do with that.

34,692. But they looked to the County Council, did not they, to afford them opportunities of getting upon the land through the carrying out of these Acts?—They did, and I certainly believe that some may have supported me strongly on that point.

34,693. Was there any action taken by your District Committee here with regard to that?—Yes, there were petitions got up and presented and passed by these committees here, that we were of opinion that there was a sufficient demand in this district to put the Acts into force. They were passed by the District Committee here.

34,694. Unanimously?—Unanimously.

34,695. How many applications for land were sent in from your district to the County Council?—I think there would be about eighty.

34,696. From this parish itself?—From this parish. I quote from memory, and the figure may not be exact, but a great number appeared in the list brought before the County Council.

34,697. What action did the County Council take in the matter?—On receipt of these applications the County Council appointed a special day for discussing the question as to the advisability of putting these Acts into force: and, I believe, they were rather strongly of opinion that the Acts being so complicated, the expense would be so great, that it would cause a very heavy rate, and the people might not be able to pay their rents and live honestly upon the farms.

34,698. The County Council communicated, did they not, with each of these individuals, sending them a circular asking them to state the quantity of land they wanted, where it was situated, and the price or rent which they were prepared to pay for it?—Yes, that is the case.

34,699. And did the applicants answer these questions accurately and specifically?—I consider they did.

Bridgend, Islay.

John A. Nicholls.

I was more than surprised to see them so accurately and specifically answered.

34,700. When the matter then came under the consideration of the County Council, did they resolve to inquire further into the matter, or did they send these replies they had got to the several landlords in the county?—The replies, I think, were not sent to the different landlords in the county so far as my knowledge goes. I don't know that replies to the people were sent either.

34,701. Is it not the case that the County Council rejected the report of the committee?—Yes; at the final stage.

34,702. Was it not part of that report that these replies should be sent to the different landlords?—It was.

34,703. And after communicating with these applicants, asking what they wanted, did they send any reply to them?—No, I don't think there was any reply at all given to them.

34,704. And is it the case that the County Council have absolutely refused to carry out these Acts?—They decidedly did, by a majority, 17 landlords and factors voting against the proposal.

34,705. On what ground, to state it shortly?—I think the great obstacle was the rating interest, or something of that kind.

34,706. The expense?—Yes, the expense that would be incurred in putting the Acts into force, and the rates that would have to be levied.

34,707. What expense did the committee recommend in order to set the Acts in operation?—The committee recommended that a delegate or an expert should be appointed to go through the country, and communicate with the different parties, and report accordingly, which was objected to by the landlord.

34,708. At what expense was it proposed to do that?—I forget the exact sum, £100 or so.

34,709. Suppose it was £100, would that not be an infinitesimal increase upon the rating of Argyllshire?—It would not be very much.

34,710. It would be quite imperceptible?—Yes, it would not have been felt. A penny of rate brings in £1600 or £1700, so that £100 would not perhaps cost the fourth part of a farthing on the whole county of Argyllshire.

34,711. In your opinion, do proprietors generally show any desire to meet the demand there exists for small holdings?—I have not seen it: I think if they had such a desire, they would come to the front and offer their services to meet that demand, without putting the country to such an enormous trouble and expense as it will be put to by enforcing the Acts. If the proprietors were as willing to give as the people are to take, I think all these things might be abandoned.

34,712. Is there a large number of proprietors in the County Council of Argyllshire?—Yes, there is a very large percentage.

34,713. Did any of them vote for putting these Acts into operation?—Not to my knowledge; all voted against it.

34,714. In your opinion, would the proprietors' rents be reduced if the uncultivated land in their possession were divided into small holdings?—In my opinion the rental would be greatly augmented: because if you take the large farms to-day and compare their rent with that of the small farms, you will find, I think, that the small farmer pays in some cases four or five times the amount per acre that the large farmers are paying. It is my opinion that the proprietor would have his rents increased by cutting up the land.

34,715. Do proprietors show by their actions that it is their desire to have as few tenants as possible on their land?—That seems to me to be the case, because when the small leases have expired, the lessee has been told to move on to make room for the larger farmer.

34,716. That has been the policy of the proprietor?—That has been the policy of the proprietor in the island of Islay, and still is; for example, Storakaig has been joined to Knocklearach, Robolls to Keppols and Tirvagain to Kilmeny.

34,717. Is it a common thing to see it stated in advertisements for the sale of estates that there are few crofters or no crofters on them, as the case may be?—It is quite a common thing: you can scarcely look into a paper without seeing such an advertisement, "without cottars" or "without crofters," as if they were a great pest.

34,718. Have you noticed any such advertisement recently?—It is continually happening: I scarcely take up a paper but I see an advertisement of that description.

34,719. Can you specify any?—I see it continually in the Oban Times and in the Mail and Herald and different other papers that I read from time to time.

34,720. But can you not specify any particular case?—No, I cannot particularise anything of the kind; I now recollect, however, Dunlossit Estate, Islay.

34,721. That clause is put in advertisements as an inducement for buying these estates?—Yes, I think that must be so, for it is put very prominently in advertisements, and that is the conclusion I have arrived at.

34,722. Does that suggest to your mind that the proprietors are desirous generally of turning their lands into sporting grounds?—It certainly does.

34,723. That is the reason why that statement is made?—Yes.

34,724. Still you think that some of the estates, regarding which that statement is made, are fit for cultivation and habitation by the people?—Yes, none better in Argyllshire.

34,725. Have there been any extensive reclamations of land in this parish recently?—Not to my knowledge: some has been reclaimed on certain farms, but very little.

34,726. Is there much land that could be improved by drainage?—Large tracts of land. [Mr Sutherland.—Do you mean for pastoral purposes?—Yes.]

34,727. And also for cultivation?—Yes, it applies to both, I suppose.

34,728. Speaking of the island generally, are you aware of reclamations having been made since you came to reside in it?—Very very little, if any, so far as I remember.

34,729. When landlords set about reclaiming land, what is the first thing they do?—The first thing they should do is to start and fence it and drain it, and so on.

34,730. But what do they do with the people that are on it?—The first thing they do is to clear off the people.

34,731. They first of all reclaim it from the people, don't they?—Yes.

34,732. And then improve it?—Yes.

34,733. Do you think that is the cheapest way of improving the land?—No, I don't think so; I think that the people would improve it very much cheaper themselves if they got the chance.

34,734. You think that tenants can improve land very much cheaper than the proprietors?—Yes.

34,735. Then you think the first step in reclaiming the land should be to settle the people on it on favourable terms?—I think so, with a fair rental and fixed tenure.

34,736. And in stating it as your opinion that the exports from the island would be increased, that greatly depends upon what happened in the past?—Yes.

34,737. There were exports in the past, even when there was a population much larger than at present?—Yes.

34,738. Then it was put to you that when the population would be increased and settled on the land, the importation of groceries, tea, &c. would be increased?—Yes

34,739. Do you think that that necessarily follows?—It does not necessarily follow, because the people were better and stronger when they used to live on the products of the island.

34,740. Why do they take tea just now so much as they do?—I suppose because they have not so much homegrown stuff to consume as they formerly had.

34,741. Because they have not so much milk?—

They have not so much milk, or meal, or potatoes. It is a very difficult job for a cottar to get ground.

34,742. Do you think working people take tea from choice or from necessity?—That is rather a critical question; it may be in some cases from choice, and in others from necessity.

34,743. What is your own opinion about it: is not milk a much better article of diet than tea?—Yes, I would say the less tea one uses the better; if milk can be got, tea should be abandoned to a very great extent.

34,744. And the physical condition of the people has deteriorated on account of the great consumption of tea?—Very much indeed. As to the question of potatoes, I may perhaps mention that sometimes a man is obliged to drive his manure no less than three or four miles, which swallows up the whole benefit to be derived from planting a few potatoes, the cost is so high. Then again in bringing in the crop, there is cartage, which swallows up the profit; whereas, if he had a little ground near his door he certainly could derive great benefit from his potatoes.

34,745. And you think there is so much land round about that it would be perfectly easy to meet all the demand there is for the land?—I think there is enough to meet it over and over again.

34,746. And that the people are quite qualified to work the land to advantage?—I believe they are, and to pay for it if they got it.

34,747. Mr Sutherland.—You stated that, in your opinion, the small farmers were paying more per acre than the large farmers?—Yes, I think that is the case to-day.

34,748. You have no doubt whatever about it?—I have no doubt whatever that that is the case.

34,749. The instance you gave showed a rental of nearly £2 an acre?—Yes.

34,750. Do you know any large farmer who is paying anything like that?—Oh, no. On the other hand, I know large farmers whose rent averages about 1s. 6d. to 2s. per acre. Of course, that is taking the good and the bad land together. But some of the land in this little croft when let at £2 an acre is not very good land.

34,751. But in any re-distribution of the land, you would not anticipate that the rents would be forced up to that standard?—Decidedly, that is too high: it is an exaggerated rent, in my opinion.

34,752. Then is it your opinion that means ought to be taken to prevent anything of that sort in any re-distribution of the land?—I think so. I think a fair rent should be fixed by an independent court.

34,753. Independent of parties?—Entirely independent of parties.

34,754. Now, in answer to a question put by Mr Maccallum, you pointed out the policy of consolidation of small holdings into large holdings that undoubtedly has gone on,—I presume it cannot be denied that it has gone on?—No, it cannot.

34,755. Are you of opinion that it is still going on?—Not so much as formerly. I don't see where they can make very much more havoc to-day, so much having been done in the past in that direction.

34,756. And, in your opinion, does the failure of the large farming system contribute in any degree to that state of matters?—Yes, the large farming system certainly has failed to prove conducive to the interest of the country.

34,757. Yes, but do you think it has failed to be conducive to the interests of the proprietor of the land as well?—Well, that is a matter for his own determination. I am rather of opinion that it has, for if land degenerates, it at the same time deteriorates in letting value.

34,758. Have you heard the large farmers are getting enormous abatements of rents?—Yes, I have heard that.

34,759. Have you the slightest reason to suppose that that is not a true statement?—Not the slightest.

34,760. And do you hear of the small holders getting reductions to that extent?—No, I have not heard anything of the kind. Take my own case. I hold a small park opposite my house, and when the estate was giving a ten per cent. reduction I asked for it but it was refused.

34,761. Supposing that to be the general case all over, do you think it is not a reason why the consolidation of small holdings into large ones should cease, in the interest of the proprietors themselves?—Yes, I hold that it would be for their own interest.

34,762. That amounts, in your opinion, then to this, that economically the large holdings have been a failure?—Yes; most decidedly.

34,763. And you are also of opinion that from the wider aspect of the good of the country generally they have failed?—Yes.

34,764. You were asked questions as to the importation of certain necessities of life. You do not positively look upon the increase of such imports as an injury to Islay?—Not as an injury altogether.

34,765. Looking at it from the country's point of view, do you think it would be a loss to the country that the people of Islay should import some of the necessaries or even of the luxuries of life?—It would not be a loss to the country; but I think the less we can import the better for ourselves or for the island at large, because we could then keep the money in our own midst, and become richer in consequence.

34,766. But you would not look upon the increase of such imports as a positive evil?—Certainly not: it would be good to the country.

34,767. Are you not rather of opinion that if the population were increased at the same time, it would be a good thing both for the country and for the people of Islay?—Oh, it would be a good thing both for the country and for the people of Islay.

34,768. You are no doubt aware that the complaint with regard to our foreign trade is that the foreign market has to a large extent ceased to exist?—Yes.

34,769. Would it not, in your opinion, be a good thing that there should be a market got at home for the manufactures of the country?—Yes, if we could get it, and I believe the greater cultivation of the Highlands would be one channel.

34,770. And you are of opinion that the policy of settling the people upon the land would tend to create a market at home?—I think it should, to a great extent.

34,771. You are aware of what has actually happened in the case of America and in other new countries: they take their manufactured goods from our country until they have settled in their own country and manufactured for themselves?—Yes.

34,772. And are you not of opinion that the same good result might follow from this country?—Yes, it might.

34,773. Am I right in supposing that you stated that there were families in Islay who used tea because they could not get milk?—I think I am quite justified in saying so. I have been told again and again by a number of families, that they were obliged to use tea because milk was not to be got. Even this last winter I have again and again observed in visiting a number of houses that the people were drinking their tea without milk: they could not get enough of that luxury to put into their tea.

34,774. Are you aware that all over the Highlands of Scotland, and indeed all over Scotland generally, Islay was famous as being a cow country?—Yes.

34,775. And do you state to me that there are families in Islay that cannot get milk for their own use?—There are families in Islay who could not get milk during last winter to put into their tea.

34,776. Has it come within your knowledge in any way that milk in the form of condensed milk or other preparations is imported into Islay?—Yes, very largely.

34,777. Have you seen it?—Yes, I have seen it, and I have seen the people using it in different places in Islay, and I maintain that that is not a state of things that ought to exist.

34,778. Mr Ballingal, factor for Mr Morrison of Islay.—You made some strong remarks about a certain croft rented at £12. May I ask whether you are aware that the proprietor was offered a rent of £20 for it?—

Bridgend, Islay.

John A. Nicholls.

No, not till now; but the reason is that the land is in the hands of so few, and there is such a demand that they almost seem willing to give anything; I maintain that if the land were broken up and made into small farms, the people would not make such outrageously large offers for land which they know perfectly well could never pay them at the figure.

34,779. There is an old saying that the value of a thing is just the price you can get for it. Have you any experience whatever of the reclamation of land or the expense of it, seeing that you talked of Ardnahoe and Bunnahabhain as being good arable land and well worth reclaiming?—In reply to that question I may say that practical men made an offer to the County Council to reclaim that land and to give 2s. per acre for it after a certain period of years. [Mr Sutherland.—Both to reclaim it and to pay a rent of 2s. an acre first?—Yes, and I think some even went so high as 3s. 6d. But Mr Ballingal's question was, have you any knowledge by experience or otherwise of the reclamation of land?—I have not; I have outside, but not direct knowledge.]

34,780. You mentioned that the proprietors had carried out a system of consolidation by knocking a good many small holdings lately into one large one. I would ask you to name an instance of such having happened, say within the last ten or twenty years?—Not within the last few years.

34,781. Do you know of any such thing having been done at all?—Not lately: but I may say there is one just now; I refer to the case of Tirvagain and Kilmeny: I believe these two farms are now going into the hands of one man.

34,782. Do you know of any instance where a consolidation of holdings has taken place within the last twenty years, or since you came to the island?—I have not been here twenty years: eighteen years is the extent of the time I have lived on the island.

34,783. And have you known a case during that period?—No, further than the prospective one I now refer to—Tirvagain and Kilmeny. Robolls and Keppols, two large farms, have been joined.

34,784. You also mentioned that you have heard of people being removed. Have any been removed for the purpose of knocking small farms into big ones during your residence in Islay?—Not to my knowledge. I think it had previously been carried on to the utmost possible extent.

34,785. So the system has ceased so far as Islay is concerned?—When you cannot go further the process stops itself.

34,786. In reference to the question of exports and imports, have you got any statistics to show that the exports fifty years ago were larger than they are now?—I have none, but I should judge so from the population then and now and from what the old people have told me.

34,787. Can you tell me whether you, having land in your own possession, go as far, I think, as Eskinish to have potatoes planted?—I have not land of an arable nature, and so I am forced to go there.

34,788. Mr Maccallum.—Mr Ballingal has brought out the fact that there was an offer of £20 for the croft you spoke of, is that so?—Yes, Alexander Maclellan's.

34,789. A croft of six acres?—Yes.

34,790. I think that is a very important fact indeed. Does it not show that there is great competition for small holdings?—Certainly it does.

34,791. A great hunger for small holdings?—Yes.

34,792. A man would not offer that unless he thought there were many others who would be competing with him?—He certainly would not.

34,793. Does it not also prove very clearly that if small holdings were formed out of land presently uncultivated they would be readily taken up?—Yes.

34,794. You stated that during the eighteen years you have been on the island the policy of consolidation has not been carried out?—No, because they had previously carried it out to its utmost limit.

34,795. But is it the case that these large farmers are leaving out of cultivation the land in their possession?—That is so.

34,796. Was it the case when you came to Islay that the lands were cultivated to a much greater extent than they are to-day?—Yes; and I may say moreover that there have been farms added to Knocklearach on the estate of Mr Finlay, Airidh-Ghuairidh and Storakaig for sheep shearing.

Bridgend, Islay.

John A. Nicholls.

34,797. Was Knocklearach a large farm before these additions were made to it?—It was a large farm, covering a space on which twenty-four families formerly existed, so I have been told. Other ten or eleven were on Storakaig and Airidh-Ghuairidh, making thirty-five altogether on what is now occupied by only one man.

34,798. The remains of the houses are still to be seen?—I suppose that will be so: I have not been over them, but I was told so.

34,799. And with the exception of the one croft you have mentioned and the few acres that were given to these cottars, have you known any breaking up of a large farm into small holdings?—I have not; when Mr Greenlees' lease of Robolls and Finlaggan farm expired it was then divided into two, one part being given to a farmer who already had a farm (Mr Fletcher) and another part to Mr Alexander Weir who is now in possession of it, and is considered a large farmer.

34,800. Mr Ballingall.—May I ask whether you are aware that the reason why a rent of £20 was offered for the small croft alluded to was principally on account of the good house it had?—No, I am not aware of any such reason, neither was the house worth any such money. It is an old infants' school, and certainly very badly divided for occupation.

34,801. How long is it since it was built?—Many years ago. The outside appearance is the best of it.

DONALD ORR, millwright, Starchmill (67)—examined.

Donald Or

34,802. Mr Sutherland.—Where do you live?—Most of my time I live in the parish of Kilharrow [Cill-Mhaol-Rubha].

34,803. And where are you staying now?—Just about a mile or so off this, in a place called the Starch-mill.

34,804. Why is it so called?—Because there was a starch mill erected there in 1847, but when it was given up, owing to the failure of the potatoes, the houses were converted into a farm steading.

34,805. How long was the starch mill in operation?—Not more than a year, I think.

34,806. It was built you say in 1847, and the potato disease occurred about that time?—Just the very same year.

34,807. Have you any land?—Not just now.

34,808. Are you living there in a house without land?—Not as much as a garden.

34,809. Would you like to get land?—I would.

34,810. And is there plenty land suitable within easy reach of where you are?—Plenty.

34,811. How is that land occupied at the present time?—It is occupied by sheep graziers.

34,812. As a sheep grazing farm?—Yes, many of them.

34,813. But the one you are living on, is it a sheep farm?—It is a sheep farm at present. It is divided between two farmers, and I believe one of them farms and the other does not.

34,814. What is the name of the farm?—Killinan [Cill-Fhianain].

34,815. Is it a large farm?—It is a very large farm; one of the largest farms in Islay.

34,816. Is it on the Kildalton estate?—No, it is on Mr Finlay's estate. It may go under the name of Avenvogie as Mr Ballingal says.

34,817. Are there many others in the same position as yourself on the farm, I mean people without land who have houses on that particular farm?—Yes.

34,818. How many?—A family of Maccallums, and a mason, Macculloch; and there is a smith on it, but perhaps it may be that he got a piece to himself.

34,819. Then leaving the farm you live on and going to another farm, do you know any other people in the neighbourhood who are in a similiar position?—Many: too many of them.

34,820. Living in houses without land?—Yes.

34,821. And is there a desire on their part to get land?—There is bound to be with some of them; but some maybe are not fit for land even if they got it.

34,822. Have all these people a desire to get land?—I am bound to say they have a desire to get land.

34,823. Supposing land were to be had on reasonable conditions, would these people take a small holding?—They would.

34,824. Are the houses that you say are occupied by them several houses close to each other, or are they scattered up and down?—Scattered here and there.

34,825. And is there land at present uncultivated round about these houses?—Not on this farm. There is no land for them near their houses on the Starch-mill farm.

34,826. You would have to remove then?—Yes.

34,827. And have you any objection to doing this if you had a reasonable opportunity of getting a new holding?—I would have no objection.

34,828. Would you have any difficulty in getting a new house if you got a new holding on reasonable terms?—Certainly, I would have that, unless I fell in with a place that has a house on already, as some have.

34,829. You know some places with houses on them already?—Yes.

34,830. Are these houses occupied at present?—I believe they are.

34,831. That would be a difficulty, you know?—Some are occupied and others are not.

34,832. Do you know any that are not?—I know some that are not.

34,833. You know steadings upon farms that are not occupied?—I know a few of them.

34,834. Mr Nicholls, mines manager, Robolls.—How many families have been put off the Avenvogie and Killinan farms in order to make way for the large sheep farm?—I counted twenty on one farm, and I counted half a dozen in the next farm, and I could count more following down to the shore. I have the names of the twenty here.

34,835. Did you know them yourself?—Some of them are away to America, and others are dead.

34,836. Did you know them?—I knew them in my time: I knew them when they were in it.

34,837. About what year was that?—It did not take place in one year. It was after the year 1850, or perhaps before that year in some cases.

34,838. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—On what farm would you like to get a holding?—On the same farm I had before.

34,839. Which farm was that?—Part of Killinan.

34,840. Can you state specifically how many families you remember occupying Killinan?—I said twenty.

34,841. That was in your own recollection?—I recollect them well: my father was one of them, and my uncle was another.

34,842. And can you give us the names of these?—Yes, I have a list of them.

34,843. Had each of these land in his possession? Were they tenants of land?—They were tenants of the land; not sub-tenants.

34,844. With houses and lands?—Tenants to the land.

34,845. What has become of the houses that those people occupied?—They were let down. The houses were thatched houses and were just allowed to go into ruins.

34,846. Are the remains of those houses to be seen on the farm yet?—Yes, the old stone walls.

34,847. Was there much more cultivation in those days in Killinan farm than there is to-day?—Certainly, twenty times as much. There is no cultivation at all now, and there was a great deal then.

34,848. As this occurred in your own memory I would like to get the names of the former tenants?—The names were as follows:—Archibald Macdougall, John Macdougall, John Clark, Donald Macqueen, Alexander Currie, Hugh Sinclair, Archibald Macdougall, Ronald Maccuaig, James Macdermid, Ronald Macarthur, John Orr (my father), Gilbert Macinnes, Duncan Brown, John Brown, John Macinnes, Alexander Maccuaig, David Spence, Peter Spence, John Smith, Duncan Orr (my uncle).

34,849. Do you remember why these people were removed?—I think they were distressed with low markets and the failure of the potatoes, and it was not easy for them to keep going on. They never knew whenever markets would improve.

34,850. Was there any failure in the crop at that particular time?—Certainly, there was in the potato crop, as everybody knows.

34,851. Do you remember what rent they were paying in those distressed times?—Most of them were paying £18 or £19. The smallest rent among them was £2, 10s., which two of them paid, and the rest up to £19.

34,852. Did you sum up what the whole amounted to?—It would take time to do that, but I could do it.

34,853. Do you know whether the rent was then as high as it is now?—The rent of the farm was increased greatly at the time when the small tenants left it: and afterwards it was reduced, till it is now, I think, no higher than it was on the small tenants.

34,854. Do you think that the grazing tenant, when he entered, derived a good deal of benefit from the old cultivation by the former tenants?—I could not say, I think not. For the first years it would be very unproductive in grass, but maybe after a year or two it would yield better grass.

34,855. But when the people were cleared away, was the land then in better order than it is now?—No, I don't think it was, for, as I am saying, when they were cleared out the land was reduced; it was not under grass as it is now. It is now going under fog and water.

34,856. Then is it your opinion that the land has deteriorated under the large farmer? If you say that it has gone under fog and rushes and water, is it not the case that the land has got worse than it was?—Yes.

34,857. Do you know whether these people removed of their own free will?—I know well enough they would rather stay there if they could.

34,858. Was there any offer of help made by the proprietor in those times of distress?—No; except that when the people left another farm they call Kyngarry, I believe they got assistance for Mr Child to emigrate to America.

34,859. But no reduction of rent in order to enable them to remain on their holdings?—I think they would.

34,860. Did Mr Child offer them help simply to emigrate or would they be allowed to use the money which he gave in order to carry on their holdings?—No, it was to carry them away to America.

34,861. Was there any reduction of rent offered to them?—No.

34,862. Although the markets were low and there was a failure in the potato crop, on which the people so much depended?—No reduction was offered.

34,863. Are the large farmers treated in that way now by the proprietors, or do they now get reductions?—I believe some of them may.

34,864. What other farm in the neighbourhood of Killinan did you speak of?—I said Kyngarry.

34,865. How many tenants do you remember on the farm?—I counted six.

34,866. You remember these yourself?—Yes.

34,867. What was their general condition; were they fairly comfortable?—I may say that they were.

34,868. Were they better off than the cottars now are who have no land?—Oh, certainly they were.

34,869. Do you remember the occasion of their leaving Kyngarry?—I think it was for the sake of clearing it to put it under one tenant: at all events the proprietor offered them assistance to emigrate to America for leaving it peaceably. I think the main reason was to clear the place for an extensive farmer.

Bridgend, Islay.

Donald Orr.

34,870. The number of tenants you say who were there were six?—Yes.

34,871. Do you remember the size of their holdings, or what rents they paid?—I may say about £18 each, or £18 and the half of £18, say £27 each on an average. Some were higher and some lower, but that would be the average.

34,872. And you think that to introduce the same sort of system now would be for the benefit of the people?—I think it would.

34,873. To have farms of a graded size?—Yes, I think that will give the poor a chance.

34,874. Can you give us also the names of the tenants of Kyngarry in the same way?—Yes they were these:—John Brown, Archibald Brown, John Macfayden, Alexander Macneill, Robert Mackenzie, Malcolm Mackinnon, Malcolm Macpherson; that makes seven in all.

34,875. What is the next farm you referred to?—There is a farm down the river Laggan called Couralach where there used to be three families of the Macqueens and a Maclean.

34,876. These three tenants removed from that place?—Yes.

34,877. And who occupies it now?—It was added to Corrary.

34,878. Is there any cultivation on this Couralach?—No, but there is on Corrary.

34,879. What is the next farm you mentioned?—No other.

34,880. Are these all the farms you know?—Some people may know them better than I do: I only speak of those I know best myself, and others may know better about others.

34,881. Can you tell us about the place they call the Glen?—This is it. The Glen is a district in Islay, and all these farms are in the Glen and a good many more.

34,882. Can you tell us about Mullindry?—No, I would not venture to speak about it.

34,883. Did the removals from the other farms occur in your time?—Yes.

34,883*a*. Then these are all the places that you want to refer to?—I can answer any question you may put to me.

34,884. But you have no further statement of your own to make?—No.

34,885. Are you of opinion that if these large farms were subdivided there would be plenty people willing to take them up?—Certainly, it would give a chance to the poor people to make a living.

34,886. And do you think there are people who would be very glad to get an opportunity?—Yes.

34,887. And would they be able to stock such farms?—I am bound to think that they would take the farms quite willingly; and plenty would be able too.

34,888. And if they got these lands on favourable terms would they be able to get help from friends, those who may not have the money in their own possession?—There would be no need to apply to friends for help: I think they have the means themselves in some cases.

34,889. Mr Sutherland.—Were you asked to appear here on behalf of others?—I got a letter to appear before the Commission to give evidence as a delegate. That means for myself and for others.

34,890. And were you chosen at a meeting held for the purpose of selecting delegates?—No.

34,891. It was just arranged between yourselves that you should give evidence?—I don't know who appointed me. [Mr Nicholls.—I may explain that it was moved at a meeting and unanimously carried that this witness should be requested to come forward and give evidence.]

Hugh Carmichael.

HUGH CARMICHAEL, crofter, Keills (Cill-Chaluim-Chille-a'-Chaoil) (54)—examined.

34,892. Mr Sutherland.—You are described as a crofter?—Yes.

34,893. What is the size of your croft?—Three acres.

34,894. Are you under the Crofters Act?—I think so.

34,894*a*. Did you apply to the Crofters Commission to have your rent fixed by them?—No, I did not apply.

34,895. What rent do you pay for the three acres?—£6, 2s.

34,895*a*. Who built the house?—The proprietor.

34,896. Is it a good house?—Just middling.

34,897. Has it a slated roof?—Yes.

34,898. And how many apartments?—Three small ones.

34,899. Have you any written statement?—No.

34,900. Did you hear the evidence given by Mr Nicholls and Mr Orr?—Yes.

34,901. Do you agree with the evidence generally?—Yes, I quite agree with all that I have heard as yet.

34,902. We can take it then that you agree as far as you heard it with the evidence, and can corroborate it?—Yes.

34,903. Have you anything to submit to us that has not yet been referred to?—There is a farm fornent me where I have seen six tenants.

34,904. What is the name of the farm?—Kilslevan.

34,905. Is that land, in your opinion, fit for making small holdings?—It was in small holdings before.

34,906. And there is no cultivation on it now?—Not a bit.

34,907. Are there many people about Keills who would be very glad to take holdings on that if an opportunity was given at a fair rent?—They would not need to go so far: they could have them there.

34,908. And if new holdings were wanted, they could be got in Kilslevan?—Yes.

34,909. In your opinion are there many people in this part of Islay who would be willing and able to take such holdings?—Yes.

34,909*a*. Mr Maccallum.—How many crofters are there in Keills?—Nine.

34,910. Does each pay the same rent?—No, I have three acres, but the others have only one acre apiece.

34,911. Are you the only one who has a croft of that size?—Yes.

34,912. What stock do you have?—I cannot keep any stock: I pay for grazing forbye that.

34,913. On what farm do you get the grazing?—Mr Morrison's.

34,914. Could your holdings be extended out of Keills farm itself?—Yes.

34,915. Is the rest of Keills farm cultivated?—Yes, there is a part of Keills on each side of the road, but there is no cultivation above our lots.

34,916. And is there land suitable for cultivation there?—Yes.

34,917. What rent do the other crofters pay?—£4.

34,918. Do they each have a cow?—No, they pay grazing also. They have only four cows altogether in the park,—a very inferior park too.

34,919. And are they all desirous of getting an extension?—Well, some of them.

34,920. How many?—I could not say.

34,921. Are you aware whether they applied to the Crofters Commission?—No, I am not aware.

34,922. Did you yourself apply?—Yes.

34,923. Mr Forsyth.—I think you said you pay £6, 2s. for a house and three acres of land?—Yes.

34,924. And the house is a slated one?—Yes.

34,925. Have you had any separate rent put upon the house?—Yes, they put a separate rent of £3, 2s. on the house, and £1 an acre for the land. I have been at a great deal of trouble quarrying stones.

34,926. Do you keep the house in repair?—No.

34,927. Does the estate do so?—Yes.

34,928. Did the estate build it originally?—Yes.

34,929. And slated it?—Yes.

34,930. Is it plastered inside, and well divided?—Yes, it is plastered inside.

34,931. Could you put up a similar house for the same rate? Do you think you could manage to erect a house with capital on which the interest would come to only £3, 2s. per annum?—I think I would.

34,932. Mr Sutherland.—With regard to the pasture, is it on the farm of Persabus that the pasture is?—No, it is on Achnanclach that we pasture our cows.

34,933. But the land that you refer to as suitable?—Yes, it is on Persabus.

34,934. Is there any cultivation on Persabus?—Yes.

34,935. And grazing away to the back of it, up north?—Yes.

34,936. And is there part of that grazing that would make pasture for the crofters of Keills adjoining their present land?—Yes.

34,937. Could you point out that land to us if we went to see it?—Yes.

34,938. Is there anything else you would like to say?—No.

34,939. Mr Nicholls, mines manager, Robolls.—What do you pay for the grazing of a cow?—£2.

34,940. You said, I think, that your house was built recently. Was it not built long before I came to the island?—I could not say.

34,941. Would it be twenty-five or twenty-six years ago?—Mr Campbell of Islay built it.

34,942. You do not know the date?—It is fifty years ago, and more.

34,943. Mr Maccallum.—Are the houses kept in good condition by the proprietor?—Just middling.

34,944. Is there something done to them every year?—Yes; they are at them just now.

34,945. Mr Nicholls.—Is the house in a good state of drainage?—Just middling. They have not come to mine to do it yet.

34,946. Is not the house very damp?—Yes, it is damp enough.

34,947. The whole of the walls?—Yes.

34,948. Mr Maccallum.—You stated that you pay £2 for the grazing of a cow. Are you able to winter it from the produce of the three acres?—Yes, with the assistance of draff and other bought feeding stuff. But the park on which we graze our cows is not fit to keep a cow. We have to feed them with draff till June is nearly out.

34,949. Can you state how much you are out for feeding stuffs?—I could not say off-hand.

34,950. But you have to buy a considerable amount?—Yes, it is handy to get the draff from the distillery.

34,951. Without that your cows could not be kept?—No, they would not do.

NEIL MACARTHUR, crofter, Mulrees (54).
(Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

34,952. Mr Sutherland.—Did you make an application to the Crofters Commission?—No.

34,953. Did you get your rent reduced?—We got a reduction of 2s. in the £.

34,954. When did that commence?—Three years ago.

34,955. Do you wish to read a statement to us?—Yes. I am 54 years of age and reside at Mulrees, in the parish of Kilmeny, Island of Islay, county of Argyll. I know Mulrees and Portnellan well, and have for the past thirty-five years lived on it. When I first knew it, it was in the possession of six small farmers, viz.:—Mr Gilbert Lamont, Mr Neil Bell, Mr Godfrey Lamont, Mr Malcolm Bell, Mr John Smith, and Mr Archibald Bell. All these lost their farms, but how, I am not in a position to say. The whole of these holdings were put into one large farm. At the expiration of the lease held by Messrs Greenlees, we applied to Mr Ballingal, factor, for a small park which was at that time overgrown with rushes, heather, and rough grass, with a lot of lime rock jutting through here and there, and all brought about for the want of turning over. I am now in possession of about three acres of aforesaid park, from which I derived a fair return, on account of the way in which I work and manure it. Only part of my time is now taken up with the cultivation of the land I now hold, it being so small: other parts of my time are occupied in working for other people when I can get it. Sometimes I have nothing to do, and would like a little more land to occupy my spare time. I could easily manage twice or thrice the quantity of arable land if I could get it. I find it a very serious drawback in consequence of having no hill pasture on which to graze my beasts. I would be quite satisfied if I could get the matter of a few acres more of arable land along with some hill pasture, which would enable me to keep a sufficient number of cattle to make dung to manure the land and keep up its strength. I have cows already and money to buy more could I get grazing for them. I have to send those I now have away for grazing, which is very expensive and difficult to get. In fact, I consider it a great favour to get it at all, and feel myself more or less under an obligation to the party granting it. I am fully persuaded that the land we ask for might be granted beneficially to me and the like of me without injuring any party.

(Signed) 'NEIL MACARTHUR.'

9th April 1894.

34,956. How many crofters are in Mulrees?—Six.

34,957. Have they any pasture?—No, no hill pasture.

34,958. Are their holdings surrounded by the Finlaggan farm?—Yes.

34,959. On every side?—Yes.

34,960. Is there any cultivation on that farm?—Yes.

34,961. Is the cultivated land on Finlaggan adjacent to your holdings?—Opposite our houses.

34,962. Does it surround your houses altogether?—Yes, except some portions away to the west which are not cultivable.

34,963. How far does that part extend before it reaches the boundary of Finlaggan farm?—This open land lies to the west: our land lies to the east of it below the road, and the tenant farmer cultivates on both sides of us.

34,964. But there is an open side, is there not?—There is some at the west.

34,965. Are all the crofters at Mulrees willing to get an extension of their pasture? Is that what they want?—Yes; they want two things: ground to cultivate and ground for pasture.

34,966. And they are willing to pay a fair rent for that if they get it?—Yes.

34,967. How many cows each have the crofters of Mulrees?—There are only three in the township who have got cows: the other three have got no cattle. Those who have cattle have either one or two cows.

34,968. And you say there are three crofters who have no cattle at all?—Three of them.

34,969. How many have horses?—One.

34,970. And how many have sheep?—None of them have any sheep.

34,971. Mr Maccallum.—When were these crofts made?—I cannot give the date, but I think at least seven years ago.

34,972. What extent of grazing has the township got?—They have no grazing. Those who have cattle have to send them to graze on a farm, and not only do they pay but they are obliged to the farmer for giving them the grazing.

34,973. What is charged for the grazing of a cow?—£2 for the summer grazing, and if the cow is out during the winter there is another £1, making £3 for the whole year.

34,974. Is it an equal extent of arable land that all the crofters have?—No, not the same extent. There are two of us, myself and another, who have got the shares of two tenants who left the place.

34,975. What is the nearest arable land that is uncultivated?—Laogainn, part of Persebus farm.

34,976. Can you give us any idea of the amount of uncultivated arable land in that farm of Persebus?—In this place, Laogainn, there are four cota-bàns or groatlands, and there is not one bit of that cultivated now.

34,977. Do you remember that land being occupied by tenants?—Yes.

Bridgend, Islay.

Neil Macarthur.

34,978. How many?—Two were there in my recollection.

34,979. When did they remove?—I cannot tell the date, but it is a long time ago.

34,980. Mr William Rounsfell, tenant of Persabus farm.—Do I cultivate the nearest arable land to your lots?—You brought it in, but that is a long time ago. I don't say but what you brought it in.

34,981. Did I build a dyke round part of it?—Yes, round a piece of it.

34,982. Do you know that I put cattle in there in the summer time?—Yes.

34,983. Is there any other part of the farm on which I could put them and keep them safely except that one field?—You have not a park in this whole township I referred to but the one park.

34,984. Did I improve any of the rest of the land near your holdings?—You brought it in a long time ago, but it has now gone back to rushes again.

34,985. Seeing the experience you have had in your own holding, can you tell me if it would be more profitable for me to crop the land than to graze it?—I cannot say. We cannot do without something to eat, and as our ground is weak we require to cultivate it.

34,986. Is not your ground as good as the adjoining ground on the farm?—I cannot say.

34,987. Did you ever see heather on your lot?—Yes, I have seen that.

34,988. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Mr Rounsfell, I think, asked you a question as to the land being cultivated by him. What is the extent of that park he cultivated?—I believe it is about a cota-bàn or groatland in extent.

34,989. When was it cultivated last?—I cannot give the date, but it is a considerable time ago.

34,990. Can you give any idea of it?—I think it is, at any rate, ten or twelve years since it was cultivated.

34,991. Where did he put his cows when that park was under cultivation in the summertime?—He has the two farms beside each other, Persabus and Laogainn, and he could move his cattle from place to place as he chose.

34,992. So that it would be no greater difficulty for him to get grazing for his cattle if it were cultivated by you than it was when it was cultivated by himself?—It would be just as easy as before.

34,993. So you do not think it is necessary for the carrying on of the farm of Persabus?—I cannot say, but he has room enough supposing that park were taken from him.

34,994. Mr Rounsfell.—Where would I spean the lambs at speaning time?—I don't know where you could put them; could you not make another park? Another could be made as well as that one.

34,995. Mr Maccallum.—Where did he spean the lambs when the park was cultivated?—He had a park in the other place, Persabus, into which he put them when this park was in cultivation.

34,996. Could he not put them there again?—Yes, if he chose.

34,997. Mr Rounsfell.—Are you aware that we had to watch the lambs night and day for a whole week?—Yes, but they had to do that everywhere else as well.

34,998. Mr Nicholls, mines manager, Robolls.—Was Persabus a farm entirely apart from Loagainn farm?—Yes, they were two separate farms.

34,999. What did the tenant do with the cattle and the speaning of the lambs at the time when they were made into two separate farms?—Persabus kept the cattle and sheep for him.

John Macdonald.

JOHN MACDONALD, cottar, Keills (57).
(Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

34,999*a*. Mr Sutherland.—Do you reside at Keills?—Yes.

35,000. How many cottars are in Keills?—Eight.

35,001. Have none of them got any land at all?—The whole of them.

Bridgend, Islay.

John Macdonald.

35,002. Is Mr Carmichael, who gave evidence, in the same position as yourself?—Yes.

35,003. Did you hear his evidence?—Yes.

35,004. Do you agree with it?—Yes.

35,005. Is there anything in addition to what he said that you would like to bring before us?—I would like to get the grazing of a cow.

35,006. Is it easy to get that? Is the necessary land near?—Yes.

35,007. Is it on the farm of Persabus?—There is no place where they will give it to me.

35,008. What is the nearest farm to your house?—Persabus.

35,009. Would these eight cottars whom you have mentioned be also glad to get the grazing of a cow?—Five of them have a cow's grazing already; three others have cows but no right to graze, and they pay some one else for it.

35,010. Mr Maccallum.—Are you one of those who applied for land to the County Council?—Yes.

35,011. And your application was for how much land?—Fifty acres.

35,012. Where did you point out a place where such land could be got?—I did not point out any place, there are plenty places.

35,013. In applying for 50 acres, did you mean 50 acres between arable and pasture?—Yes.

35,014. Did you contemplate leaving your present place and building a new house on your new holding?—Undoubtedly.

35,015. And you would be prepared to pay a fair rent for such a place?—Yes.

35,016. In your opinion there is plenty land in the neighbourhood suitable for such holdings?—Yes, plenty.

35,017. Mr Nicholls, mines manager, Robolls.—Is not Scalastle a very appropriate and suitable place for small holdings?—Yes.

35,018. Would you like a small holding in that locality?—Yes.

35,019. Is it under cultivation at present?—No.

Gilbert Lamont.

GILBERT LAMONT, retired crofter, Crowbush.

35,020. Mr Chairman and Gentlemen, I am sorry that I have been called upon to give evidence as a delegate, because I objected to do it.

35,021. Mr Sutherland.—Very well, we do not want to hear you?—Well, I am willing, but I got the intimation only on Saturday evening, and I have been unwell.

35,022. Then we won't trouble you.

Duncan Macindeor.

DUNCAN MACINDEOR, roadman, Kilmeny (75)—examined.

35,023. Mr Sutherland.—Do you live at Kilmeny?—Yes.

35,024. Have you any land?—Not now, but I had before.

35,025. Where had you it?—At Airidh-Ghuairidh, in the Glen farm.

35,026. But you are now a roadman living at Kilmeny?—Yes.

35,027. You appear to have a written statement?—Yes.

35,028. Would you kindly read it to us?—I am seventy-five years of age, and reside at Kilmeny, in the Island of Islay, county of Argyll. I never lived out of the island. My family carried on farming in the island of Islay for generations: my great-grandfather, grandfather, my father, and myself all had farms in Islay, and always were able to pay our way honestly. I was a farmer and carried on farming in Airidh-Ghuairidh successfully for twenty-three or twenty-four years. I was always able to pay my rent, as my receipts will show. Mr Webster, the under-factor at this time, had put out a lot of small farmers and had taken the land into his own hands. He wanted my farm as well at the time, promising me another if I would give it up quietly. I refused to do so, and then he noticed me out of the farm. Nevertheless I had paid my rent, I protested against such unjust actions. He compelled me to leave my farm. I next wrote Mr Dickson, and laid my case before him, but was too late in taking steps in this line of action. Mr Webster had so falsified matters to Mr Dickson that before he knew the truth of the whole case the lease had been signed and Webster got the farm. Notwithstanding his fair promises about giving me another farm when he got possession of mine, I could not get another worth anything under him. Moreover, after my corn was sown and just coming through the ground, he sowed rye grass seed, and in harrowing it spoiled my corn crop, and I could not get compensation from him for it. There were many others as well as myself put out or deprived of their farms about this time to make way for Webster. Four tenants got notice to leave Airidh-Ghuairidh; six or seven got notice to leave Strongaig. At or about that time, Rostern contained four who had to be moved from their holdings. Nosebridge had eight tenants who were also moved; Conegarry also contained eight tenants; Benveridle also contained seven tenants; and four farmers got notice to quit Kilbranan and three to quit Dranich; in other words no less than forty-four or forty-five had to leave their holdings to give scope to Webster and sheep.

(Signed) 'DUNCAN MACINDEOR.'

35,029. As you have given us all the facts so clearly in your statement, I need not ask many questions of you. You are one at any rate that was put out of your holding?—Yes, and put out much against my will.

35,030. You were not willing to go?—I was not willing to go if I could have stayed.

35,031. If you got an opportunity of getting a holding again, would you like to take one?—I would, for my family is strong and could work it, and I have means at my command to stock a small holding.

35,032. Did you speak of your own knowledge of Nosebridge?—Yes.

35,033. Do you remember seeing tenants in Nosebridge?—I have seen tenants there.

35,034. Then you speak of your own knowledge regarding them. How many tenants do you remember there?—Seven at any rate.

35,035. In your opinion, is Nosebridge a very good place to make small holdings?—It is a good place.

35,036. Do you know the Glen all the way up?—I know it for sixty years.

35,037. All the way up to the loch?—Yes.

35,038. Is that tract of land, in your opinion, a place where small holdings could be made successfully?—I would think small holdings would do well enough in that place. I am sure they could be made to work profitably there.

35,039. In what condition were the holders you remember there; were they comfortable?—They were doing well enough in the meantime.

35,040. And do you think if they had been left there they would improve?—They were coming on when they were put off.

[ADJOURNED.]

THIRTY-EIGHTH SITTING.

Tarbert, Lochfyne.

TARBERT, LOCHFYNE, April 17, 1894.

Present:—

ANGUS SUTHERLAND, Esq., M.P. (acting as Chairman.)
GEORGE GORDON, Esq.
REV. MALCOLM MACCALLUM.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary

PETER WHYTE, Silvercraigs, Lochgilphead (60)—examined. Peter Whyte.

35,041. Mr Sutherland.—What is your profession?—Fisherman and crofter.

35,042. Have you any written statement to make to us?—Yes.

35,042*a*. Would you kindly read it?—It would suit me to give you first a few words of explanation about the statement.

35,043. Very good, we shall be glad to hear them?—I was born in the parish of Glassary, in the county of Argyll, at a place called Aird in the district, and in a house called Tigh-an-achaidh. We remained there for a good many years: my father then left it and went to work in another place, but after a while, when the family grew up, he returned to the old croft. When we were there last, there were over thirty crofters on that estate; they had all been evicted in three different batches, and we were about the last that were put out. I have taken the names of the crofters that were in that place just about the time Sir John Orde came into possession of the estate. The names are as follows:—Achnaba, Malcolm Maccall, Dugald Ferguson, Alexander Crawford, Archibald Ferguson, Andrew Kerr, Malcolm Ferguson, Widow Macewan. These are seven in number, but there was also one Robert Mactavish, who left the place a little before that and went to Aird-na-h-airir. I have his name down in another list. In Cossack Inn, John Crawford; in Ach'-an-leth-Pheighinn, Widow Campbell, Peter Macfarlane, Charles Campbell; in Druimfuar, Widow Campbell, Duncan Dewar, Hugh Macewan, John Maclarty; in Druim-garbh, Kenneth Brodie, Duncan Macewan. The last-mentioned only came there a few years when he was put out of Aird-na-h-airir. I have his name again under the latter place. In Tigh-an-achaidh, Alexander Whyte, Donald Gillies; in Aird-na-h-airir, Duncan Macewan, Archibald Macewan, Donald Morison, Alexander Crawford, Neil Dewar, Robert Mactavish. This is the Robert Mactavish that left Achnaba. After being in Aird-na-h-airir, when cleared a long time, he was evicted along with the rest. In Allt-aidh, Lachlan Sinclair, besides four or five cottars on the estate. Lag-na-h-Ullaidh, this was a township close to the shore, and the people mostly lived by fishing; but when Achnaba mansion house was built for Col. Macneill, their crofts were taken away. They have remained in the township, but they had no land except a small field for potatoes. The tenants were Archibald Macmillan, Archibald Macewan, Duncan Maclarty, Duncan Maccall, Widow Dewar. These are all the people who were on the estate when Sir John Orde, the father of the present proprietor, came into possession of it.

35,044. How many families were there altogether?—Thirty-one.

35,045. And how many are there now?—There is not a single individual that I know of, either a tenant or a crofter.

35,046. You said these people were cleared out at three different times?—Yes.

35,047. Can you give us any idea of the dates?—Yes, the last clearance would be about thirty-two years ago; the earlier dates I cannot state.

35,048. What happened to these people generally?

Tarbert, Lochfyne.

Peter Whyte.

—They have scattered to every part. Some went to Lochgilphead, others have gone in all directions, and there are very few of them to tell the tale of the past.

35,049. Then as to the land upon which these people lived, is it, in your opinion, fit for maintaining people still?—Yes, quite fit for maintaining people still. The people who were in it were very sorry to leave it.

35,050. How is the land occupied now?—The land is now under rabbits, sheep, and every sort of trash: you would hardly think anyone had ever lived on it.

35,051. Do you say there is no tenant on the land formerly held by thirty-one families?—Not a single individual that I know of.

35,052. Does the landlord hold it in his own hands?—Yes, he lets the mansion house and shooting, and all the rest is in his own hands.

35,053. Have you any further statement to make to us?—No, that is all.

35,054. You have advanced these facts to us as evidence, I suppose, that the land that these people once occupied could be occupied again?—Most certainly, people could occupy it now as well as those in the past.

35,055. What is your knowledge with regard to the circumstances in which these people were at that time?—At that time there was neither poorhouse nor anything else in Lochgilphead, and the people did not want anything to help them. If there was one in need of help, there were people to help him; but there are very few to-day who are exempt from the rates.

35,056. With regard to the desire of the people to get back to the land, does such a desire exist largely in this locality?—That is a thing I cannot say: but I believe a great many of the people who left that place are just like a ship on the ocean, or say a steamer with a full crew, well equipped with engines all in order, but without coals. The people want money, but they have everything else they require, a great many of them.

35,057. Before passing to that, these people I suppose were cleared for the purpose of making this large holding which exists now?—Yes, for nothing else. As far as I know they were due no arrears of rent.

35,058. That happened thirty years ago?—Yes, more than that.

35,059. Now is this tendency to consolidate small holdings into large holdings still going on?—I don't know: I don't see that this man offers to make any holdings, large or small. He cultivates some small patches, but even though he does that, what good does he do to the nation or to the country?

35,060. With regard to consolidation in this locality itself, was the process not something like this,—that the small holders were first of all cleared out to make large holdings, after which the tendency set in to make these large holdings larger still? Have you seen that in operation?—Yes, but in the case I refer to there is nothing done to make them larger.

35,061. But talking generally, would you describe that as a rule?—Yes, that is generally the way: to make large holdings out of small ones, and then knock two or three together and make them still larger.

35,062. I think you were going to add something with regard to the ability of people to take small holdings, supposing them to be formed?—I say there are some who could take them: but the young people of the present day grow up and go into towns, and as to the old people, many of them are not to the fore. Even if the young people were put on the land, I doubt if they would be fit to cultivate it, and they have no mind to go to the land. It is no use for a man to try it who has never been on the land. The young men of this quarter are all bred to the sea and to the fishing, and their minds are taken up with that more than anything else.

35,063. In your opinion, they have lost the skill necessary for the cultivation of the soil?—Yes, the young people.

35,064. Have you any knowledge of how farming is carried on in this neighbourhood? Does it require much skill to carry on farming such as is now carried on here?—Well, a stranger could not do much at it. I may say that I have been farming from my youth.

35,065. Could not you farm a grass farm?—Yes, I could farm a grass farm and an agricultural farm.

35,066. You think that among the descendants, let us say, of the people who were on the land at the time you refer to, the desire has not been shown very much here, because the people have been divorced so long from the soil?—Just divorced from the soil.

35,067. Now as to the means: supposing you got a person here and there who was willing to take land, would they have the necessary means to start new farms?—I think some of them would, but a great many who had it when on the land cannot return to-day.

35,068. But would there be, in your opinion, a sufficient number to make a beginning, supposing the opportunity were given?—In my opinion, if they had a mind to go, there are plenty who have the means to make a beginning.

35,069. Mr Maccallum.—On what estate is your holding situated?—On the estate of Mr Graham Campbell of Shirvain.

35,070. How many crofters are there on that estate?—Between crofters and cottars I think about thirty-four or thirty-five.

35,071. Could you distinguish between crofters and cottars?—These are crofters who could come under the Act if they were allowed. If you make a new engagement since the Act came out, then you are done; but of those who would come under the Act when the Act came into operation, if they had thought of doing so, there were in all eleven.

35,072. Did they apply for a fair rent?—No, only four applied for fair rent.

35,073. Have their rents been fixed by the Crofters Commission?—Yes, the rents have been fixed.

35,074. What was your own old rent?—£11.

35,075. And what is your fair rent?—£8.

35,076. Are the other crofts about the same size as your own?—Just about the same size. Well, there is one that is not the same size, but the other one is bigger. The fair rent is £12, and the old rent was £15.

35,077. Then on the estate on which you live yourself, are there large holdings?—There is one.

35,078. What is the name of it?—Castleton.

35,079. How is it occupied?—By a tenant farmer.

35,080. Is it cultivated?—It is cultivated, but the crofts used to be far bigger than they are now. They have now only about an acre, or between an acre and an acre and a half, along with a cow's grass, and they pay rent to the landlord, but their cows feed on the big farm, the hill farm of Castleton. That is an arrangement made with the tenant when he took the farm.

35,081. Then do you pay for grazing in addition to your fair rent?—We do not pay if we do not put out any beasts; if we have more than our own place can hold, and put out any, we must pay for the grazing wherever we get it.

35,082. What stock have you?—Three cows and followers. That is the stock we ought to keep, but we are curtailed. Sir John Orde has put a march between himself and Shirving; that march was cut straight and it cut a great deal of land from the crofters. And again, there was one Captain Cole, who was a farmer or a manager in Castleton, and he has taken from them the peat moss that was there and has made it into a big park. So that the township now is curtailed, and it will not keep half the stock they ought to have. But you would never dare say a word when paying your full rent to the laird, or else you were away.

35,083. Then is there in the township a desire for enlarging the holdings?—Well, in our township, I had no conversation with the people as to these affairs, but I know there are people who could take them.

35,084. And is there land adjacent that could be conveniently added?—Not without taking it from another estate.

35,085. Just so: but on the other estate, is there land suitable?—Yes, with just a march dyke between; some of the old arable land of Silvercraigs even is into that estate: how they agreed about it was none of our business, but the two landlords.

35,086. You think that the township would be better of an enlargement?—I am sure of it, and would be glad to get it.

35,087. You state that you are a fisherman as well as a crofter. Do you find that your croft interferes with the proper prosecution of the fishing?—Sometimes the fishing does not do but very little: and even what we do on the croft is always a sure thing, but the fishing is not a sure industry in this country; it is just a thing of the past.

35,088. You think that it is an advantage for fishermen, in your particular district, to have crofts?—There are no fishermen right without it.

35,089. You were stating that you got grazing occasionally. What do you pay for grazing when you take it off the farm?—It is very often a horse we put out, and for putting out other cattle we pay about £1 for young cattle—stirks.

35,090. Is that for the whole year?—For the half; for the six months in summer. We have to winter them ourselves.

35,091. Have you any experience of what they charge for the grazing of a cow? Do you know what the rate is?—Some of them make it dearer and some cheaper, but you will not get them any place much under £2.

35,092. For the summering?—Yes, for the six months' summering. That is about the average charge, 30s. to 40s.

35,093. The number of crofters you gave refers only to the estate of Achnaba?—Achnaba alone; I was young when all the other lands and estates were cleared, and I cannot give a detailed statement about them.

35,094. But what other lands has the proprietor of Achnaba besides Achnaba?—He has the estate of Dunholgon, and he has the estate of Kilmory; he has the estate of Monydrain, and also part of the estate of Castleton—Blairbuie and Ballymorehill.

35,095. Do you know the number of tenants he has on these other estates?—No, I cannot tell for certain, but in Dunholgon I think there were eight half quarters. They count by half quarters there. That was before my day, however. In Blairbuie there were six, but I cannot tell how many were in Kilmory, for it was cleared before I was born. The estates owned by Sir John Orde in Argyll are Kilmory, Dunholgon, Blairbuie, Achnaba, and Monydrain.

35,096. If they were cleared then there are no crofters there now?—There are no crofters on all that I know belonging to that gentleman after he took possession of it.

35,097. Cannot you give us the number of tenants he has got at all?—He has not got one.

35,098. Has he no tenant farmer on the estates about Lochgilphead?—None.

35,099. All these estates you mentioned, are now in his own occupation?—Yes, and Monydrain as well, and Blairbuie, and all these.

35,100. When were they cleared from these other estates of Kilmory?—I cannot tell the date.

35,101. Do you know when the lands were purchased by the proprietor, Sir John Orde?—No, I cannot say; but I remember well enough of the people being in the townships, though I have no remembrance of any person being in Kilmory, except one man.

35,102. All these were cleared before your recollection?—Yes, these estates are in the neighbourhood of Lochgilphead.

35,103. Do you know whether the people of Lochgilphead would like to have allotments in the neighbourhood of the town?—Indeed, I am sure they would if they could get them; anything that would repay them for their labour: but to get a thing and have to pay and be taxed so dearly for it,—I think no person wants to get that unless it will remunerate him for his work.

35,104. Whatever desire there may be in Lochgilphead for land, you think there is no desire on the part of the proprietors to meet it?—Not that I know. On the contrary, they do not want it; they do not want to see any person even putting his foot on their land.

35,105. With regard to the formation of new holdings, you said there would be a difficulty on account of the poverty of the people?—It is the only thing that keeps the people back.

35,106. But if these lands were made available for small holdings under similar conditions to those of the Crofters Act, don't you think they would venture to build?—I am sure they would venture to try it, at anyrate. It would be far better for a man with any money to get a house and lay out a little on his croft than to build a house in the village, where he is hampered by other people.

35,107. Were not the buildings on crofts generally put up by the crofters themselves?—There were not any buildings put up before this, and it is not very long since we had the Crofters Commission here, so we have had no chance of doing it yet, for we have not had time to look about us.

35,108. Yes, but take the buildings that are now on the crofts, and consider whether these buildings were put up by the proprietor or by the tenant?—They were put up by the tenant. Even our own house where I was born,—a few years after we went there last, it took fire through the night and burnt down: we paid for the carting of the stones and paid for the wood and built the house of our own accord, and did not get a penny for it when we left.

35,109. That was done when you had no fixity of tenure?—Yes.

35,110. And no fair rent?—No fair rent, or anything like it; there was no mention of it at the time.

35,111. You did that with all these uncertainties?—Yes.

35,112. Don't you think now, that if the land were given under conditions of fair rent and fixity of tenure, the crofters would find some means of putting up the necessary steadings?—Yes, they would do their endeavour to erect them, in my opinion.

35,113. Can you not account for the present unsatisfying condition of the crofter holdings by the fact that they had no security if they built houses that they would enjoy the use of them?—Well, there is no person would wish to put up a house or lay out money with such a prospect. Before the passing of the Act it might be that you had made an improvement on your croft, but another man would come and offer more for it and put you away.

35,114. But, I suppose, the large farmers did not build the steadings that are on their farms?—No, these are all built by the landlord.

35,115. Can you tell me about the cultivation of the crofts in your district? Are they as well cultivated as the large farms?—There are very few crofts about us: but, such as they are, we take more crop off our crofts than the farmer takes off his holding, in proportion.

35,116. Do you find that the large farmers now allow their land to get back into a state of nature?—A great many of them, because they do not work them but look to sheep. The ground that was worked for the good of the people is now under sheep.

35,117. And is the condition of the land itself as regards fertility improved?—If it is well worked it will give good results: but if it is not worked it will not give anything.

35,118. And they do not work it?—They do not work it: they allow it to lie in a state of nature.

35,119. And you find the arable fields covered with moss?—Rushes and brackens and moss,—soft, wild moss.

35,120. Can you tell me as to the rate of rent paid by the small holder as compared with the large holder? Does the small tenant pay at a higher rate or a lower rate than the large farmer?—He pays at a higher rate,—twice higher: any person who sees it knows that.

35,121. Then, do you think that there would be any loss to the proprietor himself if the land were divided into small holdings?—If he had a mind to give it, it would be a source of profit to him and a God's blessing besides.

Tarbert, Lochfyne.

Peter Whyte.

35,122. Then how do you account for their giving the preference to large holdings and non-resident tenants in many cases?—Well, I don't know; but there seems to be an enmity between man and man, and he hates to see his fellow creature getting on.

35,123. But they must have some reason, no doubt; do you think it is that they wish to make their lands into sporting grounds?—There are no two ways about that.

35,124. And they take the view that the large farms are more favourable for sport?—Yes. When people are on the land, they are counted as vermin, and spoiling the sport.

35,125. And you think that is the main reason why the proprietors prefer large holdings to small?—In my opinion, it is.

35,126. That they want to have the land as sporting preserves?—Just as sporting preserves.

35,127. Mr Gordon.—I would like to get a little information from you about the fishing. How far is your croft from the sea?—About 20 or 30 yards.

35,128. Is it near Lochgilphead?—About three miles from it.

35,129. North or south?—It is to the east.

35,130. Have you a natural harbour there?—Yes, there is a natural harbour there.

35,131. What sort of fishing do you generally follow?—The herring fishing.

35,132. Not the white fishing?—Not now.

35,133. Can the white fishing be prosecuted in Lochfyne there?—Yes, it is prosecuted in Lochfyne.

35,134. Do you get cod fish, and ling, and haddocks?—Not very much ling; but cod fish and haddocks.

35,135. Pretty plentifully?—Very scarce, I believe.

35,136. How are you off in respect of communication with Glasgow?—Good enough communication if they got plenty of fish.

35,137. How do you account for the fish not being so plentiful,—they are not trawled there, are they?—They are trawled all the year round.

35,138. Do they use trawl-nets there?—It is all trawl-nets that are worked there.

35,139. But you do not find fishing now so profitable as it used to be?—No, nor anything like it.

35,140. You are not a line fisherman yourself?—Well, I may say I am. I have often fished with lines.

35,141. But you do not now fish with lines regularly?—Not regularly.

35,142. You told us there were thirty-one crofters evicted; did that happen within your memory?—Yes, I remember everyone personally.

35,143. Were they in your district?—Yes, under the same laird.

35,144. Were they upon the banks of Lochfyne?—Yes.

35,145. And were they fishermen as well as crofters?—Yes, they were fishermen as well as crofters, even the old men: they were not fishing much, but the young people went to the fishing while the old people looked after the crofts.

35,146. With reference to your statement that there would be difficulty in the young men taking to farming as a trade, are they at present following the occupation of fishermen?—Yes.

35,147. And where are they generally located?—About Lochgilphead, those who follow the fishing.

35,148. But so far as your knowledge goes, you think they would not be inclined to go back to the farming?—There might be odd ones who would, but a great many of them would not be so inclined, for they know not the use of the land.

35,149. Do you think it would be possible to replace these thirty-one crofts in that quarter? Would there be ground for them?—Oh, yes, the ground is yonder still, and though it has gone out of cultivation it could be turned back again by labour.

35,150. What is the general idea of crofters there: is it for big crofts, or little crofts,—fisherman's crofts, or self-supporting crofts?—The crofts that were there were not very big, but most of them had a horse.

35,151. A man prosecuting the trade of fisherman would not advisedly take a very big croft?—Well, I daresay if they were to follow both trades, that would be so; but I would rather have a big croft and pay rent for it than a small one that would yield next to nothing. If I had a croft and was able to stock it and keep it, I would rather have a croft that would support a family than a small croft, even if I got it for nothing.

Tarbert, Lochfyne.

Peter Whyte.

35,152. Then you would propose that there should be certain crofts that should be self-supporting, and the occupants of which would not be fishermen?—Just so.

35,153. And that for the fishermen and those who followed the trade of fishing there should be small crofts?—Yes.

35,154. With cow's grass and potatoes?—Yes.

35,155. At a convenient place near the shore?—Yes, that is my idea, that we should have something to do in the winter, when it is dangerous to go to sea.

35,156. These would devote the principal part of the year to fishing and not to farming?—Yes.

35,157. Do you suppose that, in your neighbourhood, there would be a demand for these small lots?—That is my opinion.

35,158. More likely than for the bigger crofts?—More likely.

35,159. One reason being, no doubt, that they could stock such crofts without assistance?—Just so.

35,160. And is there land in the neighbourhood of these fishing stations that would be available for such small lots?—Thousands of acres.

35,161. Will you show us the land if we go there?—I would, but I am not so good at walking now as I used to be; I met with an accident and got my thigh broken, and am not very good at walking.

35,162. But somebody could show us the land you refer to?—Yes, and even I, myself, could show you the land in the immediate neighbourhood. It is not difficult to see it: there is plenty of land.

35,163. Supposing, now, that most of the land formerly occupied was again allocated for crofts or allotments, do you believe there are as many people in your place as would occupy that land without taking in others?—I believe there are, and they would be glad to get it.

35,164. You have spoken very clearly, Mr Whyte: may I ask whether you speak only for yourself or whether you are a delegate?—No, I had never a meeting with another man. There is not one about our place who knows I am here.

35,165. Then I may take it that what you have said is merely your own opinion?—Just my own opinion: I took no man's opinion.

35,166. And therefore you cannot say positively whether there would be a real desire for land in your district or not?—No, but I am sure there would be some that would be glad to get it.

35,167. Mr Sutherland.—You expressed a very strong opinion that every fisherman ought, if possible, to have a plot of land?—Yes, I am of that opinion; while we were without it we missed it greatly.

35,168. And now that you have had it you find yourselves very much better off, do you?—I do. I get some work in the winter, whereas if I had no land I would have to go to every quarter of the world seeking work.

35,169. You have tried both ways?—I have.

35,170. And you have found the land combined with the fishing the better way?—I do, in this quarter.

35,171. Does that apply to every one in your neighbourhood?—Yes, to every one. They have always a help.

35,172. Did you ever know landlords to offer small holdings that were not taken up?—I did not hear of them: I did not hear about this quarter.

35,173. You never heard of facilities being offered and refused?—No, I never did. They may have done so, but I never heard of it.

35,174. So that, if there is no experience of taking small holdings, it is because the people never had the opportunity?—To my opinion, I never heard of it, and if there had been such a report about our quarter I would have heard something about it.

35,175. You have stated your own case, where your holdings were made smaller by taking away your pasture?—Yes. Tarbert, Lochfyne.

35,176. Was that done with your consent, or against your will?—We were not there at the time: it was before we went there.

35,177. Who were there before you, then?—It was one Peter Macintyre. We have been here twenty-five years this term, but it was done before we came there.

35,178. You stated also that while these families were in the places you have indicated, they still carried on fishing?—Yes, still then, and still yet.

35,179. And is it your opinion that they simply carried on fishing because they thought they could make some extra money out of it?—They required to do that before they could pay such an exorbitant rent for their small bits of ground that would yield them very little. A small croft does not support a family.

35,180. They were there on the land, but had to take the rent of the land out of the sea?—Out of the sea.

35,181. Mr Maccallum.—With regard to the larger holding, you expressed some doubt whether it would let as readily as the small fishing holding?—Well, about our quarter it would let with some, but as for the small holdings, they would let, I think, very readily.

35,182. Did you ever hear of any difficulty in letting a small farm?—I never saw much of that about our place. I have seen many a flitting leaving the farms, but I have not seen much turning back, because they would not get the chance. The land would be made into a big farm, or kept in hand.

35,183. But it is a notorious fact, is it not, that there is a difficulty in letting large farms?—Yes, because of the men who are now left in the country: those who are rich are over-rich, and those who are poor are too poor.

35,184. But you never heard of any small farm being left on the proprietor's hands because a tenant could not be got for it?—No: but if it was a big one he might take a while to get it let.

35,185. And do you find that the rent of small holdings in this county is coming down?—Those of the crofter class are coming down, but as to the other ones—

35,186. I refer rather to small holdings that are not under the Crofters Act. Are their rents coming down?—Yes, they are coming down. They will not take them because they can no longer get the money they used to get for their cattle.

35,187. Do you find that the rents of the small farms are coming down?—About our place I don't think they are coming down so much as the big farms. There are always more after the small ones.

35,188. In your neighbourhood all the land is held, I think, by the proprietor,—that is on the estates of Kilmory and Achnaba?—All that I know: I don't know of a tenant or a crofter.

35,189. So the process of consolidating the small holdings into large ones could not go farther than it has gone in your neighbourhood?—It never could go farther.

35,190. Considering the desire there is on the part of the proprietors to have sporting grounds, do you think there is any great hope that they will of their own accord ever break up the large holdings into small ones?—Indeed, I do not think so; while we live I do not think they would do so of their own accord, unless something of a harder thing came on them than what we are aware of.

35,191. You have not experienced any desire on the part of the proprietor to meet the requirements of the people?—No.

ARCHIBALD MACTAVISH, Arivore, Whitehouse, Kintyre (Archibald Mactavish.)

Sir, I am not prepared to give evidence: I have been only two years in the place.

35,192. Mr Sutherland.—If you do not wish to give evidence we shall not trouble you?—Some one may speak who knows better than I do.

35,192*a*. Very good: we do not wish any person to give evidence against his will. Archibald Mactavish.

DUGALD MACKINNON, Crofter, Whitehouse, Kintyre (48)—examined. Dugald Mackinnon.

35,193. Mr Sutherland.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

35,194. Have you applied to the Crofters Commission to fix a fair rent?—No.

35,195. May I ask what is the rent of your present holding?—My present rent is £9; but there is an extra horse between myself and my brother, so that my rent in all is £10.

35,196. Are you rented according to the stock you have? Is it a souming you have?—We have a common.

35,197. And you pay part of your rent according to your share of the common?—Yes, according to the number of cattle I keep on the common.

35,198. Is your common down in the triangle between the two roads?—It is at Whitehouse.

35,199. Where the two roads separate?—Yes; it is on the left hand side as you go to Campbeltown.

35,200. Were you born at Whitehouse?—Yes.

35,201. And have lived there all your life?—Yes.

35,202. Was your father there before you?—Yes.

35,203. Your people have been there for a long time, have they?—Upwards of fifty years.

35,204. You have, I suppose, an intimate knowledge of the opinions of the people in your neighbourhood?—I have not any particular knowledge beyond my own views.

35,205. But I mean as regards the opinions of the people at the present time: have you had plenty opportunity of knowing their opinions?—Oh, yes, I can give a good guess of that.

35,206. Have you a written statement to offer to us?—No, I just came to see and hear what was said.

35,207. You know the object of our inquiry, I suppose?—Yes, I do have a little understanding of it.

35,208. In your opinion, then, is there in your neighbourhood land at present used for the purposes specified in our remit that could be used with advantage for the formation of small holdings?—Yes, any amount.

35,209. What place do you wish more particularly to refer to?—The most convenient to our place is in Mr Turner's land just above our house.

35,209*a*. What is the name of the place?—Whitehouse; it was going with Whitehouse, but it is now in another holding.

35,210. Was Whitehouse a farm itself before?—Yes.

35,211. And the house we see by the roadside, was that the farm house?—Yes.

35,212. What has happened to Whitehouse farm?—I cannot say, for it was before my time; but the lady who is there now has no land at all: she had no person along with her to work the land.

35,213. Are you aware whether it was added to another farm?—There was another farm given to them in another place.

35,214. What other farm is there besides Whitehouse that you would like to call our attention to?—There was a piece of common that was connected with our common: it is now in John and David Mundell's common.

35,215. What is the name of the farm that Messrs Mundell has got?—Arivore.

35,216. Your common was taken and added to the farm of Arivore?—Part of it,—the part that I speak of.

35,217. Which was the larger,—your common, or Arivore farm?—Oh, Arivore farm is a large farm, but I refer only to this piece that was taken off our common.

35,218. For what reason was the common taken off the small holders and added to the large farm?—I have not mind of that.

35,219. Does anything suggest itself to you why

Tarbert, Lochfyne. — Dugald Mackinnon.

that should have been done?—I cannot explain that. I only state the truth of all I say. I did not expect to be questioned on matters that were before my day, but since I am here I will give all the information I can.

35,220. But you would expect it as a natural question to ask, why it was taken from the small holders and given to the large holder?—I know there is not plenty of ground for cows pasturing: they have not enough of ground.

35,221. Any other farm that is a separate farm?—None that is convenient to the crofters of Whitehouse.

35,222. But whether it is convenient or not, what other farms are there in the neighbourhood?—There are lots of farms before you go on to Clachan.

35,223. Would you give us the names?—Kincraig is the next farm; then Achnacardan; but there was another holding in Kincraig farm as well as Kincraig itself, though it had not a house.

35,224. What is the name of it?—Duchvoic.

35,225. That holding is now merged in Kincraig?—Yes.

35,226. How many holdings were in Achnacardan?—I don't know how many holdings were there.

35,227. Was there more than one?—Yes, more than one.

35,228. Then, coming along the road from Achnacardan, where do you come to?—Eskart.

35,229. Is that the last?—It is the last till you come to West Tarbert.

35,230. Now going down towards Campbeltown from Whitehouse?—I don't know the country very well down by Campbeltown: I am only telling about the locality I know of.

35,231. Don't you know the names of any of the farms to the south of Whitehouse?—Grassfield, Kilchamaig, Achnaclohan, Gartnagreunach and Scotmill—all on Stonefield estate; Leum-na-muic, Loup, Achvraid, Ach-a'-bheallaich, Achaglass—all on the late Sir William Mackinnon's estate.

35,232. Are there any tenants in these farms you are mentioning?—It is under one tenant.

36,233. Are they all in Mr Turner's hands?—Yes.

36,234. But Achnacardan and Kincraig?—These are Mundell's again. Mr Turner did not get the use of these farms; it was Sir William. We are told that he has got them now, but I am only giving the rumour that is going round.

35,235. How many of these farms are in cultivation?—They could be all put to cultivation.

35,236. But how many are cultivated at present?—I could not say. Kilchamaig is cultivated to a certain extent.

35,237. Is any other cultivated to a certain extent?—I don't think there is much cultivation on the others.

35,238. In your opinion, are these farms suited to be made into small holdings such as they were before?—I don't know how they were before; but I know positively that they could be put into small holdings.

35,239. They could be made into smaller holdings than they are?—No mistake about that.

35,240. Are there people who, in your opinion, would take them if they got them in small holdings?—Well, I would think so: but it is questionable, the like of those things.

35,241. What is your opinion, if I may ask the question regarding yourself,—would you be glad to get a bigger holding than you have?—I would.

35,242. And would you take one if you got it on reasonable terms?—Yes.

35,243. And I suppose we would be justified in taking your opinion as an average one?—I can only speak for myself, but I hear the voices of the people saying they would be glad to take more land if they could get it.

35,244. Mr Gordon.—You mentioned one little farm there which, I think, is in occupation,—Kincraig?—Yes, but I was not questioned about that. It is cultivated.

35,245. But Achvraid, Ach-a'-bheallaich, Loup, and the other two bigger farms are all in Mr Turner's hands, and not cultivated?—Kilchamaig is cultivated on a small scale, and a portion of Gartnagreunach; but there is no cultivation on Achvraid, Ach-a'-bheallaich, Loup, Leum-na-muic, and Achaglass.

Tarbert, Lochfyne — Dugald Mackinnon.

35,246. Are there houses now at Loup? Are there buildings there?—Yes, there was a farmer there till a few years ago.

35,247. There are no buildings on Achvraid?—Yes, there was a farmer there; this Mr Mactavish was there not long since.

35,248. And Achaveallich?—Yes, there was a farmer there too lately.

35,249. You mentioned Eskart, I think: is that a place near this?—Yes, Mr Turner has that.

35,250. Is there any cultivation there?—I think there is, but I could not exactly say; I never left the road at that place to see.

35,251. Would there be people about Tarbert who would take the whole or a part of that place of Eskart?—The Tarbert people can speak for themselves; I cannot give their views, because I am not often among them.

35,252. Does Mr Turner's pasture come in above the village here?—I cannot give the boundaries.

35,253. Mr Maccallum.—Generally speaking, there is not much cultivation now in your neighbourhood?—Very little.

35,254. Is there a meal mill working?—There is a meal mill, but it is not working.

35,255–56. It exists, but you do not think it gets much trade?—I don't think so.

35,257. But are there not evident signs that there was a good deal of cultivation at one time?—Yes, there is no mistake about that.

35,258. The land seems to be consolidated very much into one holding now?—That is the case.

35,259–60. Occupied by Mr Turner, I think?—Yes, except Whitehouse itself: it is a crofting village.

35,261. But can you give us any idea of the extent of cultivation? Is there enough cultivated land on the holding of Mr Turner to meet the requirements of his own house and of the shepherd's?—I could not exactly tell.

35,262–63. And does he make meal?—He makes no meal at all in Whitehouse.

35,264. Are you aware of his making any meal at all on any of the farms?—Not in our mill at anyrate, to my knowledge.

35,265. Did you mention all the holdings that are included in that one large holding?—There were more; I honestly believe there were more: and there may be older people here who could tell.

35,266. The names are now being forgotten?—I suppose they are.

35,267. But going farther south again you come to Stuartfield, do you know that?—That is Mr Pollok's estate.

35,268. How is it tenanted?—Mr Turner has it too.

35,269. Is there a steading upon Stuartfield?—A splendid one.

35,270. Made for an agricultural holding, I suppose?—Yes, it was that all along.

35,271. And now it is a pastoral farm?—It is under sheep and cattle.

35,272. Can you tell us the number of steadings,—good steadings,—that are upon Mr Turner's holdings?—Well, it would take a little time: as I said already there are some steadings where nothing is to be seen but the walls.

35,273. But can you tell us the number of good steadings he has?—Yes; at Kilchamaig and Grassfield and Gortan-Granach: these are three good steadings in what we now call Kilchamaig farm. The farms of Leum-nam-muc, Loup, Achavraid, Achaveallich and Achaglass will all be tenanted by Mr Turner at Whitsunday, 1894.

35,274. And Taltol, how is it occupied?—It goes with Stuartfield.

35,275. Was there a house there?—It is a shepherd who is there.

35,276. Was the house built as a shepherd's house?—I rather think it was built for a farmer at one time.

35,277. We have been told in some parts by some witnesses that the process of absorption of the small holdings by the large has virtually ceased: is that your experience in this district?—It has ceased, for the good reason that the people were all going away; they could not make a living, and another one would take their place.

35,278. But I am speaking of the small farms being absorbed into large ones; is that process still going on in your district?—I cannot say much about those.

35,279. You mentioned Loup, I think, as a farm; how is it let?—There was a farmer in Loup, and I am told that it is let for this year along with these other farms.

35,280. You find it then absorbed into the large farms?—It seems so.

35,281. So in your neighbourhood the process of absorption is still farther going on: is not that the case?—Well, I cannot say that there is anything wrong with our village of Whitehouse in that respect.

35,282. I am not speaking of your crofts just now, but of the small farms being absorbed into larger ones: that process is still going on, is it not?—Yes, but this farm of Loup was in the laird's hands before Mr Turner had it.

35,283. But they are not let now as separate farms but added to other farms?—Yes, added to other farms.

35,284. Can you give us the number of crofters at Whitehouse?—I can go through the names of the crofters themselves.

35,285. Just give us the number, if you can.—Seven or eight.

35,286. What extent of arable land is held by these?—Between two and five acres apiece.

35,287. And what rent do they pay?—I would say from 30s. to £5 or £6.

35,288. Can you say whether some of these would desire to leave these crofts and take larger holdings elsewhere?—I think some of them at anyrate would take larger holdings, perhaps others would not care to do so. There are some widows who could not take more land.

35,289. What is your view with regard to the letting of small holdings: supposing they were provided out of these large farms, do you think there would be any difficulty in letting them?—I would think not. Some of us have to put away our young cattle to other places to graze; when we do have a young beast we have no place for it about our own locality.

35,290. Can you give us now your opinion as to the effect that the removal of the people from the land has upon such a town as Tarbert here? Is it for the good of Tarbert that all the land round about should be held in one holding?—I cannot speak for Tarbert at all, because they are mostly all fishermen.

35,291. I do not wish you to speak for Tarbert: but what effect will the consolidation of the land into one holding have upon a town,—how will it affect the business of the town, for instance?—Well, my opinion is that a fisherman with a family would be very glad to have a piece of ground.

35,292. What effect must it have upon the shopkeepers of Tarbert, for instance, when land is put into one large holding: would there be as much trade as if the land were held in separate tenancies?—Not at all: I would think there would be more trading with a number of small holders.

35,293. Do you think one large holder would benefit the tradespeople to any large extent?—I would think not.

35,294. Do you think there is any large supply of produce such as eggs, &c. coming to the town from that one large farm —No, I don't think so. As for highland bullocks they would not benefit the town much.

35,295. These are not sold in Tarbert?—No.

35,296. Mr Gordon.—About the extension of your own grazings at the village there. You have the park at present immediately to the east of the township, I think?—Yes.

35,297. How many cows do you graze there?—I have two cows and followers, but I think the rent goes for twenty cows, the total.

35,297*a*. Now if you were to get an extension of your grazings, where would you suggest it being made?—Just about 60 yards above my house, on the other side of the road; there is plenty of pasture there.

35,298. Is that upon the farm of Arivore?—No, it is going with Kilchamaig farm; but the Arivore farm is on the other side too. Tarbert, Lochfyne.

35,299. The pasture you would suggest is part of Kilchamaig to the south or west of your house?—North-west. Dugald Mackinnon.

35,300. Across the road?—Across the road.

35,301. That is, between you and the sea?—Yes.

35,302. Now you spoke of a part of the farm of Arivore for which the pasture had been taken at one time off the township?—Yes, forty or fifty years ago.

35,303. Is that a square field of about 40 acres on the south side of the road leading over to the shore?—Yes.

35,304. It is next your own pasture?—Yes, on the right hand side going up to Skipness. But there was a lot of it that they took a great deal of pains to break in and fence; that was taken off.

35,305. Is that the kind of land you could cultivate?—No, except what Mr Mundell and his family took in and fenced. The rest could not be cultivated.

35,306. Is there part of the land of Kilchamaig that could be cultivated?—Yes, and it was cultivated.

35,307. That would be most convenient for the township?—Yes.

35,308. And if the people in the township there got some extension of grazings and some extension of their arable land you think that would meet their wants?—They tell me so, but they should come here themselves and say so.

35,309. But from your own knowledge, is that the case?—Yes.

35,310. Are you a tradesman?—I am a road contractor; I could not live on the small croft that I have.

35,311. Do you keep a pony or a horse?—A horse.

JOHN MACLEAN, Cottar, Grassfield, Whitehouse, Kintyre (69)—examined. John Maclean.

35,312. Mr Sutherland. — Are you a crofter at Grassfield?—No, I am a cottar, and I could not get a bit of ground in the country all round.

35,313. So you are in your own person an example of the desire for land?—Yes, of course, I want a bit of land.

35,314. How do you happen to be at Grassfield without land?—I have a cow's grazing and about three acres of land from Mr Turner.

35,315. How is it you are leaving?—Because I cannot live in the house.

35,316. Won't he repair it for you?—No: he told me he would rather let the house fall in than do anything to it.

35,317. So your landlord has refused to keep your house in tenantable repair?—Yes, that is the way of it. I think there is another excuse for it: I am too near the shepherd. Shepherds, as a rule, do not like anything near them.

35,318. How near are you to the shepherd?—The corner of his house and mine are only about four feet apart.

35,319. So you are as near as neighbours in Tarbert?—Yes.

35,320. You have heard the evidence that was given by Mr Mackinnon and Mr Whyte?—Yes.

35,321. Do you agree generally with the evidence so far as the circumstances are known to you?—I do.

35,322. And have you anything to say in addition to what they have told us?—Well, all that I can tell you is that I was born and brought up in that place, and I know the people who were there when I was a boy. I was away from it for about forty years, and I came back to it after I retired from service. I have been down there in the house four years now; and I was away at Strontian, at the manse there, for two or three years before that.

35,323. Is Grassfield on the farm of Kilchamaig?—Yes.

Tarbert, Lochfyne. — John Maclean.

35,324. How do they come to have two names?—Because Grassfield was once a farm by itself.

35,325. And it was swallowed up by Kilchamaig, was it?—Yes.

35,326. How long ago is that?—A good many years ago: I suppose since ever I remember, almost, it was in Sinclair's hands, who was Stonefield's factor. He had Kilchamaig and he had Gort-na-Gleuack.

35,327. But now the farm of Grassfield that once was a separate farm is part of the farm of Kilchamaig?—Yes, it is included in it.

35,328. Do you agree with the previous witnesses as to the fitness of the land in these farms for small holdings?—Oh, yes, I do.

35,329. Would you yourself be willing to get such a small holding as has been referred to?—Quite willing.

35,330. And would take one?—And would take one if I could get it, but I cannot get one; I have searched all the country side, from Skipness down by Clachan and through Sir William Mackinnon's estate and all down the country several times, but could find no place that I could put my nose in.

35,331. You are not one of the witnesses that have no knowledge of farming?—Well, I have been a farm servant: I acted as overseer at Dunmore for some years.

35,332. So you are pretty well qualified to take an arable farm?—Yes, I can do anything that a farmer can do, both plough and sow and reap and everything else: only I am not strong now.

35,333. But it is not because you have no skill in farming that you are not able to get a farm?—No, it is not that. I have plenty knowledge of that.

35,334. Are there any other additional places that you could mention to us, where there is land suitable for the purposes of our inquiry?—If you can get them down about Clachan, down by Sir William Mackinnon's ground; that is a good place, and there is plenty of land there.

35,335. What place in particular do you now refer to?—Well, Stonefield estate comes to Leum-na-muic, then there is Loup and Corran, Shirdrum, Drumleach and all these places down there. There are a number of farms there, but I forget their names.

35,336. In your opinion they are suitable for small holdings?—Yes.

35,337. And they were cultivated as small holdings at one time?—They were. At the place where I was born there were nine dwelling-houses, and there are none now.

35,337*a*. You can see the marks of cultivation up at the tops of the hills in some places?—Yes. Along the Skipness Road, after you pass the stone dyke you come to a wire fence: I saw all the place cultivated at one time.

35,338. You saw that?—Yes, I saw it all under corn and potatoes.

35,339. Do you mean the place round the little loch?—No, there is no little loch near it.

35,340. What is the name of the place?—Duchvoie; or between Duchvoie and the farmer Munro. It is at the left hand side before you come to Lonea.

35,341. In your own opinion that is suitable for small holdings?—Of course, and very good too.

35,342. Mr Maccallum.—You told us that you found it impossible to get a small holding anywhere?—I could not get a small holding anywhere. I even wrote to the Duke of Argyll's chamberlain and asked him, and he said there was a place there that was advertised: but it was taken up, and there was no other place near it. Poltalloch's factor also told me that there was no place on his estate vacant.

35,343. So that your experience is that the proprietors do not wish to break up their land into small holdings?—I do not know what they wish to do, but they won't do it.

35,344. You found it a very hopeless work trying to get a small place?—I had to take a house in Tarbert here: I could not get a place to put my head in.

35,345. May not that account for there not being a greater expression of the desire to get land,—that people have found it quite hopeless to try to get it? That it has been useless to apply to the landlord and they have given up the attempt?—It was only shortly since the laird was but a minor.

35,346. I do not speak particularly of any one, but of proprietors in general. You have tried more than one proprietor yourself?—Yes.

35,347. And have found them all of the same mind?—All of the same mind.

35,348. They prefer to put their land under grass?—Under grass.

35,349. There was mention made of the farm of Loup, for instance, as having been added to this other large holding of which we have heard so much?—Mr Turner took it.

35,350. Was there any attempt made to let Loup as a separate farm?—I cannot tell you: I never heard of it being advertised.

35,351. But if these farms were made into small holdings, do you think it would be easy enough to let them?—I think so.

35,352. Judging from the difficulty you have in getting one?—Difficulty, there is no hope of getting one at all.

35,352*a*. Do you find the rent of any small holdings coming down?—No.

35,352*b*. And for every place there is a very great competition?—Yes, there is a competition, certainly.

35,353. But not so in the case of the large holdings?—No. A good many of the large holdings are advertised to let, but cannot find tenants, as it requires people with enough capital to buy the stock.

35,354. So that there is a much greater difficulty in getting people to take the larger holdings?—They cannot get them: only a few can take such holdings, and these get them cheap.

35,355. Can you supply any further particulars, say with regard to the number of tenants that there were at a former time on Mr Turner's present farms?—On Achnaclaon there were four: that is a place you have not had mentioned; it was with Kilchamaig in my younger days.

35,356. Had they common pasture, or were they distinct?—These were what you call cottars: they were not crofters but cottars. It belonged to Sinclair, who was the tenant of Kilchamaig.

35,357. But how was it occupied before he took it?—I cannot say as to that: it was before I was born.

35,358. But in your own recollection there were more people on the land than there are now?—Yes. At Duchvoie there were nine tenants in my recollection: these were all cottars under the farmer Neil Macinvan: and there were others on the other farms.

35,359. And how many are in Duchvoie now?—There is not a house or a place in it.

35,360. How did these cottars make their living?—They worked to Stonefield at 1s. 4d. a day. In my young days there was only one who had more: he got 1s. 6d., but all the rest had 1s. 4d. a day—8s. a week.

35,361. The rate of wages has changed very much since you remember?—Yes.

35,362. Then you cannot give us any idea of the condition of the place, Kilchamaig, before it was made into one holding; the number or the condition of the people?—No. There were only his workers about Kilchamaig,—the ploughman, and shepherd, and herd, and so on.

35,363. And there was more cultivation then than now?—Oh, the whole ground was cultivated then; I trenched part of Achnaclaon and cleared it of trees: we trenched and drained it.

35,364. Mr Gordon.—You stay at Grassfield?—Yes.

35,365. How long is it since the farm was merged with Kilchamaig? How long has it been without a tenant?—There were people taking the house just the same as I am taking mine.

35,366. But how long is it since the land was occupied by a separate tenant?—I cannot say how long.

35,367. Thirty or forty years?—Oh, it has been far more: ever since I remember it was in Sinclair's farms. It was in his hands before I was born.

35,368. Did you ever see any part of that farm in crop?—No, never: only a small patch where the shepherd is.

35,369. There is not very much of it that would do for cultivation without being drained, I am afraid?—It would need draining. There is one park of 50 acres where my cow and two others belonging to the shepherd were, in old Mr Campbell's time: but he is dead these ninety years.

35,370. But you never saw the field, or any part of it, in crop?—No.

35,371. What rent do you pay for your house and your cow's keep?—£6.

35,372. Do you get no winter keep?—Yes, winter, and everything. We got the ground with the house; just what would winter my cows.

35,373. How many acres?—About four acres.

35,374. But you say your house is not in habitable condition?—No.

35,375. Is it a slated house?—Yes.

35,376. But the roof is gone, I suppose?—Yes, the roof is gone.

35,377. And no one else has gone into it?—Not that I know of.

35,378. There will be nobody in the house now or on the farm, except the shepherd, after you left?—That is all.

COLL MACKECHNIE, carpenter, Clachan, Kintyre (53) —examined.

35,379. Mr Sutherland.—Are you a crofter?—No, I am a joiner and carpenter.

35,380. Have you any written statement to submit to us?—No, but I will answer any questions.

35,381. Have you heard the evidence already given to-day?—Yes.

35,382. Does the case of Clachan differ in any material way from that evidence?—No, it is just the same: only small holdings could not be got at all, because the landlords keep it all in their own hands.

35,383. How many families are in Clachan, speaking roughly?—About thirty.

35,384. How many of these have got land?—Very few; I may say none at all. There are two or three, such as the blacksmith, who has a small patch.

35,385. How much has he got?—I would say about four acres.

35,386. And have you, as joiner, got any land?—Yes, I got half an acre.

35,387. Are there any others besides yourself and the blacksmith who have any land?—We all got about half an acre; every small holder got that as potato ground.

35,388. Is it on the half acre that your house is built?—No, that is apart from the house.

35,389. In what direction is it—to the right of the road coming north, or to the left?—To the left.

35,390. Between Clachan and the river?—Yes. We had it for a number of years, and the late Sir William Mackinnon made an avenue through it. It belonged at one time to the Loup estate.

35,391. How do the people of Clachan hold their lots, are they leaseholders?—There are no feus on the Balnakill estate at all; but there are two on the Ronachan estate.

35,392. Is the bridge the boundary?—The bridge is the boundary, but the two estates were together at one time. Angus Macallister had them, and he sold it to Captain Stuart; then it went to Captain Macintyre, and then to Mr Pollok, and he left the farm in his own hands.

35,393. Then as to the tenure of the houses on the other side of the bridge,—I think you said they were not held in the same way. Have they building feus?—No, except in the case of two: and they got their feus from Captain Macintyre, who was there before Mr Pollok's time.

35,394. There is no feu at all on the Balnakill estate?—No.

35,395. Are you tenants from year to year?—Yes.

35,396. Tenants at will?—Tenants at will.

35,397. What do you generally pay for your houses?—I pay £4 for the house and cow's grass.

35,398. That is apart from the half acre?—Yes, it is a piece of the common.

35,399. Where is it situated?—It is as you come in to the hill,—it was a piece of the common that the blacksmith, the miller, and the innkeeper had, and it is given to us now. The doctor claimed a piece of it.

35,400. What do you say you are charged for it?—£4.

35,401. Have you access to it all the year round?—Yes.

35,402. It is just kept for yourselves entirely?—Yes.

35,403. You have a knowledge, of course, of these farms that have been spoken of to-day?—Yes.

35,404. Do you concur with the evidence we have had as to them?—Yes.

35,405. Are they, in your opinion, very suitable for making into small holdings?—Yes, especially Ronachan estate. I don't think there is any place more suitable than Ronachan, even in the Carse of Gowrie.

35,406. What farms are there on the Ronachan estate?—You have not heard them mentioned yet. There is Ronachan, or properly speaking it should be Rainoch: the estate got the name from the farm, the original name being Dunanultach. Then there are Lag-nan-goirtean, Corrarie, Talamh-toll, Dail-nan-garnan, Stuart-field or Dunanultach as it used to be, but Stuart called it after himself. Then there was another Dunanultach, then a small farm or a fine croft down near the shore, called Copenhagen,—I suppose the laird had been at the battle of Copenhagen. Then there is another bit near the Clachan, attached to the inn, Cnoc-mheadon, and another small place Creagan-a'-mhuilinn. Further up again was Achvraid, and South Loch-Kerran.

35,407. Is that the same place that was mentioned before?—No, it is a different farm.

35,408. You have given us eleven or twelve separate farms. How many of these are separate farms now?—It is all in the proprietor's hands. When Mr Pollok came here, the two farmers applied for the farms, but could not get them for love nor money. He said he believed they were right honest people, and they had no arrears of rent; but he said the property is mine and I am going to put it under grass. There was no use asking for small holdings or for land, because they kept it in their own hands.

35,409. The whole of these are in grass?—There is not a furrow turned in the whole of the estate, except two small patches for potatoes: to the best of my knowledge, all the rest is under grass or fog.

35,410. Can you give us any idea of the acreage or extent of it?—No, I am unable to do that.

35,411. Is there any desire among the people of Clachan to get an opportunity of acquiring small holdings?—Certainly there is. We are all employed on the Balnakill estate, but if that was to fail us we would require land, or else go into the sea.

35,412. Supposing that employment were to fail?—We would have to try the land: and even supposing we, in Clachan, could not take it ourselves, it would be let out in small farms, and would give us employment. There would be plenty to take the land supposing those in Clachan did not want it. There is far more demand for small holdings than for large ones.

35,413. Did you hear what was said by Mr Maclean, that only very large capitalists could take the large holdings?—Yes, and I agree with him.

35,414. And that there being little or no competition, those large capitalists could get farms almost at their own terms?—Yes.

35,415. That is the result, is it, of the policy of consolidation to the landlord himself?—Yes, certainly.

35,416. Now, with regard to the employment you get on the Balnakill estate: you have got, as a matter of fact, a considerable deal of employment during the lifetime of Sir William Mackinnon, have you not?—Oh, yes, he kept us all in employment.

35,417. Was that an exceptional case in Argyllshire, or do you know any other landlords who carried on improvements on their estates the same way as Sir William Mackinnon?—No, it was not common, but they always kept more or less, such as could,—the Earl of Morton and others. But Sir William kept the land in his own hand and gave us employment.

35,418. Because he was expending his money on the estate?—Yes.

35,419. Money that he was earning elsewhere, or deriving from other sources?—Yes.

35,420. But that is a thing that may come to an end at any time?—At any time.

35,421. Sir William Mackinnon died recently?—Yes.

35,422. And is his successor likely to carry on the same policy?—I could not say; but he is expected home soon. The estate is under trustees in the meantime and we do not know as to the future.

35,423. You are in a state of absolute uncertainty as to whether that employment is to be continued?—Just so.

35,424. But I think you said that if you had access to the soil to cultivate it you would be under no such uncertainty?—We would take our living out of the soil.

35,425. Mr Maccallum.—You have spoken, I think, with regard to the estates of Balnakill and Ronachan?—Yes, especially Ronachan.

35,426. And you have spoken so clearly about that that very little remains to be asked. Now, as to the removal of the people from the farm of Ronachan, how do you account for their removal?—When Mr Pollok bought the estate he kept it in his own hand. It was an uncle of my own that was in Ronachan at the time, and I remember it well. He would not give the land to the farmers upon any account, because he was such a great farmer himself and a dealer as well. It was not because they were in arrear at all, but because he wanted the land himself.

35,427. And you are perfectly clear with regard to that,—that the people left unwillingly?—Certainly, some of them did.

35,428. And you think that, with regard to the district generally, the people left not of their own accord but were forced away?—Yes, that is my opinion.

35,429. He removed them, you say, because he was a great farmer?—Yes.

35,430. And is there very good farming going on there just now?—It is all under moss.

35,431. That has been the result of consolidation,—that the farming has gone back rather than improved?—Yes, that is my belief. I know that where I saw good crops growing there is now nothing but moss.

35,432. Then I think you were quite distinct in the expression of your opinion that there would be no difficulty in letting holdings formed out of these farms?—I don't think there would be the least difficulty, and I think they would do very well. Besides, we have an example of that; the crofter down at Ballochcroy has a small place and is doing very well. He is bringing up a large family and is doing very well. Such holdings as that, larger and smaller as may be, would suit, I think, very well.

35,433. Then with regard to the farm of Loup on the Balnakill estate, which you say is added to another farm: was there any attempt made to let it as a separate holding, do you know?—No. There were plenty inquiring after it, but I don't think it was ever advertised.

35,434. There was no opportunity given to the people to make application for holdings on that farm?—Not to my knowledge. I know that the blacksmith wanted a small farm, Achvally, but he could not get it. Another man from Skipness was wanting Achvraid farm.

35,435. None of these were successful?—None.

35,436. Is there a steading on Loup?—Yes, and a good dwelling-house, but the rest fell down because they were not kept up: since Sir William got the estate he let them fall down, the only good steading on the estate is Corran and Dunskeig.

35,437. Did the people of Clachan themselves apply to his trustees for land?—No.

35,438. They did not approach them on the subject?—No, they applied to the factor, Mr Mactaggart, Campbeltown.

35,439. And do you think there would be more applications for land on the part of the people if they thought there was any use in applying?—Oh, certainly.

35,440. You think they are distinctly of opinion that it is useless to do so?—Yes, I know that the Loup estate would let very well in small single farms: I am certain of that, because I know the people that wanted them.

35,441. But they consider that they know the mind of the proprietors to be against small holdings?—Yes.

35,442. They removed them unwillingly, and they are not willing to take them on again?—It seems that that is the case.

35,443. Mr Gordon.—Are you a carpenter in Clachan?—Yes.

35,444. Are there other tradesmen besides yourself and the blacksmith in the village?—Two masons.

35,445. And there are about thirty families?—Yes.

35,446. How many of these thirty families would be inclined to take land, do you think?—I could not say.

35,446*a*. What sort of a place have you in your own mind when you say you would like land? Is it land in connection with your present house and business, or would you like a separate holding altogether?—A little land to carry on along with my business.

35,447. How many acres could you cultivate?—If I had enough to graze a cow and raise as much as would winter it.

35,448. You are not very ambitious?—No. I spent £10 last year in fodder and ryegrass alone, and the year before that £11, and the year before that again £10.

35,449. I think you are not at all extravagant in your wishes. Would there be many of the thirty families who would like it?—A good many.

35,450. But it would be a bit of land that they could work living in their present house, with a few acres to grow corn or winter keep for their cows?—Yes, and they would have to improve their houses, if it was allowed to build houses on the lots.

35,451. How many cows are there in the village?—There are five cows on that piece of common: the blacksmith has two on his croft.

35,452. Five among the thirty families?—Yes.

35,453. What is the general occupation of the villagers: are they roadmen, or common labourers, or tradesmen, or what?—Mostly common labourers: farm servants generally.

35,454. Where are they employed?—By the trustees of the late Sir William Mackinnon. There is nothing done at all on the Ronachan estate: Mr Pollok used to give employment, but there is none now.

35,455. But you think the general wish of the people would be to have land given them in lots?—Yes, or that the land be given out to farmers to work, so that there would be labour.

35,456. They would like the farm round about the village to be cultivated, and they would like a small patch to themselves?—Yes.

35,457. Now, on this farm of Stuartfield there is a good steading?—Yes, a fine steading: it was the home farm.

35,458. But it is not occupied in any shape?—No.

35,459. At Ronachan there is a house, and at Lag-nan-goirtean there are some cottar houses?—Yes.

35,460. But there is no steading at either of these places, I think. Is there a shepherd at Ronachan?—No, the keeper is there; and there is a pheasantry there.

35,461. Is that not rather too high up for a pheasantry?—It is high, but well sheltered.

35,462. There is a good sheltered burn down below?—Yes.

35,463. Now as to Talamh-toll,—there are good houses there?—There is a shepherd's house and good fanks.

35,463*a*. But the houses there are specially built for a sheep farm?—Yes.

35,464. They are not adapted for an agricultural farm?—No.

35,465. And there is not a great deal of land that could be cultivated profitably; it is rather wet, is it not?—Well, I daresay it is wet, but it is lying on limestone. One Angus Keith is the last tenant who was there.

35,466. How long has he been out of that?—Maybe fifty years or so, since it was cultivated.

35,467. The shepherd possibly cultivates a little bit?—Yes, a small patch for potatoes, within the last two years.

35,468. It is a very nice place for a sheep farm, but it is not suited for an agricultural steading?—No.

35,469. But the land you would like, or that you think would be taken by the Clachan people, would be near the village?—Yes.

35,470. And you would like to see the other farms under cultivation?—Yes.

35,471. Giving employment to yourself and men like you?—Yes, that is the wish of everyone.

JOHN MACGUGAN, Castlehill, Tarbert (65)—examined.

35,472. Mr Sutherland.—How may we describe you?—I am a fisherman,—have been at no other trade during my life. I fished as long as I could work at it.

35,473. Of course, the fishing industry in Tarbert is a well known and very important one, so we need not go into particulars about that at present. You know the opinions of the fishermen in this locality very well, I suppose?—I just came here to give my opinion about the country.

35,474. But I take it that you can be held to know pretty well the opinions of the fishermen in Tarbert?—Well, there is one thing, they would like to see some small farmers. In my day they were only paying £14 of rent, and I think the value of that would now be about £10. I have no doubt fishermen in Tarbert would gladly take a half of that at a rent of £5, instead of their present houses in Tarbert where they have to pay £8 to £10 for two very small rooms.

35,475. Then, I take it that you are of opinion that those in Tarbert who have any land pay far too high for it?—I do. There were four who applied to the Crofters Commission, and they got reductions from £12 to £7 and so on.

35,476. Were there any fishermen who came under the Act?—Yes, there were four in Lochgilphead.

35,477. Their houses were on their land?—Yes.

35,478. And were there a number of them excluded because of their dwelling-houses not being on the land?—Well, they did not apply.

35,479. But did every fisherman in Tarbert who applied to the Crofters Commission get his rent fixed?—Yes.

35,480. Were there more of them who were in a position to apply and who did not apply?—Yes, at Ballochcroy, Corran, and the district.

35,481. Have not they applied since they saw the others get their rents fixed?—Yes, but I think they would be sorry they did not apply.

35,482. Are they not aware that they can apply at any time?—I don't know. I think some of them were not thinking very much about it.

35,483. Do you know whether any of them contracted themselves out by entering into any arrangement with the landlord?—I am not aware of that.

35,484. How much per acre do the fishermen of Tarbert pay for their land?—I cannot say about acres.

35,485. What is the general size of their holdings?—There is one with 1½ acre.

35,486. What is the rent of that?—It was formerly £6, 11s. and it is now reduced to £3, 10s.

35,487. Does that include the house?—Yes.

35,488. Did the landlord build the house?—No.

35,489. Do you know any large farmers who hold thousands of acres in this neighbourhood, who pay so high a rate as that for their land?—I don't believe they pay that for their land. I know farmers here that have no less than six shepherds, shoulder to shoulder. The whole estate of Stonefield is occupied by six families, an area of something like fifteen nautical miles, from Laggan Point to east side of Jura Sound. Tarbert, Lochfyne. John Macgugan.

35,490. And you think they do not pay at the rate of £6 for an acre and a half?—I don't know whether they will or not.

35,491. But you have an idea, surely?—I think the land would be dear enough at that. I am sure it would not pay them.

35,492. Then you think opportunities ought to be given to those who pay such a rate at present for their land, to get holdings on the land instead?—Certainly, breaking up the big holdings.

35,493. What holdings do you wish particularly to mention to us?—These are Drumrioch, Achnafiadh, Glen-na-kill, Port-na-doinionn, Old Ashen, New Ashen, Culraoch, Amhuinn-nan-Gillean, Barabhaille, Doirr-chearra, Glen-na-frodaich, Arichreggach, and the Forest.

35,494. These are all to the north of Loch Tarbert?—Some to the north and some to the south: one gentleman has them all.

35,495. They are both to the north of East and West Loch Tarbert?—Yes.

35,496. And are they all in one holding?—Yes.

35,497. What is the name?—Mr Macdougall, Ashen.

35,498. Could you give us those to the west now?—To the south-east here, Laggan, Altbea, Muldarroch, Breachlarach, Knock-a-cathail. These are all in the landlord's hands, in a sheep farm.

35,499. What is the name of the farm?—Muldarroch.

35,500. Now take those to the south west?—At Carnban there were five or six in my day, but there are three now: West Tarbert, Achnaglaic. You have got Stonefield's estate already, for we have now come to Eskart.

35,501. You think we ought to look at all these places?—Yes.

35,502. They were all separate farms at one time?—Every one of them.

35,503. Can you mention the townships in Eskart?—You got them from previous witnesses.

35,504. Did I understand you to say that you saw people in these separate holdings yourself?—Certainly I did.

35,505. You saw them yourself, in each of these places?—Yes, some were cleared in 1839; I can give the names and point out the houses where the people were.

35,506. You speak from personal knowledge?—From personal knowledge. I could go with you to the place and point out the houses.

35,507. You have already said that these places are suitable for small holdings; but as to the success of such holdings if made, have you any doubt in your mind whether they would be successful, under such conditions as the Crofters Act now gives?—Certainly, I believe they would. When I was in Balmeanach there were twelve families there, and there was a fisherman coming out of every house to Tarbert. Now, if a fisherman was to get half of one of these small farms I have been speaking of for about £5, he would not pay £10 for a single room in Tarbert. £14 was the rent when I was in Drumriach, and I am sure the Commissioners would not give the half of that now, for the ground is now under moss, rushes and bracken, and it would take a long time to bring it into the same state it was in when I was herding there.

35,508. Mr Gordon.—Could you find fishermen in Tarbert willing to take land at any distance from the place? In the first place, is there arable land near this that could be occupied by fishermen fishing from the port of Tarbert?—They would be within a mile of Tarbert.

35,509. And would they be willing to walk that mile?—I think they would.

Tarbert, Lochfyne.

John Macgugan.

35,510. Is there any land in the neighbourhood of what you have mentioned that would be suitable for cows' grazing for the fishermen?—There is no doubt of that.

35,511. The nearer end of West Tarbert here?—Yes, and up the hill, but the hill pasture was taken from them: and the hill pasture on the south side of Tarbert was taken from the fishermen of Tarbert.

35,512. There is ground in the neighbourhood of the village of Tarbert here that could be used as cows' grazing if it could be got?—Yes.

35,513. And that, even to the people living in Tarbert, would be a great boon?—Certainly. The land to the south-east would be a splendid place for summering cattle.

35,514. And to the south-west there is a large extent of green ground before you go to Eskart?—Yes.

35,515. Where is the nearest land that you have mentioned that could be cultivated?—Drumriach and Achnafiadh.

35,516. Is the grass lying in pasture just now?—Yes.

35,517. It is not cultivated?—A good deal of it is.

35,518. Then I am afraid it does not come within the scope of our inquiry.—But I may mention the next farm of Macdougall's on Stonefield,—that is Lochan and Gleann.

35,519. And is there green ground there?—There is a good deal of arable land and hill pasture. Stonefield is only under four families altogether.

35,520. But you believe that there is land in the neighbourhood of Tarbert that could be occupied with advantage and profit by the fishermen of Tarbert?—I cannot say whether it would be profitable or not.

35,521. Do you think they would take it?—I believe some of them would.

35,522. Is it not the case that a good many of your successful fishermen here would not be bothered with land?—Well, we were not very well off in these days.

35,523. You appear very well off yourself?—If I am, I work pretty hard for it. But I know it would be a great boon for the fishermen if they could get the land at a fair rent to build houses for themselves.

35,524. And it would be a great advantage to get milk for their families?—The whole village of Tarbert have to content themselves with four small parks; and if the doctor comes to your house in time of sickness and orders milk you must send to the country to get it. If the people could get the ground to build a house on, at a fair rent, they would be willing to pay for it. We have a very bad system in this country of building fishermen's houses: we have only got nineteen or thirty-eight years' leases, and we may spend £300 or £400 before our lease is out.

35,525. Mr Maccallum.—Are there any perpetual feus granted for building fishermen's houses here?—Leases only.

35,526. And what happens on the expiry of the lease?—They take the house and you can go.

35,527. You think if they were able to get perpetual leases they would build better houses and would be better off?—That is what I mean.

35,528. What is the average duration of the lease?—Nineteen years was the general rule for houses in Tarbert: and when your nineteen years were out and you have spent £400 you have to pay to the landlord at the rate of £75 an acre for a new feu. They pay 2s. 4d. a foot for frontage.

35,529. And besides the fishermen being benefited by getting land for themselves individually, do you think the town of Tarbert would be benefited in various ways by the land around being cultivated?—Certainly.

35,530. They could get milk more easily, for instance?—Certainly.

35,531. And with regard to the holdings you mentioned on Ashens, you say that these were in your early recollection held as separate holdings. What has become of the houses that were on them?—They are down, but the ruins can be pointed out yet. Another grievance is that the hill pasture was taken from the small crofters below. That was before my recollection. A gentleman called Macpherson got the first of it, but the ruins to this very day will tell what they have suffered.

Tarbert, Lochfyne.

John Macgugan.

35,532. In your recollection these holdings were diminished by the withdrawal of the hill pasture?—Yes.

35,533. What is the name of the farm to which the pasture was added?—Ashens: and those that I mentioned down there they call the outside hill the Forest.

35,534. In your recollection there was no doubt a good deal more cultivation. Were there meal mills working in those days when you yourself recollect?—To give a proof of my word, I may say that there are two meal mills can be seen from Tarbert to here, one for Kintarbert's estate and another for Stonefield estate: and there was a third down at Kilberry. I was down about a twelvemonth ago, and have seen the stones of the meal mill taken to build a public house.

35,535. There used to be a mill for every estate in those days?—Yes.

35,536. And there were two, I think you said, on the Stonefield estate?—Yes, one at Whitehouse and one at Lochan. Kintarbert had a mill for his own estate and Kilberry had one also.

35,537. And is there any meal made there now?—I don't believe there is a bushel for the whole district.

35,538. When the people were removed from their holdings, did they get any compensation for the houses that they left?—Not a farthing.

35,539. And is it your opinion that they generally left against their will?—Certainly they did. I remember the women weeping at the thought of leaving the place they were brought up in.

35,540. And, I suppose, you have no doubt that there is a very general desire to get back to these holdings again?—I cannot say much regarding that, for that is fifty or fifty-four years ago, and the young people are not now up to the cultivation of land the same as they were then.

35,541. But that, I suppose, applies only to the village of Tarbert?—Yes.

35,542. Would not people who have been brought up in the country have the requisite knowledge of farming?—No doubt they would be glad to get the chance.

[Adjourned.]

THIRTY-NINTH SITTING.

LISMORE, ARGYLLSHIRE, May 2, 1894.

Lismore, Argyllshire.

Present:—

Angus Sutherland, Esq., M.P. (acting as Chairman.)
George Gordon, Esq.
Henry Munro, Esq.
William Mackenzie, Esq., Secretary.

John Maccoll, Killean [Cill-Iain], (61). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

John Macc

35,543. Mr Sutherland.—You have kindly offered to assist us in our inquiry here. Are you a crofter?—No.

35,544. What is your occupation?—I am a post-runner.

35,545. Do you occupy any land?—No.

35,546. Where is Killean?—A little to the north of this, along the coast. It is on the Duke of Argyll's estate.

35,547. Are there any persons in Killean in the same position as you, without land?—I cannot tell the exact number, but there is a considerable number.

35,548. Are there over twenty?—Not without land.

35,549. More than ten?—There are about eight.

35,550. Eight families?—Some crofts have two families, where the son resides on the croft: but there are also some families without any land.

35,551. Are there eight persons who, in your opinion, would like to get land?—There are eight who desire to get land.

35,552. Then do you think there is land in their neighbourhood to give them?—Plenty of it.

35,553. Would you kindly indicate to us where the land is to be found?—The Duke of Argyll's estate is almost all open for such occupation.

35,554. How is that land occupied at present?—It is under sheep and cattle.

35,555. Could you mention the names of the farms?—Fiart, Kilcheran, Craignich, Ballygrundle, and some pieces of Killean itself. There are crofts in Killean itself from which crofters were removed, and these are now occupied by one Ewan Buchanan.

35,556. What is the name of his holding?—He stays in Killean [Cill-Iain].

35,557. Is there a large farm there?—There is a considerable number where crofts were consolidated.

35,558. Are these all the farms you can tell us of on the Duke of Argyll's property?—Yes.

35,559. Are you acquainted with the lands on the other properties in the island of Lismore?—I am acquainted from point to point, from the north to the south.

35,560. Could you indicate to us the farms elsewhere, on which there is land that, in your opinion, could be profitably occupied by crofters or other small tenants?—On the Loch Nell estate there is Auchanduin.

35,561. How is Auchanduin occupied at the present time?—It is under cattle and sheep.

35,562. Is there any cultivation on that farm?—Not on the piece that is run out like this; there is a small bit on the near end of the farm cultivated.

35,563. What other estate can you mention besides the Duke of Argyll's and Loch Nell?—Mr Fell's estate of Lismore.

35,564. Are there any farms on that estate to which you would call attention?—Yes.

35,565. What are they?—The farm of Frackersaig, in the occupancy of Mr Macintyre.

35,566. Any others?—There is a great extent on Mr Fell's estate.

35,567. But what are the names of the farms besides Frackersaig?—Clochlea, Tirfuir, Balnagown, and Baile-a'-Gheamhraidh; also Achaghuaran and Baligarve.

35,568. To what use are these farms put at present?—Out under cattle and sheep, unless very little.

35,569. Could you tell us any of these farms on which there is no cultivation at all?—There is cultivation in little patches.

35,570. On the whole of them?—Not on the whole of them.

35,571. Tell us one or more upon which there is no cultivation at all?—Tirfuir and Baligarve.

35,572. And with regard to the others, you say there is but very little cultivation?—Very little.

35,573. Passing from that estate now, can you tell us any farms upon any other estates that are suitable?—Next the estate of Baleveolan.

35,574. What farms are there?—Mr Macintyre, the tenant of Frackersaig, occupies a part of Baleveolan.

35,575. It will doubtless be contiguous to Frackersaig farm if it is held along with it?—There is another township between Baleveolan and Frackersaig.

35,576. What is the next farm you can tell us about?—On the whole estate of Baleveolan, on the other side of the island, there is a great extent that is not cultivated at all.

35,577. But it will be held, I presume, for some purpose at present?—It is under sheep and cattle.

35,578. Then can you tell us the names of the sheep and cattle farms, so that we can see them?—Ballimackillickan on the estate of Baleveolan; Portcharn belonging to Councillor Maccoll; they say it belongs to him, but I am not sure.

35,579–80. Any other farm?—That is all on Baleveolan.

35,581. Well, on any other estate?—These are all the estates in the island.

35,582. And have you told us all the farms that, in your opinion, we ought to go and see, for the purposes of this inquiry?—Yes.

35,583. Now with regard to the land on these farms, are you of opinion that the people would take small holdings on these if they got an opportunity?—Yes, they are anxious to get them if they can. There is another bit on the Baleveolan estate which I did not mention, called Creaganbreac; and there is also Port-na-mod, on the same estate.

35,584. Are there many people without land on any part of the island except Killean?—In every corner of the island.

35,585. Could you tell us some places where the landless population is?—There are landless people on every one of these estates, who would be glad to get land if they could.

35,586. Were the large holdings in Lismore made out of smaller holdings at a previous time?—Yes, the small holdings were put together and the large holdings formed.

35,587. So the usual process of consolidation went on in Lismore as in other places?—Yes, that is the way of it.

35,588. Have you something to read to us?—I may say, that from the Loch Nell estate there were four families removed, and the holdings consolidated into one; from the Baleveolan estate there were eight removed and their holdings consolidated. On the Duke of Argyll's estate in Lismore there were thirty-eight families removed in my own recollection and their holdings consolidated; on Mr Fell's estate twenty-three, and on the County Councillor's estate of Port-Charn five.

35,589. Did these things take place within your own memory?—All that was in my own recollection.

35,590. And generally speaking (I do not wish you to go into particular cases), what became of these people?—Some of them were sent to America and some to the large towns. A large number of these would be glad to return if they got the land.

35,591. Are the people who are the descendants of these people anxious to get back to the land?—Yes, they speak to me every day about getting it.

35,592. Now, as to the ability of these people, would any of them be able to begin in small holdings if these large holdings were broken up?—Yes, plenty of them.

35,593. You understand that they would have to build new houses in most cases?—Yes, I understand that.

35,594. And with a full knowledge of that, you think a number of them would be in a position to take small holdings?—Yes, it is not difficult to build houses in Lismore; there is plenty of stone and lime.

35,595. Do you think it would be easier or more difficult to build houses now than it was when these people were first put off the land?—It would be more difficult at present, because of the different class of house: at that time they built only the old black houses.

35,596. Did the people who were put off the land build houses when they were removed from the land?—The proprietor was erecting houses for those who remained on the island.

35,597. Was it the proprietor who built all the houses, or the people who are in the villages now?—It is the landlord who is erecting the houses in the villages now.

35,598. You think that, notwithstanding all that, if the people got the opportunity of getting small holdings, they would in a great number of cases build the houses for themselves?—Some of them.

35,599. Would that be the greater or the smaller number, do you think?—I cannot go into that.

35,600. But you think there would be some at any rate who could build houses themselves without assistance?—That is sure enough.

35,601. I think you mentioned that a certain farmer had two farms, or one farm and part of another,—is it Frackersaig?—Yes.

35,602. Are there houses on both these holdings?—Yes.

35,603. Does the farmer occupy both?—No, he resides in Frackersaig.

35,604. What is the other house used for?—He has a cottar in it.

35,605. Mr Gordon.—What kind of farming is carried on here; is it dairy farming or sheep and cattle?—It is sheep and grazing.

35,606. They do not carry on dairy farming here, do they?—No.

35,607. Is there daily communication from this island to Oban?—Yes, a daily steamer, except on Sunday.

35,608. Would not dairy produce then be a more profitable business than grazing cattle and sheep?—It would, no doubt, be more profitable, and it would pay the small tenants better than it pays the big tenants.

35,609. Do you happen to know the population of this island?—I am not quite sure; I think it is now about 600 or 700, but in my young days I recollect my father telling me there were 1700 on the island.

35,610. What is the general occupation of the people on the island other than those who are in the occupation of land?—They are going from place to place, seeking work wherever they can get it.

35,611. They do not follow the fishing as a trade, do they?—Not much.

35,612. Fishing is not an ordinary occupation of the people?—No.

35,613. Have you much snow here in winter?—Some years we have snow, but it does not lie long.

35,614. Is the climate such that the ordinary highland cattle can be wintered outside, or are they housed?—Some of them are out in parks all winter: others are housed.

35,615. What size of a holding, do you think, would be required to keep a family here?—To maintain a family would require four to six milk cows and their followers.

35,616. There is not a great deal of land that could be cultivated in the island, is there? The larger proportion of the island, although green, is mostly pasture, is it not?—It is all cultivable. There are no rocks; it is arable land, every bit of it.

35,617. You think there would be no difficulty in getting people to occupy the land if it was offered to them in small holdings?—No, there would be no difficulty. There are in this island itself, and also in the large towns, people who are anxious to get back to the old holdings. They were driven away and are anxious to get back.

35,618. Is there any lime burnt in the island?—Yes.

35,619. At how many places?—In two places at present.

35,620. How many men are occupied at the lime works?—I don't know: at present the lime burners are complaining that they have no labourers; the people are away in other quarters.

35,621. They have difficulty in getting labourers?—Yes, the people are driven away, and are working elsewhere.

35,622. Then if the people were replaced to some extent upon the land, those who had spare time could work at the lime works?—Yes, and there would be a demand for lime itself, if it was worked and houses were being built.

35,623. No doubt, if it could be made cheap enough. There is no other occupation of a public nature for the people, is there?—No, nothing else.

35,624. Mr Munro.—I think you told us you are a post-runner?—Yes.

35,625. Have you any other occupation?—No.

35,626. What experience have you had yourself in the working of land?—I was a farmer myself in the place, but I was put away through treachery.

35,627. For how long were you a farmer?—I had land myself for twenty years in my own name, and my father had land before that, also my uncles and other relatives.

35,628. Why did they remove you from the farm?—The ground officer took my holding from the factor without my knowledge; I was not a penny in arrear.

35,629. With reference to the large sheep farms, you stated that in many of them there were only small bits of the land cultivated?—Yes, that is so.

35,630. Why is it that the sheep farmers cultivate only small bits of land?—They just cultivate little bits for the wintering of their cattle.

35,631. They cultivate just what suits themselves, I suppose, and what suits their farming interests?—That is so.

35,632. Now, supposing that that land were broken up and given to crofters, would they cultivate it to greater advantage than the sheep farmers at present do?—The crofters would work every bit of it.

35,633. If a sheep farm were broken up, are you satisfied that there is a sufficient number of people on the island at present who would take these farms split up into suitable holdings,—good and bad land taken together?—Yes, between those in the island and those sent from home who are anxious to return to the land.

35,634. I think you mentioned that you knew of families in America who would return to Lismore and take up land there if they got facilities for doing so; is that so?—Not six weeks ago I was told by a man who left the island for America that he would return again if the farms were broken up.

35,635. That man was not speaking for any more than himself, was he?—It was his own opinion he gave me.

35,636. Do you know, as a matter of fact, within your own knowledge, that there is a great anxiety on the part of the people of this island to obtain land here?—Yes, and more than that, I am anxious to get land myself.

35,637. Mr Sutherland.—Has land gone out of cultivation to any great extent in the island of Lismore within your memory?—All the land that I referred to in the paper has been allowed to go out of cultivation in my own recollection.

35,638. But I understand that even when the small holders were there, there was part of their holdings not cultivated?—Very little of it was uncultivated under the small tenants, except a piece away to the south here.

35,639. Then all the marks of old cultivation that we see here indicate the cultivation of the small tenants?—Yes, the small tenants.

John Buchanan, Lismore (46).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

35,640. Mr Sutherland.—What is your occupation?—I am a mason; I live in Killean at present.

35,641. Have you heard what Mr Maccoll has said?—Yes.

35,642. Do you agree with that evidence?—Yes, I agree with every word.

35,643. And is there anything in addition that you would like to say to us?—No, except concerning myself.

35,644. Is it with regard to land?—It is about land, and about the house at which I live, that I wish to speak.

35,645. Do you desire to get an allotment or piece of land?—Yes.

35,646. Do you know where the land is?—Yes.

35,647. Who has it now?—I live in a croft house, and the croft itself is in Killean, in the tenancy of Hugh Buchanan.

35,648. Is he a crofter?—He is a tenant.

35,649. What farm is he tenant of?—Killean. [The Secretary.—The rent in the Valuation Roll is £62, 0s. 6d.]

35,650. Would you take a small holding such as Mr Maccoll has spoken of if you got the opportunity?—Yes; and because I am at present without land I am obliged to be away at Crianlarich, working at the station there. Lismore, Argyllshire. John Buchanan.

35,651. Would you be in a position to take a small holding if you got it?—Yes, I could erect houses myself, as I am a mason. Over and above that, there is another township which I occupy; it is at Balnagown, on Mr Fell's estate. I had a house on Mr Fell's estate, but I could not get the grazing of a cow on that estate, and I was, therefore, obliged to shift to the Duke's estate in order to get the grazing of a cow for milk for my children. But if, at any time, I could get land on Mr Fell's estate, I am desirous of returning to the place where I was born and brought up.

35,652. So your evidence amounts to the fact that you have no land and are very anxious to get some?—Yes.

35,653. Mr Munro.—Have families in this island any difficulty in procuring milk for their children?—It is so difficult that at one time they cannot get a drop at all.

35,654. Do other families complain of that difficulty as well as you?—Yes.

35,655. There is a difficulty in obtaining milk in Lismore?—Yes, because, as you heard from Mr Maccoll, the people are not cultivating the soil, and there is, therefore, no milk.

35,656. Does the health of the children suffer in consequence of the want of milk?—Yes, because they are obliged to use condensed milk.

35,657. They actually have to import condensed milk into the island of Lismore?—Yes. If they do not use that condensed milk they have to use tea, but tea is bad for them and often brings them trouble. I was anxious to get the park that was in Mr Fell's estate near the house I occupied there, but as I was not willing to give a high rent for it I could not get the park. The farmer who occupies that park heard that I was applying for it. I came down on Saturday from Crianlarich, and when I went to the place I found that the wall of the garden about the house for which I pay rent was broken down and cattle and sheep allowed in, and the trees and fruit bushes that I had there destroyed.

35,658. Mr Sutherland.—What do you intend to do with regard to that?—I spoke to the farmer, telling him he had acted very badly, and the farmer said to me that he would put it down altogether.

35,659. Mr Munro.—What farmer broke down your garden wall?—One Donald Maccoll in Balnagown.

35,660. Is he still in the island?—He is the tenant farmer in the place where the house I refer to is situated.

35,661. Mr Sutherland.—I think you said you applied to get land and you have not got any because the landlord asked too high a rent for it?—Yes.

35,662. But if you had got the land at what you considered a reasonable rent, would you have been glad to take it?—Yes.

35,663. Mr J. F. Maclaren, Solicitor, Oban, Agent for Rev. Mr Fell of Lismore.—What rent do you pay for this house to Mr Fell?—Five shillings for the house and garden.

35,664. You wanted a grazing for a cow and a park?—I was wanting a park that is near my house. The house is in the park.

35,665. You wrote to Mr Fell through me for a grazing?—I spoke to Mr Maclaren about the grazing of a cow, but I cannot say whether he spoke to Mr Fell.

35,666. You also wrote to me, did not you?—I don't think I did: I wrote a letter to Mr Fell.

35,667. And then I wrote to you, did not I?—No.

35,668. Did I not write to you that the places all around were let to small tenants and others?—No, I never got a word.

35,669. Did I not write to you?—No, not a word.

35,670. And tell you that it was all let round about, and that if you could arrange with any of the tenants we would be very glad if you could get a cow's grass, but that we were all let? [Mr Sutherland.—Did you ever hear of that arrangement or proposal?]—No, but Mr Maclaren told me in Oban that I would not get the farm.

35,671. Mr Maclaren.—The places are all let to small tenants round about, but we told Mr Buchanan that if he could arrange for a cow's grazing we would be very pleased, but we could not interfere with those who have so little there.

35,672. Mr Sutherland.—Is it the case that all the land that was available for giving you the holding was already in the possession of small holders?—The man who has this park has two farms.

35,673. Who is the man you refer to?—Donald Maccoll.

35,674. Mr Maclaren.—It is not a very large farm that Mr Maccoll has, is it?—No, but at the same time he has two good crofts. My uncle had one of these, and he brought up a family on it and was very well off; Mr Black had the other croft and he also brought up a family there.

35,675. Did I not tell you to arrange with Maccoll for a grazing?—I am not aware of that.

35,676. Is it not the case that you are a rather troublesome neighbour? Is not that the main reason why you do not get the grazing from him?

35,677. Mr Sutherland.—Is it the neighbours that give you a grazing?—My father-in-law gives me the grazing in the meantime; but I asked Mr Maccoll, the tenant, one day,—I was in the garden and he came in. I asked him would he be so kind as to give me the grazing for a cow; and he said no.

35,678. The point is this; in your opinion, was the grazing you wanted to be taken from a small holder?—Yes, it was to be taken from a man that has two crofts.

DONALD MACCOLL, farmer's son, Balnagown (22)—examined. Donald Maccoll.

35,679. Mr Sutherland.—What is your occupation?—I work in the farm of the Mr Maccoll referred to: I am his son.

35,680. Are you a farm labourer?—Yes.

35,681. What have you got to say?—I have to explain that Mr Buchanan left the dyke in a very disorderly way. He put it up, I think, about eight years ago,—unawares to us he took in a part of our ground, at least I did not know of it, and he enclosed it round about one day with a Galloway dyke. He never repaired that dyke or kept it in proper order. He left the place and went away to work at Crianlarich. The dyke had been very weak, and the cattle had gone in, though we tried to keep them out. We did keep them out as well as possible, and looked after the place, and I even put up some of the stones myself and rebuilt the dyke; but I think it is not our duty to look after the dyke and put it in order, and, therefore, we told Mr Buchanan here the other day to build the dyke, and to keep it in order.

35,682. That is the statement you wanted to make in explanation?—Yes.

35,683. Mr Gordon.—He is not living in the house, is he?—No.

35,684. There is nobody living in the house?—No.

35,685. The house and garden are left to look after themselves?—Yes.

35,686. Mr Sutherland.—You don't deny the damage that was done?—Oh, the cattle went in; but it was altogether unawares to us, and because the dyke was not properly built. [Mr Buchanan.—You will have to excuse me for saying two or three words more. I keep that garden in order, and I may say that every year I am getting more than 30s. worth of fruit from it; but it will be useless this year, for the sake of his cattle and sheep.]

[ADJOURNED.]

Bunessan, Mull.

FORTIETH SITTING.

BUNESSAN, MULL, May 10, 1894.

Present:—

JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq. (acting as Chairman.)
GEORGE GORDON, Esq.
HENRY MUNRO, Esq.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

Archibald Macfadyen.

ARCHIBALD MACFADYEN, cottar, Lochbuy (36)—examined.

35,687. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a crofter?—No.

35,688. A cottar?—Yes.

35,689. You have a house at Lochbuy?—No, I have no house.

35,690. Do you reside at Lochbuy?—Yes, along with my brother-in-law.

35,691. And is he a crofter?—No, he is a joiner.

35,692. What evidence do you wish to bring before this Commission?—Well, I would like to have land; a house and 50 acres of low ground as the Act gave.

35,693. Your evidence is that you have come here to state that you desire land?—Yes.

35,694. To what extent, provided you can get it?—To the extent of 50 acres.

35,695. Do you mean by that 50 acres of arable?—Yes.

35,696. And grazing besides?—No, just as far as the Act could give.

35,697. But we are not under any Act: this is simply a Commission of inquiry, to find out what the desire of the people is in the way of land, and to ascertain what land there is available for crofts or other small holdings.—Well, 50 acres of arable land, and no grazing.*

35,698. Can you point out where such an extent of arable land is to be had in your neighbourhood?—In the Laggan district.

35,699. Do you consider that there is enough arable land there to meet your wishes?—Yes, over and above.

35,700. Then is your desire for arable land only?—Yes, but if there could be pasture got or hill land, certainly I would take that along with it, or a share.

35,701. And how would you propose to stock such a holding: have you the means?—No, but the stocking I think would not trouble me. I have no great means, but the stocking would not trouble me, as stock is not very dear.

35,702. You think you could stock such a holding?—Yes.

35,703. Could you build a house, and do the necessary fencing?—I think the Royal Commission should look after the house building and the fencing.

35,704. That is rather beyond our powers at the present time, or probably at any time. We are merely a Commission of inquiry, and we wish to see what would be the possibilities of a tenant in the way of providing means for such a holding as you have described. You mean that you would not be able to do that yourself out of your own means?—No.

35,705. You would require assistance to build and fence?—Assistance to build and fence.

35,706. And possibly to stock?—No; I would stock it myself.

35,707. Do you represent the views of anybody else on Lochbuy, or do you come as an individual witness?—Just an individual witness.

35,708. Mr Gordon.—How many people could be accommodated to the extent of 50 acres each on the farm of Laggan?—A family could live on it: just a family.

35,709. One family?—One family.

* Macfadyen has since the sitting explained that he meant to say 10 acres.

35,710. Are there more people in your district wanting land?—Yes.

35,711. Where would you propose to put them?—There is plenty of land in Laggan for all who are wanting it just now.

35,712. To how many acres does the farm of Laggan extend?—I am not sure, but I know there is plenty land for them.

35,713. Would there be 100 acres arable on it?—Yes, I should think so, and more. I cannot say how much there is.

35,714. I would not think there are 100 acres arable in the farm of Laggan. How many people would apply for land from your district?—Six altogether.

35,715. Suppose you and another were placed on the farm of Laggan, where would you put the other four? Is Laggan the only place you know in that country?—No; Laggan is the only place that we wanted; and as we applied at the Royal Commission at first, it was 10 acres each.

35,716. To the Crofters Commission?—No, to the Royal Commission. It was 10 acres arable we wanted each and 40 of grazing ground.

35,717. You would have no difficulty in getting the grazing ground, but there is not a large extent of arable upon the whole farm. There is no other land in that district that you know of as available?—No, there is no other land without a tenant, or without any cultivation on it, except the farm of Laggan.

35,718. Are there any holdings on the farm of Laggan at present?—There are two holdings,—the shepherd's house, and a small shooting lodge.

35,719. Is there a steading on it?—Yes, there is a steading on it.

35,720. But there is no part of the farm cultivated, is there?—No.

35,721. Mr Munro.—How are you employed at present?—Fishing.

35,722. Entirely fishing?—Entirely fishing just now.

35,723. Do you cultivate any land at all?—Not at present.

35,724. Have you ever cultivated any land?—I have; ten or twelve years ago I had a croft in the same place.

35,725. You cultivated a small croft?—Yes, about 6 acres.

35,726. You stated in answer to the Chairman that you wanted 50 acres of arable land?—Yes.

35,727. Then you told us that on the farm of Laggan there were about 100 acres of arable?—Yes.

35,728. And for these 100 acres there were six people applying. Now, how could you take 50 acres yourself and find suitable holdings for the other five?—Oh, not very well.

35,729. Don't you see that you would have half the arable portion of the farm for your own use, and leave only 50 acres remaining to be divided amongst the other five?—Yes.

35,730. Then you stated, a little late, I think, that the intention of the other applicants, if not of yourself, was to get 10 acres of arable besides grazing?—Yes, that was the first statement.

35,731. You said you could stock a holding if you got one, but you could not build houses?—Yes.

35,732. And I understood you to say that you expected the Royal Commission was to provide the holdings?—Yes.

35,733. Are you not aware that the Royal Commission has no such powers remitted to it? (No answer.)

35,734. Now supposing that you could not get the houses built for you by any outside assistance, your position then is that you could not take a holding at all: is that not so?—Oh, no. I could build it in a way that would suit me, but maybe that would not do for the Royal Commission, or for the laird, or whoever takes to do with it afterwards.

35,735. Keep the Royal Commission out of it altogether. You could build houses that would suit yourself on a holding?—Yes.

35,736. Without any outside assistance?—Without any outside assistance.

35,737. Now, do you think you could carry on such a farm to profit?—Oh, yes, I think I would.

35,738. Is that the general view of the other applicants as well as your own?—Yes, just the same.

ROBERT MACINNES, crofter's son, Lochbuy (34). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

35,739. Mr Forsyth.—Do you reside on Lochbuy?—Yes.

35,740. Are you a crofter?—No.

35,741. Have you a house on Lochbuy?—My father has.

35,742. Is he on one of the farms?—No, he is a crofter.

35,743. Have you heard the evidence given just now by Mr Macfadyen, Lochbuy?—Yes.

35,744. Do you agree with that evidence?—Yes.

35,745. What are your own ideas as to the holding which, I presume, you would like to have? What size would it be?—Laggan is the only place I would like.

35,746. And what size of holding there?—I would take between both, 100 acres. [The Interpreter.—I fancy he means both arable and pasture.]

35,747. Do you think there is land there for all the people in Lochbuy who want land?—Yes, I think so.

35,748. Would you have the means to stock such a holding?—I would need to get money to stock the land.

35,749. You would require Government help, then?—No, not for stocking.

35,750. But for building and fencing?—If it could be got: if not, I would have to do without it.

35,751. Mr Munro.—You stated that you wanted 100 acres arable and pasture?—Yes.

35,752. Could you tell us how many acres arable and how many pasture?—Forty acres arable and 60 acres pasture.

35,753. Don't you see there would be some difficulty in dividing the farm of Laggan among six people? If you wanted 40 acres and another man wanted 50, that would leave only 10 for the remaining four?—I would agree to divide the arable land among us.

35,754. That would give 10 acres arable to each, besides the hill pasture. You have had no practical experience yourself as a crofter or a farmer, I think you said?—I was working the croft with my father.

35,755. And that is the only experience you have had?—I was working with farmers for a good time.

35,756. Have you made any calculation as to how much it would cost to stock a croft of 10 acres arable and say 70 acres of pasture?—No.

35,757. Then, how do you know that you could stock such a farm without outside assistance?—I would try to stock it the best way I could. I could never stock it unless I got the land.

35,758. No, that is obvious to anybody. But if you have made no calculation as to the amount of money it would take to stock such a piece of land, do you not see that there is some difficulty even for yourself in determining whether you can stock it or no?—Unless I attempt, I can never succeed.

DUNCAN LIVINGSTON, Dalnaha, Lochbuy (35). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

35,759. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a holding at Dalnaha?—No.

35,760. Are you a cottar?—No, I reside with my brother.

35,761. Has your brother a croft?—Yes.

35,762. Have you come here to express your desire to get some land?—Yes.

35,763. Have you any place in your mind where you think you could get a holding?—Yes, on Laggan.

35,764. Do you think that is the only suitable place near about for a holding?—Yes.

35,765. You have heard what the other delegates from Lochbuy have said as to the size of holdings they would like?—Yes.

35,766. You have also heard that the amount of arable land in Laggan is not very large?—Yes.

35,767. Do you wish to get a holding of the same size as they require, say 40 or 50 acres arable?—Twelve acres arable would suit my purpose.

35,768. That points more to a division of the arable of Laggan among five or six, does it not?—Yes, that would suit.

35,769. Could you stock a holding such as you describe?—Yes.

35,770. Could you build a house upon it?—If I could get some assistance.

35,771. You would require assistance from some outside source, would you?—I could build without assistance.

35,772. Mr Gordon.—Is your brother the farmer on Dalnaha?—Yes.

35,773. Who occupies the next farm, Achdaloist?—Macphail.

35,774. Does he reside on the farm?—Yes, there are other crofters residing beside him.

35,775. On the farm of Achdaloist?—Dalnaha.

35,776. Yes, but I am talking of the next farm?—Drimnatain on the one hand and Achdaloist on the other, are under one.

35,777. One tenant has both these places, has he?—Yes.

35,778. Which does he live upon?—Drimnatain.

35,779. Then there is no tenant on Achdaloist?—No, it is under sheep.

35,780. Is there any arable land suitable for cultivation in Achdaloist?—It is not very good, but some of it might be cultivated.

35,781. Not so good as Laggan?—Not so good as Laggan.

35,782. What occupation do you follow yourself?—I follow the fishing industry.

35,783. Do you go to the white fishing?—To the salmon fishing on Lochbuy estate.

35,784. You are a salmon fisher?—Yes.

35,785. How do you occupy yourself when the salmon fishing is not being carried on?—I prosecute the herring and cod fishing.

35,786. Do you go to the line fishing for white fish?—Yes.

35,787. Have the crofters in your neighbourhood boats big enough for the open sea?—On Lochbuy and the coast about Lochbuy.

35,788. You do not go far out?—No, just at the entrance to the loch.

35,789. On the farm of Achdaloist there are three or four crofters?—I saw four crofters on the farm of Achdaloist, but there are none now.

35,790. Are there not some crofts on the seaside?—Yes, small bits.

35,791. What do these men do?—There is no person resident; it belongs entirely to a tenant.

35,792. But are there no people living in these cottages near the school?—Yes, small crofters who have garden ground.

35,793. What do these small crofters do for their living?—Anything they can get to do.

35,794. Are they fishermen?—A number of them are on the poor roll.

35,795. That is a bad occupation. Are not these crofts a part of the old farm of Achdaloist?—No.

35,796. What farm are they a part of?—They belonged originally to Crogan, but they have been under the present tenant as long as I remember.

35,797. Could you prosecute the fishing from holdings on the farm of Laggan? Is there any good harbour on that side?—I have a distinct recollection of seeing twenty boats prosecuting the fishing at Laggan. There is a very good harbour, but we are not allowed to reside there now, because it is a deer forest.

35,798. Do you think that if land were available there and could be got, a colony of fishermen could be induced to settle down in the neighbourhood of the former harbour?—Yes.

Bunessan, Mull.

Duncan Livingston.

35,799. There is good fishing out there?—It is always good there.

35,800. And a safe harbour?—Not very safe in stormy weather; good enough for small boats.

John Livingston.

JOHN LIVINGSTON, Dalnaha, Lochbuy (31).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

35,801. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a crofter?—No.

35,802. Are you a relation of the former witness, Duncan Livingston?—Yes.

35,803. What relation?—I am his brother.

35,804. With whom do you live?—I live with my brother.

35,805. You have heard the evidence given us by your brother?—Yes.

35,806. Do you agree with it?—Yes.

35,807. Is there anything you would like to add to it?—No.

35,808. Then we may take you as concurring in the evidence given by Duncan Livingston?—Yes.

Allan Livingston.

ALLAN LIVINGSTON, fisherman, Dalnaha (25)—examined.

35,809. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a brother of the two former witnesses?—No.

35,810. Are you a crofter?—No.

35,811. Have you a house of your own?—I reside with my father.

35,812. Has your father a croft?—Yes.

35,813. Where?—At Dalnaha.

35,814. Have you come before us to express your desire for land?—Yes.

35,815. Do you know of suitable land in the neighbourhood?—The most suitable for us is Laggan.

35,816. You have heard the evidence that has been given about Laggan?—Yes.

35,817. Do you agree with that evidence?—Yes.

35,818. Is there anything else that you would wish to say about it?—No.

35,819. Would you be contented with a small holding at Laggan, with the chance of being able to fish from there?—Yes.

35,820. Are you a fisherman?—Yes.

35,821. Do you think you could keep a fishing boat easily and safely at Laggan?—Yes.

35,822. A small fishing boat, I suppose?—Yes.

35,823. There is no accommodation there for large boats, is there?—No.

35,824. They must be skiffs that can be easily hauled up?—Yes.

35,825. And you consider that you could make a living there if you had a small croft and some grazing, with the aid of your fishing boat?—Yes.

35,826. Mr Munro.—Is there generally a strong desire on the part of the people of Dalnaha to get more land?—Yes, those who have no land.

35,827. How many people do you know at present residing at Dalnaha who want to get land?—There are three at home, and there is a brother away who would be quite willing to return in the event of his succeeding in getting land.

35,828. That is referring to your own family?—Yes.

35,829. But do you know of any outside your own family who want land?—I know some at Crogan.

35,830. How many do you know there?—Two.

35,831. And is Laggan the place that they all, you think, seem to have set their heart upon getting in preference to any other subject?—Yes.

35,832. Do you know of no other suitable land besides Laggan?—Not on the estate so suitable for crofters as Laggan; but if we will not get land at Laggan, we will take it on another estate.

35,833. Don't you see the difficulty of dividing Laggan amongst every applicant when they are so numerous?—It could be divided, if they made the arable land into smaller divisions.

35,834. How small now would you say the arable land should be divided; how many acres to each?—Twelve acres arable for each. I will take 12 acres arable land and 100 acres of hill pasture.

Bunessan, Mull.

Allan Livingston.

Archibald Macfayden, Gribun, Mull (59).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

Archibald Macfayden.

35,835. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a croft at Gribun?—No.

35,836. Have you a house there?—I have.

35,837. Have you any land at all—No.

35,838. How do you make your living?—I take my food out of the sea.

35,839. You are a fisherman?—Yes.

35,840. Do you represent the people of Gribun?—No.

35,841. You come here as an individual witness?—Yes.

35,842. Have you come before this Commission to express a desire as to land?—Yes.

35,843. Were you not appointed at a meeting of the Gribun people?—Yes, but I thought they were coming too.

35,844. Then you are not only on your own account but you were appointed by a meeting of the Gribun people to represent them?—I will do that as well as I can, but they ought to come themselves.

35,845. I have a letter here signed by John Bell, who could not attend here to-day, in which he states that you were appointed at a conference of the people?—I spoke to Bell yesterday. He told me he had spoken to one of the Commissioners yesterday, and that was quite sufficient for him.

35,846. Then I think we may take you as representing the people of Gribun?—I am not sure; I do not know what views they hold. I only know my own views.

35,847. Have you come here to express your desire for land?—Yes.

35,848. What sort of holding would you desire to have?—I would like a piece beside me.

35,849. Is there any land in your neighbourhood available for small holdings?—There is.

35,850. What land could you point out to us?—There is plenty of land, but there are people on it. But there are some on the roadside farther up.

35,851. Do you mean on Balmeanach?—There are people on Balmeanach, and there is the tenant on the farm on which I live.

35,852. Is it land then on the farm of Balmeanach that you are referring to?—If the land was divided, I would prefer where I am.

35,853. How is that land held just now?—It is let to Joseph Robson.

35,854. What is the farm?—Balnahard.

35,855. What size of holding would you require if you could get one?—I would take the same size as the present crofters have.

35,856. But you have not got a croft at all, have you?—No, not the length of my foot.

35,857. And you want a croft the same size as the other ones that are there already?—I would take that.

35,858. And would you want that off Balnahard if you could get it?—Yes, just so, and my share of the hill pasture as well.

35,859. And that is because it is close to your house?—The house and the land are better than the land alone.

35,860. Would you go to another place if you could get a good holding?—Yes, wherever I could save myself and the boat.

35,861. You would wish to continue the fishing?—Yes.

35,862. Do you know what the other people at Gribun wish?—I have no idea: I can say nothing as to them.

35,863. You don't even know whether they want any more land if they could get it?—I heard them say so, but I am not going to say anything about it.

35,864. In fact, you decline to give any evidence except as to yourself?—They have feet of their own to walk here as well as I have. I got a letter at twelve o'clock yesterday, and I walked here, and am tired enough.

35,865. Mr Munro.—You stated, in answer to a question from the Chairman, that you would like the same sort of croft as are at present possessed by other crofters?—Yes.

35,866. Are you not aware that it is a subject of general complaint amongst the existing crofters, the smallness of their holdings?—They say so.

35,867. You know that a majority of them say that the present size of holding is quite insufficient for the maintenance of themselves and their families?—I believe that; but it would be better for me than to go on as I am.

35,868. Yes, but if you got a croft the same size as existing crofters have, does it not follow that you might subsequently prove discontented with such a small holding?—I don't know: it would be pretty good if I could get hill pasture with them. With a few sheep I would be better off than at present: if we had grazing for the horse on the hill pasture we would be better off.

35,869. I understood you to say that you have never cultivated any land?—Never.

35,870. Then, do you think you have any experience at all to justify you in taking land?—Yes, I know I could do it better than many who have land.

35,871. Could you stock a holding if you got one?—I would do my best.

35,872. Do you know how much money it would take to stock a small holding?—I don't know at present.

35,873. Then you don't know whether you could stock it or not?—I am not very sure.

35,874. Could you build the necessary houses and buildings required for such a holding?—No, I could not do that if I were removed from my present house.

35,875. From whom would you expect help to come to enable you to build the necessary houses?—My family, who support me at present, would build them.

35,876. Would you continue the fishing industry if you got a croft?—Yes, I will prosecute the fishing industry as long as I live.

35,877. And do you think you could do justice to both?—Yes.

35,878. Mr Gordon.—What stock have the present crofters of Gribun?—Two cows, a horse, and two stirks each.

35,879. How is the island of Inchkenneth occupied at present?—It is let to a tenant.

35,880. Does the tenant reside upon it?—No.

35,881. What sort of land is upon the island?—Good land.

35,882. Is it suitable for crofting?—Very good.

35,883. Are there any harbours on the island convenient?—Yes.

35,884. Could that land be utilized by crofters engaged partly in fishing?—Yes.

35,885. Is the harbour accommodation on Inchkenneth as good as the harbour at Gribun?—Yes, and better: we have a bad shore at Gribun.

35,886. Can the crofters at Gribun manage to keep two cows and two stirks and a horse within their own crofts?—Yes, that is what they keep: they pay rent for the horses at this time of year.

35,887. They have to put the horse away from the croft in summer?—Yes.

35,888. Where do they put the horse to graze?—They pay rent to Balmeanach in summer for the grazing of the horses.

35,889. Is there any part of the hill of Balmeanach that could be made available for an extension of grazing for the Gribun crofters?—Certainly.

35,890. Would it be useful in addition to grazing the horse for grazing their stirks or cows?—Yes, very good; the glen is very good.

35,891. You are aware that the farm of Balnahard is but a small place?—It is not so small; it is a farm.

35,892. It is rather bigger than a croft, but it is a very small farm?—I would not call a place that carries 400 sheep a very small farm.

35,893. What sort of land is there upon the farm of Balmeanach adjoining the crofts?—Very good land. Bunessan, Mull.

35,894. Is it as suitable for crofting?—Yes, crofters were there originally. Archibald Macfayden.

35,895. You did not let me finish my question. Is it as suitable for crofting as the portion of Balnahard which you propose to have?—Yes.

35,896. Would it be as convenient for the harbour?—No, if I had a smack or something of that sort.

35,897. There is most shelter round upon the Balnahard portion of the rocks?—Yes, Balmeanach is far away from the harbour.

35,898. Mr Duncan Cameron, ground officer, Bunessan.—What part of Balmeanach have you been speaking about as suitable for an addition to crofts? Is it the part next the crofts?—Yes, besides the crofts.

35,899. I thought you said the glen: what part did you refer to as being suitable for additional grazing?—Above the fence at the roadside.

35,900. In the glen? How far is that from the crofts—I mean above the crofts?—I made reference to the glen for grazing stirks; but there is plenty of grazing ground above the fence, next the crofts.

35,901. Do you mean above the Biolavon gate?—No, I refer to the grazing land from the bridge to Bell's house.

35,902. You said your family would provide buildings for you if you got a holding. Did your family provide your present buildings?—No, they did not build my present house.

35,903. Who did?—The Duke built it.

35,904. Did your family get an opportunity of building a house for you?—They were weak, and I am not sure that they had.

DUGALD MACLEAN, Torrans, Pennygael (73). Dugald Maclean.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

35,905. Mr Forsyth.—Do you live at Torrans?—Yes.

35,906. Have you a house there?—Yes.

35,907. Where is it situated?—By the bridge at the roadside.

35,908. Is that where there are four or five houses?—No, it is the only house.

35,909. Is it close to the march?—At the end of the bridge.

35,910. Have you any ground there?—I got land from the tenant.

35,911. Just potato ground, I suppose?—Yes.

35,912. Do you pay any rent?—Yes.

35,913. How much?—£4, 10s. I also pay £2, 10s. for wintering my cow, or £7 in all.

35,914. Have you a family?—Yes.

35,915. Do you pay any rent to the proprietor of Pennygael for your house?—I pay to the tenant, not to the proprietor.

35,916. Then you are a sub-tenant, as it were?—Yes, I am a sub-tenant.

35,917. Have you been long in your present house?—Eighteen years next Whitsunday.

35,918. And you have always paid rent to the tenant?—No, I was ploughman on the farm till the last two years, when I began paying rent.

35,919–20. Before that, you had your house as a ploughman on the farm?—Yes, the house was part of my wages.

35,921. Have you any son working at home?—Yes, I have a son at home.

35,922. Where does he work?—He is a ploughman on the farm of Killunag.

35,923. That is on the same estate, is it not?—Yes.

35,924. What is your wish with reference to our inquiry? Have you come here to ask for a croft if one could be found?—Yes, I want a bit.

35,925. And where do you think there is land suitable for a croft?—Either at Lower Torrans or Killunag, on either side of the burn.

35,926. The side of Torrans next the march?—Next Mr Clark's property.

35,927. Are you asking for a croft on your own account?—I want a piece for myself and for my son.

35,928. Could you work a croft without the assistance of your son?—Yes.

Bunessan, Mull.

Dugald Maclean.

35,929. What size of holding would you find yourself competent to work without your son?—Three or four acres.*

35,930. It is only a small holding you require?—Yes.

35,931. Do you think you could take a living off it if your son went away?—Yes.

35,932. Off three or four acres?—Yes.

35,933. Without any other help?—I have other members of my family who would help me.

35,934. Then it is more for your family than for yourself that you are desiring land, is it not?—For myself and for my family both.

35,935. Mr Gordon.—On what part of the farm of Torrans could land for your purpose be conveniently got?—There are three Torrans: I would like it between Torrans and Lower Torrans, where my father had a croft.

35,936. Is that next Killunag, or is it on the other side of the farm?—On the lower part of the farm, next the Kilpatrick estate.

35,937. Is any part of that land under cultivation at present?—Yes.

35,938. How far is that land from the farm steading of Torrans?—More than a quarter of a mile.

35,939. From the steading of Torrans?—Half a mile at most.

35,940. Has that land been under cultivation for any length of time?—Yes.

35,941. Is it cultivated regularly?—It is under cultivation at present.

35,942. And has it been cultivated for some years?—Oh, yes, always.

35,943. Because I should like to point out that the remit to our Commission does not cover land under cultivation?—There is a part of it under cultivation, and a part not.

35,944. Part of the land next the estate of Kilpatrick is not cultivated?—That is what I am saying; only a part of it is under crop.

35,945. Is that the only land in that quarter which you think could be got, or would be available for crofts?—Yes, there were crofters there originally.

35,946. You are speaking now only about Robertson's estate, not of the Kilpatrick estate at all?—No.

35,947. How is the Kilpatrick estate occupied?—It is in the hands of the proprietor.

35,948. Is there any cultivation upon it at all?—No, not beside us: they have arable land at Airdhuisnish.

35,949. Is there any land suitable for cultivation upon the farm of Bioch?—Plenty.

35,950. Suitable for crofting?—Yes, it is.

35,951. And there is no part of that land at present under cultivation at all?—No; only one garden.

35,952. Is there any part of the farm of Ormsaig under cultivation?—No.

35,953. Any of Kilpatrick farm?—Not that I am aware of.

35,954. Then the only part of that property that is partially cultivated is the farm of Ardhuisnish?—Not that I am aware of: a shepherd has it.

35,955. And is there old arable land suitable for crofters upon the other three farms?—Yes, on each farm.†

* Maclean has since explained that the land he had in view is from 6 to 7 acres in extent.

† The following letter has been received with reference to the evidence of Dugald Maclean:—

Brolas, Pennygael, Mull, 26*th June* 1894.

Sir,—We, the undersigned cottars on the estate of Pennygael, and others, held a meeting at Pennygael some time before the "Deer Forest Commission" came to Bunessan, in order to appoint a delegate to speak for us at the Commission. Dugald Maclean, Torrans, was appointed delegate, but we now find that he spoke for no person but himself and his son. We now wish to know what should be done. We are as needful of land as Dugald Maclean, and there is plenty of land on the estate of Pennygael and in the neighbourhood.

Allan Livingston (recalled)—examined.

Bunessan, Mull.

Allan Livingston

35,956. Mr Gordon.—I should like to get from you, if you please, what is your opinion about another part of the country regarding which we have had no evidence yet. Do you know the estate of Achnacraig?—Yes.

35,957. Do you know the portion of Achnacraig called Gallachulish?—Yes.

35,957*a*. That land is in the proprietor's hands, I understand?—Yes.

35,958. Is there any old arable land in Gallachulish?—Yes, plenty.

35,959. Is it under cultivation at the present time, or any part of it?—No, only a small bit that the shepherd has.

35,960. Is that land suitable for occupation?—Yes.

35,961. Do you know the farm of Achnacraig proper?—Yes.

35,962. Is it under regular cultivation, or grazings?—There is a portion of it under crop and a portion under grazing.

35,963. Is there much of it cultivated?—Very little since the tenant left it.

35,964. It is mainly under pasture?—Yes.

35,965. Do you know that little place, beside yourself, of Achdaloist?—Yes.

35,966. Is any part of that farm cultivated?—No.

35,967. The tenant has another farm and does not reside in Achdaloist?—A nephew resides on the farm of Achdaloist, in a house on the other side of it.

35,968–69. But he is not the tenant of it?—No, he is not the tenant.

35,970. Is there any old arable land upon that little farm?—Yes.

35,971. Would it be suitable for crofters?—No, it is difficult to bring under cultivation; it is very soft.

35,972. Is it mossy and wet?—Yes, it is mossy

35,973. Is the Gallachulish land wet and mossy, or is it good land?—Yes, it is dry.

James Beaton, Creich, Ross of Mull (80). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

James Be

35,974. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a cottar at Creich?—Yes, I am not long a cottar.

35,975. Were you appointed to represent the Ross of Mull at a meeting of the inhabitants who selected delegates?—Yes.

35,976. Is this paper which I have before me an account of your meeting, and of the appointment of delegates from the whole of the Ross of Mull?—Yes.

35,977. The paper reads as follows:—

May 9, 1894.

A meeting of delegates appointed to give information to the Royal Commission of Inquiry and Inspection, agreed to submit the following statement of lands suitable to be profitably occupied by small tenants and for allotments. Scoon, including Shiaba and Kilvickeoin; Ardachy, including Knocknafenaig, Suie, and the pasturage of Ardchiavaig; Ardfinaig, including Tirghoil; Fidden, including Pottæ and Errait; Knockvolagan, including Tirergan; Ardalanish, including Iochdar, and the various tacks and farms on each side of Lochscreeden once occupied by small tenants and allotters, of which part of the parish Charles Macneil will give information. From the whole surface, submitted above, the people have been driven to enlarge sheep farms and to make sheep farms, and is now under sheep and cattle. Delegates in order of preference: — James Beaton, cottar, Creich; Malcolm Beaton, crofter, Ardchiavaig; JohnMackinnon,crofter,Caitchean; Donald Macgillivray, cottar, Ardalanais; Hugh Campbell, crofter, Creich; John Black, crofter, Ardtun; Robert Graham, cottar, Ardtun; James Cameron, Fionna-phort; and Charles Macneil, Ardachy, above stated for the north side of Lochscreeden and Gribun.

35,978. Have you any land?—Not at present. I once had land; I was with my brother for the last thirty-four years, but when he had a family of his own he turned me out three years ago, and I have had no land since.

35,979. Have you any family?—No, but I am married.

35,980. Have you come to express your own desire for land here?—Yes, I was wanting land before.

35,981. Is there land in your district available?—My brother went there as a smith, and three years later he succeeded to another croft. Before his family grew up he always alleged that I would succeed to the croft; but when his family grew up he turned me out.

35,982. How do you make your living now?—I get a piece of potato ground from the crofters here and there and everywhere. I would like a piece of land where I could keep a cow.

CHARLES MACNEILL, Ardachy (70).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

35,983. Mr Forsyth.—It is stated in this account of the meeting held to appoint delegates, that you would give us information as to the whole surface of the farms in this neighbourhood: is that the case?—On the estate of Ardmeanach, Mr Bell's.

35,984. Are you a crofter?—No.

35,985. Have you any land at all?—No land.

35,986. You live in a house at Ardachy?—Yes.

35,987. What district did you wish to give evidence about?—The place I know best, Ardmeanach.

35,988. That includes Tabul and Burg and Tiroran, does it not?—Yes, and Kilfinichen.

35,989. Do you consider that there is land there suitable for small holdings?—Yes, suitable enough.

35,990. Do you think small tenants could make a living there if they had good sized holdings?—Yes; they did well before.

35,991. Is it a good place for fishing?—Yes, it is not bad.

35,992. Have you a family?—Yes.

35,993. Then I take it your family support you more or less, do they not?—They support me at present.

35,994. And it is with reference to Ardmeanach that you come here to-day?—Yes.

35,995. Mr Munro.—What is your present occupation?—I do nothing, except the fishing and planting potatoes.

35,996. You do not earn a living from that alone, I suppose?—No.

35,997. According to the statement submitted to us, there have been extensive removals of crofters and other small tenants from a number of places mentioned here,—Ardachaidh, Scuir, Airdfineig, &c., and it says that you will give information about the people who have been driven from these places. Do you remember how many people were driven away from these farms?—I did not reside here till lately. Formerly I was a crofter in Burg, paying £12 rent, with a stock of 6 cows and followers and about 100 sheep. I was ejected, and I was not in arrears of rent. This was at the time craze for sheep instead of men was on. The whole district of Ardmeanach was cleared, and Baile-vuilin was added to Kilfinichen.

MALCOLM BEATON, crofter, Aird-chiabhaig (76)—examined.

35,998. Mr Forsyth.—What size of croft have you at present?—Three small crofts.

35,999. What stock do you keep on the whole of them?—Two cows, a two-year-old, and a pony. But the third croft has no hill pasture.

36,000. Two of them have some hill pasture?—Yes.

36,001. What rent do you pay?—I now pay £7, 15s.

36,002. Has the rent been fixed by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

36,003. What was the old rent?—£12, 18s 6d.

36,004. Do you find your crofts large enough to keep you?—Well, we have to do with them; it is not an easy matter to make them larger at present.

36,005. Would you take more land if you could get it?—The third one would require hill pasture.

36,006. Is it hill pasture you require most?—We would require that at all events, taken from the Aird-chiabhaig hill.

36,007. Where is Ardchiabhaig, is it down to the south-east of Bunessan?—Yes.

36,008. Are there many tenants there?—No, they went off; the place was cleared.

36,009. How many crofters are there there now?—There will be about 15 or 16 I daresay. There are three and myself paying £2 of rent. The rest is let to the Uisken crofters; and these crofts and all the hill pasture were added to Ardachy.

36,010. Are there any cottars?—Three have houses without land; one of them has a piece of ground down near the shore.

36,011. Then do the people of Aird-chiabhaig want more land, arable or pasture?—Some of them would take more. Three of them, I think, have a small piece down near the shore.

36,012. But are you satisfied at Aird-chiabhaig with the size of your crofts?—Oh, yes, we are mostly satisfied.

36,013. Then, do you come here to express any wish or desire on the part of the people of Aird-chiabhaig?—No, I do not take anything to do with them: I came here to-day to show the marches if required.

36,014. Then do you consider your crofts sufficient as they are now?—Oh, they are sufficient; there is no way of making them larger at present, I think.

36,015. Would any of the people of Aird-chiabhaig go to a larger holding elsewhere if they had the chance?—I daresay some of them would.

36,016. Could you point out where such a holding could be obtained?—I cannot say where.

36,017. You do not wish to speak about that?—No, I don't know, and I cannot say anything about it.

36,018. Mr Munro.—How many acres of land do you cultivate at present?—About 8 or 9 acres.

36,019. Have you any hill pasture as well?—Yes, I have hill pasture for two crofts.

36,020. Do you manage to make a comfortable living upon these 7 or 8 acres with the hill pasture?—Not very comfortable, but we must do as well as we can.

36,021. Do you think a little more land would make you much more comfortable?—Oh, yes; a place that would keep a few sheep, and the like of that.

36,022. You spoke of Aird-chiabhaig being cleared of small tenants some years ago?—Yes.

36,023. Do you remember that yourself?—Yes.

36,024. How many small tenants were cleared off it?—They were all cleared away, I think.

36,025. How many?—Fifteen or sixteen.

36,026. And do you think that all that land could now be profitably occupied by small tenants if given back to them?—Oh, I think so.

36,027. Were the fifteen families forcibly removed, or did they desire to go?—They were desired to go.

36,028. But did they themselves desire to go, or were they evicted forcibly?—Some were in a manner pressed.

36,029. Where did these families go to?—To America as a rule.

36,030. How many years is that ago?—About forty years.

36,031. Is that on the Duke's estate?—Yes.

Bunessan, Mull.

John Mackinnon.

JOHN MACKINNON, crofter, Caitchean, Ross of Mull (42)—examined.

36,032. Mr Forsyth.—What size of croft have you?—A small croft.

36,033. How many acres arable?—About 3½.

36,034. What stock do you keep?—Two cows, a two-year-old, and some sheep.

36,035. You have some hill grazing?—Yes.

36,036. What rent do you pay?—£4, 5s.

36,037. Was that fixed by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

36,038. Do you find your holding large enough?—Not half.

36,039. Have you a family?—Yes, six.

36,040. Could you work a bigger holding if you got one?—Yes, three times as big, or four times, and little enough it would be, but easier than the place I have.

36,041. What sort of holding would suit you? How much arable?—According to the quality of the ground.

36,042. I will put it another way. What amount of stock would you like to keep?—Well, I would say from eight to ten cows, and sixty sheep, or thereabouts.

36,043. Then you want what is really more, a small farm?—A small farm.

36,044. Would you be prepared to stock such a farm if you had the chance of it?—Indeed, I could not do it just now, as I am.

36,045. That is rather a large undertaking, you know?—Yes.

36,046. Supposing the land for such a farm were available, could you manage to build a house on it?—If I could get the value of the house that I am in, which I built myself.

36,047. You have a goodish house where you are?—Yes.

36,048. Which you built yourself?—Yes, and it would not be easy for a poor man going to another house.

36,049. There would be a little difficulty about your present house if you were going to a new house altogether?—Like enough, but perhaps not.

36,050. Supposing in some way or other you got value for your present house, could you then start afresh on a larger scale on a bigger place?—Yes.

36,051. And that is your desire?—Yes.

36,052. Is there land close to your place that you could get in addition to your own holding, so that you need not leave your present house?—No. The farm of Fidden is marching with the township of Caitchean, and available for pasturage.

36,053. There is no land near?—No, it is all occupied by crofters already.

36,054. And do these men also want more land?—Most of them, anyway.

36,055. Are they thinking of the size of farm you were speaking of?—Yes.

36,056. Some of them would do with something smaller, I suppose?—Yes, and I could do with a smaller holding too.

36,057. But that is the sort of thing they would all like?—Yes, that is what would do for a family.

36,058. How many acres would do for a self-sustaining holding, one which would keep a man and family? Of course, you are talking of eight or ten cows; but supposing you took something a bit smaller?—About six cows.

36,059. And say 50 or 60 sheep?—Yes.

36,060. You think that would make a self-sustaining holding here at which a man could work all the year round?—It would be nearer the thing than the way we are at present.

36,061. But would it keep him and his family, if he worked it well?—Well, I am not going to say that he would be extra fat.

36,062. But he could live?—He could live.

36,063. You would much prefer the 10 cows?—That would be better.

36,064. That means rather a large farm, you know, and there are not so very many hundreds of acres of good land in this neighbourhood: there may be some, no doubt?—Well, I think there is plenty of land in the Ross of Mull, and good land too, for all the people that are in it.

Bunessan, Mull.

John Mackinnon.

36,065. To make really good holdings?—To satisfy the people.

36,066. Now, is the wish of the people to get a good sized holding generally in the Ross?—Well, a good many of them do; some would not take it although they got it.

36,067. Are there many people about this district who could find means to start in larger holdings?—There are some.

36,068. But, of course, there are others who could not?—Oh, there are some that would go who could not take them without help.

36,069. Have you thought in your mind at all how they could get help? Have you any ideas as to where the assistance should come from?—No.

36,070. Have they relations who could help them?—Unless Government would assist them.

36,071. You have been thinking of Government assistance in the way of building?—Yes.

36,072. And perhaps even for stocking?—Yes.

36,073. Have you thought how much that keeps a man back, having to borrow money at interest? It is a heavy charge on him?—Yes, I know that.

36,074. But you think they could fight through that?—When they would get justice in the matter of rent and the like of that; and another thing I must say that there is a very honest and hard-working people here and they would try their best, I know.

36,075. They would require the land at a pretty moderate rent, would they not, if they had this burden of interest on a house, and maybe on stock?—Yes.

36,076. They could not pay a very large rent for the land could they then?—No, of course not.

36,077. What sort of holding would do for those who could not afford or who had not the courage or ability to start on a large holding? Would two or three acres be a sufficient holding nearly to keep a man?—There are plenty who would be very glad to get that, those who have none at all: they would be very glad to have maybe less than that.

36,078. Have you any idea how many crofters there are altogether in this whole Ross of Mull, on the Duke's property say?—I cannot say that just now. [Mr Cameron.—I may be allowed to inform you that in the Ross of Mull there are 60 crofters; in Iona, 18; in Gribun 3: that is exclusive of land held by people in Bunessan here.]

36,079. Mr Cameron has just stated that there are about 60 crofters at present, which, I suppose, no doubt is exactly correct?—I don't doubt that.

36,080. And would the most of these people require larger holdings, or are some of them good big crofts already?—Yes, some of them are nearly sufficient.

36,081. Have you come here to say that there is land available in the various farms for making new crofts?—Yes, I am of that opinion.

36,082. And are you, or other crofters in this district, willing to show us where this land is?—Yes, I will show you that any time.

36,083. Could you state generally just now where it is,—on what farms?—There is Siaba first, that is added to Scuir.

36,084. You had better take the places on Scuir first?—And Scuir itself, and Cill-Mhic-Eobhainn; these are three places that have plenty of land; and Siaba, it is crofters' ground altogether.

36,085. This is a crofter's place already?—Yes.

36,086. What I want you to draw our attention to is, not the places held by crofters but places where crofters could go?—It is not held by crofters at all; the crofters were cleared out of it.

36,087. Is it now part of the farm of Scuir?—Yes.

36,088. What other place is there?—Airdachaidh and Cnoc-na-feannaig and part of Suidhe and part of Aird-chiabhaig.

36,089. There are some crofters there, are there not?—Yes, but there are three crofts of it added to Aird-achaidh, with the hill pasture.

36,090. Where else can you state that there is land?—Aird-alanais, and a place they call Iochdar.

36,091. Any other place?—Cnoc-Mhaolagain, Aird-fineig, including Tir-a'-Ghoill, and Fidean.

36,092. This is a pretty complete list of all the large farms here in the Ross, is it not?—Yes.

36,093. And your contention is that there is land in all these farms from which good crofting holdings could be made,—is that it?—Yes.

36,094. Mr Munro.—You have told us that you would like to have land sufficient to keep 8 to 10 cows and 60 sheep?—Yes.

36,095. Could you specify to us what extent of land you would require, as that statement is somewhat vague?—Of course that would depend upon the quality of the land.

36,096. Take the fair average of the Ross of Mull?—Between 12 and 14 acres arable and maybe 60 or 70 acres of hill pasture, or thereabouts. That would keep the higher number of stock I mentioned.

36,097. Mr Cameron, the ground officer, has told us that there are about 60 crofters in the Ross of Mull. Now, if each of those 60 crofters got 14 acres of arable land, that would be between 800 and 900 acres altogether?—Yes, but perhaps one half of that would be better for some. Maybe 8 acres of some land would be better than 14 of another: I don't mean to suggest that each should receive exactly 14 acres.

36,098. I am dealing with the fair average of the land?—And there are some of them who have it already; these would not need it.

36,099. Is there sufficient land in the Ross of Mull at present under grazing that could be converted into a sufficiency of arable land for every applicant?—It is my opinion that there is plenty for all the people in the place.

36,100. But you have never made any accurate calculations?—No, but that is my opinion.

36,101. You have told us that you could neither stock such a farm, nor build houses, without Government assistance?—No.

36,102. Now, have you ever reckoned in your own mind what amount of Government assistance you would require?—No, of course I did not.

36,103. You must know it is a very serious thing to contract debt?—Oh, I know that too well.

36,104. Have you ever thought how you could repay that money?—There is many a way that it could be paid.

36,105. But you have made no calculation that you could submit to us, or any statement?—No, indeed; it would be early enough to be thinking about it when people would be expecting to get it first.

36,106. Yes, but before you would expect to get it, you would require to submit some reasonable scheme?—For my part, if I could not see my way to pay it back nor have a chance to pay it back, I would not seek it at all; and I would advise everybody to do the same.

36,107. We do not doubt your honesty for a moment; but we would like some more specific information about it.

36,108. Mr Forsyth.—I would just like to ask you this question. You have been talking of eight or ten cows as a nice holding, and you are also talking of 12 or 14 acres of arable with the hill pasture. Now, do you think you could keep that number of cows with that small quantity of arable?—Well, it is small enough, I believe.

36,109. Don't you think that you people generally keep too much stock for your acreage, for your wintering?—We are doing that.

36,110. Don't you think you would be better with less stock, better done?—Far; but I always keep two and sometimes three, and if I were to let away one, although I were to feed the other one very well, I think the two are fully better than one.

36,111. Would not the two cows well done to, and the stirks well wintered, be better for you than the three?—Yes, of course.

36,112. Would it not pay you more in money?—No doubt, the two would be better than the three when well kept; but when you have only two and let away one of them, there is only one left, and there is not much money to be made out of one. There is not a great deal to be taken off two even as things are.

36,113. What I mean is that one cow thoroughly well done would, in my opinion, pay you better than two cows badly done?—The cow would be the better, anyhow.

36,114. And would not you be the better, if the cow were better?—I don't know if I would not be as well.

36,115. But don't you think you would need a good deal of land to keep eight or ten cows well?—No doubt.

36,116. It would be better to keep five or six on the same ground thoroughly well done?—Yes, but we are not used to keep them thoroughly well.

36,117. Don't you think it is time you got used to keep them thoroughly well done?—We would like to keep them if we got the chance.

36,118. But I am afraid you people would begin overstocking immediately?—I don't mean that at all, but I might be wrong in my idea for all that.

36,119. We are all liable to be wrong,—perhaps I am wrong too, but I, myself, think you would be better with cattle thoroughly well done to, and not too many; and I think your view as to the number of cows for the acreage is much too high.—No mistake about that.

36,120. I don't think 14 acres of land in Mull will carry ten Highland cows done decently?—No.

36,121. Mr Gordon.—How are these farms that you have spoken to at present occupied? How is Scuir farm occupied?—By a man of the name of Mackean, who belonged to Wigtownshire.

36,122. He is not a resident tenant?—No.

36,123. Where does he live?—Away in Wigtown. He has an estate of his own there, I believe.

36,124. How is Airdachaidh occupied?—Mr Macniven has it.

36,125. Does he reside upon it?—Yes.

36,126. Does he cultivate it?—Yes, he cultivates some of it,—one-third of it.

36,127. Then as to Cnoc-na-feannaig?—I mean that to be included with Airdachaidh. The tenant is cultivating part of Cnoc-na-feannaig and part of Airdachaidh.

36,128. How is Aird-chiabhaig occupied?—It is divided among four: Malcolm Beaton here has part of it. Three crofts from it were added to Airdachaidh along with the hill pasture.

36,129. How is Aird-alanais occupied?—The tenant resides there.

36,130. And cultivates part of it?—Very little of it.

36,131. Then as to Iochdar, how is it occupied?—It has not been cultivated within my memory.

36,132. Does the tenant reside on it?—No; it is added to Aird-alanais now.

36,133. Then Cnoc-Mhaolagain?—There is a shepherd residing there.

36,133*a*. But no tenant?—No tenant.

36,134. Aird-fineig?—Macniven has got it just now, I suppose; the present tenant is leaving it at this term.

36,135. Is it a small or a large farm?—It is a large farm. There are two farms; Tir-a'-Ghoill was added to Aird-fineig.

36,136. And it is changing tenants at this term?—Yes.

36,137. Then Fidean, how is it occupied?—There is a manager residing there.

36,138. But no resident tenant?—No.

DONALD MACGILLIVRAY, cottar, Aird-alanais (66).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

36,139. Mr Forsyth.—You are a cottar at Aird-alanais?—Yes.

36,140. Have you no land at all?—No.

36,141. Have you a family?—Yes.

36,142. How do you support yourself?—I work at every kind of work I can get.

36,143. Are you a fisherman?—No.

Bunessan, Mull.
Donald Macgillivray.

36,144. You work on the land?—Yes.

36,145. Have you regular work?—Sometimes; but I only get employment from one man.

36,146. Who is that?—John Macniven.

36,147. You work for Mr Macniven of Airdachaidh?—Yes.

36,148. Have you heard the evidence that John Mackinnon has just given us?—I only heard a part of it.

36,149. Have you any evidence that you wish to give us as to land?—As far as I can.

36,150. Do you wish a holding yourself?—I would take land if I could get it.

36,151. Where would you take it?—I would not require to go far for it: I could get land near where I live.

36,152. You mean at Aird-alanais?—At Lower Aird-alanais. There are only four crofts at Aird-alanais. There are three crofts at Lower Aird-alanais and two at Aird-alanais Point.

36,153. Do all these men want new holdings?—There are others who would take land in the same way.

36,154. There are more cottars than yourself?—I am the only cottar.

36,155. What size of holding do you want?—The crofts at Aird-alanais are large sized, those at Lower Aird-alanais are smaller.

36,156. Do you want a holding on which you could live without other work,—a large holding?—Yes, I could take a place of that sort, and I think one of yon crofts would suit. There is a dyke around the croft, and it has hill pasture attached.

36,157. Have you any means to stock?—No.

36,158. You would require help, would you?—Yes, I would require help.

36,159. Is there anything else you would wish to state to us?—No.

Hugh Campbell.

HUGH CAMPBELL, crofter, Creich (46).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

36,160. Mr Forsyth.—What size of croft have you, a large or a small one?—A medium small croft.

36,161. What stock do you keep?—Four cows and a horse.

36,162. Is your croft larger than the most of those in Creich?—No.

36,163. They are about the same size, are they?—Yes.

36,164. What rent do you pay?—£5, 10s.

36,165. Have you come here to give evidence as to your desire for a larger holding?—Yes.

36,166. Would you leave the croft you have to go to a larger one if you could get it?—Yes; but I would not need to leave the croft: there is plenty land adjacent.

36,167. You could get land close by?—Yes.

36,168. Who holds the land just now?—The farms of Potee and Aird-fineig march with us.

36,169. And is there land on both of them?—Yes. They would do good to the whole township of Creich.

36,170. Is it arable land or grazing land that you want in addition?—I want both; there are both there.

36,171. What size of a holding would you like if you got what you want?—Twenty-five acres arable, and ten cows and a pair of horses.

36,172. That means a small farm almost. Would you require that to keep yourself and your family properly without outside work?—Yes, it would be small enough.

36,173. Have you any means to stock such a holding?—Yes, I have relatives who will provide the money if I get the land.

36,174. And could you erect a new house, or could you manage with the house that you have?—The house will do if I get the land.

36,175. Mr Munro.—You mentioned the farm of Potee as suitable for division into crofter holdings?—Yes, it is, and Aird-fineig on the other side.

36,176. How is the farm of Potee occupied at present?—It is let to John Macniven, one tenant. Bunessan, Mull.

36,177. How many acres arable are in it?—I am not sure: there will be upwards of 100 or 120. Hugh Campbell.

36,178. Supposing that that farm were divided out amongst crofters, would they take each of them the good and the bad land as it would turn up?—Certainly.

36,179. Would you yourself take any part of that farm that might be allotted?—Yes, at once.

Robert Graham.

ROBERT GRAHAM, cottar, Ardtun (76).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

36,180. Mr Forsyth.—Do you appear on behalf of the people of Ardtun?—Yes.

36,181. Had you any meeting among the people?—Yes, we had a meeting in the schoolhouse, and they appointed me.

36,182. Have you any land at all?—No.

36,183. Just a house?—Yes.

36,184. Are there many other cottars at Ardtun?—Yes, several: I cannot exactly give the number.

36,185. Have you any family?—I have two.

36,186. Have you a son at home?—I have one at home.

36,187. Have you come here to express a desire for a holding of some kind?—If I could get land I would take it.

36,188. Have you a son who would assist you with land?—Yes.

36,189. Is your son married?—No.

36,190. But he is working?—He is a steward on a steamer.

36,191. Then you have with you no one who has experience of the working of land?—I am experienced myself: I was working at land in my younger days.

36,192. And what sort of holding could you take?—If I could get the land which my father and grandfather farmed, I would take it.

36,193. Where is that?—It is let at present to Dr Mackechnie.

36,194. Would you prefer that to any other land?—Yes, I would prefer that in my declining years.

36,195. Mr Munro.—Would you wish to evict Dr Mackechnie from the land he has?—I would not like to evict the Doctor, but I am not particularly anxious whether I get land or no.

Duncan Campbell.

DUNCAN CAMPBELL, contractor, Bunessan (75)—examined.

36,196. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a contractor here?—I have been a contractor for some years back.

36,197. For roads?—Yes, roads, and buildings sometimes; but I lost my farm.

36,198. You had a farm at one time, had you?—Yes, and my father and grandfather before me. My ancestors have been in the one place for 250 years, and all I want to-day is my old farm.

36,199. What farm is that?—A place called Cnoc-na-feannaig, on the other side, about two miles from here.

36,200. Have you any written statement to put in to us about this farm?—No.

36,201. Do you appear on behalf of yourself, or on behalf of other people as well?—Just for myself. There were six crofters on that farm, and the whole of them were put out in the year 1849.

36,202. Then you wish to say generally that this place of Cnoc-na-feannaig is available for crofters or small tenants?—There were six crofters before.

36,203. You wish to get back to Cnoc-na-feannaig?—I want back my own farm. The Duke promised me it two or three times, but I did not get justice from these factors. (Produces copy letter, dated 1834.)

36,204. Do you wish to put in this document as a claim to a croft upon Cnoc-na-feannaig?—My father got warning from the late factor, Campbell, Islay. I left that in 1855 to take up my farm; but what the father of the present Duke promised to my father you will see in that paper.

36,205. This is a copy of a letter, dated in 1834 :—'The Duke has granted what you have free of ground, 'and also I am ordered to give you more ground at an agreeable rent?'—Yes.

36,206. You put in this letter as evidence to show that you have a claim for a holding at Cnoc-na-feannaig?—Yes, and the present Duke promised me the same thing two or three times.

36,207. When did you leave the place?—In 1855.

36,208. Then shortly, what you wish is to get back to Cnoc-na-feannaig, of which you say you have been dispossessed?—Yes.

36,209. Have you any evidence to give generally or otherwise?—I would be willing to take Knockvaolagan. The Duke granted me that before.

36,210. If you could not get a place at Cnoc-na-feannaig you would take one elsewhere if you got it elsewhere?—Yes. I had a place from the Duke in 1847, but the factor baffled me, and gave it to one Macintyre.

36,211. Have you any other statement to make as to land elsewhere?—No : all I want is my own farm.

36,212. You want to get back to the place where you were?—Yes.

36,213. Mr Gordon. — How is Cnoc-na-feannaig occupied just now?—It is part of Airdachaidh?—Yes, and the hills of Asicavay. He has about 14 miles of land.

36,214. Does the tenant reside upon the farm?—He resides upon Airdachaidh.

36,215. And Cnoc-na-feannaig is part of his present holding?—Yes, he has that, and Airdachaidh too.

36,216. Mr Munro.—Why were you evicted from Cnoc-na-feannaig?—I will tell you that. This man Macniven belonged to Islay, where the big factor, Mr Campbell, came from. I leave my case before the whole of this house to-day to give the proof of what I say. In 1846 I improved my land ; I commenced to improve it in 1834, and the Duke appointed me gamekeeper, and my brother ground officer for the estate. This Macniven came along with the factor from Islay, and he saw that my farm had the best importations in the Ross.

36,217–18. In short, you were evicted to make room for Mr Macniven, along with the other six crofters?—Yes, myself and other five.

36,219. Were you in arrear of rent?—Not a shilling to this day, or my father before me.

36,220. And you want to get back to the farm, do you?—I want my own back. Now, I leave it to the house to say if they have heard anything against me from the day I was born.

DUNCAN CAMERON, ground officer, Bunessan (39)—examined.

36,221. Mr Forsyth.—Have you any statement to make on behalf of the Ross of Mull Estate?—No.

36,222. You could, if we asked you, put in a statement of the various crofters holdings, with the rents and the number of crofters?—I think I might.

36,223. Then, perhaps, I will just ask you if you will kindly send in a list of the number of cottars,—the number of cottars who have houses without land in Mull?—Do you mean those having garden ground?

36,224. Take cottars,—some have gardens, and others, I presume, have not ; but include among cottars all who are not crofters under the Act?—Yes, I will do so. [Mr Cameron lodged the following statement :—]

[ADJOURNED.]

FORTY-FIRST SITTING.

TIREE, May 12, 1894. Tiree, Argyllshire.

Present :—

JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq. (acting as Chairman).
GEORGE GORDON, Esq.
HENRY MUNRO, Esq.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

HECTOR STEWART, Moss (40)—examined. Hector Stewart.

36,224*a*. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a crofter at Moss?—I am not a crofter, but I live with my brother who is a crofter.

36,225. Have you been appointed to give the views of the people of Moss, or of Tiree generally, before this Commission in the matter of new holdings or extension of holdings?—The whole of them.

36,226. You were appointed at a meeting as a delegate to give evidence?—Yes.

36,227. Have you any written statement that you wish to put in?—Yes.

36,228. Will you kindly read it?—The great grievance of the Highland people is the want of land. They and their representatives in Parliament are of the opinion that there are large tracts of land out of cultivation in the Highland counties that could be used, and to profit, by the people. The Royal Commission, in whose presence we now stand, was appointed, as stated of late by the Secretary for Scotland, to find out whether such lands were available in the Highland counties or not. Tiree, I am sorry to say, needs but very little evidence on my part to prove that there are such tracts of land that could be used by the people, for it is self-evident ; but, although it is self-evident, that will not bring to light what poor people, who were formerly in possession of crofts, suffered at the hands of those in power at the time. The officials in power at those times had all the power in their own hands, and, consequently, treated the people in a manner that would be beyond the bounds of justice even in countries where the name of the Lord is not given heed to. One man and his family, for refusing to leave his house, were forced out and had to spend the winter night under a boat, no one daring to take them in. Another widow was lifted out on the bedclothes, and left at the roadside; a blind man and his mother were in the same way forced out of their house.

There are seven large sheep farms in Tiree, which, with few exceptions, were formerly in possession of crofters. Again, by commencing from one end of the island to the other, there is not a township but in which there may be seen the crofts of three, four, and in some cases five, crofters in possession of one, without speaking of the number of crofts out of which crofters were evicted and added to the neighbouring tack (e.g., Balephuill, Kenovay, and Moss). In my opinion, sheep-farming on the scale now so common is a failure, and injurious both to the landlord and to the island generally. It is a sad spectacle to behold these sheep farms, which formerly maintained so many families, overgrown in a great measure with rushes and rough grass, instead of waving with golden grain. The island would be materially benefited by these large farms being broken into small ones for such as are willing to pay a fair rental. The island would then, in a great measure, be self-supporting, whereas now it greatly depends on imports. There are three classes of people in Tiree:—fishermen, cottars, and small crofters. The fishermen have their houses on the crofters land, and so near the beach that, in coarse wintry weather, they are in danger of being swept out by the tide. As there is no work to be had in the island, they must be content with the little they make by fishing. Nothing like a living can be made by fishing in Tiree, for the poor people have not proper boats, and, on the other hand, there is no safe harbour to keep such boats if they had them. The cottars who follow not the fishing are engaged in summer in kelpmaking, and in the winter at tangle-gathering. As they have no other way of carrying sea-weed to a drying place, these cottars are obliged to carry it on their backs, and thus it is only very little help they are able to make, even should the weather prove favourable. Tangle-gathering, on the other hand, is a work at which no one but one in want would engage. The poor people carry them up on their backs to where the tide will not come near them. They then build them up in heaps, and get 4d. per yard for them, but this price must be accepted in goods sold in the chemical store, let the price or quality of the goods be as it may. Then there are the small crofters. These, in my opinion, are not much better off than the cottars, for they must also engage in tangle-gathering, because the produce of the little patches of crofts they have would be scanty enough to maintain a family for a month or two in the year. There is a large number of this class of crofters in Tiree, who, in fact, will not see a boll of meal made of the produce of their own crofts from one end of the year to the other. This, in my opinion, ought not to be the case, seeing that the greater part of the land formerly maintained our forefathers, and the people are willing and desirous of having it re-divided among them at a fair rental. Again, that there is a demand in this island for land cannot be denied, for the number of applications sent from this island to the County Council for small holdings was more than sent by any island of its size. The circular sent to each applicant, asking him to state the average and position of land desired and the price or rent he was prepared to pay, was answered plainly and definitely; but the Council saw not its way to carry out the Act. In my opinion, therefore, the land ought to be re-divided among the people, so that the poor people may be put in a position to enable them to live in a style beyond the bounds of poverty and want.

(Signed) Hector Stewart, Moss, Tiree.

36,229. This statement of yours points to the fact that there is land available in Tiree here, and that, if it were divided into crofts of a certain size, it would give a comfortable living to a considerable number of people. This is the case, is it not?—Yes.

36,230. Do you consider that a large proportion of the existing crofts are too small?—Yes.

36,231–2. Some of them, I understand, are of considerable size, are they not? There are some crofts, below the £30 limit, of considerable size?—Yes.

36,233. These, I suppose, are self-supporting? The larger ones will maintain a family?—They will.

36,234. But the smaller ones will not?—No, they will not; they have only 6 or 7 acres of arable land.

36,235. Then would there be a large number of the smaller crofters who would require additional land to enable them to live comfortably?—That is my opinion.

36,236. And there are, on the island, I believe, a great many cottars, are there not?—Yes, a large number.

36,237. Is it the wish of these people also that they should have holdings?—Yes.

36,238. And do you consider that there is sufficient land in the larger farms of this island to provide comfortable holdings for all the people?—For a great number of them, at all events.

36,239. What do you consider would be the proper size, taking the average land of Tiree, for a self-supporting croft?—The land is not altogether of the same value; in some places it would require more acres than in others.

36,240. But take it on the average. Can you give me an instance of any existing croft which you consider to be a sufficient one,—a self-supporting croft? Can you think of one, and give me any idea of the size of it; or, if you cannot give the size of the croft, state the amount of stock it will carry. How many cows should a man have in Tiree?—Before I could say that he would have the keeping of a family, I would say about five or six cows.

36,241. That would require some 15 or 20 acres of arable, at the very least, would it not?—Oh, yes.

36,242. Perhaps more?—About 20 or 25 acres, I think.

36,243. And would it not be better, too, that the cows should be well done to, and that there should be plenty of keep for them?—Oh, yes.

36,244. Do you think a great many of the cottars would be able to take up land if it were offered to them?—That is the view they take just now.

36,245. Could they start themselves in holdings without assistance?—Well, some of them could not.

36,246. How would you propose to get over the difficulty of first starting, in the way of house building and fencing?—In one sense, I would look on it as a very fair way if the Crown were to give money at interest to people here as well as giving it to Highlanders in another part of the world.

36,247. You point to a Government advance with interest?—Yes, that is what they offer in other quarters. And, in another sense, if the people could pay the rent, they would be getting on every year; they would be working for their own good.

36,248. I suppose a few of the people have some means, and could start themselves, could they not?—There are some who could.

36,249. It would be better for them, of course, if they could do that?—That is true enough.

36,250. Mr Gordon.—Do you mean that they would purchase the land, or rent it, when you speak of getting an advance? Is it for the purchase or simply for stocking it?—For stocking it; I don't mean buying it outright.

36,251. I ask because you mentioned that they would be doing good for themselves?—Yes.

36,252. They would be working still as tenants under some person; you don't mean that they would purchase the land?—No, taking it just at a rent.

36,253. Have you any idea what money it would take to stock the place,—say a five-cow croft?—It would take some money, no doubt.

36,254. You could not say?—But in one sense I am not the least afraid but the people would manage it if they got the land.

36,255. Well, you know they cannot manage it without capital; it depends upon where they could get the money from. No doubt, if they had the money themselves, they could manage it, or if they got the money from Government they could manage it; but they would be dependent either upon having the capital within themselves, or of getting a grant from Government, before they could stock the places?—Yes, to put on the whole stock that the place would carry. But, looking through the whole island, it is very seldom I meet one who can say that the whole of his stock is his own.

36,256. Is it within your knowledge that there are a certain proportion of the crofters on this island who are living comfortably on their crofts?—Some of the larger ones.

36,257. Then, keeping that in view, it would be advisable that the crofts, if they are created, should be of a size capable of supporting a family?—Yes.

36,258. You would not have little crofts?—No.

36,259. Are there any families here who are engaged solely in fishing as a means of livelihood?—In some parts; they must engage in it: they have nothing else to do.

36,260. But are there any families in the island who maintain themselves in moderate comfort by fishing?—What I would say to that is, that they have to do it, at all events; but the maintenance is only just the mere name.

36,261. But are they in comfortable circumstances, any of them who are fishermen?—Taking them in the average, they are just the very same as the small crofters; that is all I can say about them.

36,262. Now you have a large cottar population in this island?—Yes.

36,263. How do they maintain themselves? Is there any work on the island by which they exist, apart from the fishing?—No, only what they make at kelp and tangle-gathering, and a little fishing.

36,264. What can a man, working a fair day's work, make at manufacturing kelp?—A cottar who has no other way of carrying up the seaweed but on his back, will have enough to do to make about a ton,—that is, should the weather prove favourable.

36,265. For the whole summer, do you mean?—For the summer.

36,266. And what is the ton worth?—£4, they get for the ton, in goods.

36,267. He will barter it for goods supposed to be valued at £4?—If he got the £4 in money it would do a great deal more for him.

36,268. I understand that there are a great number of cottars in the island?—Yes.

36,269. How are the majority of them maintained? Do they go south to work?—Yes, some of them go to the mainland, to service, and send home something to their fathers and mothers.

36,270. They cannot get work on the island to keep them at home?—No, there is no work here.

36,271. Come back for a moment to the question of rent. You say that the tenant, if he got money advanced to him by Government, would manage to pay the interest along with the rent: is that so?—That is the view they take of it.

36,272. Yes, but you are talking for yourself just now. What view do you take of it?—[No answer.]

36,273. I do not want to press the question if you do not feel inclined to answer?—For my own part, I would take it at a reasonable rate of interest.

36,274. What I want to direct your attention to is this, that if you have a certain amount of interest to pay for the stock, or for the houses, you could not pay a full rent and maintain a family; if you got money advanced it would be absolutely necessary that the rents should be extremely moderate,—less than a fair rent,—or you would not be able to pay it. Is that so, or not?—Oh, well, that is true enough.

36,275. The danger would be, that if you are to carry out the proposal of getting a large advance from Government, it might be very hard upon the man who took it, and leave him in a worse condition of poverty than before. Do you suppose that a man could pay the interest and a full rent?—Well, that is the view that I take of it, anyhow. And I would take in hand to be for some years even struggling to get back to my own land again. That is the only thing that I would have in view. Supposing I would suffer for some years, I would rather do so, and then I would have the chance of getting on.

36,276. You see, interest is running all the same, and if your income is limited to the produce of your croft, you cannot pay but a certain sum of money in the form of rent or interest after maintaining yourself and your family; and the question I put to you is whether you think a man would be able to pay a fair rent for the land, plus the interest required, to stock it either with live or dead stock?—[No answer.]

36,277. Mr Forsyth.—If you think you cannot see your way to answer that question, of course you can say so. It is at your discretion; you may feel some difficulty in giving a decided answer at the moment to a question of some importance?—Well, I cannot see through what is the main intention in the question.

36,278. Mr Gordon.—Do you think that a fair rent would be sufficient for a man to pay, without interest in addition?—That is, along with maintaining himself?

36,279. Yes.—I would say they could do more than pay a fair rent and maintain a family, according to the style I see going on in the island just now.

36,280. That is to say, they could afford to pay some interest in addition to a fair rent?—Yes.

36,281. Mr Munro.—How long have you lived on the Island of Tiree?—I was born in the island, although I was away from it for some years.

36,282. Where were you when you were away, and how long were you away?—I was in Glasgow for a good many years, and I was in Orkney for some time.

36,283. But how many years have you lived in Tiree altogether?—It is about eighteen years since I came home last time.

36,283*a*. Have you had any experience yourself in the cultivation of land?—It is very little I have done in the way of cultivating land, true enough.

36,284. But I suppose I may take it that, from your long residence in the island, you would be quite familiar with the opinions and wants of the people?—Yes.

36,285. Then is it the case that there is what is commonly called 'land hunger' on the Island of Tiree?—Oh, yes.

36,286. The people are really desirous of becoming possessors of land, that is, those who have none; and those who have got a small extent are desirous of becoming the possessors of more; is that the case?—Yes.

36,287. There are, on the island of Tiree, 184 crofters and about 250 cottars, making 434 in all. Now, supposing that the sheep farms on this island were broken up, is there sufficient land altogether to give reasonable holdings to those who might apply out of these 434?—Yes, along with the others that have more than they should have.

36,288. That is what I meant: I referred to the large farms. Supposing they were broken up, would that give sufficient land to live upon for all those who are desirous of getting land?—That is my opinion, at all events.

36,289. Now, in your opinion, supposing the people were put in possession of moderately sized farms or crofts, would they be able to maintain themselves fairly well without any other sources of income?—Yes.

36,290. You have put in a statement of considerable importance before the Commission, and you have there made reference to a number of acts of oppression alleged to have been perpetrated upon certain inhabitants of the island. Can you give us any idea when these things occurred? You, for example, mentioned that one man and his family, after refusing to leave their house, were forced out and had to spend the winter night under a boat, no one daring to take them in. Another widow was lifted out on the bedclothes, and left on the roadside: a blind man and his mother were in the same way forced out of their house Could you give us any idea when these things occurred?—That was during the time when Mr Campbell was factor here.

Tiree, Argyllshire. — Hector Stewart.

36,291. What year would that be?—About forty years ago, or so.

36,292. It has not occurred in your own lifetime, I suppose?—No.

36,293. Were these people evicted for the purpose of enlarging the sheep farms or of making new sheep farms?—It was altogether in this sense: if the factor had one that he wished to favour, he would ask another man to leave his croft and his house,—that was all the warning that he got; he would have to agree to that, or else suffer as stated there.

36,294. But why were they evicted: was it in order that their land might be added to the sheep farms?—Yes, or given to a favourite of his own.

36,295. Now, in another part of your statement, you mention that the people earn some living by tangle-gathering?—Yes.

36,296. Does that custom still prevail in the island?—Yes.

36,297. Then you go on to say, after giving a description of how the tangle is made, that 'they get 4d. per yard for it, but this price must be accepted in goods sold in the chemical store, let the price or quality of the goods be as it may. Then, again, there are the small crofters. These, in my opinion, are not much better off than the cottars, for they must also engage in tangle-gathering, because the produce of the little patches of crofts they have would be scanty enough to maintain a family for a month or two in the year. Now are these people under compulsion to engage in the work of tangle-gathering in the island?—No, but for their own good.

36,298. But you say that they are compelled to take payment for their labours in goods sold at the chemical store?—Yes.

36,299. Is that the case at the present day?—That is the case.

36,300. Are you aware that that is a serious breach of law on the part of those who compel them to accept payment in goods?—That is what we hear from others,—that the truck system is out of date now, and that they ought to get money for what they bring: but complaints will not do, they must have it.

36,301. You say that these evictions took place about forty years ago, and there were great complaints then made by the people of the usage they received from those in authority over them. Now I have before me here a copy of a petition which professes to be signed by forty crofters and ninety-six cottars in Tiree. The docqueting of the petition runs 'Petition to Sir 'John M'Neill, from certain poor persons in the Island 'of Tiree, praying for aid to emigrate.' Have you ever heard anything about that petition asking assistance from the Board of Supervision to enable the people of Tiree to emigrate?—I do not remember anything about that.

36,302. The petition concludes 'May it therefore 'please your honour to take the miserable condition of 'your petitioners into your consideration, and use your 'influence with His Majesty's Government or his Grace 'the Duke of Argyll to provide for them the means of 'emigrating.' You never heard anything of that petition?—I don't remember.

36,303. You will, no doubt, be aware that that petition was written very shortly after the potato famine?—I heard recently about that.

36,304. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton (Secretary of the Highland Land Law Reform Association).—I should like to ask this witness whether he has fully understood Mr Gordon's question with regard to the rent of a self-supporting holding. Mr Gordon referred to it first as a full rent—[Mr Gordon.—No, I beg your pardon]—and at other times as a fair rent, which required, of course, to have the interest on money advanced added. I would like to ask, regarding the average-sized croft in Tiree at the present time, whether the rents which have been fixed by the Crofters Commission are paid out of the produce of the holdings or have to be got from other sources.

36,305. Mr Forsyth.—Mr Macrae's first question is whether you have thoroughly understood the question which was put to you by Mr Gordon, as to the difficulty there might be in paying either a full or a fair rent, together with the interest on money advanced,—say by Government,—for building and stocking. Did you understand that question?—I think so.

Tiree, Argyllshire. — Hector Stewart.

36,306. Then is it your opinion, in answer to that question, that the tenant of a new holding would be able to do all that?—I think so.

36,307. The next question is, are the rents of the crofters holdings paid out of the holdings, or from other sources?—In some cases, throughout the island, the rent has to be got in another way; they complain that the rents are not altogether what they should be.

36,308. Mr Donald Macrae.—Do they complain that their rents are too high?—Yes, according to the rate that the markets are going just now.

36,309. We have been told that there are 184 crofters at present in Tiree, and I accept that statement as correct. Have the larger number of these crofters to get their rent from other sources than the land, or the smaller number?—Those that have not sufficient land to maintain the family must get it in some other way.

36,310. Are the most of them able to pay their rent out of the land, or are most of them forced to get the rent from other quarters? I want to know their average condition?—[No answer.]

36,311. Can it be said that 100 out of the 184 pay their rent out of the land?—I would take it that the larger number must get their rent from other sources.

36,312. Then I would like you to tell me where they get the rent?—Most of them by their children sending home money to pay the rent.

36,313. From the south and from abroad?—Yes.

36,314. Now, supposing Government advanced money for buildings and for stocking new holdings, do you believe that these sons and daughters of the people of Tiree, who have in the past been in the habit of sending their parents money from abroad and from the south, would stop sending the money when their parents got larger and better holdings? Would they not help their parents in the future as they had been doing in the past, in order to get clear of the Government debt?—Yes, that is what I think.

36,315. So that your opinion is that, if a proper 'fair rent' was fixed on new holdings, the debt of the Government loan would be no difficulty whatever?—No.

36,316. The sons and daughters would join with the parents, and help to pay the new rent as they had been helping to pay the old rent in the past?—Yes.

36,317. Mr Munro.—You have told us that at present a number of these 184 crofters in the island obtain a proportion of their rent from their sons and daughters in the south, to enable them to meet that rent. Now, supposing that they got their crofts considerably enlarged, would they be enabled to dispense with such outside assistance altogether? Could they then live comfortably upon their crofts without any other help?—If I understand aright what is meant by the question, I believe they would dispense with it as far as the means of living to themselves and their families are concerned, for the produce of the croft would support the family.

36,318. But would it pay the rent as well?—[No answer.]

36,319. Suppose, for a moment, that a man with 10 acres got his holding increased to 20 or 30 acres, would that enable him to live comfortably and pay a fair rent, without any outside help at all? I am not speaking of building houses or anything of that sort, but simply the living for the family and the paying of the rent: could he do that out of the increased holding?—Yes, that is what I think.

36,320. You say, emphatically, that if they got their present holdings enlarged,—say from 10 to 20 or 30 acres,—the crofters would be enabled to live without any outside help, and pay a fair rent?—Yes.

DONALD SINCLAIR, Barrapoll (50).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

36,321. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a crofter?—For two years.

36,322. Have you heard Mr Stewart's evidence?—Yes.

36,323. Do you agree with it?—In part.

36,324. Are there any of his statements from which you wish to differ?—Yes.

36,325. In what respect?—As to rent and interest.

36,326. Mr Stewart, I think, gave us to understand that a crofter in Tiree, with an enlarged holding or a new holding of larger size, could pay a fair rent and interest on Government advances: do you wish to differ from that?—I think that they could do it, and I would give the reason, if I am allowed to give it.

36,327. Can you show us any way by which they would be able to do that?—Forty years ago a 12 acre croft would feed a family, and the reason was that, at that time, the rent was only one-third of what it is at present. If the rent was down, as it was from 45 to 80 years ago, they would be able to pay the interest along with that rent.

36,328. In short, that simply means that if the rent were sufficiently low, they would be able to pay the interest along with it?—Yes.

36,329. Have you any idea of your own as to the size of croft that ought to be given for a self-sustaining croft?—Twenty-eight acres of arable.

36,330. And some pasture?—Forty acres of outrun or common. The common here is not good,—I am talking of the present crofting land.

36,331. Would you be prepared to take a holding of that kind now?—Yes, but it is not to be had, except in the large farms.

36,332. Mr Munro.—You have said that, if the rents were reduced to what they were 45 years ago, you could live comfortably. Can you remember what the rent,—say of your own place,—would be 45 years ago?—I do not remember it myself, but I heard from my father that it was £9 at one time, in his day, and in my grandfather's time £5.

36,333. And what is the rent now?—£13, 18s.

36,334. Would the difference between the rent paid by your grandfather and the rent you pay to-day enable you to live in comfort at the present time?—We could live comfortably at that rent, with what we can do of outside work.

36,335. Now, coming down to the present time, you mention that, if you got a holding of 28 acres arable and 40 acres outrun, that would be sufficient to maintain your family?—That would do it.

36,336. And you could maintain your family and pay a fair rent without any outside help?—Yes.

36,337. In answer to the Chairman, you stated that you would take such a holding yourself if it was offered to you?—Yes, if I was paid for the improvements I did where I was, I would be willing to take it.

36,338. And I take it that you consider that such holdings could not be obtained in the Island of Tiree except by breaking up existing sheep farms?—No, the crofters' holdings do not yield the same produce now: they are run out with over-cropping.

36,339. [Question repeated.]—It could be done by doubling some of the existing crofts.

36,340. How could you double existing crofts, unless you broke up some other land?—[Mr Macrae.—His answer explained that. He said, by one of the present crofters leaving his croft and going to one of the big farms, and the two crofts being joined.]

36,341. Now, supposing that a sheep farm were broken up and divided amongst crofters, would they be able to pay a rent equal to what the present sheep farmer is paying for that farm?—Yes, with the improvements that the large tenants get in the way of fencing, draining, and building.

36,342. You know the island very well, I suppose?—Yes, all the island.

36,343. Do you think that, if the existing crofters got an extension of their holdings, and the cottars got a sufficient extent of land, that that would add materially to the comfort or prosperity of the island?—Not without a reduction of the present rent.

36,344. Of course I am assuming a fair rent?—Yes, it would.

36,345. Is there any desire amongst the people of Tiree, at present, to emigrate?—There are some leaving, and perhaps more would leave too, if the land was divided.

36,346. Would not leave, surely you mean? Or do you mean that, if the land were properly divided, some would be glad to go away so as to make room for those who remained?—That is what I mean.

36,347. Mr Gordon.—You are aware of the number of crofters and cottars on the island: have you any idea of the extent of the sheep farms?—No, I don't know the acreage.

36,348. Looking at them, and taking them in gross, I think they would be between 4500 and 5000 acres. Now, if you were to break up these five or six farms into holdings of the size which you propose, they would accommodate only 70 people at the most?—There are other large farms that could be reduced.

36,349. Which ones?—Where there is one man with five or six crofts.

36,350. Yes, but I am afraid this Commission would not be justified in dealing with a small farm, although it might cover four or five crofts; it cannot interfere with small holdings. It is strictly mentioned in the remit that we are only entitled to deal with land that is not in the possession of small holders. What would you do with the balance of the crofters and cottars in want of land if you were to divide it into holdings of the size you mentioned?—I would give nothing to crofters till the cottars were first served.

36,351. But suppose you divided the whole island into holdings, you would only be able to accommodate one-third of the cottars?—A number of the cottars would only take 3 acres and a cow's grazing.

36,352. Then you would suggest a graded size of crofts,—which I think a reasonable proposal,—some of 28 acres, and others of potato land only: is that so?—Fishermen would take the small holdings.

36,353. You think a number of small holdings would be taken by men following the occupation of fishermen?—I am sure of it.

36,354. And in that way you would make the land that was divided go further?—Just so.

36,355. Now you gave us, to my mind, a very fair account of the rents which the crofters would be able to pay along with the interest. But you stated that the crofters or the men would be found able to enter a croft of the size you mentioned, provided the proprietor gave them buildings and fences the same as he does to the big farm: is that so?—I thought it referred to myself personally, and I answered that I would leave my own holding on these conditions.

36,356. No, I think you distinctly stated it as your opinion that the crofters generally would be able to pay the same rent as the large farmer. [Question and answer, No. 36,341, read over to witness.]—Yes, that is right.

36,357. You are aware that, if a big farm is broken up, the present buildings would not be suitable for the smaller holdings?—A crofter who took a share of such a big farm would be able to build if the proprietor found one-half of the expense.

36,358. That is your way out of the difficulty, but what I want to get from you is this. Assuming that one of these big farms is fully housed and fenced at present, and that it is proposed to break up the farm into five or six holdings, would you propose that the landlord should provide all the new buildings and new fences required to fully house the farm for the smaller lots, and to provide the necessary subdivision fences?—No.

36,359. If that money was required, you must get it from some other source?—I would put half of it on the proprietor.

36,360. Would that be fair to the proprietor?—It would be as fair as making it for the large farms.

36,361. Yes, but if the large farm is properly housed

Tiree, Argyllshire.

Donald Sinclair.

and fenced at present, would it be fair to ask the proprietor to undo the present state of things?—He has been paid for it a long time in the rent he has been getting.

36,362. That is one way of looking at it. But there is a difficulty in the question which I would very much like you to face. Do you say that the proprietor should pay one-half of the expense of the new buildings and fences?—I think he should.

36,363. Did the Crofters Commission lower your rent at all?—No.

36,364. Did they wipe off any of your arrears?—No.

36,365. Then they must have thought you had a cheap holding?—That was not the reason.

36,366. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Did the Crofters Commission, as a rule, reduce almost all the crofters' rents in the Island of Tiree that came under their notice?—No; I am an example myself that they did not take anything off, and mine is one of the worst crofts in the township.

36,367. Were there many who did not get a reduction?—There are some who got only a slight reduction.

36,368. Could you name two crofters in Tiree who did not get a reduction?—No, there is only one who did not get a reduction.

36,369. Who is the man who did not get a reduction?—Myself.

36,370. Was your rent increased by the Commissioners?—No.

36,371. What is the size of your holding?—36 acres.

36,372. How many acres arable?—12 acres arable.

36,373. What is your rent per acre?—I cannot say, for in the winter time most of it is under water. [The Secretary.—The area given in the Commission Report is 14 acres 3 roods arable, 25 acres 2 roods outrun, and a share in 760 acres of common.] Witness.—There are 16 shares in the common.

36,374. How many shares have you got in the common?—One share.

36,375. Could you give us the names of the large farms that you have under consideration for sub-division?—Yes.

36,376. Name them, please.—First, there is Hynish.

36,377. Who is the tenant of Hynish?—Mr Robert Macdiarmid.

36,378. Is that the factor?—No.

36,379. What is the next farm?—Hylipol.

36,380. Who is the tenant?—The factor, Mr Hugh Macdiarmid.

36,381. The next large farm?—Hough.

36,382. And the tenant?—The factor.

36,383. Keep all the factor's farms together: they will be more easily added. The next farm?—Crossipol.

36,384. The tenant?—Mr Barr.

36,385. The next farm?—Reef.

36,386. The tenant?—Mr Barr.

36,387. The next farm?—Balephetrish.

36,388. The tenant?—Mr Barr.

36,389. Is there another farm?—Yes, Scarinish.

36,390. Who is the tenant?—Miss Macfadyen, the innkeeper.

36,391. Are these all the big farms over £100, or are there any more?—Greenhill.

36,392. The tenant?—Lachlan Macneill.

36,393. Name any other big farm you would like to see broken up?—That is all.

36,394. Is there a place called Cornaigmore?—Yes.

36,395. Should that, in your opinion, be broken up?—Yes.

36,396. Could you, from memory, give us the rents of these farms respectively?—[Mr Watson. Balephetrish, £420; Crossipol, £260; Hynish, £355; Hylipol, £376; Reef, £320; Hough, £234.]

36,397. Well, if we got the acreage now, I think we would have an epitome of these large farms. Did you calculate the average rent of the crofter holdings and compare it with the average rent of the big farms?—No, but I was hearing that the big farms paid half the rent.

36,398. Half the rent the crofters are paying, acre for acre?—No, altogether; the total.

36,399. The total rental of the big farms is about half the rental of the island?—Yes.

36,400. Have you any idea whether the big farmers or the crofters pay the higher rent, acre for acre?—The crofters pay more.

36,401. And are the lands occupied by the crofters better and fatter lands than the lands the large farmer occupies?—No, the crofters have the worst of the land altogether.

36,402. Now I should like you for a moment to consider the condition of the fishermen who have not an inch of land, and the condition of the smallest class of crofters in the island: I wish to ask which of those two classes is in a safer and better condition of social comfort?—They are very much like each other, and I will give the reason.

36,403. Do you mean to say that a fisherman, without an inch of land, is as comfortable and as secure from poverty as a small crofter?—Yes, but I must give you the reason.

36,404. I would like to know the reason?—The small crofter loses his time about his work, and cannot get any other labour done; the only work there is to be had,—kelp-making,—he cannot get at, because he is engaged on the croft.

36,405. Do I understand you, then, to mean that a man who is a fisherman should not get a bit of land at all,—that he would be better without a bit of land?—I answered that question before; he would be better with getting a bit of land.

36,406. Could a fisherman pursue the fishing, and improve the condition of his family, by having a small bit of land for cultivation along with the fishing?—Yes, for the fishing does not continue the whole year, and he would have time to work the land.

36,407. If he had a bit of land, it would keep him in employment when he could not fish.

36,408. How would you propose to improve the condition of the fishermen of Tiree,—that is, those fishermen who have no land at all?—The first thing would be a harbour for them; and 3 acres and a cow.

36,409. What is the smallest sized croft in Tiree at present?—2, 3 and 4 to 6 acres arable.

36,410. How do you propose to improve the condition of that class of crofters? Would you give them crofts and make fishermen of them, or enlarge their holdings?—No, I would not make fishermen of them.

36,411. Well, how would you improve their condition?—By putting the small crofts together till they came up to 18 acres; and some of them to leave and go into large farms.

36,412. How would you select those who would have to leave?—That would not be very difficult; they would be all very willing to leave it, if they got the chance.

36,413. Would the crofters who have between 2 and 6 acres be in a position to take up a self-supporting holding in one of the big farms without Government assistance?—I think they would not.

36,414. Would you rather get that help, for the building of houses, steadings, and dykes, and for draining, from the landlord or from the British Government?—The one-half to be provided by the proprietor, and the other half by the Government, and interest paid on it.

36,415. But if the proprietor turned round and said that he had enough to do to pay his own expenses, and had no money to give, how would you propose to get out of that difficulty? I know proprietors who are not in a position to do it, and who openly say so, regretting their inability to do it.—I would not be asking the proprietor; I would make him do it.

36,416. But, in the event of the proprietor not being able to do anything of that kind, did you consider the question of Government stepping in and buying out the landlord altogether, and dealing directly with the native population?—That is the only way out of the difficulty.

Tiree, Argyllshire.

Donald Campbell.

DONALD CAMPBELL, fisherman, Kilmaluag (47)—examined.

36,417. Mr Forsyth.—Do you fish regularly here?—I am not fishing this year.

36,418. But you have been fishing in past times?—Yes.

36,419. Have you found, on the whole, that you can make a fair living by fishing, or have you had other employment?—I am stopping with my father on a croft.

36,420. Your father has a croft?—Yes.

36,421. And you are fishing to help the family living, as it were?—Yes.

36,422. Do you think a man in Tiree can make his living by fishing, without any other work?—No, he cannot.

36,423. Is that chiefly because there is no harbour?—Yes.

36,424. Supposing there was a good harbour, and large boats could be kept, is it a suitable place for fishing?—I don't think a fisherman would stop all the year round; he would have to go to some other place.

36,425. Then your idea is that a fisherman should have some other means of livelihood besides the fishing?—Yes.

36,426. Do you concur with the preceding witnesses as to the desirability of a small fisherman's croft?—Yes.

36,427. I think one of the witnesses said about 3 acres and a cow or thereabouts?—Some of them would rather have that than a big holding.

36,428. Mr Munro.—Have you no land at present?—My father has, and I am living with him.

36,429. But do you desire to have some land?—I would like to have better land than we have just now.

36,430. Is it possible for a fisherman to pursue the occupation of fishing, and cultivate a small croft advantageously as well? Can he combine the two?—A very small croft; he cannot do both if the croft is of any size.

36,431. Mr Gordon.—What size is your father's croft?—30 acres in all.

36,432. Is that mostly arable?—There is hardly any of it arable; only about 2 acres.

36,433. Then it will scarcely give employment to one man?—No.

36,434. But you do not work much at the croft?—Yes, I am working at it this year, because my father is unwell, and I could not leave the house.

36,435. When you were at the fishing, did you follow the line fishing?—Yes.

36,436. And the herring fishing also?—Yes.

36,437. A harbour here would be essential before you could make this a fishing district, I suppose?—Yes.

36,438. And it is rather difficult to get a harbour?—Oh, money can do everything.

36,439. And there is difficulty in getting a suitable place?—No; and it would give work to the people. If the money was forthcoming, the harbour could easily be made.

36,440. You heard what the other witness said about the places that were available for getting additional land?—Yes.

36,441. Do you agree with that?—Yes.

Archibald Macneill.

ARCHIBALD MACNEILL, smith, Kenovay (38).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

36,442. Mr Forsyth.—You have heard what has been said by the other witnesses?—Yes.

36,443. Do you agree with it?—Yes, I think it is right.

36,444. Have you anything particular that you wish to add to their evidence?—No, except what I would like myself.

36,445. Do you hold any land here?—No land.

36,446. Then you would want land, I suppose?—Yes, a little.

36,447. To have as an addition to your smith work?—Yes.

Tiree, Argyllshire.

Archibald Macneill.

36,448. Would you ask a large holding if you could get one?—No.

36,449. Just a small croft?—Yes.

36,450. With the view of keeping a cow?—Two cows, and potato ground.

36,451. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—When did you begin to feel and to realise the want of land for your family?—Fourteen years ago.

36,452. Did you take any steps to bring your desire under the notice of the factor or of the proprietor?—No, but others did, and they were refused.

36,453. Are there many people in your quarter in the same position as yourself,—without any land?—Yes, and without trade.

36,454. Did they approach the factor or the proprietor for land?—Not to my knowledge.

36,455. Did you take any steps to bring your condition under the notice of the County Council?—Yes.

36,456. When?—Last year.

36,457. Why did you not approach the factor for it thirteen years before then, seeing that he had the whole island?—I thought it would be of no use.

36,458. What made you think it would be of no use to go to the factor for a small holding?—I did not see openings.

36,459. Did you expect that the factor would give small holdings unless he was asked?—I was not thinking he would give it, either for asking or for not asking.

36,460. Do you know of parties asking small holdings from the factor and getting a refusal?—I don't know.

36,461. Were a large number of applications for small holdings or allotments sent to the County Council from Tiree?—Yes.

36,462. Have you an idea how many?—I cannot say exactly, except from our own township.

36,463. How many from your own township?—I think four.

36,464. Who was the County Councillor for the district at that time?—Mr Barr and the factor.

36,465. Mr Barr, the big farmer?—Yes.

36,466. How does your application for allotments or small holdings stand now, do you know?—We sent away our applications, but have heard no word of them since.

36,467. How long is it since they were sent away?—About nine months.

36,468. Do you say that the crofters of Tiree heard nothing about those applications for the last nine months?—To my knowledge.

36,469. Did you ask the County Councillors representing the district what had become of those applications?—No, I never did.

Alexander Campbell.

ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, fisherman, Balevulin (43)—examined.

36,470. Mr Forsyth.—Have you any land?—No land.

36,471. You have only a house?—That is all.

36,472. Do you make your livelihood by fishing here?—No.

36,473. What other means have you of living?—I do a little joiner work, and work along with the crofters for potato ground when I am not fishing.

36,474. You do not fish regularly and systematically?—I cannot be at it regularly.

36,475. Would you take to the fishing regularly if you had the chance,—if there was a good harbour?—Not in the island, but in other places, if we had good big boats.

36,476. Do you think a good living could be made about here, by fishing, if there were a harbour?—Yes, for nine months of the year.

36,477. Then, if there were a harbour, would you be content with a small fisherman's holding?—Yes, if I could get near where the harbour was.

36,478. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Are there many cottars in your neighbourhood in the same condition as yourself,—without land and very desirous of getting some land?—There are about 24 of them at the same work as myself.

Tiree, Argyllshire. Alexander Campbell.

36,479. Did you yourself, or you and your neighbours, take any steps to make that desire plain and clear to the estate authorities?—No.

36,480. You never applied for land?—I applied to the County Council.

36,481. How long since?—Four or five months ago, I think; I hardly think it is so long as the former witness stated.

36,482. What lands did you apply for?—It is the land that is in possession of the crofters that would suit the fishermen; but they would take it out of large farms, for all that.

36,483. Did you mention, in your application, any particular land that would suit you?—I said, in my own application, that I would take it any place in Tiree.

36,484. Have you heard anything further about that application?—No.

Angus Munn.

ANGUS MUNN, crofter, Hianish (52).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

36,485. Mr Forsyth.—Have you heard the evidence that has been given by the other witnesses?—I heard part of it; I was a little away, and did not hear it all.

36,486. Do you agree generally with what you heard of it?—Yes.

36,487. Have you any special point to bring before us to-day?—No, nothing further than what the rest have given you.

36,488. What size is your croft?—About 9½ acres, including rocky ground.

36,489. Do you want a larger croft, if you can get it on fair terms?—Yes.

Duncan Mackinnon.

DUNCAN MACKINNON, Scarinish (65)—examined.

36,490. Mr Forsyth.—You are a cottar with no land?—Yes.

36,491. How do you make your living?—I have sons who are sailors, and they support me.

36,492. Is it the desire of the cottars generally to get some land here?—Yes.

36,493. You think that would make your condition more comfortable?—I am sure of it.

36,494. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Was there a time in your recollection when the families living at Scarinish had land?—It is 26 or 27 years since the Scarinish people lost their land.

36,495. Had the whole of the people of Scarinish land at that time?—There were nine of them cottars then.

36,496. And how many families had land?—Twelve had land; the crofts were small, and they had been doubled.

36,497. How many tenants occupy to-day the lands that these 12 tenants had 27 years ago?—One.

36,498. Who is the tenant who has that land to-day?—The Macfadyens.

36,499. Is that the hotel people?—Yes.

36,500. I think you were saying, in an answer when you were interrupted, that 21 had crofts?—Twenty-one crofts, but 12 tenants; some of them were doubled.

36,501. Why were the lands taken from these 12 tenants and consolidated into one holding?—Because they were suitable for sheep farming, and some of the tenants were in arrear, but my own rent was always clear.

36,502. You were one of the 12 tenants?—Yes.

36,503. Were you willing to part with the land?—I was not: I had a small family, and was very sorry to leave the land.

36,504. What excuse was made for depriving you of the land, seeing you were not a penny in arrear?—To clear the farm, that all would be alike landless.

36,505. Has the condition of the people of Scarinish been improved by this estate arrangement of taking land from them and giving it to one? Did it leave them better, or worse?—It made them go away all through the world,—shore and land,—to earn their livelihood. Tiree, Argyllshire. Duncan Mackinnon.

36,506. Did it make their condition at home better, or worse, to take the land from them?—I am sure it did them harm.

36,507. Did it make a change for the worse in the food of the people,—in their living? Can they get milk to-day?—No, they cannot get milk.

36,508. Was milk plentiful when the tenants had the land?—Yes.

36,509. And what other food had they besides milk?—Potatoes, meal, and other things.

36,510. Had they cheese?—Yes.

36,511. And butter?—Yes.

39,512. Do they eat butter to-day?—Yes.

36,513. Is it as good as the butter they used to eat then, when they had cows and made their own butter?—No, nor half so good.

Donald Macneill.

DONALD MACNEILL, tailor, Barrapoll (35).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

36,514. Mr Forsyth.—Have you heard the evidence of the previous witnesses?—I heard some of it.

36,515. Can we take you as concurring in what they said?—Yes.

36,516. Have you any special evidence that you wish to lay before us to-day?—I wish to say that we do not get butter or cheese, and we get no meal except Indian meal.

36,517. You wish to differ from the last witness in that respect?—I am wanting land.

36,518. You come before us to say that you want land, and that you have none at present: is that so?—Yes.

36,519. Would you wish to add a croft to your other employment?—Yes.

36,520. Do you think that would improve your condition?—I am sure it would.

36,521. And you would be willing to take one, if one could be found, provided the rent was a fair one?—Yes; we see that there is land.

36,522. You wish to add that there is land available in this island for that purpose?—Yes.

36,523. Would you be able to stock a croft if you got one?—No, but I would be assisted to do so.

36,524. You would require assistance for that, would you?—Yes.

36,525. Mr Munro.—From whom would you expect that assistance to come?—From the proprietor,—from the Duke, because it is owing to his or his officials' doings that I am to-day without land.

36,526. But, supposing that the proprietor refused to give you assistance, what then?—We would just have to be as we were before.

36,527. So that your position is that you could not take the croft without getting assistance, and you would expect that assistance to come from the landlord?—I think it should.

36,528. But if you could not get assistance, then you could not take the croft?—I am not sure but that I might: I think I could partly stock the croft.

Alexander Maclean.

ALEXANDER MACLEAN, crofter, Balemartin (about 50).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

36,529. Mr Forsyth.—Have you heard the evidence given by the various witnesses we have had to-day?—Yes.

36,530. Can we take you as concurring generally in that evidence?—I want to give evidence that there is arable land in Tiree, and people needful of getting it.

36,531. Is your croft of sufficient size to maintain you?—No.

36,532. Would you take a larger croft if you could get one?—Yes.

HECTOR MACKINNON, Fisherman, Kilmoluag (48)—examined.

36,533. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a croft?—No, I am a fisherman.

36,534. Do you make your living mostly by fishing?—Yes.

36,535. Do you find you can make a fair living by that?—During part of the year: for nine months.

36,536. But it cannot keep you going during the winter months?—No.

36,537. Could you do better if you had a good harbour here?—Yes.

36,538. Would you go in for a larger boat?—Yes.

36,539. Then your ideas are mostly towards the fishing? You think more of the fishing than anything else, as a means of livelihood?—Yes, and a bit of land along with it.

36,540. You think a fisherman would be the better of a bit of land?—Of course.

36,541. That is, a small fisherman's croft?—Yes, for the dead of winter. That would improve his condition, and keep him comfortable the whole year round.

36,542. Then you come before us with the idea of asking us for that, if it could be obtained. What is your idea of a fisherman's croft?—Three acres of land, and a cow's grass.

36,543. That is the sort of holding you are seeking?—Yes, and as close to the sea as could be.

36,544. You would require your holding and house to be near the pier and harbour, if there was one?—Of course; to be near the place I fish from, if possible.

36,544*a*. You have heard what has been said at this meeting?—Yes.

36,545. And do you agree generally with the evidence given by the other delegates?—Yes.

36,546. Mr Gordon.—Where is your present harbour?—There is no harbour at all, I may say, on the island, except what we call a creek.

36,547. Where do you shelter your boats?—Port Bhist was the old one, and there is another creek over in Cornaigmore where we have to take shelter when we cannot stay there.

36,548. That faces almost due north?—Yes.

36,549. Where is the nearest available land to your present holding?—From Kenovay to Hough.

36,550. On what farms is it: on Cornaigmore or Hough?—Cornaigmore and Cornaigbeg.

36,551. You think that land suitable for the fishermen could be got on one or other of these farms?—Yes.

36,552. That would be most convenient for your present sheltered creeks?—Yes.

36,553. How are these two farms held at present: are they held by one man or by different men?—By different men.

36,554. Mr Munro.—Supposing you got the 3 acres and the grazing for a cow, could you do justice to that as well as follow your calling of fisherman?—Yes.

36,555. One witness here stated that at Scarinish there was a difficulty in procuring milk for the children. Is there any similar difficulty at Kilmoluag?—There is, for some of the people. Those that have ground have milk, but those who have not ground have nothing.

36,556. Can they not get milk by buying it?—Sometimes.

36,557. But there is a scarcity?—They will hardly have enough for themselves, sometimes.

36,558. Do the children suffer in consequence of the scarcity of milk?—Surely they should, when there is no milk.

36,559. And one of your desires is to obtain land in order to have a sufficient supply of milk for your family?—Yes.

36,560. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Where do you say you get shelter for your boats?—In a creek they call Port Bhist.

36,561. Was there a pier there once?—Yes, and it is there yet,—a bit of it.

36,562. When was it built, and by whom?—I think it was built by the Fishery Board.

36,563. Or by the British Fisheries Society?—Yes, it might be them.

36,564. Have you any idea what it cost?—No.

36,565. When did it begin to break up?—Last year, most of it; during the winter.

36,566. Did it stand the weather for 50 or 60 or 70 or 80 years until last winter?—No.

36,566*a*. Well, then, when did it begin to become a wreck?—About 10 years ago.

36,567. It held on for a long number of years before then?—Yes.

36,568. Has anything at all been attempted or done to repair it?—No.

36,569. And is it badly broken now?—Yes, it is so badly broken that the stones are lying in the harbour where the boats draw up.

36,570. So that it is a source of danger now?—Yes; when there is anything of a run in the harbour, you may get your boat smashed to pieces if you don't watch it carefully.

36,571. Did the estate ever do anything to assist in repairing it?—No.

36,572. Are there many landless cottars in the neighbourhood?—Yes, a good few.

36,573. Can you give us an idea of the number, as near as you can?—I believe about 27 or 28.

36,574. Without any land at all?—Not as much as they could stand upon.

36,575. Do these 27 or 28 grow their potatoes, or do they buy them?—Some buy them and some grow them on land they get from the small crofters, for which they pay or labour.

36,576. So you then put it down as a statement of fact that those who have no land at all depend on small crofters for potato ground?—Yes.

36,577. Do you believe that these crofters are in a good and independent position themselves?—Some of them.

36,578. Are many of them badly off?—A good few, I think.

36,579. And yet they come forward and assist cottars by giving them potato ground?—Yes.

36,580. Would your condition be very much worse unless the crofters were kind to you and gave you ground?—To be sure.

36,581. Had some of these cottars land at one time?—Yes.

36,582. Had the half of them crofts at one time?—In the same place where I live there were 35 crofts at one time, and there are only 18 now.

36,583. So that, in your own memory, 17 who had crofts were dispossessed, and the crofts taken from them?—Yes.

36,584. Why were the crofts taken from these 17?—Because there were some of them taken by the factor and favoured above me. You would get, perhaps, only a day's notice, that was all; and if you were not willing to go they would make you go.

36,585. And instead of adding a croft taken from one man to the neighbouring croft, do you say that in many cases such a croft would be given to a favourite of the factor?—It is often the case yet.

36,586. You said that most of those who are cottars had crofts at one time?—Yes.

36,587. Were they in a much better condition when they had crofts than they are to-day?—They were bound to be, seeing they have now no land at all.

36,588. They were much more comfortable then than they are now?—Yes.

36,589. Do you consider the condition of these fishermen desperately bad now, seeing that they have no land at all now, and no place for landing,—no place for keeping their boats safe or their lives secure?—That is so.

36,590. What farm in particular would you and your neighbours see broken up to form a colony for some of these people?—They could easily find that out when it comes to that step.

36,591. What is the name of the farm that would be

Tiree, Argyllshire.

Hector Mackinnon.

handiest? — It is between Kenovay and Hough: Cornaigmore, I believe.

36,592. Who is the tenant of the big farm that would be handiest for you?—There are no big farmers; but that would suit us better, because it is close to the shore, where we are working for our living.

36,593. So you think, then, that the land has been very badly managed and badly divided in Tiree?—Yes; it is badly divided still.

36,594. You heard to-day about two classes of crofters: one class that would be self-supporting,—that is to say, the tenant would be kept in employment all the year round, and the croft would not only keep him going but support the family; and another class of crofts,—smaller crofts that would enable a man to have potatoes and milk and would allow him to follow the fishing too?—Yes.

36,595. Do you approve of both these classes of crofts in Tiree,—a class of crofts for farmers and another for men following the fishing: do you approve of that division of the land?—Yes.

36,596. Then you would break up all the big farms in the island and make self-sustaining small holdings out of them?—Yes.

36,596*a*. And you would give all the land near the piers and harbours as small holdings to the fishermen?—Yes.

36,597. Mr Munro.—As several strong statements have been made here to-day with reference to the management and administration of the Argyll Estates in Tiree, I think it would be advantageous, both in the public interest and in the interest of the Duke of Argyll, if we had some statement from His Grace's Factor in Tiree. I would therefore suggest that Mr Macdiarmid, who is present, be invited to come forward and give evidence. — Mr Macdiarmid. — The statements made refer principally to matters that took place before I had anything to do with the estate. I know nothing about them; and I am not authorised or prepared to give evidence or submit any statement.

36,597*a*. Mr Munro.—Then you decline to make any statement?—Mr Macdiarmid.—I do.

[Adjourned.]

FORTY-SECOND SITTING.

COLL, ARGYLLSHIRE, May 15, 1894.

Coll, Argyllshire.

Present:—

James Noel Muller Forsyth, Esq. (acting as Chairman).
George Gordon, Esq.
Henry Munro, Esq.
William Mackenzie, Esq., Secretary.

Rev. Roderick Ross.

Rev. Roderick Ross, F.C. Minister, Coll (49) —examined.

36,598. Mr Forsyth.—Do you appear here on behalf of the people?—I do.

36,599. Have you a written statement?—Yes, I have.

36,600. Kindly read it.—My acquaintanceship with Coll dates from 1882, exactly twelve years ago. Amongst the first things that reached my ears as a stranger settled down in the island was the somewhat disheartening story that Coll was a poor place,—that the people in general were poor, and some were very poor. On the surface, that did not appear: the cottar class were kept in employment, but I had been told that rents were high, and that farmers and crofters were in arrears. The former were chiefly on the Coll Estate, and the latter, with four or five exceptions, on the Cornaig Estate, where there are too many and the crofts are too small. The Cornaig crofters are a thrifty, hard-working people, and, since the fixing of Fair Rents by the Crofters Commission, are as prosperous as low prices for cattle and the size of their holdings would lead to expect. The great cry with them, and the great need with them, is enlarged holdings. A reasonable addition to their crofts, with a favourable change in the markets, would make the Cornaig crofters a prosperous, happy, and contented people. These were, at one time, crofters on the Coll Estate; they removed to Cornaig thirty-six years ago (about two years after the estate was bought by the late Mr Stewart, father of the present proprietor), either from compulsion or some other circumstances of estate management. In the township of Soddisdale, on the Cornaig Estate, there are seven crofters, some of whom occupy half crofts. If this township were divided between two, or at most three, of the crofters, they would have enough of land to maintain a family in comfort, the remaining four crofters to be provided for elsewhere. In the same way, two or three crofters might be removed from Bousd, on the same estate, with advantage to all concerned, and one from Cornaigmore. Seven or eight thus removed would have to be provided for elsewhere, and the Royal Commission will be satisfied that there is ample room in other parts of the island for these, and a number of cottars both on the Cornaig Estate and the Coll Estate requiring land.

Coll, Argyllshire. Rev. Roderick Ross.

Apart from those in constant employment on the Coll Estate, there are about fifteen cottar families between the Cornaig, Caolas, and Coll Estates, all of which could be supplied with crofts on land at one time under cultivation and now lying waste.

The crofters on the Coll Estate applied to the Crofters Commission for enlargement of holdings, but their applications have not yet been considered. These applications can be met without difficulty or injury to any existing holding.

At the census of 1841, about fifty-three years ago, the population of Coll stood at the high figure of 1442 souls; in 1851 it was 1109, and in 1881 it was 643, whilst in 1891 it was only 522.* If, fifty-three years ago, nearly three times the present population, and 43 years ago, more than double the present population, could live at all in Coll, how unfounded and utterly unreasonable and shameless is the cry kept constantly ringing in our ears, that the population of Coll is still too large to enable them to live in comfort, and that they should move away to the large cities. This is the policy that, by fair means and foul, has been carried on for years, and been brought to bear oppressively on the cottar class. The population over 120 less than it stood twelve years ago, and yet that same class poorer to-day than they were then! The truth is, that the policy is one of extirpation of the Highland race from their native soil, and it would ill serve the purpose to improve the condition of those allowed for a time to remain. On the contrary, as the little band grows smaller and smaller, like the remnant of a once noble army surrounded by savages, their condition becomes every day more critical and less bearable. The barbarism of civilised tyranny, systematically kept in motion and bringing forth its results with the certainty of an exact science, baffles thought and diction adequately to bring to light and illustrate. It is not for me to say who is responsible for all the evils that I know to exist. At the same time that I was told that Coll was poor, I was also told that the laird would make a good proprietor if he had good advisers. Indeed, the laird was usually painted white by those of his own estate, and his advisers black as black could be. If, from the want of practical knowledge of his business, the proprietor leaves himself in the hands of men who are irresponsible either to the Queen or to the public for their actions, and who usually get intoxicated by the unwonted power they are enabled to wield for the weal or the woe of their fellowmen, in virtue of the position they occupy, and if, because of this, oppression and tyranny, heartless threatenings and savage deeds, become the order of the day, and, as a consequence, the wonted sense of security and happiness gone, then it can be no hardship if the State take matters seriously in hand and put the necessary machinery in motion for the amelioration of the condition of the people. When an estate is bought, as, 38 years ago, the Coll Estate was bought, the purchaser does not buy the people and the people's rights, to do with them as he may see fit. The people ought to have facilities to live in comfort on the land, and if the proprietor, either by his own act or through his agents, follows a course incompatible with the same, he fails in his duty, and there is a call for State interference. It will not do to be able to show instances of kindness and considerateness towards some who may fall into the ditch, whilst others are thrown in on purpose, or the ditch is there as the result of mismanagement. In carrying out the policy alluded to, some five or six years ago, a change was effected whereby the tillage of the land was stopped to an alarming extent. Many people were thrown out of employment, and some of them advanced in years, and without any provision being made for their support. From then till now not fewer than twelve families were affected, and six of them all in one batch, when the bread-winners of between 50 and 60 souls were thrown out of work. The house rent had to be paid in full, else there was threatened eviction from their houses. It was then that the question of land for the unemployed cottars was considered, and petitions sent to Colonel Stewart asking 2 acres of land for each cottar for potato ground. The factor was authorised to arrange to give some land, but the conditions attached were of such a nature that the men could not profitably undertake to fulfil them, and they are to this day without potato ground. But occasionally some of the unemployed do get work. Much could be said of the ills endured by the people as a whole, the centralisation of power and privilege being at the root of most of them; and among them all there is none more annoying than the prevalent and distinct feeling of disgust,—and distrust to a more or less extent among all in the community,—as though they lived in constant dread of some disastrous event that was about to happen, like people living in the vicinity of a dreaded volcano, not knowing when or of what sort the next upheaval may be.

36,601-4. Do you wish to be examined with reference to the land that might be available for small holdings on this island,—on the practical side of the question, I mean,—or do you wish to leave that to some other witness?—I would prefer simply to make the general statement, as they are perhaps more conversant with the practical part.

36,605. You wish rather to confine yourself to the general statement you have made?—Yes.

36,606. Mr Gordon.—There is a considerable extent of this island in the hands of the proprietor?—There is.

36,607. Which he apparently uses as dairy farms?—Yes.

36,608. Is the management of these farms the same now as it was some time ago?—I am not acquainted with the inside management.

36,609. But you say that there is a want now of employment for the people?—Yes, in that respect there is a great change, which I have alluded to.

36,610. You have not specified the change?—The ceasing of tilling, I referred to.

36,611. That is what I want to bring out from you. He now occupies these farms,—the dairy farms,—mainly as grazings?—I believe they are partly grazing and dairy farms—that is to say, sheep and dairy.

36,612. But he occupies the dairy farms more as grazing farms than as agricultural subjects? He does not grow corn crops nor any green crops?—Not to any extent. There is a great change in that respect since the present factor came to the island.

36,613. Therefore there is less employment for the people upon them than there would have been if they were used as ordinary agricultural subjects growing corn crops and turnips?—Yes, of course there is less employment for them; but we think they could do without such employment if the people got the land in their own hand.

36,614. But in regard to the management of the estate which you referred to generally, would these changes have been made in the farms, do you think, in consequence of a lack of labour?—I do not think so,—the very reverse. My opinion and belief is that it was done with the exact object of getting the people off, for I had a conversation with the factor at the time. The cities have more need for them than the country, apparently.

36,615. Now you have referred to another application made for 2 acre lots, and you stated that the conditions attached to the granting of these plots were such that the people could not accept them?—Yes, that is so.

36,616. Can you tell us what were the conditions imposed?—I can. I can read out the conditions to you. This is a letter from the factor addressed to myself, in connection with these applications, dated 'The 'Estate Office, Coll, 23rd April 1890. Yours of the '21st inst. to hand. As the villagers' application for 'potato land has been allowed to lie over so late in the 'season, it is impossible now to have the arrangements 'completed in time for planting this summer; and, 'besides, the land which they may get is taken up for 'the grazing of your own and the villagers' cows.' I may explain that I was deprived of the grazing of my own cow about 8 days after this, for my pro-cottar propensities, and my intimation that I was to apply to the Crofters Commission. The factor denied that the villagers were cottars, and that seemed to me to indicate a snake in the grass, and I knew from the origin of the village that they could not be other than cottars, as they were originally cottars and crofters; and I intimated, in consultation with the people, my intention. I intimated that to Mr Darroch, and in less than 24 hours' notice I was deprived of the grazing of my cow, which here, he says in express terms, I am to have along with the villagers till Martinmas. That I looked upon as a revengeful and vindictive act. I could tell more that has followed since then on the same line. My cow is now fed in the byre. To resume the letter—'is taken 'up for the grazing of your own and the villagers' cows, 'but they may get possession of the land for their 'purpose at Martinmas next on the following terms:— 'No land will be given to parties who may then be 'in arrears of rent for their dwelling houses.'

'The land to be apportioned to them will be to the 'extent of 1 imperial acre for each, of the land lying 'between the upper village of Airidh-nan-gobhar and 'the Free Church Manse.'

'That they jointly and severally become bound to 'work and maintain, at their own expense, a sufficient 'wire fence between the lands let to them and the lands 'adjoining.'

'That they come under an obligation to properly 'work, clean, and manure the lots, and to have in each 'year of their tenancy half an imperial acre of each lot 'in potatoes and the other half acre in oats; and at 'the end of the lease the ground to be left in such 'condition as will enable the proprietorto easily restore 'the land to pasture, they leaving the fence until in 'ordinary rotation the land comes in for grazing, after 'which they may remove the whole of their fencing 'material from the ground.'

'The tenants will bind themselves to pay direct to 'the collectors all the tenants' taxes applicable to the 'lands in their possession.'

'That none of the tenants will be permitted to sub-'let or sub-divide their lots; but the other lessees may 'arrange among themselves for the working of any un-'occupied lot.'

'That if the land is cropped, as above stipulated, 'the rent will be 15s. sterling per imperial acre per 'annum; but if allowed to lie in grass, or if cropped 'differently from what is stipulated, the rent will be at 'the rate of £4 sterling per imperial acre per annum.'

'That the rents will become due, and payable in full, 'at the term of Michaelmas in each year; the tenants, 'besides jointly and severally binding themselves to 'pay the whole rents when they become due, shall find 'two cautioners to the satisfaction of the proprietor

'who will bind themselves to guarantee full implement 'of the conditions of let.'

'The tenant to pay the whole cost of the lease.'

'The lease to extend to five years, from Martinmas next.'

'Yours truly,

'Alexander Darroch,

'pro John Lorne Stewart, Esq.'

36,617. Mr Munro.—I should like to ask you one or two questions, if you please. Your memory, I think, carries you back for twelve years over this island?—Yes.

36,618. And I take it, from this interesting statement which you have given to the Commission, that you have identified yourself very closely with the wishes of the people in regard to the acquiring of more land for the amelioration of their condition, or helping them in any other way?—I may explain that, before the present factor came on the scene, my services were not required. The first move was in connection with paying off a batch of men in the service of the proprietor, and the change in the tillage of the soil, when it became necessary for these people to have some means of living, and it was then that my assistance was chiefly called for. Formerly, on personal grounds, I had anything but cause to complain of the proprietor: to me, personally, he was most kind, nor had I, until this vindictive spirit began to manifest itself, the slightest occasion to find fault with the proprietor on personal grounds. I was asked to identify myself, because of these troubles with the people, and I felt bound to do it.

36,619. So that I may presume you have taken up this question on public grounds, and in the interest of the poor people of the island?—Thoroughly and entirely, and at a disadvantage to my own feelings, because Mr Stewart was so friendly to me that it was really a difficulty with me to get myself into apparent opposition to him. Moreover, many of my people were in the service of the proprietor, and, for various reasons, I had difficulty in opposing him. It was the last thing in the world I wished to do, and if I had not seen it my clear and distinct duty, no power on earth would have made me do it.

36,620. You have stated that the people are poor, but thrifty and hard-working?—That is so.

36,621. May I take it that their poverty mainly arises from their difficulty in procuring reasonable allotments of land to work upon?—I have no doubt that if they got reasonable allotments of land to work upon, they would do well.

36,622. You told us that in 1851 the population was somewhat over 1100, and in 1891 it was down to something over 500?—Yes.

36,623. You have also stated, I think, that the decrease of the population and the poverty of the people always went together?—That is my observation. The cottars of to-day are, if anything, poorer,—a good deal poorer, I think, than they were twelve years ago.

36,624. Can you give us any idea of what the poor rates of the island were in 1851, as compared with what they were in 1892?—I am sorry I am unable to do that. There is a delegate from the people, however, who has for a long time been connected with the Parochial Board; perhaps he may be able to tell you that: I refer to Mr Johnston. He is pretty conversant with the matter, though, perhaps, he may not have made the comparison over so long a time. On that question, at all events, he may be taken as a better authority than I would be.

36,625. Do you think that the administration of property in this island by Colonel John Lorne Stewart, or his factor, is in any way harsh?—I do not quite follow you.

36,626. Are the people harshly treated?—Well, there is a system of terrorism,—in fact, people are not allowed, under pains and penalties for instance, to act independently. There are threats going about as to what may follow. I cannot give proof, but, for instance, when I was asked to stand as a candidate for the County Council for this district of Coll, it was, in the first instance, much against my own inclination; certainly, if there were any other in Coll who could stand, I would not go, but I was asked distinctly on the ground that this would be a protest against the mismanagement of the factor.

36,627. How is the land in Coll mainly cultivated at present?—I think I have already said it is chiefly in grazing and dairy farms.

36,628. Dairy farms mainly prevail here, I suppose?—Yes.

36,629. I presume you have some practical acquaintance with the cultivation of land?—Well, no, not much; I could not give myself out as an authority upon that.

36,630. You have hinted in your statement something about the shifting of crofters from congested districts, and planting them in other places where there is more land?—Yes.

36,631. Now, to take a practical case for illustration, supposing that one of these dairy farms were broken up and divided amongst crofters, do you think that they could advantageously or profitably occupy it now?—I certainly think so. I have every evidence of that from what the East End crofters are doing,—I mean the crofters on Cornaig. A load of misery was lifted off their minds, because they had been sunk in debt. It is a source of dispiritment,—it would dispirit any man, however humble in life, to be under a load of debt, and that load stifling the natural buoyancy of the people: and they were weakened because of that. Now, since the rents are on a reasonable footing, the people are comparatively prosperous, and the only thing that they complain of, that I hear, is the smallness of their holdings, and the bad markets. They are a most thrifty and hard-working people, and up to time. If the Royal Commissioners were to go there in summer they would find, in the crofts of the Cornaig crofters, corn as good as is grown on the best of Colonel Stewart's farms that he has in his own possession. I have seen it myself.

36,632. Then your remedy for the present discontent is to give the people free access to the land under fair and reasonable conditions as to rent and otherwise?—That is so.

36,633. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Have you any substantial proof, written or otherwise, that tyranny has been practised on yourself for the part you took in standing up for the rights of the people?—(Mr Forsyth.—I may explain to you that it is entirely optional to you whether you should answer that question or not).—Witness.—I have not come here to expose my own grievances, and, upon the whole, I would rather not be pressed. I may say that I have hitherto restrained my feelings as to personal matters: I mentioned what I did say, simply because it naturally occurred to my mind in passing. I certainly have had such proof in the matter of the cow's grazing, for instance, and I have plenty of other evidence such as is referred to in the question.

36,634. All owing to the part you have taken in standing up and speaking up for the rights of the people?—I know no other reason.

36,635. Have the doors of your house been barricaded with barbed wire by the estate, because of the same thing?—Well, I would rather not go into the matter. There is an action pending in reference to that; and, on the whole, I think, it would be better not to touch upon it.

36,636. Have you inquired into the original foundation of the township of Airidh-nan-gobhar,—the conditions on which the township was originally established?—Yes, I have.

36,637. Would you be kind enough to state the original arrangement of that township?—I am not sure if I can do so from memory; but, about two years ago, I got a statement from one of the villagers, and also from an old man, the father of Mr Johnston, who told me the village was built originally by cottars, with permission from the old laird, Maclean of Coll, some eighty years ago. Some time after, the cottars received the Arinagour lots divided into crofts, rented from

£2, 15s., perhaps, to £3 or £4 each. After the estate was acquired by the father of the present proprietor, there was a change made. I cannot enter into the question of how the people lost their crofts; but they were, in one way or another, deprived of their lots, and became cottars once more. They still hold their houses as cottars.

36,638. Have you any idea of the number of cottar houses there are in this township of Airidh-nan-gobhar at present?—It would be just a matter of counting; I daresay sixteen or seventeen, perhaps.

36,639. Substantially, then, is this the fact, that for forty years,—that is, from 1810 or thereabouts,—these people in Airidh-nan-gobhar all had their homes on a croft?—Whether they all had I cannot say, but substantially all. My belief is that, in olden times, there were cottars, numbers of cottars, on each township, and whether there were any cottars in addition to the crofters of Arinagour township I am not in a position to say.

36,640. But, substantially, the body of the people were crofters?—Substantially they were. Indeed, so far as my memory goes, I am told there were more crofters,—that is to say, after they did get land.

36,641. Mr Forsyth.—Do you know up to what date there were crofts attached to the Arinagour houses?—Up to about 1856, I should think.

36,642. As late as that?—Yes.

36,643. Mr Donald Macrae.—Mr Stewart was the proprietor who deprived the people of their crofts?—Yes.

36,644. Now, substantially, are the people to-day called upon to pay for their houses as big a rent as they were paying under the old proprietor, Maclean, for houses and crofts?—I would rather the villagers themselves should be asked that question.

36,645. So far as you could ascertain, is that the case?—Well, I believe they are: some of them, indeed, higher than the crofts. Some of the crofts bore a rent of only £2, 15s., and a man with a croft then would have two or three cows and some sheep, and perhaps a horse. I have no doubt the villagers and others fully acquainted with the circumstances can tell more accurately.

36,646. To your knowledge, there is a very strong desire on this estate for a holding, large or small?—Oh, undoubtedly.

36,647. That is a universal desire among the native population?—So far as I can ascertain, that is the fact.

JOHN JOHNSTON, Totamore Cottage (57)—examined.

36,648. Mr Forsyth.—Do you occupy any land at Totamore?—Yes, I have a small croft of about 10 acres.

36,649. What is the rent of it?—£7.

36,650. Was your rent fixed by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

36,651. And that is the present 'fair rent'?—Yes.

36,652. Do you represent any section of the people of Coll? Have you been appointed to appear here?—Yes.

36,653. At a public meeting?—Yes.

36,654. Have you any written statement?—I have a statement showing the condition of the various townships in the island at the time when the estate was bought in 1856. I also produce a map which shows the old divisions. It is about a hundred years old, and it shows the original townships, as follows:—

In Torostan township there were in 1848–9 eight crofters paying an aggregate rent of £60. Their names were Mrs M'Eachren, Donald Beaton, John Mackinnon, Lachlan Macdonald, Murdoch Maclean, John Maclean, Neil Mackinnon, and Malcolm Kennedy. There were also nine cottars.

Knock was let in one farm, but in 1810–12 there were sub-tenants working for the farmer and getting a cropping place such as would keep them in cropping, and a horse for their work. I call them sub-tenants, and there were four of them besides the farmer himself. The rent was £30, the names being Hugh M'Lean, tenant, Archibald M'Kinnon, Donald M'Kinnon, Neil M'Kinnon, and John M'Kinnon, sub-tenants. There were also four cottars. Trialan was also let in one farm in 1776, to Mrs Janet M'Lean as tenant. Here, again, there were three sub-tenants, Dugald M'Donald, John M'Innes, and Roderick M'Lean. These worked for the tenant under the same conditions as above stated. I have not been able to ascertain the rent of this place, the date is so far back. Gallanach was in 1776 let as one farm. Captain Lachlan M'Lean was the tacksman, and there were eight sub-tenants working for him, viz., Charles M'Lean, Donald Beaton, John M'Kinnon, John M'Donald, Lachlan Paterson, Roderick M'Kinnon, John M'Kinnon, and John M'Donald. I cannot tell the rent of this place. Arnabost in 1854 had seven tenants, but one of them had two crofts. The rent was £66, 1s., made up as follows:—Lachlan Johnston (two crofts), £20, 13s.; Angus M'Fadyen, £10, 6s. 6d.; Neil M'Kinnon, £10, 6s. 6d.; John M'Lean, £6, 7s. 6d.; Donald M'Kinnon, £6, 7s. 6d.; Lachlan M'Donald, £6; and Donald M'Donald, £6. There were four cottars here. Cliad was occupied by Mrs Campbell, at a rent of £40. There were four cottars or workers, but no sub-tenants. Mibost had two tenants,—Donald M'Lean, rent £17, 10s., and Hector M'Dougall, rent £20,—together £37, 10s. There were also two cottars who were not workers. Grishipoll had nine tenants, paying a total rent of £74, 9s., as follows:—Widow M'Eachren, £11, 1s.; Alexander M'Dougall, £7; Duncan Campbell, £11, 12s.; Lachlan M'Kinnon, £11, 10s.; Murdoch M'Lean, £8, 4s.; Neil M'Lean, £6, 18s.; Neil M'Donald, £6, 18s.; Allan M'Kinnon, £7, 15s.; and Hector M'Kinnon, £3, 11s. There were also four cottars. Ballahough had two tenants,—Donald M'Lean, whose rent was £12, 15s., and Charles Campbell, £25, 10s.; but the latter had two shares, so that there were practically three crofts. There were two cottars. In Totronald there were six tenants, paying an aggregate rent of £76, 17s., and no cottars. The tenants were Archibald M'Donald, £17, 11s.; Neil M'Donald, £16, 3s.; Neil M'Lean, £13, 1s.; Donald M'Lean, £9, 10s.; John M'Lean, £9, 10s.; and John M'Kinnon, £11, 2s. Grimsary had five tenants,—Donald M'Kinnon, rent £11, 4s.; John Kennedy, jun., £11, 4s.; John Kennedy, senior, £8, 13s.; Donald M'Fadyen, £11, 13s.; and Lachlan M'Lean, £8, 15s.,—total rent, £51, 9s. There were two tenants in Arileod Crofts, John M'Lean paying £4, 5s. and Widow M'Callum paying £7, 14s.,—total rent, £11, 19s. Broadhill had also two tenants, Roderick M'Kinnon and Mrs Nicholson, each paying a rent of £3, 15s., —total rent, £7, 10s. Arileod had one tenant, John M'Lean, whose rent was £54, and there was one cottar there at that time. Breackacha and Gallanach were joined together in 1854, under the factor Dugald Campbell, at a rent of £486, 17s. Crossipol was held by Neil M'Lean at a rent of £262, 15s. Fresland was occupied by two tenants,—Norman M'Lean paying £11, 10s., and Neil M'Lean paying £5, 2s.,—together £16, 12s. Acha had also two tenants, Allan M'Lean, £20, 8s., and John Smeaton, £30,—together £50, 8s. Gorten had one tenant, Donald M'Kinnon, who paid £12, 15s. Lagmore had two tenants,—Duncan M'Kinnon, £3, 17s., and Hugh M'Fadyen, £5, 11s.,—together £9, 8s. Kilbride was in the occupation of four tenants, viz., Alexander M'Lean, £11, 18s.; Donald M'Lean, £11, 18s.; John M'Lean, £8, 8s.; and John Kennedy, £8, 10s.,—in all, £40, 14s. Hyne was occupied by Hugh M'Lean at a rent of £9, 7s. Fisgary by Neil M'Lean at a rent of £10, 4s. Arintluie by John Kennedy, who paid £9, 7s. Eilean Oronsay by Hector M'Lean, paying £14, 12s. for two crofts. Coming now to Airidh-nan-gobhar, we find 18 crofting tenants, besides the innkeeper, the total rent of £56, 1s. 6d. being made up thus:—

Neil M'Innes, . . .	2	0	0
Donald M'Lean, . . .	2	14	0
Hector M'Kinnon, . .	1	16	6

Malcolm M'Fadyen,	£1	15	0
Lachlan M'Kinnon,	3	0	0
Neil M'Donald,	6	8	0
John M'Kinnon, senior,	7	0	0
James M'Lean,	2	0	0
Hugh M'Lean,	2	0	0
Allan M'Lean (merchant and crofter),	1	15	0
John M'Kenzie,	3	8	0
John M'Innes,	2	0	0
John M'Fadyen,	1	17	0
John M'Kinnon, junior,	1	0	0
Allan Johnston,	1	14	0
John M'Dougall,	0	18	0
Michael M'Innes,	0	18	0
John M'Lean,	1	18	0
	£56	1	6

Thus the whole tenantry in 1856 numbered 73 tenants and crofters, i.e., holders of land, not including cottars. The total rental of the Coll Estate was as follows:—1854, £1286, 3s. 6d.; 1885–6, £3577, 15s. 10d.; 1893–4, £2972, 12s. 7d.

The population of the island, according to the census returns, was as follows:—In 1841, 1409; 1851, 1235; 1861, 781; 1871, 723; 1881, 643; 1891, 536.

Most of the population of 1235 in 1851 resided on the Coll Estate. Now, the population of the whole island in 1891 was 536, of whom 170 were at Cornaig. Then there were a number of strangers,—I took pains to count them. I am sanitary inspector of the parish, and I know the whole of the people in the island and their families individually. I found there were 120 strangers on the estate of Coll at the time of the last census. These, together with the people at Cornaig, numbered 290, leaving 246 old inhabitants on the Coll Estate.

With regard to the township of Arinagour, the rental in 1856, including the land which the crofters held, was, as I have said, £56, 1s. 6d. The present rental of the houses alone, according to the Valuation Roll, is £74, and the peat rent, 10s. each, comes to £6, 10s., making £80, 10s. for the houses alone without the crofts.

With regard to Caolas Estate, which we saw yesterday, there were in 1840 four tenants (Neil Mackinnon, John Mackinnon, Charles Campbell, and John Kennedy), paying £50 each, total £200. The present rental is £264, 4s.

36,655-6. Do you represent a section of the people here, or do you represent the whole of the people of Coll?—I was appointed to give evidence before the Commission by a general meeting of the people.

36,657. Do you wish to state here that the people in general have a desire for enlarged holdings, or new holdings, as the case may be?—Exactly.

36,658. Can you tell us where those holdings could be acquired in this island,—where there is land available?—There is land upon the Coll Estate; there is land upon Gallanach here in the proprietor's hands, and, roughly speaking, I believe three-fourths of the island altogether is in the proprietor's hands.

36,659–60. And what you come before us to say is that there is plenty of land available for small holdings in Coll?—Yes.

36,661. And that there are people who wish to take it?—Yes.

36,662. What size of holding do you think would be suitable for a crofter in Coll if such holdings were formed?—Something like what it was before. The township of Grishipoll, for instance, at one time had nine tenants.

36,663. Yes, but I want to ask you what sort of holdings you think desirable for the future, either in acreage or stock carrying power?—I can come to it better that way. The general desire was to have something like what they had before; that would mean 4 to 6 cows with their followers, 15 or 20 sheep, and 2 horses.

36,664. Would you call that a self-sustaining croft,—one that would keep a family?—Yes.

36,665. Are there many people here who could take up such a holding?—Yes.

36,666. Could they stock it, and fence and build?—Yes, as a rule, they could stock it.

36,667. You mean that they have means?—Yes, as a rule. There may be some isolated cases which would, perhaps, require help; but I know personally a number of them who could stock that size of holding.

36,668. Generally speaking, you think the people would be able to find the means to build and fence and stock?—Yes, generally speaking.

36,669. Mr Munro.—How long have you lived on the island?—Since I was born.

36,670. So that your memory carries you back most of the present century?—Yes, I remember well when the place was full of people.

36,671. You have given us a history of the island showing how the crofters' holdings were broken up and consolidated into large farms. Now, what was the condition of the people at that time?—Well, they were what you would call ordinary; they were not rich, of course, but they were in the way of making a living.

36,672. Were they prosperous and contented?—Yes, just so, according to the rent they were paying at the time.

36,673. Is it your opinion that, if this land could be restored to the crofters, they could cultivate it profitably and advantageously?—Yes, I am of that opinion, and we have a proof of it here, because there are crofters at Cornaig who are prosperous now, and who were just on the same conditions, and with about the same size of holdings as I referred to. There are some of them present to-day.

36,674. Those farms which have been taken from the crofters, you are aware, are at present occupied as dairy farms?—Principally.

36,675. Are you prepared to admit that these farms are at present properly cultivated, and fairly well managed?—They are not cultivated; they are under grass. I cannot say whether it would pay the proprietor better to break them up, or to use them as at present; but they are not cultivated as matters stand.

36,676. But you allow that the tenant is making the most of them that he possibly can in his own interest?—Yes.

36,677. Supposing that we take one of these farms, and divide it among, say, six or twelve crofters, as the case may be, would they be prepared to take these farms, and cultivate them to the same advantage as the present tenant does?—I believe they would.

36,678. Could that be done?—Do you mean paying the same rent as the proprietor charges to himself in the Valuation Roll?

36,679. I am coming to that point afterwards; could they cultivate them properly, and to fair advantage?—Of course they could; and I believe they could cultivate them better, because there would be more of them to do it. They could drain and fence and plough: there is no mistake about that.

36,680. And, in your opinion, could they pay a rent equal to what the present tenant is paying?—Generally speaking, I believe they could, according to the present rent.

36,681. At all events, they would be able to take the places at a fair rent, as that might be fixed by a competent tribunal,—is that your position?—Yes, they would be prepared to do that.

36,682. To what use would you put the present farm steadings on these farms?—That is a question I cannot go into.

36,683. I suppose these would be of practically little or no service to the crofters?—They could be let, I suppose, in various ways. There are not so many of them altogether, and some of the crofters themselves might even take them. Say, for instance, Grishipoll, where there is a small house and a small byre; the best off of the crofters might take that, and give more for the croft, for the sake of the house, than the rest.

36,684. How would the crofters occupy one of these dairy farms, suppose they were put in possession of it?—There are various ways. Do you mean the house?

36,685. No, take the farm all over: how would they manage it, suppose they got possession of it?—They would just break it up into crofts as it was before, and put a division fence between them, and build houses for each of them.

36,686. And you think it would pay them under these altered conditions?—I believe it would pay as much rent as it pays now. Cornaig, for example, where the crofters are now, pays pretty near the rent it was paying formerly: it was at one time £150: I remember when it was only that, but it goes now to £200, I think. It was £150 when it was in the proprietor's hands, before it was let, but the tenants pay over £200 for it now, I understand.

36,687. Can you give us any idea what the poor rates of the island were in 1851 as compared with to-day?—I cannot tell that: I have no figures for it; but after the potato disease a great many people fell upon the rates.

36,688. Is it your opinion that if the land were restored to the crofters as it was occupied by them in 1851, it would bring about a state of comparative prosperity and contentment amongst them?—Certainly, I have no doubt of that. The Cornaig Estate proves that beyond a doubt.

36,689. Mr Gordon.—If you break up one of these farms, you would require to provide holdings for the tenants?—Certainly, but as a rule they could build themselves.

36,690. You think they could build themselves?—Yes, 13 of them applied to the County Council for allotments in Coll, and when I was questioning them upon the point, I found most of them were prepared to supply themselves with houses.

36,691. And would they be able to supply themselves with stock too?—Yes, but not all of them; they cannot all put up a house and stock the place.

36,692. In the event of any not being able to build the necessary houses or stock the land, how would you propose that they should get assistance?—It depends a great deal upon what sort of houses they would require to build. They might build a house that would suit themselves without much expense; whereas, on the other hand, they might be forced to put up one costing £200.

36,693. I should think £200 would be an extreme class of house?—I heard that figure mentioned by the factor here.

36,694. I should think that a cheaper house than that would do. But I may assume that a number of them would require help?—Oh, yes; there is no doubt that is so.

36,695. How do you suppose they would get that assistance?—If it was spread over a period, they might get the County Council to help.

36,696. Do you mean that Government should lend the money?—Or the Government might advance the money at a certain percentage, allowing 30 or 40 years for repayment.

36,697. Suppose the Government advanced £200 or £300 to a tenant to build and stock?—Oh, that would be folly: say £150 or perhaps £100 to most of them, besides what they have already.

36,698. It would depend upon the size of the croft, I suppose?—Yes.

36,699. Taking it as £100. If Government advanced £100 to a crofter, what would you assume to be the rent of the croft?—It is not very easy to answer that.

36,700. Would it be a £10 croft?—I would say £12 to £15.

36,701. You would suggest that he should borrow a sum not exceeding £100?—Just so.

36,702. To be repaid in 30 or 40 years?—Yes.

36,703. How much would the interest on that be?—I really do not know.

36,704. It would not be less than £4 per cent., paying it back in 40 years?—I thought they could get it at less than that.

36,705. You see you have to pay 3 per cent. interest and a portion of the principal as well. I assume it would be about 4 per cent.; it might be a trifle less or more. Now you say they would be able to pay the same rent as the present tenant, but I have grave doubts upon that point, and I think you may be doing a grave injury to your friends the crofters by suggesting that they could do so. They would have to pay the 'fair 'rent' plus the interest, which would make the total rent more than the tenant in all probability would be able to pay?—That depends upon what sort of croft he has.

36,706. But I am assuming that the land is fairly rented, irrespective of the holdings?—You mean that the crofters should pay the present rent.

36,707. You stated that they could pay as much rent as the tenant is paying; but if you break up a rent of £100 into ten or say into eight rents of £12, 10s. each, you require seven new steadings, and you require new fencing?—A great many of them can put up their own steadings.

36,708. Yes, but you have already stated that you think they would require to borrow £100?—Some of them might, and others might not. I don't believe they would all require assistance: this was the extreme case that I suggested. Perhaps most of them would only require £50, or £30, or £20.

36,709. You made a definite statement, and I am taking you on your own statement. The difficulty is this: that if you overburden the crofter with rent, you may place him in a worse position than he is in at present when he has no land and no rent?—That is true enough; but very few of them may require to borrow at all.

36,710. I don't say they should pay as much rent as the present tenant does, but it is a dangerous thing to say that they can do so.—Well, I still believe they could, and this is a proof of it. The crofters' rents, as fixed by the Crofters Commission, are on an average about 6s. an acre. Now I believe the big farmers here in Coll, those with £200 rent or so, have their land for about 2s. 6d. an acre at the highest.

36,711. But the crofter's land may be better than the average of the farmer's land: the latter has a good deal of black hill included in his land?—What I wish to come to is that, if the crofter is able to pay 6s. just now, and the big farm is broken up, it cannot be over 2s. 6d. an acre. Surely, then, the crofter can afford to pay a little interest in addition to rent.

36,712. Suppose you take that farm of Gallanach as an example. I have not yet been over the farm, and therefore I speak rather from the plan than from personal knowledge of the place; but if you take that farm you will find, I think, that nine-tenths of it is black hill, which is not worth 1s. an acre?—Well, according to the present rent, it comes to 1s. 6d. an acre, good, bad and indifferent, as it stands. The crofters pay 6s., and they have black hill as well as Gallanach. Now there is a great deal of difference between 1s. 6d. and 6s. per acre.

36,713. You think the crofter could pay a rent for the land plus the interest of the money he requires to borrow for fencing and steading?—Yes. Let Gallanach be broken up and let at 1s. 6d. an acre: surely if the crofters can pay 6s., they could pay 1s. 6d. and interest also.

36,714. Would you suppose that the size of croft which you have specified,—six cows and followers and a few sheep,—would be big enough to employ a man and his family all the year round?—That depends entirely on what family he might have.

36,715. Would it be sufficient to employ a man himself, without a family?—I know crofters in Coll that have twelve of a family: it would take the whole of Gallanach to give them all employment!

36,716. Do you think a man would find profitable employment on a croft of that size?—Yes, I think so. I remember very well when there were crofts of that size in Coll, and they were making a living out of them.

36,717. Yes, but would they be content with the same now?—Yes, that is what they ask; they ask no more than about that size.

Coll, Argyllshire. — John Johnston.

36,718. Are there any people here who follow the occupation of fishing along with crofting?—There are a few; in the summer time, generally, these crofters fish, and there are perhaps three or four crofters that work at it all the year round; but most of them just take a spell at it in the summer time.

36,719. What sort of a living do those who occupy themselves with the fishing all the year round make?—A pretty fair living.

36,720. Are they as well off as the crofters?—Not altogether; they have a difficulty in the winter time.

36,721. Do they go to the white fishing? Do they fish as line fishermen?—Some are line fishermen and others are lobster fishermen.

36,722. These go to lobster fishing in winter and herring fishing in summer?—The native population here do not fish herring, but cod and ling.

36,723. In the summer time?—Yes.

36,724. With the smaller boats?—Yes.

36,725. Would there be any demand in the island for fishermen's crofts,—that is, 2 acres each?—Yes, these fishermen would like to have a piece of land attached to their houses.

36,726. Is the village of Airidh-nan-gobhar, here, the principal fishing station in the island?—It is not the best; there are more fishermen here than elsewhere, but over at Cornaig is the best fishing ground for the whole island.

36,727. Were the people who applied for the 2 acre lots, of which Rev. Mr Ross spoke, fishermen, or any of them?—Some of them are.

36,728. Is that the size of allotments or crofts that, in your opinion, would suit a fisherman?—I believe that, as a rule, they do not wish a large croft, but they would like to have a cow's grass and a certain amount of land for potato ground, &c., and some pasture for the cows.

36,729. That is the sort of croft which you think the fishermen would readily take to?—Yes. Some of them have been speaking to me about that, and saying they would like to have that along with their fishing; but others who have means would take more land, and give up the fishing altogether.

36,730. Would the land which Mr Ross spoke of be suitable for fishermen's holdings? Is it near the village here?—There is plenty of land near the village, all round.

36,731. Are there any other ports as good as Airidh-nan-gobhar?—There is a port on the Cornaig Estate better than Airidh-nan-gobhar for fishing, and there is one at Breackacha too,—Port Luing, which you saw yesterday.

36,732. That is a good place, is it?—Yes.

36,733. And do you think that if land were got there, there could be established a small fishing village down near the pier there?—Yes, there is no doubt of it.

36,734. In addition to the land you showed us yesterday, you will be able to show us what other land there is in the island suitable for allotments?—I will accommodate the Commissioners in that respect.

36,735. Mr Munro.—Are there many people in the island of Coll who could take land without any outside assistance?—There are.

36,736. Could the majority of the crofters take enlarged holdings without any outside help?—Yes. I believe I can safely say the majority could.

36,737. And could they erect the necessary buildings on their holdings?—Yes.

36,738. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—How many crofters on the Coll Estate are to-day under the Crofters Act?—Five.

36,739. How many tenants were on this estate when Mr Stewart bought the property, whose rents were within the limits of the Crofters Act,—under £30?—Possibly you may call it about 70.

36,740. So that, if the Crofters Act had passed about fifty years ago, there would have been 75 tenants or thereabouts on the Coll Estate to-day under the Act?—Yes.

36,741. With security of tenure and sitting at a fair rent?—Yes.

36,742. Now, could you tell us how many tenants there are besides the five crofters on the Coll Estate at present?—There are 18 holding land, but eight of them have only small pieces that do not amount to much, leaving practically 10 tenants holding any size.

36,743. Does that include the five crofters?—No; 18 altogether, between crofters and all.

36,744. So that, besides the crofters, there are only ten?—Only 10 that have any size of holdings, and eight with small pieces.

36,745. Do you know the total rental to-day of all the lands in the proprietor's own hands?—According to the Valuation Roll, the rent, including the village houses, &c., is £2962, 12s. 7d. This includes the whole tenantry, householders as well. [Question repeated.]—No, I did not make that up.

36,746. You did not mention the farms in the hands of the laird?—No, but I could state them.

36,747. Name them, please?—Gallanach, Grishipoll, Totronald, Ballard, Breackacha, Acha, Kilbride, Airidh-nan-gobhar; I think that is all, but these are pretty large holdings.

36,748. You said that the total rent of Airidh-nan-gobhar in 1854 was £56, 1s. 6d.?—Yes.

36,749. What is the rent of Airidh-nan-gobhar to-day?—£80, 10s.

36,750. What subjects were covered by the rent of £56, 1s. 6d. in 1854?—They had all the land round here; I don't know the acreage, but it is considerable. There were 18 tenants, some of them paying £3, 8s., one £3, one £6, 8s., and these had generally two or three cows, as well as a horse or pony, and a share of the hill. There are some of the villagers here who can tell how many sheep they had.

36,751. But the £56, 1s. 6d. in that case covered the houses, peats, crofts, and common grazings?—The whole thing.

36,752. And what do they pay the £80, 10s. for to-day?—For the bare houses alone. This includes the shop in Mr Stewart's own hands; but there was a shop at that time also, although it is on the site of the ground where the people are.

36,753. How many shops are in the place now?—Only one.

36,754. In whose hands is it?—In the proprietor's hands.

36,755. Do you remember when these farms in the laird's hands were cleared of their tenants?—Yes, it was a gradual process; Airidh-nan-gobhar was cleared in the year 1857.

36,756. That is the year after the property was bought?—Yes. The great clearance was made in 1861, when the Cornaig crofters were removed.

36,757. Why were they cleared? What was the excuse or reason for their removal?—That is a question that I cannot tell very well. Some of them were removed by ordinary summons, others by raising the rent so high that they could not pay it, and certain of the conditions attached as to draining, under penalty of raising the rent, such as they could not accept. Some of the people left voluntarily, because they could not stay. There are different ways of sending away people. You can do it by imposing conditions which cannot be complied with.

36,758. Could you give me the name of one of the farms last cleared and now in the hands of the laird?—I should say Totronald.

36,759. Take Totronald then: how many tenants were there in Totronald formerly?—Six.

36,760. Do you remember Donald Maclean and John Maclean, rented at £9 and £9, 10s. respectively?—Yes.

36,761. What stock had they?—I really do not remember, but they would have between four and six cattle, and they had sheep and two horses. Four cows and their followers, I believe, was the rule, but some may have had six.

36,762. Taking the tenants who were within the £30 limit, were they, as a rule, in a condition of comfort before the estate was sold to Mr Stewart?—Certainly they were: I well remember that.

36,763. Were the tenants of Airidh-nan-gobhar considered better off when they had the land than they are to-day?—Decidedly.

36,764. They are paying a bigger rent to-day for nothing than they were paying before for the land and the peats?—Yes.

36,765. And that did not improve their condition?—No.

36,766. The crofts in those days were not of the same size?—No, some were larger than others.

36,767. What was the lowest rent on the whole estate?—I think the lowest were in Airidh-nan-gobhar: the lowest rent of a croft there was £1.

36,768. And if cottars got land now on these farms, would you make every croft separate from every other croft, or would you have the arable land separate, and common grazing for the whole? Would you establish them in single crofts or in townships?—I would prefer to see them separate with a common. The original plan was to have the crofts separate, where they had the arable land and their houses, but they had a moss common outside.

36,769. Is that the way in which the thing was managed before, the arable land separate, and a common grazing on which every man had the right to put stock in proportion to his rent?—Yes.

36,770. Is that the condition on which the crofters hold to-day?—That is the condition upon which the Cornaig crofters hold.

36,771. I am speaking about the Coll Estate.—No, not on the Coll Estate; the crofters have no common at all, nothing but the croft itself; they are fenced in.

36,772. And that tends very much to the injury of the croft itself?—It does, certainly.

COLL, 15*th May* 1894.

DONALD MACINNES, Mason, Uig (29)—examined. Donald Macinnes

36,773. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a statement to submit to us?—I have.

36,774. Would you kindly read it, please?—In submitting a detailed statement of the lands available and suitable in Coll for allotments and small holdings, I may be allowed to give a short account of the past and present social condition of the island. In 1776 we find the population at 925, inhabiting 185 houses. The number of inhabited houses in the island during the census taken on 20th June 1811 was 224, in which resided 229 families, the total population being 1277 souls. From that year to the year 1841 the number increased to 1442, but an extraordinary decrease is evident in the course of the census taken in 1861, when the population was declared to be as low as 781; while in 1881 the number was reduced to 643. At present the population is about 500 souls. Previous to the late J. L. Stewart purchasing the estate in 1856, one Captain Donald Campbell was the ruling power in Coll. In his time he is reported to have removed 700 people from the island, i.e., between 1841 and 1861. When the late Mr Stewart got possession of the estate there were 68 tenants. The very first year of his rule the baneful work of clearing away the people commenced. Totronald, Grimarsay, Totamore, Gressipol, and Airidh-nan-gobhar were cleared of comfortable and respectable crofters. A large number of these people went to America, Australia, and other cities, as their individual circumstances enabled them to do. But, alas! few of them outlived the voyage, having died of fever on the passage, and were committed to the Atlantic as a watery grave. Verily, that was a year of gloom and doom in the calendar of Coll. Helpless old people with a helpless family might be seen weeping and wailing, leaving the homes of their childhood and sent adrift upon the world, with nothing before them but to quit the island or jump into the sea. But, to the immortal praise of the late Mr Campbell of Cornaig, all these poor families were, out of compassion, accommodated on his estate, where they or their descendants are living witnesses to this day of the heartless evictions of that year. In addition to 16 tenants, there are six landless cottars on the Cornaig Estate who are only waiting the opportunity of returning to their former homes on the Coll Estate. There are also a large number of cottars and labourers throughout the island who applied to the County Council for small holdings, but we are still without land, and will always be, if Colonel Stewart can help it. For 35 long years the estate officials have subjected the native population to the utmost contumacy and oppression, which could not be tolerated but by a long-suffering and law-abiding people. Now, however, our patience is exhausted and our sufferings unbearable. Around us on every side we see land lying waste under sheep and rashes, while the people starve for the want of it. They who have been reduced to such an unfortunate position have been brought to that position by an unfair system of land laws, by which Colonel Stewart and his father were enabled to sweep out of existence many townships throughout the island, leaving in many cases no trace behind them but the ashes covering the spots where former happy homesteads stood. In the majority of cases these people were comfortable and happy, and poverty unknown amongst them. The presently impoverished landless cottars, as some love to describe them, did not leave their crofts and homes of their own accord, but, on the contrary, were practically driven out of them, when extensive sheep walks became the order of the day. Colonel Stewart has in his own hands, without interfering with any of the farms with tenants, sufficient land to provide fully 200 holdings of say 100 acres each. The farm of Gallanach alone is 5000 acres in extent, and consists of excellent hill grazing and good arable land. It may be remarked that in Torastan, which has been added to Gallanach, there were some nine or ten families who had a share of the land. Some of these old tenants might be called to give evidence if necessary. In the township of Gressipol 36 years ago there were eight crofters and a few cottars. I have been informed that when Mr Stewart collected his first rent in the parish church, he exhibited a six-chambered revolver on the table. For what purpose I am not in a position to say,—probably to terrify the people. On the day in question one incident occurred which ought not to go unrecorded. One Allan Mackinnon went in to pay his rent, which he had in full, but not a penny more. It was about that date that it became law that all receipts for sums over £2 should be affixed with a penny stamp. Allan was asked for the penny, and when he told that he had not a penny, he was ordered to go and get it, while his Glengarry bonnet was kept as security for the payment of the postage stamp. That is but an instance of the treatment which was being meted out to the Coll people in the past. And truly equally harsh treatment is to be seen under the present management of the estate. I cannot conclude my statement without stating a case in proof of my assertion. For some years past the respected Free Church minister of Coll has incurred the loyal displeasure of the powers that be for advocating the cause of the poor people, with the result that he is boycotted beyond human endurance. The latest move against him was the erection of a six row barbed wire fence to the front door of the manse, while the same was done to the kitchen door. A more scandalous action was never before committed in Scotland. Not only was it put up one time, but three times in succession, and pulled down on every occasion. In addition to this, the well from which the manse was supplied with water was filled in with all sorts of rubbish, but more may be heard of the matter before long. It has been a most cowardly action on the part of Colonel Stewart and his representatives, and they may yet live to see that it is so. In conclusion, and apart altogether from this, I beg to impress upon your Royal Commission that, with the view of the creation of new holdings, it is absolutely necessary that advances be made by the State in the way of loans to assist in the reclamation of holdings, the houses thereon, and the purchase of stock. I anticipate your favourable consideration to my imperfect statement. Coll, Argyllshire.

(Signed) Donald M'Innes, Mason. Donald Macinnes.

Uig, Coll.

36,774*a*. You have heard the evidence that has been given by the former witnesses?—Yes.

36,775. And I observe that you concur as to the general want of new holdings, and also as to the necessity for Government assistance or some assistance in the shape of a loan for building or fencing or stocking, should such holdings become available?—Yes.

36,776. Do you think there are any people in the Island of Coll who could start on their own account without assistance?—There are a few.

36,777. But the majority could not?—No, they could not.

36,778. Have you any ideas of your own as to the size of holdings that would be most desirable in Coll?—Twenty acres arable.

36,779. And some hill grazing?—Yes.

36,780. Mr Munro.—From the statement which you have submitted, I understand that the relations of Colonel Stewart with the people of the island are not at all friendly?—Far from it.

36,781. Does he harshly govern the small tenants on his property?—He does not do so personally, but his factor does.

36,782. And do you think his factor does so, acting on instructions received from Colonel Stewart?—He says so.

36,783. You have mentioned the case of Mr Ross, the Free Church minister. Do you know for what reason it was that his house was barricaded?—Because he takes the part of the people: that is the only reason I can think of.

36,784. And is his house at this moment barricaded with a barbed wire fence?—I suppose not at present: it has been broken down.

36,785. Now, with reference to this question of State advances, you said you thought, if the people were to be reinstated in the land, they would require to be assisted by advances from the State?—Yes.

36,786. Is that the general feeling of the people here?—Yes, in this island.

36,787. Mr Johnston, the previous witness, as you would have heard, gave it as his opinion that a majority of the crofters could take and stock holdings and erect the necessary houses without any outside assistance?—Well, a few can do so, but the majority cannot.

36,788. If the people were reinstated in these holdings, is it your opinion that they could turn them to advantage?—Yes, on fair conditions.

36,789. And do you think they would be fairly prosperous, under fair conditions of occupancy?—Yes.

36,790. Could they pay a rent at all equal to what the present tenants pay,—say for the large farms?—They could pay the same rent per acre as the large farmers.

36,791. And erect buildings at their own expense, or would they look to the State to erect buildings for them?—The majority would look to the State.

36,792. Do you think they would be in a position to repay the advance made by the State, as well as pay a fair rent?—At a fair interest.

36,793. Say 3 per cent.?—Or 3½ per cent.

Hugh Macinnes, Airidh-nan-gobhar (72). Hugh Macinnes.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter, the Secretary.)

36,794. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a house in Airidh-nan-gobhar?—Yes.

36,795. Do you hold it on yearly agreement, or under lease or feu?—(Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—This witness produces a statement taken down from his word of mouth on 16th May 1890, which goes minutely into the tenure of the houses: perhaps it must be read on behalf of the witness.)

36,796. I see the statement referred to says that all the houses in Airidh-nan-gobhar occupied by cottars were built by the original inhabitants, some of them having the assistance of masons from Mull, &c. When were these houses built?—A long time ago.

Coll, Argyllshire. Hugh Macinnes.

36,797. Can you tell the number of years?—No, I cannot say. My father purchased the house I occupy myself: it was not well built originally, and it tumbled down, so my father rebuilt it.

36,798. There is no lease of any kind for these houses?—We have no 'writing' on the houses. My father had land originally that carried two cows and a horse.

36,799. Do you wish to come forward here with a view to getting some land,—is that your desire?—To get a little land in which I could plant potatoes.

36,800. But you do not wish a larger holding?—No, but I have children from home, and if I got land they would come home.

36,801. And you think if you had your family at home it would be better for you?—Oh, yes.

36,802. Mr Munro.—To put the matter shortly, is it the general complaint of the people here that they are shut out from the use of the land?—Yes.

36,803. Mr Gordon.—Were you one of the men who applied for the 2-acre lots?—Yes, I was asking 2 acres.

36,804. Were you one of the ten or twelve people who applied for these 2-acre lots?—(Rev. Mr Ross.—I may be allowed to say that he is.)

36,805. Are you one of those who signed the petition to Mr Stewart?—Yes.

36,806. On consideration, you and the others did not see your way to accept the land on the conditions laid down by Mr Darroch?—We did not get it.

36,807. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.— You stated that your father had bought the house which you now occupy. What did your father pay for it?—I don't know: it was before I was born.

36,808. What became of the man who sold it?—He went to America.

36,809. Then who built your present house?—My father built a house for himself originally. The occupant of this house, as I said, went to America, and my father, preferring it to his own house, sold the latter and bought this one.

36,810. In your younger days, was there any rent for the houses?—No: we had land to keep two cows and a horse.

36,811. Had each house a croft?—Yes.

36,812. What rent were you yourself paying?—About £2, 10s. a year.

36,813. Had you peats for nothing at that time?—Yes.

36,814. Have you peats for nothing to-day?—Yes, for I cannot pay for any. They charge 10s. each for the right to cut peats.

36,815. What rent does the laird demand to-day for the house alone?—£3, 10s. between the house and the right to cut peats.

36,816. Have you consented to the payment of that?—I did not consent; I was working, and they retained the rent from my wages.

36,817. Were you summoned out of the house?—We were not summoned out, but he was trying to put us out: we got a notice to remove.

36,818. When the cottars of Airidh-nan-gobhar applied for 2 acres from the laird, were the estate officials holding that you were in arrear for the rent of the house, and that therefore you could not get land?—They did not give us the land, at any rate.

36,819. Were the people of Airidh-nan-gobhar, at the time when they had the land, more comfortable than they are to-day?—Yes.

36,820. Do you remember when the big farms, now in the hands of the laird, were occupied by tenants?—Yes.

36,821. In what condition were they at that time?—They were very well off.

36,822. Were they able to pay their rents?—Yes.

36,823. Do you believe that giving the land to the people, apportioning it out to them as they occupied it before Mr Stewart became proprietor, would put the people of Coll into comfortable circumstances?—Yes, if the place was re-settled as it was formerly, in the olden times.

Coll, Argyllshire. Hugh Macinnes.

CHARLES MACFADYEN, Airidh-nan-gobhar (about 50). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

Charles Macfadyen.

36,824. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a house at Airidh-nan-gobhar?—Yes.

36,825. Have you heard the statement of the former witnesses as to the desire for land?—Yes.

36,826. Do you agree with them?—Yes.

36,827. Would you like to have a holding yourself if you could get one?—That is what brought me here to-day.

36,828. Supposing that land were available for a holding, would you be able to build and stock and fence without help?—No.

36,829. You would require help?—Yes.

36,830. Do you think you could pay interest on a loan, and a fair rent as well?—I would not require to build a house: the house that was always attached to the land is still in my possession.

36,831. Then it is a certain piece of land you are looking after,—not just any that may be available?—Land in the neighbourhood of Airidh-nan-gobhar.

36,832. Are you a boatman and fisherman as well?—I sometimes fish for 'cuddies.'

36,833. But you earn your livelihood by acting as boatman here to the steamers, and otherwise?—Yes, the kind of living I make.

36,834. Then, if you got land, you would want it near here?—Yes.

36,835. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Did you get a croft yourself at one time on the farm of Airidh-nan-gobhar?—My father had one.

36,836. How long is it since it was taken from him?—When it was taken from the other tenants.

36,837. How many years ago?—I cannot tell the year.

36,838. Had Mr Stewart been laird long when he did that?—No.

36,839. What rent did your father pay for the house and peats, and the common grazing, and the croft?—I think it was £2 he paid; all the tenants had two crofts, one inside at Airidh-nan-gobhar, and the other on the hill,—an infield and an outfield croft.

36,840. What stock had your father on the croft?—Two cows and followers and a horse, along with the sheep on the hill.

36,841. What rent are you charged to-day?—Till three years ago I was paying £5.

36,842. For what?—For the house. Three years ago it was reduced by £1.

36,843. So that for the last three years you have paid £4 for the bare house, and before that £5?—Yes.

36,844. Who built the house?—The houses were built before, I don't know by whom. They were built before I was born.

36,845. Was it your father's house?—No, not where I am.

36,846. Can you tell whether the tenants, who were put out of the townships that are now farms, were paid compensation for the holdings they left?—No.

36,847. Have you been in the estate employment yourself some time ago?—Yes, 19 years till a year ago.

36,848. Why did you leave it?—I left it on getting three days' notice.

36,849. Who gave the notice?—Mr Darroch gave me notice.

36,850. What was the reason?—I will tell you that. It was because I voted against Mr Stewart at the County Council election; who told him so I don't know.

36,851. Did he state distinctly to you that that was the reason you were dismissed the service?—Yes.

36,852. Did he make a threat at the time against others?—I don't know what he did to any but myself.

36,853. Did he state to you that he would be revenged on others?—He said he might send away every other one as well as myself.

Donald Maclean, Airidh-an-t-Sluic (70). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

36,854. Mr Forsyth.—Where do you reside?—In Airidh-an-t-Sluic.

36,855. Have you a croft?—No, I have nothing but a house.

36,856. How do you get your living?—My family maintain me.

36,857. Have you a desire to get a holding in this island?—Yes.

36,858. And do you concur with what has been said before?—Yes.

36,859. Is there any additional evidence you can give us?—No.

36,860. Then we shall simply take you as concurring generally in the evidence already heard.

Angus Macfarlane, Soddisdale (60)—examined.

36,861. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a croft at Soddisdale?—Yes, my brother has a croft, and I live with him.

36,862. What rent do you pay for it?—£10, 10s.

36,863. Do you find that croft sufficient to maintain you?—No.

36,864. It is too small, is it?—Too small.

36,865. Are you a married man yourself?—No.

36,866. Then you simply live with your brother?—He is not married.

36,867. There is no family, but just the two of you?—Yes.

36,868. Have you a sister who keeps house for you?—Yes.

36,869. And you find the croft smaller than you need?—Yes.

36,870. You would like a larger one?—Yes.

36,871. Do you fish at all from Soddisdale?—No.

36,872. Have the people of Soddisdale got much hill pasture along with their crofts?—Yes, they have.

36,873. Sufficient?—They would take more if it could be got.

36,874. Then is it more in the way of an addition to your croft that you are asking?—Yes.

36,875. Would you move to a good croft elsewhere in Coll? Supposing good land were available, would you be willing to leave Soddisdale?—Oh, yes.

36,876. But you would prefer to get more land where you are?—Well, yes, but I am not very particular; I am getting old now, and I have no family.

36,877. You would prefer an addition to the croft as it is?—Yes.

36,878. Some of the crofts there are much smaller than yours, are they not?—They are just about the same: some of them have only half a croft.

36,879. We have heard evidence to-day, showing that the people on the Cornaig Estate, generally, would be pretty comfortable if they had better prices for stock, and their holdings were enlarged: do you agree with that?—Yes.

36,880. Then I suppose they are fairly comfortable as it is, are they not?—Yes, they are not ill off.

36,881. And you consider that similar holdings could be formed in the other parts of Coll, successfully?—Yes.

36,882. And that people could raise their families on them in comfort?—Yes.

36,883. Mr Gordon.—Are there many of your neighbours who would be able to stock new holdings if they got them of a larger size than they hold at present?—Yes, there are some.

36,884. Are the Cornaig crofters in fair circumtances?—Yes.

36,885. Do they live mostly from the produce of their crofts?—Yes.

36,886. Or do they go to work elsewhere?—A very few: some of the young folks do.

36,887. But the older men live solely on their crofts, and make a livelihood there?—Yes.

36,888. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Were you one of the tenants removed from Coll?—No. Coll, Argyllshire.

36,889. Do you know tenants in Cornaig now who were removed from Coll?—Yes, they are along with me in Soddisdale. Angus Macfarlane.

36,890. Did they leave of their own will, or were they cleared out,—forced out?—They were practically forced out when they were rack-rented and unable to pay their rents.

36,891. Were they paid compensation for the holdings they left behind them?—No.

36,892. Did they get assistance for the holdings they are in now? Did the estate help them to build new houses?—No.

36,893. So that, if cottars got holdings, do you believe that cottars in the future would be as able to build new houses on new holdings as the Cornaig crofters were when they were sent to Cornaig against their will?—Yes.

36,894. Without any Government advance, if they got the land at a fair rent?—Yes.

[Adjourned.]

FORTY-THIRD SITTING.

TOBERMORY, MAY 18, 1894. Tobermory.

Present:—

George Gordon, Esq. (acting as Chairman).
Rev. Malcolm Maccallum.
Henry Munro, Esq.
William Mackenzie, Esq., Secretary.

Duncan Cameron (79), Portioner, Tobermory—examined. Duncan Cameron.

36,895. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter at present?—Yes.

36,896. Have you a croft near this?—Yes.

36,897. Can you tell us anything about the land of Morven?—I was born there, and have known it all my life.

36,898. Were you a crofter in Morven?—My father was.

36,899. And did you live most of your life there?—No.

36,900. You left it early?—I left it when I was sixteen years of age; but I have been back there again.

36,901. Do you know the country of Morven?—The whole of it. I was a police constable for some time.

36,902. And do you know the history of the country?—Middling well.

36,903. Do you know any part of Morven in which there is available land for crofter settlements?—A good deal of it.

36,904. You know what the object of this Commission is, no doubt?—Yes.

36,905. Can you furnish us with any evidence that would assist in directing our attention to land suitable for crofters?—Only that I know where crofters were before.

36,906. Please mention the places you refer to.—There were crofters at the very top, the highest place in Morven, called Beathach, and they were at the next farm, Claonleathad, also at Altachonaich and Uileann.

36,907. What estate are these places on?—Altachonaich is on Kingairloch estate, which was bought, I think, by Mr Sheriff: he was there then; I don't know who has it now.

Tobermory — Duncan Cameron.

36,908. And where is Claonleathad?—On the estate of Mr Smith of Ardtornish.

36,909. Do you know any other place?—The next place is Muicrach, a small place, also on Mr Smith's estate.

36,910. Is there any other place?—Uilladale.

36,911. Is that also on the same estate?—Yes. There were no crofters on the next one, but I saw six good farmers in Acha-nan-gamhua, on Mr Smith's estate.

36,912. Any other place?—Next is Kinlochaline, and that was in the same way. There were two tenants there.

36,913. Is that also on Mr Smith's estate?—Yes.

36,914. Do you remember any other place?—Yes, Knock, where there were twenty-two or twenty-three.

36,915. Were they crofters?—Yes.

36,916. Is that still on Mr Smith's estate?—Yes.

36,917. Anywhere else?—Keill, next to that.

36,918. Was that a crofters' town?—Yes, there were none but crofters in it.

36,919. You do not know how many?—Well, my grandfather lived there, and I think there were eight or nine altogether.

36,920. Tell us when you come to another estate?—No other estate yet; this one is not yet finished. At Acha-beag there were about eight, and that finishes those on that side.

36,921. Now tell us, in the first place, in what condition is the land now: how is it occupied?—It is under sheep,—grazing land.

36,922. In large farms?—Sheep and deer, and everything that can come to it.

36,923. It is in large grazings?—Yes, large grazings.

36,924. Do you know the names of the farms there? There will not be so many farms as townships?—These are just the same as the rest, waste.

36,925. Are these names which you have given the names of the farms now?—Yes.

36,926. Are they occupied by tenants, or in the hands of the proprietor?—No, there is not a tenant. There are two crofters, one at Keill and one at Sabharaidh. Sabharaidh is a place I have not mentioned yet, but there were six in it, good farmers.

36,927. You say that, with the exception of two crofters, the whole of the land you have mentioned is under sheep or deer, and in the proprietor's hands?—Shepherds and all that sort of thing: there is no crofter. On the other side, you begin with Inniemore.

36,928. What estate is that on?—Miss Beattie's estate. In Inniemore there were six good crofters.

36,929. The next place?—The next place is Aird-an-tiobairt; I saw eleven in it. The next crofters in my time were in Druim-buidhe.

36,930. How many crofters would be there?—I think there would be seven.

36,931. After that, any other place?—The island of Carna opposite; it belongs to Mr Dalgleish now. It is an island at the mouth of Loch Teacuis.

36,932. And the next?—The next farm to Drumbuidhe was Poll-a'-chorran.

36,933. How many were there?—Two.

36,934. Is that still on Miss Beattie's estate?—No, it is on the estate of Mr Gordon of Drimnin. Drumbuidhe is on the same estate. The next place is Sornagan.

36,935. How many crofters were there?—It was one family, but there were three houses occupied by three brothers. There were really three crofts.

36,936. Was it a joint tenancy?—No, they were not joint.

36,937-8. There were three different farm-houses?—Yes, there were three farm-houses, but the sheep would go together. That is on the same estate, Drimnin.

36,939. What is the next place?—Port-a'-bhata, on the same estate; and then comes Carraig.

36,940. How many were there?—Four. My uncle was there. Next comes Auliston, where there were six, I think. That is the last upon Drimnin, and the last in Morven too.

36,941. That is just opposite here, is it not?—Yes, and there is nobody in it.

36,942. Do you know anything about the Killundine estate?—There were no crofters in it in my time. Tobermory. — Duncan Cameron.

36,943. Now can you tell us how this land is occupied? Take Inniemore and Aird-an-tiobairt on Miss Beattie's estate; how are these places occupied at present?—Under sheep.

36,944. Let to a tenant?—Yes, it is let to a Mr Hay, the whole estate.

36,945. Then how are Druim-buidhe and the other places upon Drimnin estate occupied?—One farmer has the whole of the side,—Druim-buidhe and Polchoman and Port-a'-bhata.

36,946. What is the name of the farmer?—Donald Macmaster.

36,947. What is the name of his farm?—He lives in Druim-buidhe; the rest is under Mr Gordon's own management.

36,948. And do you think the whole of the land is suitable for being repeopled with crofters?—I think so.

36,949. Do you know anything about the circumstances of the crofters who were on it in your day?—I do.

36,950. What sort of circumstances were these people in when you knew them?—I knew all who were in Inniemore and in Acha-nan-gamhna; they had about eight cows and followers each in Acha-nan-gamhna.

36,951. What size of croft had they? What rent did they pay?—I cannot say, but I can tell what rent they paid at Keill.

36,952. But they had all more or less stock?—Every one of them, sheep and cattle.

36,953. And, to the best of your recollection, they were in fairly comfortable circumstances?—Well, there was not so much complaint as there is now, or anything like it.

36,954. Can you tell us anything more?—There is no more land in Morven. I saw a place called Ach-a-ghabhail, where there were two tenants: I passed it.

36,955. Mr Munro. — How long is it since the evictions took place?—Immediately after Sellar came: about the year 1840, or thereabouts.

36,956. Was it 1840, or was it 1849–50?—Oh, it was not so far on as that, I think.

36,957. Was it before or after the potato failure?—Whatever time he came, or a little after he came, he had all that I mentioned on Mr Smith's estate.

36,958. Were they all evicted about the same time?—About the same time: they went to Australia, most of them. The evictions in the other places happened at different times.

36,959. Mr Maccallum. — The largest estate in Morven, I suppose, is Mr Smith's?—Yes, it is about the half of Morven: there is another estate as large.

36,960. What estate is that?—Mr Newton's.

36,961. You did not refer to it before, did you?—There were no crofters on it in my time at all.

36,962. But Mr Newton's is a very large estate?—Very large.

36,963. On what estate is Beathach situated, that you spoke of first?—I did not speak about any of Mr Newton's land at all till now.

36,964. Then you do not remember of any crofters being on Mr Newton's estate?—No.

36,965. Do you think there were no crofters on it at any time? Was it always let in large tacks?—There were no crofters; it was all under sheep and cattle, principally black cattle, since I remember.

36,966. Are you acquainted with the land?—Thoroughly.

36,967. Then, can you mention the large farms on Mr Newton's estate?—That could be turned into crofts?

36,968. Well, mention them at any rate?—There is Kinloch, a very good place.

36,969. Do you think that it might be broken up into smaller farms?—Indeed it could.

36,970. Is there a proportion of arable land in it?—A good proportion, and in Rahoy too.

36,971. What is the rent of Kinloch farm?—There is a good deal along with it; there is Kinloch and Rahoy and Beinn-aitinn all go together.

ermory.
can
eron.

36,972. All these were separate farms which have been consolidated into the farm of Kinloch?—Yes.

36,973. Is there a resident farmer there?—There was a roup there two days ago, and the tenant is leaving; I cannot tell who is coming.

36,974. Do you know if the place is let?—I never heard.

36,975. But it is your opinion that that large farm might profitably be divided into smaller holdings?—It has a good deal of excellent land, the best in Morven for grazing.

36,976. Did you yourself see Rahoy let as a separate farm?—I saw Mr Newton's estate under five tenants.

36,977. And how many are there now?—Only two.

36,978. Are there two tenants on that estate yet?—There were two brothers living at Rahoy, and there was the man at Kinloch who had the sale the other day.

36,979. But just now, how many tenants are there?—He has the whole in his own hands, except Kinloch, and it will be in his hands at the term, I believe.

36,980. And you do not know whether that is re-let?—I cannot say whether it is or not.

39,981. Of course if it is not let it must be in his own hands?—Yes.

36,982. The most thickly populated part of Morven, I suppose, was the estate now held by Mr Smith?—That was the principal place for crofters.

36,983. And do you state that there is no farmer on that estate?—Not one.

36,984. Where there once were so many tenancies?—There are just two crofters, as I had told you.

36,985. How are the people on that estate occupied?—They were getting plenty of work from Mr Smith, those who are in the village of Lochaline.

36,986. They are almost all in the employment of the proprietor?—Yes.

36,987. Do they get grazing for a cow or cows?—Among them all I think there were twenty houses, and only four or five have cows. There is a little farm that the shopkeeper has got, also: he had five or six cattle in my time, and last year he got perhaps as many again.

36,988. The shopkeeper had a farm, and it was added to?—Yes, it was added to; but with that exception there is no one but these two crofters.

36,989. And there are twenty other families, you say?—Thereabouts; they have just a small park, and four or five cows in it, I think.

36,990. These twenty families have a small park fitted for four cows?—Those who have a cow; I think there are only four or five.

36,991. And they get employment on the estate?—Yes: he has a great deal of cattle, and he ploughs the land, and these people work it, cutting the hay and the corn and potatoes and everything else.

36,992. But is it not the usual thing for shepherds and ploughmen to have a cow or two?—There are only three who have a right to a cow, which they got when they built the houses themselves; the rest of the houses belong to himself. I was not considering the shepherds.

36,993. What is the name of the place in which these people live? or are they congregated in one place?—In this one spot, the village of Lochaline.

36,994. And is there in the neighbourhood of that village land suited for forming crofts for these people?—Any amount; did I not mention two score or so just in the immediate vicinity of Lochaline?

36,995. How do these families get the milk they require for the household?—They are working for him; every one he could get was employed in building the house, even hundreds from other quarters.

36,996. And is it your opinion that these people would be benefited by having land given them?—If they had anything proper so as to live on it, but they would not do without a cow or two.

36,997. They would need larger crofts than that?—I think so.

36,998. And is there a desire, do you think, on the part of these people to get crofts?—That is more than I know; they did not tell me what they desired, but I am certain a number of them would want crofts.

36,999. The proprietor, however, has made no attempt to provide them with the land? The policy has always been to take the land into his own hand?—There is not a vestige of a dyke between the crofts that was not put into holes or quarries, out of sight; you will not see where a house was. Tobermory. Duncan Cameron.

37,000. And do you think that these people now are in a sufficiently independent position to come and give evidence with regard to their desire for getting land?—Some of them are sensible enough to tell what they want, surely.

37,001. But are they not dependent upon the proprietor for their employment?—Of course they are.

37,002. And you think that possibly there might be some risk in their giving evidence that would be distasteful to the proprietor?—He never found fault with them. They gathered there in connection with the land league, some of them who had been working for him for fifteen or twenty years, and he did not find fault with them.

37,003. But, however, they are dependent upon the proprietor for employment?—Undoubtedly; there is nothing else.

37,004. They are entirely in his power?—Yes; no doubt.

37,005. Do you not think it would be distasteful to the proprietors to give evidence that there is a great deal of their estates that is laid waste?—I am certain they would give evidence.

37,006. (Question repeated).—I think so.

37,007. And they have it in their power to punish those who give such evidence?—Undoubtedly.

37,008. You find that the large farms are now falling into the proprietors' hands, generally speaking?—Mostly.

37,009. So that the people are getting more and more into the power of the proprietor; is not that so?—That is so.

37,010. Being in his own employment?—Yes.

37,011. So that giving distasteful evidence before the Commission might be at the risk of losing their livelihood?—Might be.

37,012. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—You mentioned a place called Keill; how many tenants were there within your own recollection?—I don't know how many.—(Mr Gordon.—The witness said eight already).—Witness—Yes, but there were two ends in it; I believe there would be more than eight people. Some of them were larger than others; those under the road were larger than those above.

37,013. Take one of the crofts under the road; what stock would a tenant there have?—I know the names of them all on the road all the way to the village, and I have a guess of how many cattle they had.

37,014. Well, give us an idea.—One Cameron had six cows and followers.

37,015. Had he horses?—A horse, but no sheep.

37,016. What rent was he charged for the holding?—I cannot say.

37,017. Take another crofter near him; what stock had he?—Not so much,—perhaps four cows all along under the road; there was one of them who had six.

37,018. From four to six cows and their followers?—Yes.

37,019. Had they all a horse?—Yes.

37,020. Was there poverty among those in that town? Had they plenty to eat and drink?—Plenty of a kind; they had plenty of potatoes, and milk, and butter too.

37,021. Do you believe the kind they had was as good as the kind they have in Tobermory to-day?—I cannot say, but I know they were healthier and stronger men than they are now.

37,022. Was the food better?—I cannot say about that.

37,023. Did they fare better?—I don't say it was better.

37,024. But the men were better?—The men were better, undoubtedly.

37,025. Did you ever count up roughly the number of tenants who were cleared out in the whole of

Morven in your day?—Every one of these that I have mentioned.

37,026. Did you count up the number, how many there were?—I did not, but there would be a great many.

37,027. Would they fill a Free Church?—It would fill more than there are in Morven now, at anyrate.

37,028. There was a large population?—There were more sent out than are in it.

37,029. Do you know what the population of Morven was in the olden time when you were young?—I have it in a printed book, but I have not looked at it for some time. It was in the year 1836 when Campbell of Islay was canvassing here. I could have told you all that had votes then, and the number of people in the parishes of Mull and Morven.*

37,030. Was that the time when several townships were cleared?—I cannot say the year.

37,031. But you remember it?—I remember it.

37,032. Do you know who built the houses in which they live?—I suppose it would be themselves: I did not see anyone build a house except the big farmers.

37,033. You never in your life saw a Highland laird build a house for a crofter?—Never.

37,034. It is the crofter himself who does that?—I think so.

37,035. Did these men get payment for the houses when they were put out?—They did not.

37,036. Cleared out?—Cleared out, and never got a fraction for them.

37,037. There was no word of such a thing as compensation for them, but, out you go?—No, they did not expect it.

37,038. Mr Maccallum.—With regard to the evictions at Achabeag and Knock, do you know now why the people were put out?—Mrs Paterson, the then proprietrix, in order to get the land into her own hands, evicted them all about 28 years ago.

37,039. Were the old tenants in arrear of rent?—I heard they were not a penny in arrear.

37,040. And that they were sent away simply to make room for sheep?—Yes.

37,041. Can you compare the land on Mr Smith's estate, which is now in his own occupation, with the land that is held by crofters in Mull,—say in Ross of Mull?—It is much better,—twice better.

37,042. Do you know of any land at all held by crofters that is so good?—Not in this part.

37,043. This large parish of Morven you think is, on the whole, well adapted for occupation by small farmers?—All that I mentioned, where crofters used to be.

37,044. What is your opinion as to the readiness with which small farms would be taken up in a place like Morven?—There are no people in Morven itself who could do it, because they are run out, and very poor. Those who had crofts are away in Australia and America and in every part.

37,045. And you think there are not people in Morven who would be ready to take them up?—I don't believe it; they are not there.

37,046. But if small farms were made available, do you think the people from other parts of the Highlands would come?—I am certain they would be glad to get it.

37,047. The places would let very readily?—Yes.

37,048. Did you ever hear of any difficulty in letting a small farm?—Oh yes, I have.

37,049. A small farm that could not find a tenant?—Oh no, I never heard that: they will take them anywhere they can get them.

37,050. Did you ever hear of a large farm that could not get a tenant?—I have seen some of them fall into the laird's hands; he could not get as much as he wanted, or something like that.

37,051. Did you ever hear of large farms being advertised for when there was no offer at all?—No, I think not.

37,052. You think that they got some offer?—Yes.

*Cameron has since written explaining that the population of Morven in 1836 was 2083.

37,053. But they prefer to take them into their own hands rather than accept the offers that are made?—Yes.

37,054. Because these offers are so much lower than the old rent?—That is my opinion.

37,055. But, on the other hand, you find that all small farms when they are to let are keenly competed for?—I never saw one of them lie vacant.

37,056. Then if small farms were formed, say, compulsorily out of these large farms, do you think that the letting value of the remainder would be diminished? Suppose you took parts of these large farms and made them into small holdings, would the letting value of the remainder be diminished?—I believe it would spoil the letting value of what was left, because the best would be taken by the crofts.

37,057. That is a supposition: but, suppose you took away from farms like Kinloch the farms that were once separate, such as Rahoy, don't you think that Kinloch would let quite as well without these additions as with them?—I doubt it would not, because the big farmer would like as well to have the good land himself. If the best was taken from him it would not be so easy for him.

37,058. But I do not make any such hypothesis. Supposing you just divide the large farm into the old farms of which it is composed, and offered to let them separately?—Rahoy would let without Kinloch, but if tenants were put into Kinloch they would have cattle and sheep at the top: they wanted the hill as well as the low ground. That is the way they had it in my time.

37,059. Then don't you think it would be advisable, even from the point of view of the proprietor, that the farms should be a good deal diminished in size? Looking to the proprietor's interest, don't you think it would be better for them to have the farms divided into smaller holdings?—I believe they would let for a higher rent.

37,060. And more readily?—And more readily.

James Nisbet, Crofter, Ormsaigbeg, Ardnamurchan (66)—examined.

37,061. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter at present?—Yes.

37,062. What size of croft have you got?—I was paying a rent of £9 previous to the visit of the Crofters Commission, and I am paying £4, 10s. now.

37,063. The 'fair rent' is £4, 10s., is it?—Yes.

37,064. When was the reduction made?—Three years ago.

37,065. Your croft, according to the blue book, extends to two acres arable, four acres two roods outrun, and a share in a common of 1354 acres divided into twenty-three shares.

37,066. How long have you been residing at Ardnamurchan?—I have been twenty-one years in the same croft.

37,067. Do you know the country well?—Very well; I was born in Kilmory, Ardnamurchan.

37,068. Can you tell us of any land that is suitable for crofters in the country?—Any amount.

37,069. Kindly mention the names of the places.—There is Ormsaigmore, the next township to where I am now.

37,070. How is the land occupied just now?—By one individual: there may be a company of them, but there are two cousins.

37,071. It is now occupied as a grazing farm?—As a farm, one steading.

37,072. Is it arable pasture?—Yes.

37,073. What estate is it on?—Mr Dalgleish's.

37,074. Was that place under crofters in your day?—There were eight of us there: it is thirty years ago this month since we were put out by the laird.

37,075. What is the next place you will speak of?—There are the three townships of Suardail-a'-chaoil, Suardail-mor and Suardail-chorrach: these were club farms.

37,076. Until what time?—Until forty-two years ago, when the people were put out of the three townships.

37,077. How are they occupied just now?—By one individual; one family.

37,078. Could you tell us the number of people who were there?—I think there were twenty-two between the three townships.

37,079. What is the next place?—There were other townships—Torr-na-moine,—I don't remember the removal of these, but I know there were crofters there and in the places I am about to mention,—Bourblaig, Coire-a'-mhuilin, Skinid and Glenmore—(I remember the eviction there). The first four of these are occupied by one farm, and Glenmore is another.

37,080. How many people would be in the first four?—I cannot distinctly tell.

37,081. They were once crofter townships?—Yes, and they could be club farms too in those times.

37,082. And they are now worked as one farm?—Yes; perhaps I would be safe in saying there would be from six to eight in each of these townships.

37,083. There would be about twenty-five tenants in the four townships?—Yes.

37,084. I think you said you remember the removal in Glenmore?—Yes.

37,085. Then you could tell us how many were there?—Four. Some are present here who were there.

37,086. Can you tell us of any other places?—They are the best of arable land.

37,087. Are there any other places in your knowledge?—There is Goirtean-fearna; there are still crofters there, but some were put away; and Goirtean-eorna.

37,088. These were crofting townships?—Yes.

37,089. There are a few crofters there yet?—Not one. There are a few on Goirtean-fearna but none on Goirtean-eorna.

37,090. Were they tenants?—They were all crofters.

37,091. Did they hold from the proprietor or from the tenant? Were they sub-tenants?—I could not say as to that, whether they were under the farmer or the proprietor.

37,092. Do the crofters who are still in Goirtean-fearna hold from the proprietor or from the tenant?—They got under the scope of the Act.

37,093. Well, are there any other places that you can mention that either were formerly crofting holdings, or that you consider suitable for crofting townships?—There is a place called Girigidail, at the far west end of Ardnamurchan; that is in the laird's hands.

37,094. Was it an old crofting township?—Yes, I remember when the tenants were removed.

37,095. Are these all upon one estate?—All on Mr Dalgleish's estate. There is also Tairbeart, in Ardnamurchan, but perhaps I need not go that length; if the Commissioners go up to Salen, Loch-Sunart, they will see it.

37,096. Was that also a crofting township?—Yes, there were crofters there within my memory.

37,097. How is that place occupied now?—By one individual family.

37,098. It is now a farm, is it?—Yes.

37,099. Have you any idea how many tenants there used to be in that place?—I cannot say, but probably four or five.

37,100. Is there any other place in that quarter?—That is all that I can speak to from memory as having been under crofters.

37,101. Now, do you know if this land is suitable for crofting still?—To tell the truth, all this land has been made big farms. There is a place called Laga.

37,102. Was it an old crofting township?—Yes, and there was also a place called Glendryen; there were seven tenants in the former and eight in the latter.

37,103. How are these two places now occupied?—By one family in each.

37,104. You were going to tell us your opinion about the suitability of the land for crofters; do you think it is suitable?—It is all suitable; we got nothing but what they could not let as a farm.

37,105. That is to say, you were put out of the best of the land?—The best of the land, and put on these rocks, because the farmer would not take it; it was not worth taking.

37,106. And do you think if the land were made available for the people it would probably be taken up by them?—I have no doubt of it, if they got encouragement.

37,107. Where are the people who were on these crofts? Possibly many of them are dead?—There are a good few of them sent to these patches; I am one that has a patch.

37,108. Either they or their descendants, or a good many of them are still on the ground?—Yes, and some are away to foreign countries.

37,109. Now, do you suppose that many of these people would care to go back to the land again if they were offered it?—I believe they would, and glad to get it.

37,110. Do you think they would be able to stock a moderately-sized croft?—It would be far cheaper for them to stock such a croft than to be buying stuff, or their sons and daughters sending home enough to enable them to live.

37,111. How do they maintain themselves at present?—By what their families give them.

37,112. You speak of them being put on the rocks: are they on the sea-shore?—Quite close to the sea-shore.

37,113. Do any of them follow the occupation of fishermen?—Most of those in Ardnamurchan go in steamers or in vessels coasting abroad.

37,114. They are sailors, in fact?—Yes, sailors. I have three sons who are all at sea; and I am enabled to make a living by what they send me, not by any profits of the croft.

37,115. Are they employed on the steamers or vessels in the neighbourhood, or do they go abroad?—They are in the home trade; there is one abroard at present.

37,116. Are there many of the people who were removed from the townships which you have mentioned, who are still residing in Ardnamurchan and following the occupation of fishermen?—Very few.

37,117. They do not take kindly to it?—They don't depend on the fishing.

37,118. Are there any good harbours round that coast?—None at all.

37,119. There is a want of harbours?—We are wanting a harbour now, but, owing to some trifling difficulty between the County Council and the laird, we cannot get the slip.

37,120. As a matter of fact, they cannot fish at present for want of harbour accommodation?—They cannot; we have to use small boats to put them out to the steamers.

37,121. Do you think, if moderately good harbours were provided, a fair proportion of the population would take to fishing?—I believe they would, and be glad to get the chance.

37,122. But, after all, do you think that these men who might take to fishing would still like to get a small patch of land for potato ground, and a cow's grass?—I believe they would; it would be a great help to them.

37,123. Do you think there is a real want of milk for themselves or their families present?—They cannot have milk when they have no cow. We in the township are allowed to keep three cows without followers; we need all the milk for ourselves, and the poor fishermen cannot get any even to buy.

37,124. And are there many people in your neighbourhood?—No, I cannot say there are a great many of them; a few strangers come in summer time, and they cannot get the milk.

37,125. We would not mind the strangers so much if we could get the people in the locality comfortable.—If there was a harbour there, it would encourage the trade of the place.

37,126. What size of a croft would you suggest that these people should get?—Well, the country is wide enough, and there is plenty of arable land. I would recommend a two-horse holding for each, in order that he might live on it with comfort.

37,127. That is what we are pointing at, a self-supporting croft. You think a croft should be big enough to keep a man with a pair of small country horses?—Quite so.

Tobermory. James Nisbet.

37,128. That would be from 20 to 30 acres of arable land, and with as much grazing as would keep six or eight cows, and possibly sixty or seventy sheep? Yes, I would say so.

37,129. And you think that size of a croft should be able to support a man with his family, provided always that it was moderately rented?—I would require to explain that; with cattle and other produce at their present low price, the rent would need to be very low before they could maintain themselves.

37,130. I quite understand your meaning,—that is to say, the land is not worth the same rent now as it was some years ago, and what was a fair rent twenty or fifteen years ago would not be a fair rent to-day?—No.

37,131. I quite concur in that statement, but you think that is the size of croft you would recommend, and not an £8 or £9 croft?—That would not be worth asking, I think.

37,132. Take your own case as an example. The produce of your croft, even without a rent, would not support you, I suppose?—I believe my hens alone would eat up all the produce of the croft. I buy the corn I sow every year.

37,133. And you consume all the produce?—Yes, and have to spend £3 or £4 in wintering the cows, in addition, in fodder and meal.

37,134. We find, in our experience going through this and other parts of the Highlands, that the great difficulty among the crofting population is overstocking, even when they have land?—Where they have the pasture it can support them, but the patch of arable land would not keep one cow, giving her justice.

37,135. I must say this, that where we found the crofters most comfortable in circumstances it was always where there was a good extent of hill grazing attached to their crofts?—Yes the pasture is useful; but, as for our patch of arable land, it is just on rocks. If you go three yards you are sure to meet a rock.

37,136. But a good part of this ground which you have mentioned is not rocky ground, but such arable ground as could be tilled?—Yes, besides the outrun. In Laga there are parks, and in Glenmore there are parks; and, coming to Skinid, Coire a'mhuilinn, and all these places, there are fields which are just going wild under sheep. White grass is to be seen in them when it should be eaten in the winter.

37,137. Mr Maccallum.—You said Ormsaigmore is now held as one farm?—Yes.

37,138. Do you know the circumstances that led to the removal of the people and the formation of it into one farm?—We could not understand it. We were paying £140, 10s. at the time we were there, eight of us, and it is now less than £100 of rent. The proprietor built a square of houses, and a byre and stable, and put dykes in for the tenant.

37,139. For the man who has the whole farm?—Yes.

37,140. Then you think that if the place were again divided into small holdings it would let very well?—I have no doubt of it. I am not saying that it is the best of land, this Ormsaigmore, but still it is the best there.

37,141. But you think it would be more easily let in that way than as one farm?—Undoubtedly.

37,142. Is there much in the proprietor's own hands that is suitable for being made into small holdings in your opinion?—There is. There are places like Glenbeg and Glenborrodale.

37,143. Are these two in the proprietor's own hands?—Yes.

37,144. Were they formerly let to a tenant?—They were. You have other witnesses who lived near, and who can speak to the former tenancy.

37,145. Is there any other place in the proprietor's own hands that might be suitable for the formation of small holdings?—I think not, so far as I know.

37,146. What is the name of the farm that includes Torr-na-moine, Bourblaige, and the other townships you mentioned, Coire-mhuilinn and Skinid?—It is called Mingary. In my time Mingary was always under one party.

Tobermo James Ni

37,147. In your recollection it was always one farm?—Yes. Of course I was but a boy when they were put out of these townships. It was one Maccoll who put them out, and took the whole of these farms. He had Mingary before that, where Castle Mingary is.

37,148. But you think it is quite capable of being divided into four farms, following, say, the old marches, the old boundaries of these townships?—In my opinion that is so. Those who were there were comfortable enough.

37,149. Then do you find that the proprietor encourages small holdings in any way?—I could not say.

37,150. Was there any offer made to the crofters of any of these lands that you have spoken to?—No offer that I am aware of.

37,151. Seeing that small farms let so readily, and large farms with so much difficulty, how can you account for the proprietor being so averse to forming small holdings?—So far as I could learn, he found some difficulty in collecting his rent, and, with only one tenant, the matter was much easier. I might not be so ready with my rent as a big farmer.

37,152. But don't you find now that, when these farms are offered to let, the rent is very much reduced, and the offers made for taking it very much less than the old rent?—They are bound to be. In the case of Ormsaigmore, which I mentioned, the place where I myself was, I know the rent we paid, and I know pretty nearly what is paid now; and this is the second farmer who is there since I left it.

37,153. I can easily see that it is more convenient to get the rent from one man; but when the rent that is to be paid by one man is so very much lower than the rent that would be paid by smaller tenants, I do not see that that would be a sufficient inducement to the proprietor to make it a large farm?—I believe that is the rule, supposing he would lose a few pounds, a pound on one here and there. But it would take a year's rent, or thereabouts, to pay for all the improvements that he made on the three Swordales, in the way of dykes and fences and a steading.

37,154. Do you think that if the proprietor paid the same attention to the small farmers as he is doing to the large, they would be ready enough to pay their rents?—If they had got their land at its value.

37,155. You say that the large farmers get houses and fences put up for them, but that nothing is being done for the small tenants?—I put a roof on my house, and on my byre and barn, and I had to pay Mr Dalgleish for every stick of it, and I had to get it built and thatched myself. The very 'staps' that were required to fence the place, we had to pay 3d. each for, in addition to the freight by boat. That is no encouragement to improve.

37,156. Are there many crofts in Ardnamurchan that are self-supporting?—I do not know one in the whole of Ardnamurchan, and I know all Ardnamurchan. It is fifty-nine years since I first remember it, and every one that has a croft is supported by the family.

37,157. The crofts are all too small?—Too small.

37,158. Are there many cottars?—There are not many cottars either; there are some at a place they call Achteny, and there are others about Ardslignish, and these places.

37,159. Are there not cottars about your own place, Ormsaigmore?—No, none.

37,160. How many crofters are there?—We are twenty-two.

37,161. Now, among these crofters, are there many who would be prepared to take a self-sustaining holding?—In my opinion there are.

37,162. They would be willing to remove from that to the lands that you have mentioned, if they were divided into small holdings?—I believe they would.

37,163. What reason have you to believe that they would do that?—We are there working and digging away where there is no ground, but if we had some soil to work on we would have some promise of something at the end of the year for our labour.

37,164. Have they expressed their desire to leave? Have they held meetings?—Every one I was asking was anxious that the Crofters Commission should come round and enlarge their holdings.

37,165. They have shown, by holding meetings and delegating you, for instance, that they are anxious for it?—Quite eager for it.

37,166. And would some of them be able without outside help to stock such holdings?—Not at the rate that I am counting for a pair-horse holding. There would be a good many of them who could not do that without help, even getting the ground at a fair value.

37,167. But do you think now that these could pay as good a rent as is being paid by the large farmers?—In former times, before the farmers got it, there was more rent paid for the farms, but what would follow I cannot say.

37,168. The large farmers have got great reductions?—We crofters in Ormsaigbeg pay far more rent than better townships round about us.

37,169. Do you think you are paying at a higher rate for your crofts than is being paid by the large farmers now, after the reductions they have got?—It is my opinion that, in the case of the farmer paying 7s. 6d. per acre, for instance, I am paying £1. Our township of twenty-two crofters pays from £5 to £3, 10s. for each croft.

37,170. And that is after all the reduction that has been given you by the Crofters Commission?—After all the reduction.

37,171. Still you think it is much higher than a farm?—Much higher than a farm.

37,172. You think then that the people would be very much benefited by having larger crofts, and that there is land suitable for the purpose in Ardnamurchan?—That is my opinion. I know that, for myself, I have nothing even to show for the soil we have. Their soil brings two crops after having potatoes; but we have to manure every year before we can trust to anything put in the ground yielding a crop. That shows the coldness and poorness of the soil. The seaweeds even have to be brought from another country, from Mull there.

37,173. Then is it your opinion that these townships that were formed into large farms were so formed because they were better than the townships which were left under the crofters?—It was because the farmer thought they would pay that he took them; he saw by looking at it that it was good ground.

37,174. So it is your opinion that all the best ground in the parish was consolidated into large farms?—I tell the Court that all the crofters are on these patches which no farmer could take, and the laird could get no tenant for.

37,175. Then you think that, if the farms were made available now for small holdings, they could pay as good a rent as is now paid by the farmers?—According to the rate we are paying, even after the reduction. The township of Ormsaigmore beside us is, I think, a good deal cheaper than ours.

37,176. Mr Munro.—In answer to one of the Commissioners you stated that one reason why proprietors were afraid to break up their farms and divide them into small holdings was the difficulty of collecting rents from small holders?—That was a rumour that was current at the time, whether it came from the laird or elsewhere I don't know, that there was less bother about the collection in that way. Whether it is a fact or not is a matter that I cannot say as a truth, but that is the reason that was given.

37,177. Why should there be more difficulty in collecting rent from a number of small tenants than from one large tenant?—The thing is this: a man will take a big farm or a township, and he is supposed to have means before the laird will give him it. There is no difficulty in collecting his rent, because he had it ready even if the place did not pay. And, suppose, in a year or two, he would lose all he had, of course the laird was all right.

37,178. Do I understand you to mean by that, that the man taking a large farm would be expected to pay the rent out of his capital, instead of out of the produce of the farm?—Well, he had the means at all events. If the place paid him, it would be very good; but, if not, the laird was all right; the money would be in bank.

37,179. But, supposing a farm were divided amongst a number of small tenants, could they not as readily pay the rent out of the produce of the small farm itself as the large tenant could do?—If the land were divided the crofter would have a chance, because he would have the land.

37,180. But I am speaking about the difficulty of collecting rents from the small tenants just now, which you have not yet explained to me?—There would be no difficulty in collecting the rent, when the place paid the tenant.

37,181. I assume that the place would pay him?—But when I have no capital?

37,182. Assuming that a number of small tenants got a sheep farm broken up and divided amongst them, under fair conditions of rent and occupancy, could they as readily pay their rents as the large farmer does at present?—In my opinion they would.

37,183. Then, do you think the landlord has any apprehension that they would not?—If a township was broken up into five shares, I suppose you are meaning, that these parties would require to have capital before they could get into this township. And if I had no means to take a fifth share of the township I would not get it from the laird, for I was speaking to a laird not many days ago, and this is what he said. 'Did you 'think we were going to give our land without security 'for the rent'? That was a Member of Parliament, or, at least, one who intends to be a Member, who is going about.

37,184. May I put the matter to you in this form? Supposing a sheep farm were offered just now, say, to five or six small tenants, would the farm be readily taken up?—I believe it would; jumped at.

37,185. And could these small tenants pay their rent as readily as the large farmer presently does?—It depends greatly on whether they got the ground at its value.

37,186. I assume, of course, that they get the land at a fair rent, and under fair conditions of occupancy?—It is very difficult to answer that question, because I have no capital except what I put in, in the way of stock and so on; and if the price of stock were to fall, the produce of that ground would hardly keep me. But the big farmer, as I said before, has funds to fall back on, if his produce did not pay him.—(Mr Gordon.—If his stock did not sell on a certain day he had money to pay his rent with, and could wait until his stock did sell?—Quite so).

37,187. He had his capital to fall back on?—Yes, he could take money out of bank to pay the rent.

37,188. So that, by means of his capital, the large farmer has greater facilities for paying his rent than the small farmer?—Quite so.

37,189. You mentioned that, at present, the crofters were mainly supported by their families, sons and daughters taking employment elsewhere, and contributing out of their earnings for the maintenance of their parents?—I tell the Court that there is not a crofter in Ardnamurchan, from Salen, Loch-Sunart, to the point of the lighthouse, whose croft is self-supporting.

37,190. Now, supposing that they got reasonably-sized holdings, could the crofters maintain themselves out of these holdings without the assistance of their families?—To a great extent.

37,191. But could they altogether?—Well, it would depend, as I said before, on how the markets went.

37,192. But you could take an average of years and estimate in that way?—There is a good deal of speculation in it.

37,193. What I want to be at is this: could the crofters occupy these increased holdings, that we are now speaking of, to profit and advantage?—They would; I believe they would.

37,194. Then their families could maintain themselves, independently of outside labour?—Yes.

Tobermory. James Nisbet.

37,195. Could such holdings be readily stocked, and the necessary buildings erected, without any Government assistance?—Well, we had to do it in Ardnamurchan since I remember. I have got no assistance from the laird or any one else, so I think we could do it yet if we got a place worth building a house on.

37,196. You are aware that the large farmers contribute nothing to the building of steadings?—I do not know the agreement between the landlord and the farmer, but the dykes and the places are built; by whom, I cannot say.

37,197. You are quite positive on one point, however, that if the crofters got access to these increased holdings they could cultivate them to profit and advantage, and maintain themselves and their families?—Yes.

37,198. Mr Gordon.—I think you mentioned incidentally that you were appointed a delegate at a public meeting; is that so?—Yes.

37,199. Where was the meeting held?—I was not at the meeting, but I was appointed by it. A meeting was held after they got notice from the Commissioners of the intended sitting, and they appointed me to give evidence.

37,200. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—You mentioned several crofting townships that were cleared within your own memory, and made into large farms?—Yes.

37,201. Now, I am going to ask you a question or two with regard to the rents that the old crofters, who were in those townships, had to pay. Were the crofters who were tenants in those farms, those old townships, paying larger or smaller rents than the crofters where you are have to pay? In the old times, were these crofters in the old townships rented as heavily as the crofters have been?—The rent has been raised. Mr Dalgleish raised the rent of Ormsaigbeg three times since he came to the estate. He did not raise it since I came there, but before that.

37,202. What was the first rent?—I could not tell exactly, but it was raised three times.

37,203. Do you mean that the rents of Ormsaigbeg were raised on three different occasions, or that the rents of Ormsaigbeg were raised three-fold?—It was in this way. Before the Commission came, if a crofter went out, it was like a roup,—put in an offer for the place. It might be that I was working in Glasgow, and had a small family, and would like to have them out of the city and away from the town's mischief to rear them in an honest place, so I might give a pound or two to secure this opportunity.

37,204. When crofts became vacant in Ormsaigbeg they were put up to auction, and knocked down to the highest offerer?—Yes.

37,205. Were the rents of Ormsaigbeg raised by Mr Dalgleish on three different occasions, or do you mean that the whole rent of the township was made three times what it once was?—No, I mean it was raised three different times, —e.g., £1 added this year, another £1 next year, and a third the next.

37,206. When crofts fell into the hands of the laird, or when tenants left, or were sent out of a croft for some reason or other, did Mr Dalgleish pay compensation to the outgoing tenant for the buildings left behind?—I stopped in Ormsaigmore for three years until the farmer came in, waiting to see if I would get a spot. That shows that I was eager for a place, and my house was demolished whenever I left it. All the persons that I knew, when they left their crofts, never got anything, so far as I could learn.

37,207. Never got a penny of compensation nor a penny of assistance towards building houses?—Nothing whatever; I never heard of a crofter receiving a stick without paying for it, as concerning the building of a house.

37,208. I want you to go back now for a little to the old townships that were cleared within your own recollection. Were the tenants, who were in these old townships, as comfortable as the crofters of to-day?—In my own youth.

37,209. I want the answer to be perfectly clear; were they as comfortable, or more comfortable, or less comfortable?—In my young days they had what they have not to-day,—they had milk and butter, and all produce of that kind. Of course it is different now; at that time it was all home made, but now, of course, things can be bought cheaper; but as to the rents, they were a heap cheaper then than they are at the present day, even after the reductions.

37,210. You say that the tenants, who lived in the old crofting townships that were cleared by the laird, were much more easily rented than the crofters under the 'fair rent' of to-day?—They were.

37,211. You are perfectly satisfied upon that point?—As to the three Swordales. I don't know what is the rent of these places now, but I know that we are paying dear enough in our place.

37,212. Mention again what stock you are entitled to keep yourself, to-day.—Three cows without followers.

37,213. What would be the rent under the old order of things, before the evictions and before the big farms were made, that a crofter would be expected to pay for a holding that would just carry the stock you have just now,—three cows without followers; or, put it in this way, what stock could a crofter have under the old system in the old townships for the rent you pay to-day, £4, 10s.,—in one of the townships you mention as having been cleared within your memory?—I know it was cheaper than it is to-day, at any rate.

37,214. Could you brace up your mind to the amount of stock, as nearly as possible, that a crofter could keep who paid the rent that you pay to-day as a 'fair rent'?—I cannot speak of these parties that were removed, because I was not near them, but you will get in the books the names of those who were tenants there.

37,215. Could you give us those names?—One, Mr Macphee here, was in Swordale.

37,216. You say that those tenants were far more comfortable than the crofters are to-day?—Far more; they had everything they wanted.

37,217. Did they find it easier to pay rents then than you find it to pay the fair rents to-day?—They did, because they had the soil, they had the ground.

37,218. And they had the stock?—They had the stock; the cows had milk, as I would call it.

37,219. And they grew plenty food from their farms?—Plenty food for themselves and for the stock.

37,220. Now are the crofting townships in Ardnamurchan short of hill grazing? Have they too little hill grazing?—They have.

37,221. Have any of them been complaining that their hill grazing is too limited?—For our part, at Ormsaigbeg, where I am, to winter the cattle on the scraps I have, the grazing is plenty.

37,222. It is of arable land you are short?—If I had the arable land to winter them I would be better off.

37,223. But do you know of other townships that are short of hill grazing?—I believe Achosnich is; but you will get witnesses to speak to that part.

37,224. Are there delegates from Achosnich?—I am not going to say what I am not sure of. Mr Macphee is a man who has been hunted from one township to another for the last fifty years.

37,225. By whom was he hunted?—It was Sir James Miles Riddell that removed him first from the Swordales.

37,226. I am going to ask you one other question. Has your township been considering the question of migrating, or a few of you leaving the place and going to new lands that might be opened by Act of Parliament? Have you, in view of the limited extent of your arable ground, been considering the question of migrating?—I have been considering that since ever I came to the township I am in, that is twenty years ago, but I never got the chance.

37,227. But has the township been discussing the matter, and talking about it among themselves, that some would leave?—Often they are crying out for land to work.

37,228. And you then have come to the conclusion in your township that, if lands are made available, some of you will leave and go to those places?—Yes.

37,229. Do you believe that a sufficient number would leave Ormsaigbeg and take up new lands—larger holdings on better soil—to such a degree that those who would remain in Ormsaigbeg would be made comfortable by putting two or three crofts together?—Undoubtedly, that is what we are wanting, but we never had the chance till now; and I hope they will take the chance.

37,230. But when you get the chance you will take it in sufficient numbers?—Yes.

37,231. And you will undertake to put up the necessary buildings to serve your purpose?—Yes.

37,232. And, do you believe it would be better to begin a new holding with a limited amount of stock at first, than to borrow a large sum of money and incur a debt?—If I could help it at all, I would borrow nothing, because there is something to be paid for borrowed money.

37,233. You would begin with the three cows?—I would.

37,234. And trust to the natural multiplication of stock?—And work my way up.

37,235.—Mr Robertson, of the firm of Dalgleish and Bell, W.S., on behalf of Mr Dalgleish.—You used the expression that if one of the farms on the estate were to be opened for crofters five or six in your township would jump at it?—I believe so.

37,236. Who are they?—I have no right to answer that question, at least I leave it to the Court. I am not to judge any one.

37,237. Are you one of them?—Yes.

37,238. You spoke of Girigidail. That place is nearer to your township than Glenbeg?—Yes; and I know it to our loss, because the deer are on the top of us every day.

37,239. Are you aware that the farm of Girigidail has been to let for the past two years?—It is a good many years since the Camerons were put out of there, and there were three of them there.

37,240. Are you aware that it is to let just now?—I know nothing about it. I mind of seeing it in the papers at one time.

37,241. It is in the proprietor's hands just now, you say?—I suppose so; I have nothing to do with these things.

37,242. Mr Maccallum.—How was it held last?—There were three in Girigidail in my time.

37,243. Three tenants?—Yes; they were three brothers, called Cameron, at first. I don't know whether there were only two at last, but they left it.

37,244. Mr Robertson.—Do you know the value of the sheep stock in Girigidail?—I cannot tell; I have nothing to do with it.

37,245. Would you be surprised to hear that it is about £1000?—I have nothing to do with that.

37,246. You are one of the parties who would take the farm, are you not?—I am not here for that purpose.

37,247. You are aware that the sheep stock on any of these farms would require to be taken over by the tenant; you know that that is the custom of the country?—If it is a law.

37,248. It is the custom?—Well, does law go by custom?

37,249. Do you know half a dozen of men, including yourself, in the township who have £1000 of capital at their command at present?—I have nothing to do with other folk.

37,250. Yourself then,—have you a sixth part of £1000?—When that comes it will be seen.

37,251. You must answer that question direct.—No, I have no right to answer such questions till I get the offer of it first; at least I want the protection of the Court.—(Mr Gordon.—You are not obliged to answer any question that you do not feel perfectly disposed to).

37,252. Was your rent fixed by the Crofters Commission four years ago?—Yes.

37,253. You said, in the course of your examination by the Commissioners, that you wished the Crofters Commission would come down in order that there might be an application for an enlargement of holdings. The Crofters Commission have been round, have they not?—No, they had no Commission to enlarge our holdings.

37,254. The Crofters Commission have power to enlarge holdings?—They have not; in some farms, but not in ours. How many of the holdings were enlarged through the Highlands of Scotland?

37,255. I was about to ask you whether there was any application by the Ormsaigbeg township for enlargement of holdings to the Crofters Commission?—No, but I am telling you the reason; they had no grounds for it.

37,256. Did you not say that they wished additional land?—They would have taken land if they had got Ormsaigmore near to them.

37,257. Why did not you apply to the Crofters Commission?—Because the place was above £100; and there was no farm that they could touch that was not above £100.

37,258. Mr Gordon.—If it was over £100 they could touch it, if under £100 they could not touch it.—Oh, was that the way? I thought if the rent was as high in a township as £100.

37,259. It is not the township but the farm to be broken up, that it applies to; if the farm, from which they propose that land should be taken, is under £100 of rent, they cannot touch it: if over £100, the Crofters Commission have power to take from the farm such portion as they may deem suitable for the enlargement of small holdings.—However, we never got the chance; we never applied.

37,260. Mr Robertson.—You never applied. Do you think any of the crofters on the estate applied?—No; I can only speak, of course, for the township I am in.

37,261. You were speaking pretty generally at one time?—Of what I know about Ardnamurchan.

37,262. There was no application for enlargement?—I cannot tell.

37,263. Then is this desire for additional land quite a new thing?—It was a desire since I remember. When I had to put a pound or two on a croft before I got it, it was my desire that I should have a croft. There was a desire there, but I knew it was twice the rent it was worth.

37,264. That is an old desire, then?—That is what I am speaking about, twenty or twenty-one years ago. I had to put £1 on the croft I have.

37,265. Then you had the desire at that time?—Yes, before I would get it.

37,266. But you have made no application for it?—If there had been plenty of land in the market then I should have got the croft for less than I am paying for it to-day. I think that is a demand for land.

37,267. I have mentioned Girigidail farm. Could you get half a dozen colleagues to subscribe £1000, and apply to the landlord for that farm?—Do you think for a moment that anyone would take Girigidail with the stock of deer on the place?

37,267*a*. You would get the deer for nothing?—I would not take them for nothing.

37,268. Speaking for yourself and the other members of the township, would you object to crofters from other counties or from other parishes coming in among you?—I would not. I would go to another country if I got the chance, and it is not likely I would object to any other party coming here.

37,269. You would not object?—No. It is the whole of Scotland that wants justice done to each other. I would be very glad to see them here, but I would not like to see them if the rents were raised in consequence.

37,270. Mr Maccallum.—I think you stated that you have been looking out for a small farm for many years; did I understand you aright?—I have been looking for a better spot than the one I have, if I could get it at what I would call a fair rent.

37,271. But such places are not available,—small farms that would be suitable for crofters, such as you and those in your township?—Quite available.

37,272. But is it not the case that there is no farm at all between the large, the very large farm, and the crofts in Ardnamurchan? Is not the land either let as a very large farm or as small crofts?—I don't understand you.

Tobermory.

James Nisbet.

37,273. Do you find farms of a medium size in Ardnamurchan?—Yes, I do. They are all big farms; they are all townships. There are some four townships in the one farm. There are Mingary, Skinid, Torr-na-moine and Coire-a'-mhuillin, all in one farm now.

37,274. So, however willing you might be to take a place somewhat larger than you have, you have no opportunity of getting it?—No opportunity of getting it.

37,275. Supposing you were able to stock it, and willing to take it, you have no way of getting it?—No way of getting it.

37,276. And you think that if such farms were available, farms of a medium size, they would be easily let?—I, for one, would take one of them.

37,277. Mr Robertson put it to you that the sheep stock on the large farms would have to be taken at valuation. Now, can you tell me whether, when the tenants were put out of the townships, their stock was then taken over at valuation by the large farmer who came in and took the place?—In the township I was in, at Ormsaigmore, it was just given to the man as I suppose he offered.

37,278. How did you dispose of the sheep stock that you had?—There is nothing that I can tell; if you ask Mr Macphee he may be able to say, as he would know whether the stock was taken by valuation or not, before he left one of the Swordales. I cannot speak as to that.

37,279. Cannot you speak of Ormsaigmore, whether the crofters stock was taken over by the tenant who took the farm at valuation?—Mr Henderson, who came into it at the time, got it on his own terms. I was not at home at the time the place was broken up; I was in Glasgow; but I believe he got it at half price, as I would call it.

37,280. Do you mean the stocking at half price?—Yes; but, as a rule, I suppose that, as Mr Robertson says, one has to take over the sheep stock at valuation.

37,281. I don't doubt that; but the proposal now is, that the people who came and took the crofters' places are to be treated very differently from the way in which they treated the people who were there before?—Quite differently.

37,282. They got the land without any valuation for the stock that was on it?—Yes.

37,283. And now the proposal is that they should have a higher valuation than even the market price for the stock that is now upon the large farms?—When I came to Ormsaigbeg I had to take the sheep by valuation; and what I paid for each sheep at that time I could not get in the market;—not more than 18s. out of 30s.

37,284. So the valuations that are generally made on sheep stock are much higher than the market value?—Yes, by far.

37,285. And you think that that would be very unfair to those who come to re-occupy these lands?—I would say so.

37,286. Mr Robertson. — How are valuations of sheep stock generally made; is it not by two valuators?—Yes; I am afraid there are three.

37,287. There is an oversman?—Yes.

37,288. Each party nominates a valuator?—Yes.

37,289. So that there can be no unfairness in the valuation?—That is all very good; but it is all big farmers who come here to value, and, on account of their own stock, they keep up the prices. There is a wheel within a wheel.

37,290. If you pay a high valuation to commence with, you get the same valuation at the end of your lease?—This is not in the bargain. I may be a poor man.

37,291. But you nominate your own man?—We must go at the price that they took in the stock: that is the English of it.

37,292. Mr Maccallum. — Is it your experience that valuations are not always absolutely fair?—I think not.

ALEXANDER MACDIARMID, Ormsaigbeg, Ardnamurchan (32).

Tobermory.

Alexander Macdiarmid.

37,293. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—I am the son of a crofter.

37,294. Were you appointed a delegate at a public meeting?—Yes.

37,295. Did you hear what the last witness said?—Yes.

37,296. Is there anything else you would wish to say in addition to what he has stated?—Nothing further.

37,297. If there is not, we may hold you as concurring in Mr Nisbet's evidence?—Mr Nisbet said all that I can say.

DUNCAN LIVINGSTON, Port-Uarick, Ardnamurchan (59)—examined.

Duncan Livingston.

37,298. Mr Gordon. — Were you appointed a delegate at a public meeting?—Yes.

37,299. We have had very full evidence from Mr Nisbet; did you hear what he said?—I did.

37,300. Do you agree with his evidence?—Yes.

37,301. Have you anything further to add to what he stated?—Nothing at all.

37,302. He stated his case very clearly and very fully?—Very fully, so far as I know.

37,303. Mr Maccallum. — You are from Port-Uarick?—Yes.

37,304. How many crofters are in the township?—Eleven.

37,305. Are you a crofter?—Yes.—(The Secretary.—The extent of his croft is 1 acre 2 roods arable, 2 acres outrun, and one share in a common of 152 acres, divided into eleven shares: rent £4, 1s., reduced by the Crofters Commission to £2: arrears, £6, 12s. 11d., cancelled).

37,306. What is the view of the people of your township with regard to the size of the crofts they would like to have? Are they satisfied with the present size, or would they like a larger size?—They would like to get larger holdings, as far as I know; they are all looking for more if they could get it.

37,307. Then, in your neighbourhood, is there land that would be available for making crofts of a larger size than at present?—Girigidail is the only place that I know of.

37,308. Do you consider it a suitable place for forming into crofts?—It is better than the place we have.

37,309. It would be an improvement?—Yes.

37,310. Were the houses in your township built by the crofters or by the proprietor?—By the crofters.

37,311. If they got larger crofts than those they have at present, do you think they would be able to put up buildings and to stock these crofts?—Yes, as far as I know. That is what they are looking for, at any rate.

37,312. And would some of the crofters in your township be willing to leave it and take crofts elsewhere?—Yes.

37,313. Are there any cottars in your place?—No.

37,314. Can you speak about any other land except what was spoken to by Mr Nisbet?—No, I cannot; he has mentioned all that I know.

37,315. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Have the tenants in your township been complaining that their hill pasture is too small?—Yes, they have.

37,316. Have they ever complained to the landlord or to the factor?—Not much that I know of; of course I am not often at home, and I never heard of it.

37,317. What stock are you supposed to have in this township?—Two cows and followers.

37,318. No sheep?—No sheep.

37,319. Can your crofts carry the 'souming'?—We have to buy wintering for the stocks.

37,320. Did you apply to the Crofters Commission for a piece of the big farm in your neighbourhood?—No.

37,321. Why not?—I was not at home at the time: I was in Montreal.

37,322. How do you know that a number of the tenants of that township would go to the farm if the farm was opened up for them?—Because they tell me so,—that is all I can say.

37,323. How many tenants are there in this township altogether?—Eleven.

37,324. How many do you think could live comfortably in it?—The half of them.

37,325. And would the other half go willingly and gladly?—Yes, I think they would: that is what they are saying.

37,326. Were they speaking of asking Government help?—No, I never heard them.

37,327. They would depend entirely upon their own industry?—I think so.

37,328. They would undertake to put up the dykes and houses?—Yes; they would try all they could do themselves, without any help.

37,329. Is it an old township that you are in?—No, not very old.

37,330. When was it made into a crofting township? How long ago?—I cannot tell you the exact time.

37,331. You can come near it?—I came into it myself when I was a boy.

37,332. Was it quite a new township then?—Yes.

37,333. Where did the tenants come from?—From all parts.

37,334. Were they crofters before they came there?—Well, they were better than they are now.

37,335. Had they crofts in other places before they were put to this place?—Yes, they were mostly crofters. I do not remember them all, but some had a croft and some not.

37,336. They were not all crofters?—I do not think so; they were put out of places.

37,337. Tell me one place they were put out of, any of them?—Some from Swordale, and some from Ockle.

37,338. Did they leave these other crofts of their own free will, or were they put out?—Some of them, at all events, were put out.

37,339. Did those who were put out against their will receive money down for the houses they had left behind?—Not that I know.

37,340. Was their stock taken over by the laird at valuation?—I cannot say as to that.

37,341. Did they get not a penny for the houses they left behind?—Not that I heard.

37,342. Nor a farthing to help them to build new houses?—Not that I know of.

37,343. Mr Gordon.—You are a sailor, are you?—Yes.

37,344. Would you be able yourself to stock a larger holding if you got it?—A little, anyway.

37,345. And be able to earn a little more?—It would be better than where I am.

37,346. Do you carry on the croft although you are at sea occasionally?—The family do.

ARCHIBALD GRAY, Port-Uarick, Ardnamurchan (46)—examined. Archibald Gray.

37,347. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—A crofter's son.

37,348. Did you hear the evidence given by Mr Nisbet?—Yes.

37,349. Do you agree with what he said?—Yes.

37,350. Have you anything to add to it?—Not with regard to the townships he was speaking of. He mentioned all the large townships fit for crofter occupation.

37,351. Are you the son of one of the eleven crofters whom Mr Livingston mentioned?—Yes.

37,352. And do you agree also with what Mr Livingston said?—Yes.

37,353. Have you anything else to tell us?—No, except that I would like to have a larger croft myself.

37,354. And would you be able to stock it yourself?—If I got a holding of from £6 to £8 I would be able to stock it myself.

37,355. Mr Maccallum.—What is your father's name?—Archibald Gray.

37,356. And what rent does he pay?—£2.

37,357. The same as the rest?—Yes.

37,358. The great complaint in the township is the smallness of the holdings, I suppose?—Yes, the smallness of the holdings; and they are too close together, which leads to constant disputes in the township.

37,359. What extent of arable land is it that you have?—I am not exactly sure, but about 1 or 2 acres, I think.

37,360. Just potato ground?—Yes.

37,361. That is quite insufficient for a crofter?—Yes.

37,362. What extent of arable land do you think would be suitable for a croft in Ardnamurchan?—About 12 acres of good arable land.

37,363. And what stock do you think a crofter would have with that arable land, and a corresponding amount of grazing?—I think from eight to ten cows, a horse, and maybe fifty or sixty sheep.

DAVID MACPHEE, Achosnich, Ardnamurchan (54)—examined. David Macphee.

37,364. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—A crofter's brother.

37,364*a*. You are not the tenant of a croft?—No.

37,365. How many crofts are in the township of Achosnich?—Five.

37,366. What size are they?—Middling big; from 4 to 8 acres arable.

37,367. Is your brother's name Allan Macphee?—Yes.—(The Secretary.—The croft extends to 8 acres 3 roods 1 pole arable, 14 acres 1 rood 10 poles outrun, and three shares in a common of 961 acres, divided into twelve shares. The old rent was £27, 10s., the new rent is £16: the arrears were £41, 3s., of which £33, 3s. were cancelled, and £8 ordered to be paid).

37,368. You heard what the witness, Mr Nisbet, stated with regard to the townships in which he thought there was land available for crofters?—Yes.

37,369. Do you agree with what he said?—Yes.

37,370. Are there any other parts of Ardnamurchan which you consider suitable for crofters, that he did not mention?—No; he mentioned all the townships that I know.

37,371. And do you concur generally in what he said, and in what the last two witnesses have said?—Yes. Of course he was speaking about some places that I don't know about.*

37,372. But you do not know of any place which he did not mention?—No.

MALCOLM MACMILLAN, Achosnich, Ardnamurchan (51)—examined. Malcolm Macmillan.

37,373. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

37,374. Do you hold one of the five crofts in Achosnich?—Yes.

37,375. You heard what the previous witness said?—Yes.

37,376. And do you agree with it?—Yes.

37,377. You seem to have a larger size of croft in Achosnich than is generally the case in other townships in Ardnamurchan?—Yes, it happens to be that way.

37,378. Are there any cottars in your township?—Not at present.

* On 4th July the witness wrote:—"The last two witnesses made no mention of the havoc the deer make to our corn and potato crops. Previous to the Crofters Commission fixing Fair Rents, my neighbour L. Maccoll and I received from Mr Dalgleish the sum of £3 for herding the deer. Since the Fair Rent was fixed the proprietor has invariably turned a deaf ear to our complaint, and has declined to pay us any compensation, alleging that it was taken into account at the time of fixing the Fair Rent."

Tobermory. —— Malcolm Macmillan.

37,379. Would you like an enlarged holding if you got it?—Yes.

37,380. You would like a still larger croft?—Yes.

37,381. Are there any other lands you can mention, as suitable for crofters' holdings, besides those mentioned by Mr Nisbet?—I think they were all mentioned.

37,382. Then, may we hold you as concurring generally in the evidence given by those witnesses who have already spoken?—Yes; I think I agree with all that was said here to-day. Achosnich would like to get more ground,—more pasture and more arable land.

37,383. You have a share of over 900 acres?—Yes.

37,384 Have you more than one share?—I have just one share.

37,385. How many shares is it divided into?—Five. There are twelve shares, but five holdings.—(The Secretary.—One tenant has two shares, other two have three each, and the remaining tenant has one share; and there are three shares that were not dealt with by the Crofters Commission).

37,386. What stock have you?—I have nine cows and nine followers, a horse and a half, and seventy-five sheep. I pay rent for half a horse.

37,387. What is your rent?—£16, 10s.; that is the Commission rent.

37,388. Mr Maccallum.—Is there a desire to extend the pasture of the township?—Yes, and there is a desire to have more arable land amongst the Achosnich crofters. One of them was applying for Girigidail.

37,389. Some of them would remove to other places, would they?—Yes; they are tired of the place where they are, and would be very glad to move to any place where they think they would be better.

37,390. Is there, in the immediate neighbourhood of Achosnich itself, land suitable for adding to the present township?—There is Girigidail there, at the march.

37,391. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—What is the name of the farm near you?—Girigidail; there is just a march between us.

37,392. You heard to-day that that farm is in the laird's own hands?—Yes.

37,393. How long has that been the case?—I think about thirty-seven years. There were some tenants there when Mr Dalgleish bought the estate; I remember them well.

37,394. For how many years has the laird had this farm in his own hands?—Thirty-six or thirty-seven years.

37,395. What rent is down in the valuation roll for it, do you know?—I did not see it in the valuation roll, but I heard that it was somewhere about £140 or £150. I heard that they were paying rates upon that, but I don't know for certain.—(The Secretary.—The amount given in the valuation roll for 1893–4 is £90).

37,396. Is it of the want of arable land or the want of hill grazing that you have reason to complain most?—The want of both. My arable land is not nearly sufficient to provide for my stock in winter; and in summer time the grazing is very poor; it only half feeds the number I am allowed to keep.

37,397. Do you remember, in recent years, this farm of Girigidail being entered in the valuation roll at a figure considerably above £100?—I cannot say, except as to what I heard from others about the rates. I heard that the landlord was paying far more rates than he should, and that the farm was valued at far more than its value.

37,398. Have you any idea what was the highest rent put against this farm in the valuation roll, during the last six or seven years?—I could not say.

37,399. Did you tenants apply to the laird or to the factor for an addition to the township?—No, we did not apply, for I believe it is in the Act, seeing we were paying above £15.

37,400. That is the reason?—That is the reason.

37,401. Then have you that as a grievance, that there is a clause in the Crofters Act that prevents small crofters from improving their condition?—We are very much against that point in the Act, that we cannot get more land, as the Act prevents us from taking the land.

37,402. Now, if that clause in the Crofters Act were removed, and crofters were empowered to apply for more land to increase their holdings up to the highest point of the crofter limit, would you in that case apply to the Crofters Commission for an addition from this farm?—Yes; and I would like my croft to be increased to £30 rent, and valued by the Commission.

Tobermory. —— Malcolm Macmillan.

37,403. What is the smallest amount of stock that a self-supporting croft should carry, one which would support a family, and keep them in employment all the year round?—I know the stock I have myself, and I know the ground I have to work, and it is not sufficient to keep a family. I could never live on the land I have although it was twice as good as it is.

37,404. Would this stock be sufficient for a small self-supporting holding, if there was plenty land to keep the stock summer and winter?—No, nor half.

37,405. Give us the size then that would be necessary?—I would like to have two horses, ten cows, and about 300 sheep, and I would require to have good land to feed them all, and good arable land to provide wintering for them.

37,406. Did you make a calculation, with the view of comparing the rents paid by the big farmers in the parish of Ardnamurchan, and the fair rents fixed by the Crofters Commission?—Well, we were discussing the matter since we got fair rents.

37,407. And which of the rents did you find the fairer,—the rents that the laird has placed upon the big farmers, or the rents that the Crofters Commission has fixed upon you?—We considered that we have not fair rent, according to the big farmers' rent, but there is a reason for that. When a big farmer goes to market, with a two-year heifer, he gets about double the price I get.

37,408. Because the land is better?—Yes. I believe that this very year Mr Coulthart gets twice as much as I get for his young cattle.

37,409. How do you account for that?—Good feeding, not good breeding, for he bought them as calves from the crofters.

37,410. The land is better?—Yes, and he could feed his stock better.

37,411. But did you compare, acre for acre, the fair rent paid by the crofters for crofter holdings, with the rent paid by the big farmer, as fixed by the laird?—No; it was not easy for the Crofters Commission to value our land at all, it was so poor.

37,412. (Question put in Gaelic)—A.—I think that our rents are much dearer than the farmers', in proportion.

37,413. Mr Munro.—Seeing you are so anxious to get an extension of your holding, did it never occur to you to apply to the landlord direct for more land?—I was anxious enough to get the land, but I knew very well that if I applied for it I would not get it, so I did not apply.

37,414. How did you know that?—Because we asked other things and did not get them; that is the very reason.

37,415. What would be the landlord's reason for refusing to give you more land?—Because he was putting others away, and we did not expect he was willing to give us more when others were cleared away. There is a township near us, Glendryen, that is taken by a farmer, and every croft that became vacant was added to his farm, and no crofter was put in the place of the crofter who left.

37,416. But, if the landlord were satisfied that you were in a position to take the additional land, and stock it, and do it justice, and pay a fair rent, do you not think he would be disposed to give it?—I have no hope, and I had no hope that I would get it.

37,417. But you never tried?—Never tried to get more; I confess that.

37,418. Mr Gordon.—You mentioned the number of stock that you had, and you stated that you only get half as much for your two-year old heifer as the tenant farmer?—Just about it.

37,419. You say that is because the farmers' stock are better fed than yours?—Yes, that is the very reason.

37,420. Did it never occur to you that you might feed your stock much better if you kept fewer of them?—Yes, that is true enough.

37,421. Is it not a fact that your township is stocked far more heavily than the land is calculated to carry profitably?—The land, in the first place, is not able to feed the stock summer and winter the same as is done in Achateny.

37,422. But the common-sense practice would be to reduce the number of stock till it would not be too heavy?—That is the number that has been this while past; and I believe it was not we who made the souming.

37,423. It is 6 acres, I think you said?—Yes.

37,424. And you keep ten cows?—Nine cows and nine followers.

37,425. And a horse and a half?—Yes.

37,426. How could you expect to winter these upon 6 acres?—No, and we are not doing that: we are buying food.

37,427. If you have to buy the produce, or even part of the produce, you will not buy as much as will keep the cattle up to the mark?—It is true we would not buy so much if we had less stock.

ARCHIBALD MACGILLIVRAY, Plocaig, Ardnamurchan (36). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

37,428. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—I am the son of a crofter.

37,429. Is Plocaig a township?—Yes; a township of crofters.

37,430. How many holdings are there in the township?—Four.

37,431. What is the size of them?—About 5 acres or so.

37,432. And what stock have you?—Four cows and four calves, and a horse.

37,433. You heard the evidence given by several of the witnesses, in particular, that given by Mr James Nisbet?—Yes.

37,434. Do you agree with the evidence which you heard given by him and by the other witnesses?—Yes; the most part of it.

37,435. In what do you differ?—Where I was myself we had the Commission, and I paid for an appeal to come again: we paid the money for that; and that is all that they have seen for it.

37,436. What was your former rent?—£9, 4s.

37,437. And what is your present rent?—£7.

37,438. Did you appeal to the Crofters Commission for any improvement on the rent?—Yes.

37,439. How much did you wish it reduced?—Other £3 off. In wet weather we could go and fish for our 'stooks' or sheaves.

37,440. I have no doubt the Crofters Commission will give you justice if you have lodged an appeal. Is there anything else you wish to say?—There is a township beside us where there used to be eight, and it is now under one farmer.

37,441. What township is that?—Glendryen.

37,441*a*. That was mentioned by Mr Nisbet, prompted, I think, by yourself?—Yes.—(Mr Macrae.—The witness said 'there is one man living in it; whether the man is 'the tenant, or whether it is in the hands of the laird, I 'don't know.'

37,442. But there is land in the former township of Glendryen which you think would be suitable for crofters' holdings?—Yes, I think so; it is from there I went to this place.

37,443. You went from Glendryen to Plocaig?—Yes.

37,444–5. Then had you a larger croft in Glendryen than you have now?—Yes; it was larger in one way and smaller in another.

37,446. Were all the tenants removed from Glendryen at one time?—No.

37,447. When did you leave it?—Twenty-five years ago.

37,448. Then who got the croft that you had? What was done with it?—Angus Macgillivray got it.

37,449. At that time how many tenants were in Glendryen after you left it?—Eight. Tobermory.

37,450. When was it cleared altogether?—Two years ago, but there are two in it yet, though they have no sheep. Archibald Macgillivray.

37,451. There are two small crofters on it yet?—Yes.

37,452. Was it of your own will that you left, or were you removed by the proprietor?—It was of my own free will that I left: I thought the other place was better.

37,453. And it is now held by one farmer, I think you say?—I don't know whether it is in the possession of the laird or of the present tenant.

37,454. There is a sheep stock on it, I suppose?—Yes.

DUNCAN MACCOLL, Ockle, Ardnamurchan (36). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.) Duncan Maccoll.

37,455. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—A crofter's son. My mother is the crofter.

37,456. Did you hear the evidence given by the other witnesses to-day?—Yes.

37,457. Do you agree with it?—I do.

37,458. Have you anything to add to what they said?—No; I think they told you everything.

37,459. What is the size of your mother's croft?—Between 7 and 8 acres.

37,460. And the rent?—£15, 10s.

37,461. You will have pasture, doubtless, or the share of a common?—The share of a common.—(Mr Watson, surveyor.—It is a club farm.)

37,462. Do you find the club system to work well?—No, we are not more than pleased with it.

37,463. How many sheep are in the club stock?—About 350.

37,464. Among how many?—There are seven in the township.

37,465. Have you one shepherd to look after the sheep stock?—Yes, only one shepherd, but there is none at all just now.

37,466. What is the objection to the club farm?—It is not working right without a shepherd.

37,467. If you had a shepherd would it not work well enough?—Yes, it would.

37,468. What is your object in coming here; do you want a croft for yourself?—To see if I could get a larger place.

37,469. Is that for yourself or for your mother?—For the family.

37,470. Is the desire for larger holdings general in the township to which you belong?—No, I did not hear it from the rest of the township, I speak for myself.

37,471. Would you manage to stock a larger holding if you got it?—Yes; but I would prefer a small farm separate from other crofters.

ARCHIBALD GRAY, Port-Uarick (recalled)—examined. Archibald Gray.

37,472. Mr Gordon.—I am informed that you are desirous of supplementing the information you have already given us. What statement have you to make?—I belong to the township of Port-Uarick, where we made an application to the landlord for a slice off Girigidail, which was granted: but, by the next post, we received a letter objecting to this, and saying that, unless we took the whole township over and paid for the stock, he could not give it to us.

37,473. Is that all that you have to say?—Yes, but four more crofters told me they were willing to take a croft of from £6 to £8.

37,474. They would take a portion of the farm, but not the whole?—Unless they were all for it; three or four could not take it and pay for the stock.

37,475. They were all anxious for an extension of the present holdings?—Yes.

37,476. Mr Maccallum.—How many signed the application for a piece of Girigidail, do you know?—I think it was signed for all the crofters.

Tobermory.

Archibald Gray.

37,477. It was signed by proxy, as it were?—Yes.

37,478. Was the application sent direct to the proprietor?—Yes.

37,479. Did you receive a reply from him?—Yes.

37,480. From himself, was it?—From the landlord.

37,481. What did he say in the letter?—In the first letter we got he said he would give us what we wanted, but, by the next post, we received a letter saying that he could not give it to us unless we took it all over, and paid for the stock.

37,482. You have not got the letters with you to-day, have you?—No.

37,483. Can you produce them?—I cannot say.

37,484. Do you think they are preserved?—I don't know; I think it is not in my house.

37,485. Was the second letter direct from the proprietor?—Yes.

37,486. In the second letter you say he withdrew the offer made in the first?—Yes.

37,487. And stated that you could not get a slice of it unless you took the whole?—If we took the whole, and paid for the stock, he would give it to us.

37,488. And took the stock at valuation?—Yes.

37,489. And you were not prepared to take the stock at valuation?—We could not: but all those who want a croft of from £6 to £8 could stock it.

37,490. Did you think that that was almost equivalent to a refusal?—I don't know; I think it is on account of breaking the township and not taking it all over.

37,491. But do you think that, if he were anxious to comply with your request, he might have taken some means to dispose of the stock otherwise than by your taking it at valuation?—He might, perhaps.

37,492. Was that your expectation when you applied?—Our expectation when we applied was to take this slice, and have nothing to do with the stock, because it could not be much between eleven, the piece of it.

37,493. Mr Gordon.—It was as an extension of your present holdings?—Yes, on account of the township of Girigidail being on our march.

37,494. Does it come close up to your present grazings?—Yes, along our outrun.

37,495. Mr Maccallum.—Do you know, afterwards, why an application was not made to the Crofters Commission?—I believe there was an application made through Mr Campbell, Solicitor, Oban, to the Commission, but they could not agree about the march.

37,496. Who could not agree about the march?—There was one of the crofters looking into it, and there was a map lost or something. The map came home, and there was a disagreement about the march.

37,497. A disagreement as to the portion that you were to ask for?—Yes. I think they could not understand the march that we wanted.

37,498. And the thing fell through in that way?—Yes.—(Mr Robertson.—There was no formal application.)

37,499. Mr Munro.—The proprietor was quite willing to give you the farm entire?—Yes, I believe he was.

37,500. You wanted a portion only?—Yes.

37,501. Which portion of the farm were you prepared to take?—The nearest portion.

37,502. Is that the best or the worst portion?—Well, I believe it is the best.

37,503. To get at the matter thoroughly, would it not involve some injustice and hardship to the landlord to take the best of the farm and leave the worst on his hands, seeing that he can let it entire?—I don't know; at that time we did not want the half of all the best: we only wanted a piece.

37,504. But you said that piece was the best?—Well, the nearest farm, I believe, is the best part of the township of Girigidail.

37,505. And you could not arrange among yourselves to take the farm entirely as it stood?—No; we could not pay for the stock.

37,506. Now, supposing that you got assistance elsewhere, could you take the farm amongst you and pay a reasonable interest for the advance?—It would not be a very big croft for each of us, between eleven, provided they all took an equal portion.

Tobermory.

Archibald Gray.

37,507. That is not an answer to my question. Would you be in a position, eleven of you, to take the entire farm, provided you got assistance to pay for the stock?—Yes.

37,508. And could you pay a fair rent?—Yes.

37,509. Now, supposing you got assistance, would you be able to repay the loan with a reasonable rate of interest, say, 3 per cent. or so?—Well, I think we would.

37,510. But you have made up no specific calculation to found upon?—No.

37,511. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—There is a matter I wish to point out, and it is that, seeing the farm is valued at £90 per annum, it was not competent to apply for it; they were precluded by one of the clauses of the Crofters Act from applying.

37,512. Mr Maccallum.—At the time you were thinking of your application was it in the valuation roll at £90?—I cannot say.

37,513. But I suppose the rent has been lowered in the valuation roll recently; is not that the case?—I cannot say.

37,514. Mr Munro.—But the rental did not preclude the landlord and you coming to an arrangement if both of you were willing?

37,515. Mr Gordon.—It is quite easily understood that, if it is a mutual agreement, the Crofters Act has nothing to do with it; your application was quite outside the Act?—Yes.

37,516. Mr Robertson.—The rent at the time was £110, and there was nothing in the rent to preclude an application for enlargement when the applications were before the Crofters Commission. It was reduced to £90 two years ago.—(To Witness.) Do you know whether your colleagues in the township had sufficient capital to take the sheep stock on Girigidail?—No, they have not.

37,517. They could not take it without assistance?—No; but if they got the place without the stock every one would stock his own, I believe, and pay the rent too.

37,518. You would require to get a stock somewhere?—Yes, certainly.

37,519. Mr Gordon.—Would you be prepared to give market value for the present stock?—I would, if the rest are.

37,520. So far as you are concerned, you would be willing to pay your share of the stock at the legitimate market value?—Yes.

37,521. But you are not prepared to take them over at valuation?—No.

JOHN CAMPBELL, Dervaig, Mull (61)—examined.

John Campbell.

37,522. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—No.

37,523. What occupation do you follow?—Anything I can get to do.

37,524. Would you describe yourself as a labourer?—I am an army pensioner.

37,525. Have you any statement to make?—I propose to give a list of clearances from several estates in this parish, commencing with the estate of Mishnish, on which Tobermory is partly situated.

37,526. Are these within your recollection?—Yes.

37,527. How many crofters were in Mishnish?—Twenty for three townships.

37,528. Give us the names of the townships from which the evictions were made?—The first is Nead-an-fhirein, the next Reraig, and the next Ardmor. There were three from Nead-an-fhirein, nine from Reraig, and eight from Ardmor. That completes the estate of Mishnish, so far as clearances are concerned.

37,529. What is the next estate?—Sorn. Here there were four townships; Pein-Albanach, where four were cleared; Leiphinn, six; Sorn, nineteen; Bail'-iochdrach, fifteen; and Bail'-uachdrach—I cannot give the number who were evicted from here, but the ruins still exist, and older people than myself could perhaps give the number. These are all in the estate of Sorn, now called Glengorm.

37,530. What is the next estate?—The next estate is Quinish. This is a somewhat complicated estate; it was at one time intact in one piece, but now it is in two, with a different proprietor in each. I shall give you the oldest clearances from Quinish, which happened when it was in the possession of Maclean of Coll.

37,531. Can you give me the townships there?—Mingary. The houses on this part were not together; every croft had a house.

37,532. They were not townships but distinct individual crofts?—The twenty-four were called Mingary. While it was in the possession of Maclean of Coll they were cleared away from Ach-na-drise.

37,533. How many were cleared there?—Five under Maclean of Coll.

37,534. Were there more cleared after he sold it?—Yes; the estate changed hands then, and became the property of James Forsyth, and other clearances took place under him.

37,535. How many were cleared then?—In Ath-antuim three, in Kilmore three, in Coireachan one, in Druim-na-crois four. Further up, on the same estate, while it was under Maclean of Coll, was the township of Teanga, where eight families were cleared. From Ledmore, another township on the same estate, there were six cleared by the same proprietor. That winds up that estate.

37,536. There is a place beside Ledmore, called Lettermore, is that the same property?—That has been always a small farm.

37,537. Is it on a different estate?—It is on the estate of Aros: it was on the same estate then.

37,538. Lettermore is nearer this than Ledmore. Ledmore is part of the estate of Aros, but Lettermore is a different property?—Yes, now, but not then. The clearances on Ledmore and Teanga took place when these were in the possession of Maclean of Coll.

37,539. I do not quite follow you, after all; because Lettermore may be on a different estate now, but you say it was part of the Aros estate, and Ledmore was not?—Ledmore was a part of the Aros estate then, and so was Teanga.—(Mr Alexander Allan of Aros.—Perhaps I might be allowed to throw some light upon the matter. Twenty-five years ago the estate of Aros contained Lettermore and Ledmore, and also Teanga. Then Teanga was retained by Capt. Campbell, who owned the estate, when he sold it to my father; and I afterwards sold Ledmore, along with Aros Mains, to Mr Laing).

37,540. The clearances took place under Maclean of Coll?—Yes. Next I go to the estate of the Marquis of Northampton. From the township of Kilmory there were cleared six families; from Fracadale six; from Eansaidh other six; from Langamul we cannot say how many; it was an old clearance. That winds up the portion of the Northampton estate that I am speaking about. Next comes the estate of Aird-dubh, presently called East and West Aird-dubh, but at the time I speak of, the place was intact.

37,540*a*. Who is the proprietor now?—The proprietor, at the time of the clearances, was Dr Maclean: the present proprietors are Miss Forrest, who owns West Aird-dubh, and Capt. John Watson, who owns East Aird-dubh.

37,541. How many people were cleared out of Aird-dubh?—Six, during Dr Maclean's reign.

37,542. Do you know at what dates they were cleared out?—Upwards of fifty years ago, but not sixty, for I remember seeing some of them there myself. I think the present proprietors have been there about fifty years, and the clearances happened before they got the properties.

37,543. What is the next place you have got to mention?—The next estate is Morinish.

37,544. Who is the proprietor of that estate?—John Munro-Mackenzie.

37,545. Were there townships on that place?—Yes; from the township of Cailleach there were eight removals; from Aoirin eleven, and from Aonaidh-bheatha four.

37,546. What is the next estate?—Treisnish, where there were three townships: Haun, with four removals, Glaic-chucory three, and Cragaig four.

37,547. What is the next estate?—The island of Gometra, where there were seventeen people cleared. Then the island of Ulva, with seventy-five cleared. These are all the clearances.

37,548. Now, it is not material to this inquiry who was the proprietor at that time, but we might like to hear about what dates these clearances were carried out, provided you can speak of them from personal knowledge. Take first Mishnish estate; when were the clearances there effected?—One of my colleagues here was on the estate at the time, and, he says it was close upon fifty years ago.

37,549. Next, those on the Sorn estate?—I think about the year 1854. The people were there in the year 1853, when I visited this country, and when I came back in 1856 they were gone.

37,550. On the Quinish estate?—The twenty-four that I spoke of happened during last century.

37,551. Ach-na-drise estate, can you give us the date of the clearances there?—About sixty-five or sixty-seven years ago.

37,552. And Teanga?—About seventy years ago: and Ledmore about the same time: the two places were cleared for the same purpose.

37,553. Then Lord Northampton's estate?—About the same time.

37,554. Fracadale?—About the same time.

37,555. Eansaidh?—About the same time.

37,556. Aird-dubh?—I am not positive, but I think fifty-four years ago, or thereabouts. My recollection carries me back to the time when I was six years of age, and I remember seeing the people there.

37,557. Next, the Morinish estate?—About eighty years ago.

37,558. The Treisnish estate?—About thirty years ago, I think.

37,559. Do you know anything about the islands of Gometra and Ulva?—I know about Gometra; it was about thirty years ago.

37,560. And Ulva?—Between the years 1846 and 1851.

37,561. Now, can you give us any assurance that your figures are tolerably correct,—that is to say, the number of crofters? Would not a number of those you have given be cottars?—I did my best to ascertain the facts as accurately as possible. All the numbers I have given held land; I have the names of most of them, which I got from people living over in my place.

37,562. Is there anybody living who, to your knowledge, was a crofter in Ulva?—Yes, the man who gave me that number.

37,563. What is his name?—Alexander Macdonald. We have information that there were about the number I have mentioned.

37,564. Possibly, but we happen to know a little about Ulva, and I think if there were seventy-five tenants they must have been very small crofters?—I am not saying they were not: I simply say that they occupied land, besides the cottars. The whole of the seventy-five held land, over and above the cottars. The proprietor himself admitted, in 1851, that the original population was about 500; if we divide that by five to find the number of farms, we find that there is a margin left for cottars, over and above the seventy-five holders of land.

37,565. I quite believe there may have been that number of people on the land, but I scarcely think there could be that number of crofters, using the word in its present meaning?—I am giving the number as accurately as I can, believing it to be true.

37,566. I see from the Report of the Napier Commission that, in 1841, the island of Ulva is said to have had a population of 859?—I quite believe that.

37,567. 'Or somewhere more than 200 above the 'present population in the whole quoad sacra parish of 'Salen,' and it gives the number of families as follows:—

Tobermory. John Campbell.

Ormaig, seven families; Cragaig, nine; Kilvicewen, six; Eolusary, four; Glacnagullan, four; Ballighartan, four; Beannas, four; Cuilinis, five; Abas, five; Sorata, seven; Achanatuatha, four; Tairi-nan-Ardruidh, three; Upper Ardeallam, two; Lower Ardeallam, five; Blarnan-Corr, two; Salen Ruadh, two;—total, 73 (Vol. III., p. 2254), so that your information as regards the townships appears to be quite correct?—I have taken every pains to get at the truth of everything I am bringing before you.

37,568. Do you know the land that you have mentioned in these different townships?—Every bit of it, with the exception of Ulva,—I know that by seeing it, but I have never been through it.

37,569. You think that all or most of the places you have mentioned could be re-peopled with crofters?—Nothing in the world easier. I omitted the estate of Penmore, where there were fifteen cleared by the father of the present proprietor; or, if you like to put it in another way, there were thirty crofters on the estate, and Mr Macnab put away fifteen of them. There are only five to-day, out of the thirty, holding crofts: he cleared away fifteen.

37,570. When was that?—Between 1856 and 1860: about twenty-eight years ago, I am told.

37,571. As to the size of these crofts, it would appear that, with the exception of Widow Maclean's, the crofts are all small places still?—Yes, she has a fair-sized croft.

37,572. But not larger than some of the delegates have suggested that farms should be made: so that you see, in clearing out these fifteen or twenty-five crofters, the place has only been left in a condition which most of the crofters say is the proper condition, viz., a moderate-sized croft still?—None of those who are left got any addition through the clearances; the land is in the hands of the farmer and proprietor.

37,573. The consolidation did not go to the benefit of the crofters?—Not at all, it was all taken away. Where they used to put their horses, he swept into his own possession, and he has it still.

37,574. Have you anything further to suggest to us for our consideration?—I will be very glad to answer any questions. Any suggestions I might have might be considered wild, but I am very willing to answer any questions put to me on the subject before us. But, if I might be allowed to say a word as to your question whether the land would be suitable for crofting purposes if again taken up, I would express the opinion that it is very suitable in every respect, with this difference, that I would certainly not put on so many people. There were formerly about 300 families; I would not be inclined to put so many now; I would make the holdings larger. Some of those that I have mentioned there were very comfortable, e.g., in Druim-na-croise, there were four, paying £14 of rent, with ten cows and followers, and a horse, and about thirty sheep. I mention that simply as a case in point.

37,575. It would have been impossible for all these people to be maintained on the island of Ulva for the produce of the island?—I do not say the whole number that was on at that time.

37,576. They must have been engaged in what was at that time a common and lucrative business,—the making of kelp?—I do not maintain that the island would now support the same number of people; nevertheless, I hold it is capable of sustaining a good number of crofters.

37,577. No doubt of that, it is a very nice island, but it could not maintain anything like a population of that kind from the resources of the island itself?—No, I do not hold that; but it is about the worst of all the lands that I have mentioned; starting away from Tobermory here around the base of this parish till once we come to the island of Gometra is about as fine land as you could get anywhere in the Highlands.

37,578. Mr Maccallum.—How are the townships which you mentioned on the estate of Mishnish occupied now?—I believe it is in the hands of a farmer of the name of Graham, who lives over here in Eraid.

37,579. One farmer occupies all these old places?—One farmer, I believe; but I may be mistaken. Tobermory. John Campbell.

37,580. Is there much cultivation by the farmer?—I cannot say; it is mostly stock rearing and agriculture.

37,581. Is there any cultivation at all on any of these townships you have named?—I could not say.

37,582. How are the townships of Sorn occupied?—All in the hands of the proprietor.

37,583. Are they cultivated?—Partly.

37,584. On the estate of Quinish,—is it partly cultivated also?—It is in the hands of the proprietor, that portion of it from which the twenty-four were cleared. It is used by himself.

37,585. Then, on the estate of the Marquis of Northampton, you mentioned four townships, I think; how are they held now?—Kilmory is in the hands of a farmer; it is not cultivated, but is entirely under cattle and sheep. Eansaidh is occupied by a small farmer: Fracadale,—did I give Fracadale as on the Marquis of Northampton's estate? If so, it was a mistake, because it is on Mackenzie's estate.

37,586. I think you gave us it as on Mackenzie's estate. Then how as to Langamul?—That is a portion of the Northampton estate; it is in the hands of one small farmer; no crofters.

37,587. Next take the Morinish estate; how are the townships you mentioned there now occupied?—All in the hands of the proprietor; the whole of it under sheep and cattle. Of course there is always a little cultivation where cattle are kept now, but nothing to speak of in proportion to the land that could be cultivated.

37,588. Is it long since the land fell into the proprietor's hands altogether on the Morinish estate?—About eighty years.

37,589. Never let to a tenant?—Not a bit of it has been given away since then; it has been kept locked up hard and fast.

37,590. Do you think that these townships on the Morinish estate are well suited for small holdings?—There is not better in the whole of the Highlands. Those who lived there were very comfortable, and had a very fair stock.

37,591. Are there any crofters at all on the estate of Morinish?—Not one.

37,592. Then Treisnish,—how are the townships you spoke of occupied now?—They are in the hands of the proprietor; there are no crofters there now.

37,593. How is Ulva held?—The proprietor, the parson, the publican, and the smith, along with, I think, one other person, have the whole island among them.

37,594. There is no farmer there at all?—No farmer. The old church is there yet, and the manse is there, but the people have to go across to church from this island.

37,595. So that a great portion of the land of this parish is in the hands of the proprietors?—Entirely; there are only five crofters in the parish,—I am speaking of the land outside of Tobermory,—who are under the Act. There are about seven or eight, I daresay, on the Marquis of Northampton's estate, but, with the exception of these, that is all the crofters in this parish.

37,596. Then, do the proprietors offer the farms to let?—There are some farmers in some of these places. But I can give you a case in point, on the Penmore estate. A farmer took the land from which the crofters have been cleared; he went to the wall. Another man took it, but, after two or three years, he also went to the wall. Now a third man has it, and I don't know whether he will go to the wall before his lease is out.

37,597. The end will be that the proprietor will take it into his own hands when he fails to get a tenant. I suppose the natural consequence would be that the proprietor would at last fail to get a tenant?—I suppose so.

37,598. But, if the land were offered in small holdings, is it your opinion that it could be easily let?—Just try it and see.

37,599. You think there would be quite a rush for it?—There is a land hunger all over this country, as far as I have travelled, far and near. We do not require to go far back to see what has taken place within the last eight or ten years. I am sure the very place we are sitting here, there is not a poorer place in creation than Tobermory; for, when the people were swept away from their land and houses, they had to take refuge in barns and behind dykes; and all kinds of outhouses were brought into requisition to shelter the people driven away from these places I have spoken of.

37,600. And you do not find that the proprietors do anything to meet the wants of the people?—Nothing whatever. But it had escaped my memory to speak about Dervaig, the place I belong to. I think there are six crofters in Dervaig now, but there were twenty-four in my young days. My father had a croft and grazing along with it. Now, in the year 1857, they were induced to enter into a lease with Mr Forsyth, as they thought, for the whole 'ric-ma-tic'; but it turned out, when they got the leases into their hands, that they had only got leases of their houses, and he swept away the whole grazing from them, and left them with the crofts at an increased rent. Now, every one of them had two cows and a horse, and was paying £3, 10s. or £4 on an average for the croft, the house, the garden, and the grazing: he took away the grazing from them and increased their rent. That is a case that illustrates the state of matters.

37,601. Have the people made any attempt to get allotments or small holdings under the Acts?—Not in this quarter, as far as I am aware. They have been watching the progress of things farther south, and they find every County Council putting its foot down on that entirely. There is no earthly prospect of getting it under the present state of things.

37,602. Are you aware that, at a special meeting appointed for considering that question, all the proprietors on the Council voted against putting the Act into force in the County of Argyll?—I quite believe that.

37,603. Were you aware of it? Was that brought under your notice?—Oh yes, we watch those things.

37,604. Mr Munro.—We are indebted to you for a very useful and helpful statement. Now, turning back to the island of Ulva, have you ever heard it stated what the condition of the crofters was before the evictions from the island?—I have heard it stated, and I have known it personally. I remember them being there, and I had some friends there myself. The people were not all alike; they had not the same quantity of land, nor the same stock, the whole of them. Some of them had, I understand, as low as one cow, and up to three, at the time I am speaking of.

37,605. Were they fairly prosperous, or were any of them in destitute circumstances?—Not before the failure of the potatoes, that I am aware of.

37,606. Was it about the time of the potato failure that they were evicted from Ulva?—After that.

37,607. Shortly after, I suppose?—The proprietor himself writes in 1851, and he states that the original population had been 500, but now it was 150. He was slipping them away just as fast as he could get them across the ferry. These are sterling facts; I do not want to exaggerate or to magnify things, and, if I do so, it is done unintentionally.

37,608. Have any of the present proprietors evicted any crofters?—I do not think so, with the exception of John Munro Mackenzie, who evicted a man who had a small croft on his estate last year.

37,609. So that none of the present proprietors are responsible for any of the evictions you have spoken of?—He was tenant of ground on which this croft was, and evicted the crofter; his father was proprietor; that is the only one that I remember.

37,610. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—As illustrating the quality of men that existed in those days when the people had the land, and the quality of the men to-day who are landless, are the men of to-day more public-spirited than the men who were there in your younger days?—My dear sir, if they were not, we would not be in possession of the Crofters Act to-day.

37,611. Are the men who live to-day without land, braver and more patriotic and public-spirited than the men who were on the land in your younger days,—which were the better class of men?—I hold that those who lived before me must have been perfect slaves, otherwise they would never have allowed themselves to be crushed to death as they have been all over the country. I think the present generation are waking up to a sense of duty to themselves and their country; therefore I consider the present generation far superior to them in that respect.

37,612. But take this view of it. Did the men who lived then feel that they had a greater interest at stake in the Empire than the people of to-day feel?—I think so.

37,613 Have you any proof of that?—I will give you my reason,—I don't know whether you will call it proof or not.

37,614. You are an old soldier?—Yes.

37,615. Is the martial spirit in the Highlands of Scotland what it used to be in your young days?—In my young days the army was very popular. From the very spot that I come from, Dervaig, there were four of us fighting at the battle of Alma,—two in the Transport Service and two in the navy—eight in all—from this one small spot in Mull. To-day there is not one recruited from that part, and I will give any person a brown bawbee if he will go and hook any of these boys to go to the army to-day.

37,616. Were you engaged in the Indian Mutiny?—Yes.

37,617. Were there men from Dervaig there along with you?—Yes; there were two along with me at the taking of Lucknow, the same boys who were with me at Alma.

37,618. Were there at that time any from your parish serving in the British navy?—Yes, two, as I have said.

37,619. And in the Transport Service?—There were four; during the time of the Crimean war there were four from that spot—two in the navy and two in the Transport Service.

37,620. Could you count four men from the whole of Mull to-day?—I don't know of any but one, who belongs to this place here. There may be others, but I don't know of them.

37,621. How do you account for the loss of interest in the army and navy throughout the Highlands?—For instance, here I am myself, just a case in point. I went away as a young fellow to the army; there were older ones from the district away before me, whose example I imitated, thinking it the finest thing in the world to belong to the army. I left my father in Dervaig on his croft with two cows and a horse; I came back from the Crimean war to see him, and left him in possession of it still. A few years afterwards my father had neither croft, nor cow, nor anything else.

37,622. Do you remember when the estate of Sorn was cleared?—I do.

37,623. Who cleared it?—Mr James Forsyth.

37,624. Of Quinish?—Of Sorn; he was not proprietor of Quinish at that time.

37,625. He was the proprietor of Quinish and of Sorn?—He ultimately became the proprietor of Quinish; I don't know but he was proprietor of both at the time; I am not certain.

37,626. That is the father of the present proprietor of Quinish?—Yes.

37,627. How long after he got clear of the people was it when he sold the estate of Sorn?—I cannot say; it could not be very long; I am told about seven years.

37,628. Was it a prevailing habit at that time for men to buy Highland estates, clear the people away, and then sell the estates,—speculate in them?—They were credited with that, and, certainly, in his case he cleared the estate of Sorn, and when he got his hands on Quinish estate he cleared it also of all those he could clear.

37,629. Did the tenants who were cleared from Sorn get any compensation for the buildings?—Compensation!

37,630. Yes?—Don't be speaking about it, Mr

Tobermory. John Campbell.

Macrae; who ever heard of a Highland laird giving compensation to tenants who were evicted? If you did, I never heard of it in my life.

37,631. Did he take over their stock at valuation?—At his own valuation, I believe. I believe there is a man present who was evicted from there, and who can speak about the facts better than I can. I was told he simply took the stock at his own valuation. There are people who were at Dervaig who can tell; when he took the grazing from them he took some of the cattle on the same footing.

37,632. Who was it that established the township of Dervaig?—Maclean of Coll, in the year 1799, or thereabouts.

37,633. What privileges did he give to those who came to Dervaig?—There was nothing written that ever I saw; but I heard the people saying that the village consisted of twenty-six houses, thirteen on each side of the road, in blocks two and two together, with an entrance between every block, and a garden behind.

37,634. All according to a plan?—Yes. As I heard it, the inducement he held out, after he formed the idea of making this village, was that any man might build a house there, at his own cost, according to that plan, would be absolute owner of the same and of the garden for all time coming, by paying 13s. 4d., and, when he did build the house, the laird would give him a croft and grazing for which he was to pay rent, keeping two cows and a horse.

37,635. Every one of them then, who built a house according to the plan, had the house and garden his own absolute property?—And peat moss along with it.

37,636. On payment of an annual charge of 13s. 4d.?—Yes.

37,637. And, as soon as the house was finished, every one of these was entitled to a croft?—Yes.

37,638. What stock?—Two cows and a horse.

37,639. And sheep?—No; no sheep.

37,640. Had they plenty hill grazing for the two cows and horse?—Sufficient to keep them in good order all the year round.

37,641. What was the rent charged for the croft and the grazing?—Some of the crofts were a little larger than others, and some a little better, but with a difference of a few shillings; £4 would be the very highest, and some of them under £3. That includes the grazing.

37,642. Did any of these tenants get assistance from the estate for building the houses?—I never heard of it; but I know that when any of them left the place and went to the Colonies, as some of them did, to America and Australia, they sold their houses.

37,643. They had a right to sell the houses?—Yes.

37,644. And those to whom they sold the houses came into possession of the same privileges?—Yes; unless it was a man of very bad character, the estate would not object to his getting the croft.

37,645. You had practically free sale?—Free sale to any person you liked. Many houses changed hands on that footing.

37,646. Who took the grazings from you?—Mr Forsyth.

37,647. I want to ask you one question with regard to the crofts. Did the original crofters get the crofts prepared, or did they get them in a state of nature?—In a state of nature: they had to fence them themselves and do everything.

37,648. So that they built the houses without any help, and they reclaimed the crofts from a state of nature?—Yes, and fenced round every croft.

37,649. They did all the improvements?—The whole thing: it was on the face of a hill.

37,650. In what condition are these people to-day with relation to those houses?—They are in this condition to-day: some of them have stuck to the crofts,—some have two crofts and some three, paying, on an average, for the croft and house about £5, but they have no grazing whatever.

37,651. Can they sell the houses to-day?—No, they cannot.

37,652. Whose houses will they be, a year from to-day?—It has been asserted,—I cannot vouch for the truth of it—but some of the tenants, who were paying rent last Martinmas, asserted that in conversation with the proprietor he had stated that the houses in the village would be his at the expiration of the lease next March. The lease entered into in 1857 expires in March 1895.

Tobermory. John Campbell.

37,653. So that they lost the grazing several years ago, and now they are to lose the houses also next year?—There is one of them here who can tell you about it.—(Mr Gordon.—Just tell us what you know yourself).

37,654. Are you not aware, as a matter of fact, that these people have been bound by Mr Forsyth to hand the houses over to him in good habitable condition, and to make him the absolute owner next year?—I am aware that that is one of the conditions of the lease.

37,655. How many of these twenty-four people have crofts in Dervaig to-day?—I think about nine.

37,656. What has been done with the other crofts? Have some of the houses fallen into a state of decay?—Some of them went out of existence altogether; just now there is one down, and one ready for the road,—the man is in the poorhouse, and his house will be demolished some of these days.

37,657. Several of the houses are not inhabited?—People would not put a finger to them. Some old people here have relations away in the south who would put their houses in order if they were assured that they would be allowed to keep them.

37,658. When a croft falls out, what does the present laird, Mr Forsyth, do with it?—I can only give you what is alleged to be an answer of his own to some who applied to him for some of these crofts. Some were grumbling about paying too much rent: 'Well,' he says, 'I have six or seven applicants ready to take it 'to-morrow if you like to throw it up.'

37,659. Is there land-grabbing all round,—are there some there who have several crofts?—Yes, some have three, others four, and some two.

37,660. Is it the poor ones who get the vacant croft, or the rich ones?—Just those that are able to pay.

37,661. Who is the man there who holds the most?—The village merchant.

37,662. How many has he?—He has four. There is a man who came to the village,—he came off Mr Forsyth's estate,—who has three, and a retired custom-house officer has two.

37,663. Those who are well-to-do get, and those who are poor get nothing. Do you account for the dilapidated condition of that township by the fact that the original bargain has been broken,—that the people have been cheated?—Well, as I said, there is not a person who will come to help them to put things in order or improve their houses, knowing that they have no hold on them, because the terms of that lease are distinct; they must clear out at the expiration of the lease under a stiff penalty. That does not admit of argument; it is a legal lease.

37,664. You spoke about rack renting; what is the size of these crofts?—You may say of arable land (I am not speaking of rocks and such like, but of arable land), an average of 2 to 2½ acres.

37,665. And what is the rent charged for these?—Just now the average rent for the croft alone, apart from the house, is some £4, or thereabout.

37,666. Are some of them rented at between £4 and £5?—I believe there are some at £5.

37,667. For 2 acres?—Yes, of arable land, the remainder being land that neither man nor beast could benefit by.

37,668. When the hill grazing was taken from your township, was the stock taken over by the laird?—No, with the exception of what suited himself.

37,669. What became of the stock?—I was not there when it took place, but there is a person here who can tell you; one of my colleagues here was a party to the action, and he can speak of the matter better than I.

37,670. Do you believe that, if the people got reasonable access to the land and a fair opportunity of taking up a fair-sized holding at a fair rent, strictly fair, they would, in a year or two or three, put up the necessary buildings, and bring themselves into a much better condition than they are in to-day?—Do you ask that of such people as we have in Dervaig and in Tobermory here, on the verge of poverty,—do you ask whether if these people got land given to them to-morrow they could do that in a year or two?

37,671. Could they do it without any help?—I don't know how they could: they are on the verge of starvation, both here and there. In the village there are seventeen families in a state bordering on absolute poverty; I myself have not earned a sixpence since the 17th of April.

37,672. Would you in that case call upon the Government to come to the assistance of such men, and advance the necessary money?—Surely we have a right to ask it, seeing that our cousin Patrick across the water has been helped to improve his condition. Surely we are as needful and as much entitled to Government assistance as Paddy anywhere. We do not grudge it to him by any means. The late Government came forward cheerfully and placed sufficient at Paddy's feet to enable him to better his condition; and why should we not look for similar assistance?

37,673. You believe that this is what the Highland people generally look to for an improvement of their condition, and that they refuse to look to emigration until the land at home is made available?—Such of them as have no means of their own, and I believe it is the smaller number after all. Maybe there is a case where a person might establish himself on the land, but it is few and far between. And as for emigration, I think the less we say about that the better. We know sufficient about emigration: people are more enlightened now-a-days.

37,674. You know that the Highland people are full of the idea of getting back on to the land?—Yes, that is their determination.

37,675. And full of hope?—Yes: whether I see the day or not, my successors may.

37,676. And do you believe that if, by the assistance of Government, the Highland people got back to the land, by means of a fair distribution of it at a fair rent, the old war-spirit of the Highlander would come back again?—I think so.

37,677. He would go and fight for the Empire?—I think so.

37,678. Mr Gordon.—Can you tell us anything about the terms on which these houses at Dervaig were built? I understand they were built upon what is called building leases?—I can only tell you what I hear.

37,679. Is there any writing?—No writing that ever I heard of.

37,680. They erected their houses upon certain conditions, and one of the conditions was apparently that they would have a lease for thirty-eight years?—No, sir.

37,681. They built the houses in 1857, and the leases expire in 1895?—They don't admit that it was 1857: their impression, carried down all along, is that the houses were to be theirs as long as they paid that rent for them, for all time coming.

37,682. They built the houses without any guarantee except a verbal promise?—That is so.—(Mr Macrae.—The lease was a later business,—many years later).

37,683. What date was the lease?—There is no writing whatever in connection with the building of the village.

37,684. You mentioned, I think, that there was a lease granted, which they at first supposed covered the croft, but afterwards found out only covered the buildings?—That is the present lease, entered into in 1857.

37,685. The lease was that they were to hold a certain subject (whatever it was) for thirty-eight years apparently?—That was their impression,—that they were entering into that lease for the whole land.

37,686. As Mr Forsyth is a member of this Commission, it is well that we should have this matter thoroughly cleared up?—It was not the present proprietor that had any hand in that.

37,687. But he is in possession of the property which his father held when this bargain was made?—The people will tell you that their impression was, when they entered into that lease, that it covered the grazing, crofts, and all; and they only made the discovery that it only covered the houses, later.

37,688. So that you see that this lease, which you thought only covered the house, was a lease for the house, and no man enters into a lease for a subject which he considers his own?—Well, I will explain to you how they fell into the trap.

37,689. But there is no trap in it?—Perhaps I should not have used the word, and I will withdraw it if it is out of place.

37,690. Did you ever, in your experience, know a man to buy or lease a thing that he considered his own?—They did not think they were entering into a lease at all. They were told that he was going to give them new titles to their houses.

37,691. I have no wish to press anything upon you. I simply wish to make it clear to the Court and those who are present that these men entered into a bargain for this property, which was the house, but which you say they thought (and I am quite willing to take it from you) was more than the house; that they afterwards found it only covered the buildings; and that they entered into an agreement to hold these buildings for a certain sum of money for thirty-eight years. Has the proprietor fulfilled that bargain?—The proprietor has fulfilled it to the letter as far as the lease is concerned. I am only speaking of the people; their impression is that the leases were regarded as titles. Titles are in Gaelic called Coirichean, and a lease is called Aonta.

LACHLAN MACLACHLAN, Dervaig, Mull (about 60). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

37,692. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter in Dervaig?—Yes.

37,693. Did you build a house in Dervaig?—No.

37,694. Did you buy a house in Dervaig?—Yes.

37,695. How long is it since you bought it?—Forty years.

37,696. Was that before the leases were granted?—Yes.

37,697. Was there a lease of your house granted to you?—Not to me but to my father.

37,698. Have you got that lease?—Yes.

37,699. Have you got it with you?—No.

37,700. Can you put a copy of that lease in?—No, I am afraid it went to pieces.

37,701. Do you know what was the subject in that lease?—Thirty-eight years.

37,702. What did the lease cover?—Nothing but the houses.

37,703. Did your father think the lease covered more than the house?—No, I cannot say; I was only young at the time.

37,704. Was it in your day that the grazings were taken off?—Yes.

37,705. In what year did that happen?—I cannot tell.

37,706. What stock did you keep on the grazings,—was it sheep or cattle?—Two cows and a horse.

37,707. On the hill grazings?—Yes.

37,708. And what stock have you now?—Only two cows now.

37,709. Are there any fishermen in the village there?—Yes.

37,710. Do you fish?—No.

37,711. How are the people in the village generally employed?—Labouring here and there, where they can get work.

37,712. Is work to be had in the neighbourhood of the village?—Not much just now.

37,713. Mr Munro.—Does the proprietor claim the house from you on the expiry of the thirty-eight years' lease?—Yes.

Tobermory.

Lachlan Maclachlan.

37,714. Mr Maccallum.—You say that you bought the house?—Yes.

37,715. From whom did you buy it?—From a man in Dervaig who went to Australia.

37,716. Not from the proprietor?—No.

37,717. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Did your father, when he bought the house, believe that the house would be absolutely his property on paying a ground rent of 13s. 4d. per annum?—Yes.

37,718. Was that the understanding on which the township was founded, that the houses built by the people would be their own property, absolutely and for ever, and that they could sell them on paying the 13s. 4d. of ground rent?—Yes, I think they were of that opinion.

37,719. Was your father of that opinion when he bought the house,—that it would be for ever his own?—Yes, I think so.

37,720. Was it immediately after you signed those leases that the hill grazing was taken from you?—Shortly after we got it.

37,721. What rent do you pay for the land that keeps two cows?—£4. I have three crofts, and can only keep two cows. I pay £12 in all. The present laird, Mr Forsyth, took down our rent by £2, and, for the last twelvemonth, another £1, so now I only pay £9 instead of £12. I keep two cows and no followers.

Malcolm Gillies.

Malcolm Gillies, Dervaig, Mull (63).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

37,722. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—No.

37,723. Have you a house in the village?—I have a house, but I pay a rent for it.

37,724. Is the house your own?—No, the house is not my own; it is Mr Macphail's.

37,725. You are a labourer occupying a rented house in Dervaig?—I am just a labourer paying rent.

37,726. How long have you been in Dervaig?—About thirty-one years.

37,727. Do you know anything about this bargain between the householders at Dervaig and the proprietor?—No, I know nothing about it; I was down at Cailleach.

37,728. Mr Maccallum.—You heard the evidence given by Mr Campbell with regard to land suitable for small holdings; are you able to speak of any land additional to what he spoke of?—Yes, it is quite correct.

37,729. Can you refer to any other place besides?—No, I cannot; I have taken no notice of it, as I have no croft myself.

37,730. What would you like to say to the Commission?—The only thing I would like to lay before the Commission is that I saw the people leaving the place called Cailleach.

37,731. That is on the Morinish estate?—Yes.

37,732. Did you say that you yourself were in the township?—Yes, I was there myself.

37,733. One of the tenants?—My father was one of the tenants.

37,734. What sort of holdings did they have there; what size?—There were eight tenants in Cailleach at that time; some of them had eight cows, others six, and five, and so on, and a horse.

37,735. Were they in comfortable circumstances?—Yes, very comfortable.

37,736. Do you know what was the reason of their removal out of that place?—When this man, called Talisker, got it, he brought a farmer there and sent away the crofters.

37,737. The township of Cailleach was let as a sheep farm?—Yes; it is understood that when he put them away it was then let to a farmer as a sheep grazing.

37,738. Were the old tenants in arrear of rent, do you know?—No, not one; not a penny on any of them.

Tobermory.

Donald Maclean.

Donald Maclean, Dervaig, Mull (80).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

37,739. Mr Gordon.—Are you a householder?—I have no croft, but I pay rent for my house and garden.

37,740. You are just a labourer?—Just a labouring man.

37,741. Can you tell us anything about these leases? Did you ever see any leases for the houses?—Yes, I saw them, but I don't remember anything about them. I had plenty of land at that time, but they took it from me.

37,742. Had you any land there?—No.

37,743. How long have you been in Dervaig?—Twelve years.

37,744. Where were you before that time?—In Druim-na-croise and several other places.

37,745. Were you a crofter there?—I had more than a croft: I was a small farmer.

37,746. Mr Maccallum.—Were you a farmer in Druim-na-croise?—Yes.

37,747. What rent did you pay?—£14.

37,748. Were there others in that place along with you, or had you the whole of Druim-na-croise?—There were four of us in that township.

37,749. When did you leave Druim-na-croise?—Twenty years ago.

37,750. Did the others leave at the same time?—Yes, they were all rouped out.

37,751. You were put out against your will, were you?—Yes, against our will; that is what left us deaf and blind.

37,752. What was the occasion of your removal from the place?—No reason whatever; he just threw us all out without any reason.

37,753. Were you in arrears of rent?—No, never a penny.

37,754. What was done with the land then? How was it occupied after that?—Mr Forsyth took it into his own hands; there are farmers in it now.

37,755. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Did you hear from the old men of Dervaig the conditions on which they built their houses there originally?—They know all about it, who were in a very good way, but are now in a very poor state.

37,756. Who was laird when they built the houses?—Maclean of Coll; he was a good laird.

37,757. What conditions did he give when they built the houses?—I don't know anything about that; I was out of Dervaig in those days. They know themselves better than I do, those that are here.

37,758. Do you remember when the leases were signed?—Yes, I remember it; but these leases did not stand,—the old leases, I mean.

37,759. When the people built the houses, did the laird of Coll lead them to understand that the houses would be theirs for ever, so long as they paid a ground rent of 13s. 4d. for them?—Yes, it was on that understanding that they would have these houses as long as they paid the ground rent.

37,760. Mr Gordon.—You said you were out of Dervaig and knew nothing about the leases. How do you reconcile these two answers?—(No answer.)

37,761. Mr Donald Macrae.—Did you hear it said by the men themselves who built the houses, that the laird of Coll made it a condition that they would be the owners of the houses for ever, so long as they paid 13s. 4d. of ground rent for them?—Yes, he said that the houses would be theirs for ever, so long as they paid the feu-duty.

37,762. Are you aware that the laird of Quinish got them to sign a lease for thirty-eight years, in which they bind and oblige themselves to flit and remove from the said house at the expiry of this lease, and to leave the same void and redd, to the effect that the said James Forsyth and his foresaids, or others in his name, may enter thereto immediately, and peaceably possess the same in all time thereafter, and that without any previous warning or process of removal, and that that lease is to end next year?—I don't remember; I was but young.

Tobermory.

Donald Maclean.

37,763. I am afraid you are confusing two things,—the condition made by the laird of Coll, on which they built the houses, and the documentary conditions on which they entered with Mr Forsyth. Do you remember when the tenants signed these papers called leases to Mr Forsyth?—I remember that, and I might remember it; it is two times nineteen years.

37,764. Mr Gordon.—Are you perfectly clear upon this, that the men who built the houses themselves told you that the condition the laird of Coll made with them was that the houses would remain their own for ever, as long as they paid the ground rent of 13s. 4d.?—No, we were of that opinion, and when the lease expired we would get a renewal.

Duncan Mackillop.

DUNCAN MACKILLOP, Penmore (67).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

37,765. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter at Penmore?—No, I have no croft.

37,766. Are you a cottar?—Yes, I am a cottar now, but I had a croft at one time.

37,767. Do you want to get a croft now?—Yes.

37,768. Is there any land near Penmore that would suit you?—Yes, there is plenty of land at Penmore to suit me, where I was born and brought up.

37,769. Mr Campbell gave us an account of a number of places which he thought suitable; did you hear what he said?—No, I did not take any notice of what he said.

37,770. Can you tell us of any land which you consider suitable for new holdings?—No, I do not know of any. I know that where I am there is plenty of land available.

37,771. Near Penmore?—Yes.

37,772. Who is the proprietor of Penmore?—Dr Macnab.

37,773. What size of a holding?—A small croft.

37,774. Mr Maccallum.—Do you remember more crofters being in Penmore than there are just now?—No.

37,775. We were told that from the estate of Penmore fifteen families were sent away; do you agree with that statement?—Yes.

37,776. Were these crofters?—Yes, all crofters. There are only five crofters now.

37,777. When had you a croft yourself on Penmore?—It is about twenty-eight years since I was put away.

37,778. What was done with the land?—It is let to a tenant now.

37,779. What was the reason of your removal?—I can give no reason but the laird's own will.

37,780. How many were put away at the same time as you?—Fifteen along with me.

37,781. Were these in arrear of rent?—Not a penny.

37,782. And you think the land they held formerly is suitable for small holdings?—Yes, quite as suitable as ever it was.

37,783. Did the five crofters who remain get any benefit from your removal?—Yes, some of them have three crofts; he was planting wood on some of them, and that left the crofts smaller.

37,784. What size of croft had the fifteen?—Some of them smaller and some of them larger.

37,785. What was the largest size?—Some of them would carry four cows, some three, and others two.

37,786. Were they as large as the crofts that are there just now?—The same size; not smaller than they are now.

37,787. Do you desire to speak about any other estate except Penmore?—No, that is where I was born and brought up, and I would like to be there again.

37,788. Have you anything further to add to what you have now said?—No.

John Macphail

JOHN MACPHAIL, Shepherd, Achronich (53)—examined.

37,789. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter or a cottar?—No, I am a shepherd.

37,790. To whom?—To Capt. Macgregor, Oskamul.

Tobermory.

John Macphail.

37,791. Have you any statement to read to us?—No, only the number that were sent out of the place.

37,792. Did you hear the statement that Mr Campbell made?—Yes.

37,793. Do you agree with that?—Yes.

37,794. Do you know of any other place from which evictions were made?—No, except Kilchronan estate and Torloisk estate.

37,795. Give us first the estate of Kilchronan.—There were evicted from the township of Kilchronan seven families; from Keallan six, from Cornmill two, from Killiemore seven, from Ach-a'-chuirn three, from Achronich four, from Oskamul six, and from Corcamul eight. Now on the Torloish estate of the Marquis of Northampton; from the township of Laggan eight, from Kilbrennan seven, from Balgowan twenty, from Fanmore twelve, from Cill-Naoinean seven, from Toistary five, from Burg six, and from Ruadal six.

37,796. Are you aware when the people were removed from these townships?—Some forty years, and some fifty years ago.

37,797. Do you think that the ground to which you have referred is suitable for small holdings?—There is no mistake about that; it is.

37,798. You are acquainted with it yourself?—Oh, yes.

37,799. Is it all suitable for sheep, or good stock land?—Good for stock and good for crop.

37,800. And do you think it might be advisable to re-people it again?—Yes.

37,801. Mr Maccallum.—Are these townships on the Kilchronan estate now on a large farm?—Yes, it is the home farm of the proprietor.

37,802. Are all the townships on the home farm?—No, the farm of Kilchronan includes the township of Kilchronan; Keallan is let to a farmer, Mr Stuart; Killiemore to a farmer, Mr Macrae; Oskimul and Corcamul to Capt. Macgregor, also Achronich and Acharn; Laggan upon Torloisk estate is let to Walter Elliot, and Kilbrennan to one Macmillan; Cill-Naoinean is in the hands of the Marquis of Northampton; Burg is in the hands of a farmer.

37,803. Are these lands cultivated now?—Partly.

37,804. But, for the most part, they are let out of cultivation, are they?—Yes, under brackens and heather.

37,805. Do you find that arable land when left out of cultivation in this district deteriorates very much? Does it readily go under fog?—Yes.

37,806. The grass is not nearly so good after being a long time left out?—It is good for nothing; it is not good even for the rabbit.

37,807. So that the arable land here does not stand well in grass?—No. At one time the island of Mull was keeping five or six meal mills going, with about 300 bolls going through each of them every year, and now there is none at all. The big farmers have to take home their hay and corn to their stock, and the poor man has to send all that he earns to the Yankee in return for his meal and flour.

37,808. There is no mill at all in the island?—Not just now, except one at the upper end of Mull and one at the Ross; there are only two in existence.

37,809. Are these two in working order?—Yes.

37,810. Do the large farmers send any oats to grind to these mills?—No, none at all.

37,811. Who send the oats that are ground there?—Some of the crofters about Mr Guthrie's place.

George Willison.

GEORGE WILLISON, Farmer, Luing (45)—examined.

37,812. Mr Gordon.—Are you a farmer?—Yes.

37,813. I think you have a statement to submit to us?—I have prepared a statement which I desire to read, but before reading it I have to explain what district it applies to. It does not apply to this district at all, but to Oban and to the south and east of Oban, where I have experience.

Tobermory.

George Willison.

37,814. It applies to the county of Argyll?—Yes, but not to this district at all.—'I farm largely on my 'own account, and as managing trustee for my late 'brothers in Ayrshire, Lanarkshire, Perthshire, and 'Argyllshire, I farm in all, six farms. I have fre- 'quently been engaged in valuing properties and stock 'arbitrations, and in giving evidence as a practical 'farmer and valuator. I was educated under Dr 'Lindsay at Dollar Institution. I had classes in 'natural history, agricultural chemistry, algebra, 'Euclid, and land-surveying, thirty years ago. In 'submitting my opinion on this occasion, the farm that 'I would specially refer to here is the late Marquis of 'Breadalbane's model farm on the island of Luing, 'which we have farmed for the last thirty-one years: 'extent about 1800 acres. I understand the Marquis 'took this farm into his own hands to endeavour to 'promote high-class farming, and to show his tenantry 'an example. At this time it was farmed in, I think, 'twenty-six separate holdings. Whenever a farm 'became vacant on other parts of his extensive property, 'he gave it to a farmer from here, and took up his 'land. The Marquis spent large sums of money in 'building a large farm steading, and reclaiming the 'lands. I have frequently heard his tenantry say that 'they had a good time of it then, as there was plenty 'to do, and good pay. At the Marquis' death, in 1862, 'we took the farm. The steading was just finished, 'but there were no fences, and we have since spent on 'improvements as follows:—£1000 on 5-feet stone 'dykes; £800 on lime, 25 years ago; £300 liming the 'arable land about three years ago; besides other minor 'improvements. I have consumed on this farm alone, 'annually, not less than 100 tons of bought-in feeding 'stuffs, cake, &c., for the last twenty years. My neighbour- 'ing small farmers thought I was going to ruin myself; 'they have told me so since. My experience is that 'farmers, who farm well, do not get half credit, as the 'public say "that's a grand farm," but who has made 'it so, I would ask? When we made money in farm- 'ing we just laid it out on our farms again; I have 'heard my late father frequently say that he never 'made a shilling on any farm he ever took in the first 'half of his nineteen years' lease. I am astonished how 'ignorant some farmers are. I was valuing a property 'with the late Mr Drennan, Ayr, a few years ago, when 'we were shown some oats in the barn. I said I did 'not think the land could have grown such oats, "ah 'but," says the farmer, "I gie'd it a guid dose o' manure." 'Of what, I asked? "O' Nitre," he said. Luing farm 'I got from my late father twenty-four years ago, when 'the stock was valued to me at £10,500; it would be 'worth as much now. My system of management is as 'follows:—I breed West Highland cattle, some I cross 'with a short-horn bull. I keep a breeding stock of 'Cheviot and Leicester sheep; I work four pairs of horses 'to provide straw for the cattle in winter, and I feed 'principally sheep on the turnips I grow. I use all 'the most recent improved agricultural implements 'and machinery, and I consider that, unless you have 'capital to get these, and to breed the very best stock, 'and to manure highly, and to some extent, the 'ultimate result is failure, more so now than ever, 'with our importations. As to my experience of 'crofts and crofters, I have simply to state that 'they cannot live by crofting alone, and without 'other employment, they are bound to depend greatly 'on the charity of their neighbours. At Dalmally, 'where I farmed the large farm of Soccoch, I know 'that whenever a bad season came the crofters there 'got handsome donations from the late Lord Dudley, 'and Sir John Bennett Lawes, to buy them seed, &c., 'both of whom had deer forests in the district. An 'old neighbour farmer of mine at Luing, and one of 'the best of old Highlanders, Mr Maclean of Lecka- 'more, has told me frequently that my workmen are 'far better off in their present position than the small 'farmers were on Luing long ago. I have now a 'difficulty in getting good female workers, and, of 'course, have to pay in proportion. I may state here 'that, as there are several slate works on the island, I 'have to compete with them in the labour way. I 'was informed this summer that my workers were in a 'better position as to remuneration, than the quarriers. 'My foreman, John Gibson, who has been at Luing 'since we went, told me that he did not believe that 'there would be three applications for a croft or hold- 'ing between Luing and Oban, as the women cannot 'milk now, and all wanted to get into towns or be 'housemaids. I supply my workpeople with oatmeal 'and coal at cost price, to save the middleman; and 'my foreman informs me that there is less than one- 'third of the oatmeal consumed now than was twenty 'years ago. They all go in for loaf-bread, flour, ham, 'and tea. Although there are plenty of fish to be 'caught, there is not one half of the people go out to 'fish that did twenty years ago. This shows that there 'is not much destitution. I consider that the greatest 'curse to any locality is agitation, where there is no 'cause for it, and I blame the agitators and not the 'people; they are misled, and I cannot understand 'how any upright man would desire to do so. Agita- 'tion drives capital and ability out of a locality, and 'leaves it poor indeed. What I object to is this,— 'that strangers do not know local circumstances, such 'as climate, distance from markets, and ability to 'realise the subject under those and other circum- 'stances. As a Parochial Board District Councillor, 'with an experience of twenty-five years in public 'business in Luing district, I would object to risk the 'security likely to be given; and, as a valuator and 'having gone into the matter,—if taken by compulsion '—I think anyone would be a fool to have land on 'the terms of the Crofter or Holdings Act, as there are 'plenty of proprietors willing to sell at 30 per cent. 'less, at least, than present farming value. I know 'for all the land that will be taken it would be a very 'good sale for the proprietors, and a fine going out for 'the large tenants in the way of being paid with good 'security for unexhausted improvements, manures, &c. 'In fact this Croft or Allotments question is looked 'upon at least by nine-tenths of the population in this 'district as worthless, and fails to serve the object 'intended; and I would not have given evidence in 'this case were it not to finally settle the misleading 'representations that have been scattered abroad 'through the local press, and otherwise, by agitators. 'In conclusion, as to the Deer Forests, I think we 'should all be very thankful that we get sportsmen to 'spend such sums of money amongst us. In that 'respect we are the envy of many a nation. I know 'of any amount of land in the North and West High- 'lands with wool at the present price, and mutton and 'beef much dearer than at present, now under deer, 'which, if farmed, would not leave a copper for rent.'

37,815. Your very clear statement deals with the part of the country to the south of here, I suppose?—Yes.

37,816. And you have given us a very clear account, certainly, of the condition in which we found the island of Luing when we visited it. But you say that in putting it into that condition Lord Breadalbane had to turn out twenty-six small holders from the land?—Well, the rent I paid was £1160, which is just about as much as would be paid by twenty-six tenants, at an average of under £50.

37,817. Your rent, according to the valuation roll, is £565, for Kilchattan?—Yes, but other portions are entered separately in the valuation roll: £700 is my present rent.

37,818. Dividing £700 by twenty-six we get an average rental of about £27. The question I want to ask you is this: with all the beneficial effects of your holding the farm, are you still of opinion that the country has derived more benefit from your occupation of the island of Luing than it would have done from the twenty-six separate holders?—I am of that opinion, and my neighbours have told me so. They have told me that my workers are far better off than the occupiers of those separate holdings.

37,819. A rental of £27 would represent very much the class of holdings which this Commission aims at, viz., a self-supporting holding. If you reduce the holding below the level of a self-supporting holding, it follows that the man must either find work somewhere else, or he cannot be well off,—the croft itself won't keep him; but if the croft is large enough to keep him he is just as able to be well off, as regards food and raiment, as the best working man can be who is earning his bread. Now, I will ask the question again, and I expect you will answer it. Do you think the country is benefited by your occupation to a greater extent than it would be if there were twenty-six self-supporting holdings in the island?—I think so.

37,820. The cry has been raised in the country that people are all flocking to the large towns. Now, where did the twenty-six farmers go when Lord Breadalbane cleared the island to make room, for what I may call a 'fancy' farm?—In my statement I make that clear. If a tenant died in any other part of his extensive property, which reaches, as you are aware, from sea to sea, from Taymouth to my place, which is the southermost portion of his estates, he would give the farm thus vacated to one of the Luing people.

37,821. As a matter of fact, do you know that these people were all placed in other holdings after they left Luing?—So I have been told; and that is what I have ascertained, to the best of my knowledge,—that there was never one expelled or turned out.

37,822. Now, there is a pretty large population in connection with the slate quarries and the other industries in the island of Luing, such as fishing, though I understand the fishing is not prosecuted to any great extent; but there is certainly a considerable population in the island at present, whether at the quarries near Kilchattan or at the small fishing village on the west side. Is there such a thing within the reach of these people as a milk cow?—They all get milk. There are about thirty milk cows on the island, and the people get milk when they want it. I keep cows to supply my workers.

37,823. How many milk cows have you got?—I keep seven or eight for my place.

37,824. I suppose there will be a total population on the island, irrespective of your place, of something like 200,—I mean on that part of the island near the quarries?—Yes, but my workers get milk, and everybody gets milk.

37,825. I am afraid you are evading the question a little. I say the population in the neighbourhood of your farm may be estimated moderately at 200; now do you say these 200 people are supplied with milk? They are not your workers.—They are supplied by me, they are supplied by the smith, and they are supplied by two crofters, the miller and the schoolmaster; also by the other farmers on the island.

37,826. But your land comes in between the people I speak of and the other farmers; they are more than a mile from the nearest other house?—But they take the milk to them; in other words, there is as much milk as they like to buy at 6d. a gallon.

37,827. That is a moderate price.—That is the price I charge, and that is the condition on which I keep cows. I make the price, and the other farmers or small holders have to take the same price.

37,828. May I ask you this other question,—does the farm of Luing pay you?—It has paid me.

37,829. Is there any reason why it should not pay the twenty-six men if they had it?—Yes; the reason it would not pay them is that they cannot afford to buy implements such as I do; and they cannot afford to concentrate their labour.

37,830. I assume that they would be men with a reasonable amount of capital in proportion to the size of the holdings they occupied; and I ask you again, is there any reason why a man with a sufficiency of capital, occupying a place fairly rented at £27, should not be as able to make money as you are with your thousands?—I speak from the experience I have had of small farmers. I may say that I am trustee at present for a family whose estate is being wound up, and who have lost money by small farming to such an extent that I don't know whether the estate will come out clear or not. It is a fact that they were worth £1000 in stock twenty-five years ago, and had £500 in bank, yet, at the present time, I don't know whether they will be able to pay or not. That is one example. One of these said to me 'Mr Willison, when you came to the 'island just a wee boy (of course I was a Saxon and a 'stranger) do you know what we were all saying 'about you?' 'No,' says I, 'I don't.'—'Well,' says he, 'when you came to Luing, a wee boy, we said "He '"will no be long here, this one, for he will soon ruin '"himself at the rate he is pouring the feeding stuffs out on the quay."' Now, that is an instance of a family who have failed where I have succeeded.

37,831. You have a considerable extent of ground there under grass, and, therefore, at certain seasons of the year, it stands to reason you will have to supplement it by produce from other countries. Now, if twenty-six people were spread over the farm, they would be growing feeding stuffs for their own use, whether profitably or not?—They cannot grow them as cheaply as I can purchase them. No further back than last week I sent out to my place some good Russian barley, feeding barley, which I bought at £3, 12s. 6d. a ton. Adding the freight, 7s. 6d. a ton, it cost me £4 a ton delivered at Luing. Now can it be grown at that price?

37,832. Is there any reason why a man paying £27 of rent should not be able to purchase Russian barley if he wants it?—Well, I don't know; they have not done it yet, at all events.

37,833. But they might do so now, benefiting by the education they have got from you on the island?—I don't know where they are to be got.

37,834. If a man's whole time is fully taken up in profitable occupation I do not see why he should not be in as good a position for making money on a small holding as a man on a big holding, who must employ men to work for him. You were talking just now about banks and money, but, as a matter of fact, I have been told by a bank-manager in the country I come from, that the men who were the largest depositors in the northern bank were farmers paying less than £60 a year.—Well, that does not hold good in Argyllshire; the climate must have something to do with it.

37,835. You have a very fine climate down at Luing?—There is a very great difference. It is not a very good climate, though I have improved the farm a bit by means of the feeding stuffs that I consumed on it, and the lime I have applied.

37,836. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—We are very glad to see that you have come to assist us in this inquiry, Mr Willison. You have come a long way to give us your assistance, and you have given us a statement with regard to the farm which you hold in Luing. You say that there were twenty-six separate holdings consolidated into that one farm?—This is my information.

37,837. Can you tell us anything of the circumstances of the people who had these holdings? Were they comfortable, or were they in poverty, or do you know anything of the condition in which they were when they held the land which you now occupy?—In a general way, they were not well off at all. According to the information I obtained long ago from an old friend, Maclean of Leckamore, with whom I was associated very much, there were certain seasons when they had a good barley crop, which they sold for distilling purposes, and the Easdale quarries were very prosperous at the time, so that there was then a considerable circulation of money in the island: but in bad seasons they were very ill off.

37,838. Do you grow barley now?—No, I can buy it cheaper.

37,839. These former tenants, I suppose, cultivated to a greater extent than you do now?—Oh yes, they cultivated more land.

37,840. So that your scientific mode of cultivation is to leave it under grass pretty much?—I cultivate only what I consider the suitable proportion for the proper management of the place, and what is most suitable in respect of the place itself, and the distance; that is for the rearing of stock.

37,841. But is it not the case that the land is getting under fog and rushes by being left out of cultivation?—The land of a secondary class that was improved did deteriorate. Such land as the Marquis of Breadalbane did improve, where it was a peat bog, is going back to a state of nature, but the good land is improving.

37,842. It is allowed to deteriorate?—No, it is not. I say only the proportion of it that was inferior to commence.

37,843. Is not your statement that it goes back to a state of nature?—The proportion of the land: but the best land has increased in value, and will keep three times the stock. I appeal to you, Mr Chairman, as a practical farmer, whether land that is of such quality or has been so improved does not increase in value through lying out of cultivation, and being used for feeding cattle. It can be improved by feeding without tillage.

37,844. No person, I suppose, would deny that land can be improved. Is it your opinion that you have improved the land to a very considerable extent?—Decidedly.

37,845. Do you know what rent was paid by the twenty-six holders of the farm that you have now?—No.

37,846. Have you any means of comparing the rent that they paid with the rent you pay? Is your rent higher or lower than the rent paid by the twenty-six?—I think it would be very much what I paid for nineteen years, but, of course, the farm produce of all sorts without our importations.

37,847. If you would just keep to the question I should be obliged. Do you know whether the rent has gone up or come down—is it now higher or lower, than the rent paid by the twenty-six?—It came down twelve years ago.

37,848. And you say it is now lower, although the farm has got so valuable?—It is now lower.

37,849. And you hold that no one can live by crofting?—Not on crofting alone.

37,850. Do you believe that no one could live on a £30 holding?—By crofting alone. I did not state that at all as a general statement: I said such was my experience; £30 was not mentioned.

37,851. Thirty pounds is the limit of the crofter holding, so that when you say no one can live by crofting, you must mean that no one can live on a £30 croft. But these people in Luing lived on their small holdings, did they not, and paid rent?—Yes.

37,852. A higher rent than you pay?—I gave my experience, and I will give an explanation of what I mean. I mentioned my experience of the Dalmally crofters, but I say I know nothing whatever about those crofters. The only experience that came under my notice was at Dalmally, and that is what I have spoken about. I will not have words put into my mouth which I did not use, or I shall have to crave the protection of the Chair.

37,853. There is no need of craving any protection from me at all: I only put your own words to you, and only take your answers, therefore I do not see that there is any need for protection?—You spoke of the £30 limit.

37,854. Do you not know that £30 is the crofter limit?—I suppose it is.

37,855. You knew that, did not you?—I have had no experience of the working of a £30 croft.

37,856. But you make a general statement that no man can live by a croft?—I said 'my experience of crofting.'—(Mr Gordon.—You meant smaller crofts?—Yes, the Dalmally crofts. We were there for twenty years.)

37,857. You make this general statement, that no one can live by crofting, so far as you know?—I did not make a general statement.

37,858. That is the statement in your paper here?—I say 'my experience of crofts and crofting.'

37,859. 'As to my experience of crofts and crofters, 'I have simply to state that they cannot live by croft-'ing alone'?—That is my experience.

37,860. 'They are bound to depend greatly on the 'charity of their neighbours.' Now, do the crofters of Dalmally depend greatly on the charity of their neighbours?—I say so; that was my experience. They do not if they get a good season; but the crofters of Dalmally do not depend on crofting alone.

37,861. I am rather astonished to hear that, because I know Dalmally myself, and I never dreamt of such a thing as that they lived upon the charity of their neighbours; but I take what you say for what it is worth.—Lord Dudley and Sir John Bennett Lawes gave them seed and potatoes when it came a bad season: what do you call that? Was that not charity?

37,862. Well, of course, when a bad season comes, they might need help.—But that is not help?

37,863. The statement in your paper is that they depend greatly on charity, whereas you now speak of seasons of great destitution, and say that they get help then.—'When bad seasons come,' I say.

37,864. Are you not aware that when bad seasons come, large farmers also get reductions of rent from the proprietors? Do you call that also 'charity'?—No, I don't.

37,865. What is the distinction?—The distinction is this: in the one case there is an abatement of rent given out of consideration directly from the proprietor: but, in the cases I instanced, Lord Dudley and Sir John Bennett Lawes were not the proprietors at all, but the game tenants simply. There was no connection there, and no reason for giving help; it was for no services rendered.

37,866. Is a reduction of rent given for services rendered?—It is.

37,867. What services do they give for a reduction of rent?—The tenant has endeavoured to gather the rent.

37,868. So do the crofters?—Not for Sir John Bennett Lawes and Lord Dudley: there is the distinction.

37,869. You speak about agitation, and say you consider 'the greatest curse to any locality is agitation 'where there is no cause for it.' What do you mean by that?—That is plain English, I think.

37,870. What do you refer to?—I would say, trying to mislead people.

37,871. What misleading do you point at?—It is well enough known what agitation is.

37,872. What agitation do you point at?—Any agitation where there is no cause for it.

37,873. And do you think anything can occur without a cause?—Many people try it, at all events.

37,874. I think there must be a cause for anything: is not that so?—No, I don't think so.

37,875. It is generally held that there can be no effect without a cause: however, you may be a greater philosopher than any that has yet appeared. One of the results of this great agitation, you say, is that it 'drives capital and ability out of a locality.' It has not driven you out yet: you consider yourself able and a man of capital, and you still remain in the place: is that not so?—(No answer.)

37,876. Whom has it driven out?—Lots.

37,877. You remain, with all your ability and capital?—Lots have been driven out that could not put up with it.

37,878. Who have been driven out?—I could give you plenty, but you don't know them at all.

37,879. That is the very reason why I ask the question?—There is any amount of farmers who were in the north, who would not be bothered with the agitation and that, and who left the north, and have taken land where they can cultivate it and where they are glad to be seen. They are men that you know nothing about.

37,880. Will you give us information yourself?—I don't require to give you information; I make that statement.

37,881. You came here voluntarily to give us information, and I should like to know what weight to attach to this statement of yours as to the driving away of capital from the Highlands?—That is the statement that I make.

37,882. You just leave it there, on your word simply?—Yes.

37,883. You also say that what you object to is that strangers do not know local circumstances; what is the meaning we are to attach to that?—I explain it, as you will see if you read on.

37,884. 'Strangers do not know local circumstances, 'such as climate, distances from markets, and ability to 'realise the subject under those and other circum-'stances'?—Yes.

37,885. Does that mean that the people who are applying for land are strangers and do not know the climate?—Applying for land? I did not speak of those. I say strangers who come in and talk about it,—not practical men. Even strange farmers, those from a distance, would know no more about a farm in a locality. I hold that if you remove a farmer, even the most practical farmer, a hundred miles from his farm, he knows nothing about it.

37,886. Yes, but the people who are applying for land, and who say they think it would be a good thing for them to get land, and that they could profitably occupy it,—they are not strangers?—I do not apply it to them.

37,887. You did not refer to those who are now asking for land?—I refer to strangers that come in and give an opinion, such as the travelling public.

37,888. I don't know what we have to do with these at all. We have to deal with those who are applying for land: these are not strangers?—I would answer the question by giving an instance. What do you know about farming in Skye?

37,889. Mr Willison, I am not here to be catechised: I would be quite willing to take any information from you, but, in the meantime, I do not want to submit to any catechism from you. You make another extraordinary statement here: 'I think 'anyone would be a fool to have land on the terms of 'the Crofter or Holdings Act': why so?—Because I understand that if the land is to be acquired it must be by arbitration, and at market value.

37,890. Would not that be a very fair thing?—I know for a fact that there is a third or, at least, a fourth of Scotland for sale, if it could be bought; and we find the reason in agitation. That is what agitation is: that is how it drives capital out.

37,891. Do you know the terms of the Crofters Act? Do you know under what terms they hold land under the Crofters Act?—I don't know further than this,—my information is that, if taken by compulsion, it is a matter of arbitration.

37,892. They don't take land by compulsion under the Crofters Act, except for extension of holdings. Don't you think that the terms of the Crofters Act are very favourable terms?—Taking land for the Crofters Act,—that is what I say.

37,893. Don't you think the terms of the Crofters Act are very fair to the tenant?—I refer to the extension of holdings; that is what I understand.

37,894. You refer to the extension of holdings under the Crofters Act?—Yes.

37,895. Do you think then that the terms upon which they get such land are unfair to the crofters?—I say I think they would be fools if they would take it.

37,896. If they would take it from the Commission?—If they would take it by extension of holdings, if they have to pay according to arbitration,—if the land has to be acquired by arbitration.

37,897. Don't you know the terms of the Crofters Act are fixity of tenure and fair rent? Why should a man be a fool to accept the land under these conditions?—I don't refer to present crofts at all, but to the extension of crofts. That is my experience.

37,898. I suppose this is your idea; you speak of extending the terms of the Crofters Act to other people, and I ask you are not these terms very favourable—more favourable than the terms upon which farmers now hold their land,—namely, fixity of tenure, compensation for improvements, and fair rent?—I refer to extension.

37,899. What is there that is foolish about these terms?—I think it is very foolish; I would not take an extension, which is by arbitration I understand.

37,900. I suppose you came here to give your assistance, Mr Willison, and to show us what land there is that could be suitably utilised for small holdings; have you pointed out any land at all that would be suitable for small holdings?—I have offered land.

37,901. But you came here some distance to give us your assistance, presumably; and the assistance we want is this: to show us land that would be profitably occupied by small holders. Have you shown us or pointed to any such land?—Lord Breadalbane has offered land down in our district. I have not inspected land for that purpose.

37,902. My business is to insist upon having an answer to my question, or I will stop the examination altogether. Have you in this statement pointed out any lands that could be profitably occupied by small holders?—I have not pointed out, because——

37,903. So that you have not come here to give us this assistance at all?—I came here to give you the experience of my place and my locality connected with Breadalbane, and I think it is embraced in that paper. I say that Lord Breadalbane——

37,904. Never mind that; I want an answer please?—Allow me, I will answer in my own way, and not have any words put in my mouth.

37,905. I refuse to accept any insinuation of that kind,—that I put words into your mouth.—(Mr Gordon.—Mr Willison wrote a letter as to the conditions upon which he was to give evidence.)

37,906. I take it that in this statement you have not pointed out to us any land that could be profitably occupied by small holders; is that not so?—(No answer.)

37,907. That is a very simple question. I ask you if you have pointed out, in this statement, any land that could be profitably occupied?—If you read the paper you will see the assistance I give.

37,908. So there is no assistance to us in finding out land that could be profitably occupied by small holders?—I am not paid for inspection.

37,909. You state here the reason why you come,—it is 'to finally settle the misleading representations 'that have been scattered abroad'?—Yes.

37,910. 'Through the local press, and otherwise, by 'agitators': that is a very big order?—I daresay it is, but it is what is meant.

37,911. Now what 'misleading representations' do you think you have finally settled here to-day?—I hope to.

37,912. What are they?—The reason that I come is that I hope to do so, and I would not have come if it were not for that.

37,913. But you have come here 'to finally settle 'the misleading representations that have been 'scattered abroad, through the local press, and other-'wise, by agitators'; what are those misleading statements that you have come to finally settle?—That land was wanted in my district. I offered it, and when I was in the district I asked the men, and asked on my own place if they wanted land, and they said no, they did not want land. Some of them stated that their garden was too big for them already. It was all scattered abroad through the local press that down in our way land was wanted.

37,914. You have come here to finally settle that no land is wanted in your district?—Decidedly: I have come here to make that statement before the Commission.

37,915. Were you authorised to make that statement by any body of people in Luing?—I offered land, and Lord Breadalbane——

37,916. Please answer my question directly. It is a very simple question. Were you authorised by any body of people in Luing to make that statement?—Authorised? I never asked them.

37,917. You have never asked them; that is precisely what I wanted to know?—I did ask them at one time.

37,918. I am only taking your own words. Did

Tobermory.

George Willison.

you hold any meeting of the people for the purpose of receiving authority to come here?—Certainly not; I am not a delegate at all.

37,919. Then what are the misleading representations that you are finally settling to-day?—That land is wanted in our locality; that is all; and to state that Lord Breadalbane has offered any amount of land on his estates in Dalmally, and up in the Dalmally district (which is another district), in Luing and in Seil; and I myself offered land in Luing for the purpose you refer to. I offered enough to keep cows, but they would not have it.

37,920. You offered land and they would not take it?—Yes.

37,921. What were the conditions on which you offered it?—At a fair rent. The offer was not entertained.

37,922. Have you any document to show the offer you made?—I made it verbally.

37,923. Was it when you were standing for the County Council?—No, it was nothing of the kind.

37,924. You stood for the County Council, I suppose?—I did.

37,925. And did not get in?—No. I don't see what that has to do with it.

37,926. But the statement was made at that time, I suppose?—It was nothing of the kind. That is putting words into my mouth.

37,927. You hold a great part of the island of Luing; and you take it upon yourself to come here to finally settle that the people do not want land; is that the purpose for which you have come?—To give my experience; and that is my experience.

37,928. How can that have been your experience?—Because I myself offered it, and they refused it.

37,929. You have plenty of land yourself?—Of course I have.

37,930. And you think no other person desires land but you; is that so?—I beg your pardon.

37,931. Is not that the force of what you are saying?—It is nothing of the kind.

37,932. Are there people then wanting land there?—There are not.

37,933. That is the same thing as I said?—They are not wanting land, because they got the opportunity.

37,934. I should have liked to have the document.—What document?

37,935. The offer that was made to them by you of land.—It was made verbally, as I have already told you. I do not see why there should be a document attached to every matter that is taken up, not necessarily.

37,936. In what way did you make it known to them?—Verbally.

37,937. How did it come about that you made the offer at all, if they were not wanting land? How did it occur to you to offer it?—It was agitators that were scattering abroad, and trying to make out that the people wanted land: I think, indeed I have no doubt, it came from yourself, a good bit of it too, if I am not mistaken.

37,938. What came from myself?—Statements I was told were delivered in Gaelic by you on the island of Luing. You made a statement; there was a report made by Sir D. H. Macfarlane, and it is almost the only letter that I replied to. He said at Toberonochy that there were hundreds of people and hundreds of children there, who could not get a drop of milk, through the land being held by one extensive tenant, and that it was a shame. Well, I made out a statement and read the reply, and I made out that, as I said to the Chairman, there were no less than thirty dairy cows kept solely for the purpose of supplying the people with milk; so that you see, Mr Maccallum, the large tenants are not so inconsiderate of the wants of the people.

37,939. So you say.—We are not so inconsiderate, we have hearts and heads as good as anybody.

37,940. When a thing is not said, why, you need not deny it, Mr Willison. I don't think any person would say that you are without a head. However, that is not the point. You say I am responsible for some things that have been said. Let me assure you that I have no responsibility at all in regard to anything that may have been written about your farm or about yourself, and you may rest assured that any such suspicion is altogether groundless.—It was stated to me and corroborated by several who were at the meeting.

37,941. Then you conclude 'we should all be very 'thankful that we get sportsmen to spend such sums of 'money amongst us. In that respect we are the envy 'of many a nation.' Do you think that we are the envy of other nations because the land is devoted to sport?—I think we are the envy of nations in respect of the waste land that I referred to. I know plenty of land in the west and north islands that, with wool at the price, and with mutton and beef and grain at the price, is utterly unsuited for growing crops; it would be ruinous. I say that, taking those things into account, we should be very thankful that we get sporting tenants,—I don't care where they come from,—who promote the circulation of money. My opinion is that I would receive them with open arms. If the subject thus used is not suitable for profitable realisation in any other way, I consider they are great benefactors towards us.

37,942. As to the farm that you occupy, you say that a great deal has been spent upon the steading. Can you give us any idea of the sum of money so spent?—Not exactly; I have heard it roughly estimated.

37,943. I suppose you can give us it roundly?—About £7000.

37,944. What is the rent of the whole farm, including the steading?—£700; but the steading is now forty-three years old; and it has to be kept in view that for nineteen years I paid a rent of £1160.

37,945. Did you ever hear of such a sum as that being spent on crofter holdings?—No.

37,946. Mr Munro.—Could you tell us, in a few words, what special object you had in view in coming here to-day?—I have stated it there,—to give you my opinion and my experience of crofting, and to show you that I thought it surely required both capital and education and perseverance to make a successful farmer.

37,947. You are aware, no doubt, that the object of this Commission is to ascertain what land there is available for profitable cultivation by crofters or other small tenants?—I am.

37,948. Then have you to-day furnished us with any evidence that would help us in that direction?—I have furnished you with evidence there that I do not think the system is applicable at all, in my experience. So far as supplementing my statement, I think that the holdings would either require to be sufficiently large to occupy the whole time of the family, and their whole work; but I doubt if the parties have the capital to stock the enlarged holdings. Our produce has fallen fearfully low; that accounts for the destitution that has overtaken not only crofters but farmers, and all owing to our importations. It is the low values.

37,949. I presume you are prepared to admit that the produce of a croft is not less in value proportionally than the produce of a big farm, and therefore the big farms and the small farms are in precisely the same position?—If they are farmed under the same conditions. If I had a farm that it required £100 to stock, I would like to have at least £50 of spare cash, after paying my rent, to be able to improve, to be able to farm the land well. I may give you the case of a young friend of mine in Berwickshire, where I went in order to value a farm. He thought it was in first-rate order; he thought it was all right, but he was not practical. I found it vegetably poor, poor in manure, though a fine farm. He said 'well, what do you think of the farm.' I said, 'well, if 'you had £2000 to put out on it to bring it into fair 'order, and spend that amount, in four or five years you will have a nice sort of farm; but you will never have 'anything at all unless you expend the money at first,—'you will never get a return, and you will never have 'the farm in good condition.' My father's rule was that when we had made money we spent it on the farm; we never took it out of the farm. That is what we call well-doing, frugal; and you will be well off so long as you cultivate that.

37,950. Now I don't wish to put any restraint upon you, but might I suggest that you could without disadvantage answer the questions a little more briefly. I do not make this suggestion in any offensive spirit. Your evidence here to-day, so far as I have been able to interpret it, goes in the direction of showing that the small farm system ought not to be encouraged. Am I right in so thinking?—No, I did not say the small farm system; I said my experience of crofters.

37,951. You have told us that crofters cannot live in crofts?—That is my experience.

37,952. Are you not aware that, at this moment, there are thousands of crofters in Scotland?—I am aware, but I have had no experience of successful crofters.

37,953. How do they live?—They manage to exist, I daresay.

37,954. Well, take your own definition of it as a bare existence. Does it not follow that, if they can manage to exist on the present miserably-sized crofts, they might be comfortable if they got an addition of land?—If they got a sufficient size, and if they were able to stock it.

37,955. What would you consider a sufficient size?—It depends on the land.

37,956. Take an average croft in Argyllshire?—I would say they could not live on less than a £50 holding.

37,957. How do they manage to live on these crofts on less than £30 rent?—I don't know.

37,958. Have you any idea of the precise number of crofters in the counties embraced by the Crofters Act?—No, I have no idea, but I have taken a turn round all over the north.

37,959. Would you be surprised to hear that there are no less than 25,000 crofters in the district embraced by the Crofters Act alone?—Nothing would surprise me.

37,960. Now, do you mean seriously to tell us that these 25,000 crofters, or a large proportion of them, do not manage to earn a fair livelihood?—Not on crofting alone.

37,961. What do they earn it upon?—I suppose some of them fish, and others follow other occupations, such as carting; and there are tradesmen and merchants.

37,962. But big farmers occasionally do something to supplement their income, do they not?—Certainly.

37,963. You have told us yourself that you are a valuator as well as a farmer?—Yes.

37,964. I think you said that you farm yourself, or for others, no fewer than six different farms?—I do.

37,965. Would you like to add to that number?—No; I can give you the reason if it is of any interest.

37,966. There is not the slightest occasion to give the reason?—It was death that made me farm that number.

37,967. Have you ever made any calculation as to the number of families displaced in order to make way for your six farms?—There is no other farm on which I ever heard of any displacement.

37,968. Were the others always large farms?—Always large farms. I have one in the south of Ayrshire, and another in Lanarkshire, two in Perthshire, Acharn, Killin, and Kingcorth, as well as one near Crieff, and I never heard of a crofter being in any one of them: it was never known. That is why I referred to Luing in particular.

37,969. Have you never heard it stated that any of these farms were actually improved or taken in by crofters, who were subsequently removed from these farms?—Never.

37,970. But, on the farm of Luing which you now occupy, you yourself, I think, admitted that there were at one time 26 tenants?—I stated,—did not admit.

37,971. A statement is surely equal to an admission: you gave us the information, at all events?—I made a statement.

37,972. What was the condition of these twenty-six families before they were removed from Luing?—I don't know beyond what I have given in the statement. An old friend of mine said that my work-people were better off than they were then.

37,973. But that is a matter of opinion?—Oh well, that is a fact.

37,974. What time were they removed from Luing?—It would be somewhere before 1852, as that is the date of the steading. But they were not removed in a body.

37,975. Were they removed to make room for you?—I was not in existence then. It was Lord Breadalbane's model farm, and I thought you would have known what a model farm was. We only took it on the death of the Marquis.

37,976. We have come here to-day to get information from gentlemen of your superior intelligence, and, of course, you need not be surprised if we occasionally manifest some little ignorance on this very important question. You have told us that you yourself received a very superior education?—I said so.

37,977. And that, no doubt, forms a very valuable asset to any man. Now, was one of your objects in mentioning about this superior education you had received, to impress us of the proper weight to be given to your evidence here to-day?—Decidedly; that follows in all evidence that we give. I mentioned that as a pre-oration to my experience.

37,978. You consider that we should attach very considerable weight to your evidence on account of your experience?—On other occasions I get five guineas a day but, on this occasion, I am sorry to say there is nothing of the kind.

37,979. You rather seemed to deprecate the idea of crofters supplementing their income by any other occupation?—Certainly not.

37,980. But you said that they could not live unless they had that?—Yes.

37,981. And I suppose it is something of the same nature that takes you to earning five guineas a day at valuator's work?—Certainly.

37,982. So that the big farmers, as well as the crofters, have occasionally to resort to supplementary sources of income?—I answered that question already.

37,983. You mentioned, I think, that there was considerable difficulty in getting workers for farms as compared with twenty years ago?—Yes.

37,984. To what do you attribute that difficulty?—To the influx to towns: the young people seem to prefer being clerks and housemaids.

37,985. What caused the efflux of the rural population from the country to the towns?—They preferred being housemaids and clerks to being dairymaids and farmworkers. They have lost all their frugal habits; that is our experience.

37,986. Is it not a fact that it was entirely owing to the evictions which have taken place in the country that there is a scarcity of farm labour at this moment?—That is not my experience at all.

37,987. Crofters have come here to-day and have told us that their great object was to obtain access to the land, and that if they got that wish gratified on fair terms they would be in a position of comfort. You have heard that statement made here to-day?—Yes.

37,988. I think you will freely allow that these men are pretty fair judges of their own interest?—Decidedly.

37,988*a*. Then how do you reconcile that with the statement you have made that a crofter cannot exist on his croft?—By crofting alone. I could do with a little money too if I was hard up: that is what I mean.

37,989. Now, in talking of the depreciation of farm produce at the present time, as compared with what it was a good many years ago, you gave us an instance of the low price at which Russian barley could be bought, and the deduction you made from that was that the people of this country could not afford to grow barley?—The deduction I made there was that if you can buy an article under the cost of production, he is a fool who goes and grows it.

37,990. You told us that the cost of the Russian barley to you is £3, 12s. 6d.?—Yes.

37,991. Are you not aware that at this moment the price of good Scotch barley is nearly double that?—I daresay it may be.

37,992. Therefore your comparison is valueless?—Not at all.

37,993. Is that not so?—It was with reference to the Chairman's remarks about growing feeding stuffs for stock-raising. I am not a barley grower at all; I am not a barley farmer in this district, and the district as to which I gave evidence is decidedly a superior stock-raising district, if you know your business, but it is not a district for barley, such, for example, as the Lothians.

37,994. But you know perfectly well that barley is not raised in Scotland for feeding purposes?—I have bought this last year home-grown barley for feeding purposes, and many a year.

37,995. Then might I ask you what you paid for the home barley for feeding purposes?—Well, it was perhaps a little more, but I am certainly not aware that your information as to home barley being worth £8 a ton just now is correct.

37,996. I did not say that; I said nearly double.—Well, it costs me £4 a ton.

37,997. It is worth now, as I happen to know, about £7 a ton, good sound Scotch barley, so that your comparison between the foreign barley and home-grown barley does not stand good.—But I have bought Scotch barley many a time at £4 and £4, 10s.

37,998. You have spoken rather severely of a class of men called agitators. Now, could you come to a close definition of that word 'agitator'; what do you mean by an agitator?—I was asked that question already by Mr Maccallum.

37,999. I did not pick up your answer then?—I said people that go and stir up strife, these are agitators; who mislead, and do not strictly stick to the truth.

38,000. Is it not occasionally a good thing to have strife, if the object is good?—The truth: I say 'if there 'is no cause;' that is my statement.

38,001. Now, we have seen that in this country immense areas of land have been cleared of the population, and the people have been sent away to foreign lands without a single thought or care as to their future well-being or prosperity. Do you consider that agitation was not justifiable under such circumstances?—I am not aware of that.

38,002. You are not aware that this country has been cleared to make room for large sheep farms and deer-forests?—No; I have heard it stated, but I am not aware of it.

38,003. You are a gentleman of superior education; surely you ought to know that; it is information that is open to anybody?—I don't think I am a gentleman of superior education; I got the opportunities of a good education, but I never said so. I have told you the opportunities I got of an education; and I aspire to be a gentleman.

38,004. We do not always profit by our opportunities?—I only stated the opportunities I had had.

38,005. Now, referring again to this question of agitation; you are perfectly sensible of the fact that there is a strong desire on the part of the crofters to be reinstated in the land. Now, what remedy do you propose under the circumstances?—I don't think it is a general desire: I think all the best doing crofters care nothing about it. They are quite well off already, and they do not want to be interfered with at all.

38,006. Then the men who came here to-day and expressed a strong desire for land——I could get a few out of any community.

38,007. Stop till I put my question. You think that the men who came here to-day and expressed a strong desire to get access to the land were not in earnest?—I inferred that there were a great many who were not going to work the land when they got it.

38,008. What makes you come to that conclusion?—Because I think thay have been told in a great many cases that they are going to get the land for nothing.

38,009. Who told them that?—I have heard it over and over again.

38,010. Have you ever heard it upon good authority? —Yes, upon very good authority. That is a sample of what I call agitation.

38,011. What good would the land do them?—If they got it for nothing, you know, they could sell it again.

38,012. Have you ever yet heard of a tenant in Scotland selling that which did not belong to him? How could a tenant sell a farm?—If the statement is that they are going to get the land for nothing, as I have heard stated over and over, and been told it by the men themselves.

38,013. Have you ever heard a foolish statement of that sort from any responsible authority?—I have: responsible and very decent men too.

38,014. I suppose I might ask, could you give the names of any of your authorities?—Yes, lots of them; my own men.

38,015. Nobody outside your own employment?—Oh yes, plenty.

38,016. Who?—You would not be any better off supposing you heard the name.

38,017. No, that is quite likely: but still we want to hear who they are?—Oh, they are responsible parties, very respectable men.—(Mr Gordon.—You decline to give their names?—Yes,—that is enough.)

38,018. You seem to deprecate the idea of crofters being helped with seed, &c., in times of distress?—I do not deprecate it at all; that is putting words in my mouth. I say they would be far better if they were in a position not to require such assistance.

38,019. No doubt, and so would farmers be better off if they were in a position not to require reduction of their rents?—But I do not see the analogy at all. I answered that question, which is simply a repetition of Mr Maccallum's.

38,020. What was your object in mentioning the fact that crofters sometimes got donations of seed, &c.?—To give you gentlemen my experience of the crofting that had come under my notice.

38,021. But you must have had some object in giving us that statement?—That was the object.

38,022. Then, Mr Willison, you have no remedy to suggest as to what is best to be done with those crofters who are now asking for more land?—If they can get sufficient means, I would give them sufficiently large holdings. I say that small holdings will not pay, and it is not worth while trying to make them pay. The crofters' stirks, for instance, I have seen sold at ruinous prices; I cannot understand how they could be reared at all. I have assisted to buy them at Falkirk tryst, actually when they were a year and a half old, at a couple of pounds each, scarcely the price of a wedder. How could cattle brought up in that way pay? Supposing they had the land for nothing, they could not make that pay.

38,023. You have mentioned some advantages which the country derives from the planting of deer forests; now, could you enumerate some of these advantages?—I answered that: I said the system created a large circulation of capital, and it realised a subject that was not worth a copper for anything else.

38,024. That is a perfectly fair answer to my question?—That is what I said before, and what I say in my statement.

38,025. Would you consider it an advantage that these deer forests should be indefinitely extended in the Highlands of Scotland?—I do not think they should be indefinitely extended. The difference is this: where you have sound land for the realisation of stock, and where it can be done to a profit, they should not be extended; but there is land that we have a large experience of, which was worth a rent at one time, but which is now in a state we call sickly; there is a heavy mortality among the sheep, and it even effects cattle when they are young, such as trembling. That land is, I hold, of the nature I refer to.

38,026. Is it not the case that in order to form these deer forests a considerable number of farmers, big and little, have been evicted?—I do not know: that has not come under my experience.

Tobermory. George Willison.

38,027. Have you never heard it stated that sheep farmers, for example, were removed to make way for deer forests?—No.

38,028. You never heard that stated?—I may have heard it stated, but I did not know an instance.

38,029. How was the land occupied before it was converted into deer forests?—It would be occupied by people.

38,030. What were the people doing upon the land?—They were living.

38,031. Living on what?—They were existing.

38,032. What were they existing upon?—They were like an old man in the south, to whom a fellow came and said 'Hey, Davie, how are you living?' 'Do you ca' it living?' he says, 'I ca' it breathing.' There are many ways of living; and I should fancy these people would be in misery when a bad season came: in fact, I have it on the best authority that that is the case.

38,033. Have you ever heard of the evictions that have taken place in Strathglass and Strathconon to make room for the deer forests there?—I have heard of them.

38,034. You told us before that you never heard of them?—I beg your pardon; I said I had heard of them, but had no experience of them. You are again putting words into my mouth.

38,035. You have heard it said that these deer forests were once occupied by farmers, and that they were turned out in order to make room for the deer?—I have, but I have no experience of it.

38,036. You will admit then that these farmers did some good in producing food for the country, in the way of rearing of sheep for instance?—The fault that we have to find is that there is far too much food; we cannot get a good price for the food we rear. The market is glutted with everything: it is full of produce. So much of the mutton consumed in this country is imported from abroad that sheep here sell at ruinous prices.

38,037. Do you think it a positive disadvantage to the country that there are sheep farmers who produce food at this moment for the people of this country?—No, I do not think so.

38,038. Does it not add materially to the wealth of the country?—The production of anything?

38,039. The production of mutton or wool?—The production of anything, but not to a great extent: it is not a big affair, our Scotch wool, compared with our importation.

38,040. We must not despise these little things?—I wish the price was about 50 per cent. above what it is, so that crofters could live, and we could live, and there would be no agricultural destitution. That is the cause of the distress.

38,041. But you admit that the production of mutton and wool does add something to the wealth of the country?—Oh yes, the production of anything.

38,042. Can you point out anything in connection with a deer forest that adds to the wealth of a country?—The circulation of money; it causes trade, and thus adds to the material wealth of the country.

38,043. Do you mean seriously to say that the circulation of money adds to the wealth of a country?—Well, it helps it at any rate; if you alter the location of money, it makes one district richer, and another poorer.

38,044. But does it add anything to the wealth of the country?—(No answer.)

38,045. Mr Gordon.—We all know, those who are engaged in agriculture, of the great fall within the last few years in the price of the staple commodities of beef, mutton, corn, flour, &c. Do you admit that?—Yes.

38,046. While that is so, is it not a fact that another species of produce (with which, as far as I understand, you are not connected), viz., dairy farming, is improving? The price of dairy produce has rather risen during the last five years?—I am a dairy farmer.

38,047. Well, do you know that for a fact,—that the price of butter and cheese has risen materially within the last five years?—I am a cheese-maker but not a butter-maker; and our cheese is very low in price.

Tobermory. George Willison.

38,048. But you have seen it lower?—Only once or twice.

38,049. For a good many years it was not selling above 50s.?—It was at ruinous prices; but we don't sell our Dunlops very much above that.

38,050. Is it not worth 56s. to 60s. now?—No; from 52s. to 56s.

38,051. Our information the other day was to the effect that it was at 58s.?—Perhaps your informants had been a little vain of their stuff.

38,052. Perhaps they make better cheese than you do?—There is no doubt of that; you are quite right there.

38,053. My question is, while beef and mutton and flour or wheat have fallen in the market, has there not been a material increase in the value of dairy produce?—Of butter, but not of cheese.

38,054. We have seen cheese lower?—Only once, for two years. I have seen them at 38s., which is the lowest I have ever known, and that was only for two years, at a crisis.

38,055. You have seen it at 46s. to 50s.?—No, they rose up to their present value. But butter, of course, has increased very much in price.

38,056. Is the ground you farm in Luing not capable of being converted into a dairy farm?—No.

38,057. Why not?—Because it won't make cheese.

38,058. I don't care, so long as it makes butter. My idea is that it would make an excellent dairy farm?—No, it won't make cheese, at all events.

38,059. And if you could put back the people to that farm, the twenty-six families who would occupy the land as small dairy-farmers, and find profitable occupation for the family as they grow up, would not that be an improved condition?—They don't milk now, and it was never a dairy farm.

38,060. But, Mr Willison, we perhaps could not learn to milk now, we are getting too old; but the young folks could learn?—They are not in the country.

38,061. But we could bring them into the country?—Yes, you could.

38,062. If you could bring them in, do you think that would be an improvement?—Yes.

38,063. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—There is one matter you have referred to, upon which I agree with you, and that is the difficulty of getting farm workers, and especially female workers. Now, don't you think there would be one advantage in having small holdings, inasmuch as girls would be reared and trained to farm work? Would not small holdings be a good training school for girls to become dairy-maids?—That is what I said in my statement,—that they won't learn, they prefer to go to towns. They don't want to be dairy-maids.

38,064. But does not that arise from their parents not having cows to be milked?—Not at all.

38,065. Do you say that the crofters' daughters do not milk their cows?—At Luing. I have no experience of crofters in general; it is that district I am giving my evidence about.

38,066. I wish to put it to you, don't you think these crofts would be a good training for farm-servants and for dairy-maids?—I have given you my experience, that they don't want to be dairy-maids.

38,067. With regard to the terms of the Crofters Act, which you think are of such a nature that a man would be a fool to take land under them, don't you know from your experience of crofters that these terms have led to there being very greatly improved dwellings put up?—I am not aware.

38,068. You are not aware of improved dwellings being put up?—No.

38,069. Were you ever in Tiree?—No.

38,070. Were you ever in Skye?—No.

38,071. So your experience of crofters has been pretty limited?—Yes.

38,072. Then there is just another thing that I would wish you to consider, and I think possibly you may see your way to withdraw it; and that is with regard to the charge which you made against the people who came before this Commission, saying that they would like to get land. You insinuated that the reason they came was that they thought they would get land for nothing, and that they intended then to sell it?—No: I said they had been told so. I said before I read my statement that I did not refer to those people a bit. I gave you my experience: I said they had been told that in my district.

38,073. Just wait. Did you not speak of their selling the land after they got it?—I did: they were told that.

38,074. Should you not now clear the crofters of any such insinuation? You are at perfect liberty to do so or not. Would you really not withdraw such an unfounded insinuation on the Highlanders?—Unfounded insinuation? I gave you my experience of what I have been told.

38,075. You think it is not unfounded?—It is not unfounded. They have been told they were going to get the land for nothing.

38,075*a*. I am very sorry that any man should have such a notion.—You may be sorry or not; I did not say anything of the kind. I did not say that they would sell it, but that they could sell it. You said I said they would sell it.

38,076. But the reason you say so is to account for their coming forward to ask land?—You would think so, if you were getting a thing for nothing.

38,077. The purpose would be to sell it?—I said could sell it.

38,078. Then you have great grievances against the agitators, and you did not enumerate very many of them. Can you enumerate any of these?—No.

38,079. It did not go the length of denying your knowledge of Euclid, I suppose?—I fail to see the relevancy of the remark.

38,080. You came here to finally settle misrepresentations that had been scattered abroad, and your knowledge of Euclid is one of the things that you emphasize, as if the agitators had been denying it?—I am not aware of it; I do not see the relevancy of your remarks.

38,081. And they did not deny that you had six farms?—You and I have met on business often, but I don't see the force of this at all. I will cease to be examined,—I, at least, can do that, Mr Chairman: I can refuse to answer any question that is utterly irrelevant.

38,082. Of course you have that in your option; but I will put this to you as a man holding or managing these farms. Do you think now, that one man, however clever he may be, and whatever his knowledge may be, can manage six farms as effectively as six clever men would manage one each?—Certainly not.

38,083. You have not the same personal supervision?—I have foremen.

38,084. You have to trust to servants to a great extent?—Yes.

38,085. Don't you think that farming would be more successfully carried on if the farmer himself were resident, and personally superintended?—I got the farms by death, and I am bound to see the leases out. I have nephews coming up, for whom I am at present managing the farms, and I have wrought five days a week in the railway carriage. It is not work that I court at all; but until the leases are out I cannot give them up. I manage them to the best of my ability, and I do not think there is any call for your statement that I mismanage any of them.

38,086. Mr Willison, allow me to say that I made no such statement.—(Mr Gordon.—Mr Maccallum did not make any such statement; he merely put a very plain question.)

38,087. You have admitted all that I intended to get out of you by the question.

38,088. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—The farm you hold in Luing, I understand, was taken up by twenty-six tenants?—I was informed that it was at one time occupied by twenty-six tenants.

38,089. Paying a gross rental of over £700?—Oh yes, they would be paying at that time more than that, but prices have declined very much.

38,090. I am not dealing with the prices just now.—But you are naming a figure, you know.

38,091. Now, do you hold that the present arrangement, whereby you hold the whole of that land in your hands, is better from the public and the national point of view than if the same were occupied by the twenty-six tenants?—I do.

38,092. You say the landlord spent £7000 upon the buildings?—So I understand.

38,093. After these tenants had left?—Yes; I have said all about that; it was the Marquis of Breadalbane's model farm.

38,094. The buildings were erected for the present arrangement?—For the model farm.

38,095. Do you consider 5 per cent. an exorbitant return to the landlord for the capital expended upon buildings?—I have nothing to do with the landlord at all. I stick strictly to my own business, and I took the farm, and still continue it, in the legitimate way of arriving at values,—public competition.

38,096. You are a practical farmer, and I am putting the question to you,—within your knowledge and experience, which must be very extensive,—do you find 5 per cent. a fair average charge as interest upon buildings?—As a landlord, I would think 4 per cent. a fair return.

38,097. Did you find in your experience 5 per cent. the usual rate charged by the landlord?—In my experience we generally get the laird to do it for nothing. We arrange for buildings sufficient for the farm; and, after that, if during the currency of our lease we want anything else, we have to do it ourselves. But different districts have different customs.

38,098. Does the landlord, in making this expenditure, not reckon upon a return for capital expended?—He might reckon without getting it.

38,099. Would you yourself consider 5 per cent. a fair interest to charge in making calculations?—It may be a question of recompensing the landlord. I valued a farm lately, where there was an entire new steading required, and I reported to the proprietor what was necessary. The farm was very much out of order, and I advised the tenant either to bid £100 for it and take it as it was, building a new steading or a new house, or try and come to terms, giving £120 and put it just barely habitable, but not putting it into a thorough state of repair. That is £20 on a nineteen years' lease; so you can count what that is, in capital and interest.

38,100. What would you consider a fair average rate of interest, within the last twenty or thirty years, to charge upon capital expended by the landlord upon implements?—We don't do anything of that sort.

38,101. Well, I will accept five then.—You may accept anything you like.

38,102. And I find by a calculation, giving 5 per cent. upon the £7000, the landlord would be entitled to £350 of interest. You have admitted already that the twenty-six tenants paid over £700 of rent before the expenditure of £7000 was made at all?—The farm could not let without accommodation, and the fact of the buildings having cost £7000 has nothing to do with it. You would require twenty-six houses, twenty-six steadings.

38,103. But they were there before?—They are not there.

38,104. They were there when the tenants were there?—I never saw them. That is what would be required now. The old buildings would be allowed to go down when the steading was built. It was necessary in order to realise the subject that that should be expended. You may say that it is an extravagant building; but I cannot follow your reasoning at all.

38,105. You say you did not see the buildings the twenty-six tenants had. Do you mean the Commission to understand that the twenty-six tenants had no houses?—No, but they would be done: everything is done, you know, in time; we get done ourselves; we are wearing very slowly though.

38,106. You admit that when the twenty-six tenants were there they had houses and steadings?—I never saw them; I suppose so. I have the same power of supposing as any other body.

38,107. Do you find a difficulty in supposing that they had houses and steadings?—No.

38,108. Do you believe that they had?—Oh, I suppose so.

38,109. That is a great admission, and I am thankful for it. Well then, the benefit to the landlord for the conversion of that area into one large holding, and giving it to you, and spending £7000 upon it is, that he takes from you £350 for the land for which he was getting over £700 from the twenty-six?—That is not the case.

38,110. That is so, I think?—This is not the case.

38,111. Oh, but I have studied Algebra and Euclid: I, too, have a little Euclid?—Dear me, that is only interest: you will get that in a small penny book. There is no education required for that.

38,112. This is the point I am putting. There were twenty-six tenants there before you got this. Well, the twenty-six were removed: they paid the landlord over £700 of rent, and, after their removal, the landlord spent £7000 on buildings for——They were not removed at once.

38,113. For a new arrangement by which the whole of this land, previously occupied by the twenty-six tenants, would be occupied by one?—(Mr Gordon. The first man to occupy it was the landlord himself; that must be kept in view.)

38,114. It does not matter: Mr Willison is the man there now; and, taking on my own responsibility 5 per cent. as a fair charge by the landlord upon capital expended upon buildings, I find that the landlord is entitled to £350 in lieu of the expenditure of £7000. Now Mr Willison's gross rent is £700, of which £350, as I say, represents the interest.—(Mr Gordon. Yes, but you are forgetting one very important fact: the rent that he paid for nineteen years, after 1852, was £1160; and keeping that rent in view, an expenditure of £7000 on buildings may have been high, but not extravagant. Your strongest case would be that possibly the twenty-six tenants never cost £26 to the landlord, and that they might have been there yet without costing the landlord much. But the sum of £7000 expended on a farm, which brought in a rental of £1160, is not an extravagant outlay to provide all necessary buildings; and a farm without buildings is not a complete farm. Unfortunately, it seems that this big rent, which the witness paid for nineteen years, cannot now be got, and the farm is rented at £700: but keep in view that these houses were built in 1852, and that consequently they are now forty-two years of age: while the life of a house upon a farm is generally supposed to be somewhere between fifty-six and seventy years.)

38,115. Can Mr Willison name any parties outside the boundaries of his own farm who said to him that they expected land for nothing, which they could sell after getting it for nothing? I challenge him to do so.—I never said that. On cross-examination that matter was brought up by Rev. Mr Maccallum, so that is entirely a repetition. I answered that question already, and refuse to answer it again.

38,116. Did Mr Willison not say that parties said to him that land was promised them for nothing which they could sell?—I did not say which they could sell: I said that I have been told that they were promised land for nothing.

38,117. Can you name one individual outside the boundaries of your own farm who said that to you?—I could.

38,118. Well, will you do it?—No.

38,119. Can you name a single individual inside the boundaries of your own farm who said that to you?—I don't know if I could: yes, I think I could.

38,120. Would you be good enough to name the individual?—No.

38,121. Can you name any individual who said to the people that they would get land for nothing which they could sell afterwards?—I could.

38,122. Who?—But I won't.

38,123. Do you refer to agitators?—I don't know what that animal is, you know.

38,124. You used the word very extensively to-day in that document?—And I explained it.

38,125. Do you seriously say now before the Royal Commission that you do not know what kind of an animal an agitator is?—I may pass that as a joke.

38,126. Do you know why the Royal Commission is here?—Oh, yes.

38,127. Did you read the remit to the Royal Commission?—No, I did not.

38,128. Do you know it?—I think so.

38,129. Will you say it?—No.

38,130. Will you give the substance of it?—No.

38,131. Can you give the substance of it?—I think I could.

38,132. Did you ever read it?—No, except in the newspapers. I did not read it as a special document.

38,133. But you read it in the newspapers?—Yes.

38,134. Do you know any deer forest in the five Highland Counties of Caithness, Sutherland, Ross and Cromarty, Inverness and Argyll,—do you know one single deer forest where there is old arable land?—I know of almost no deer forest except the Blackmount; I don't think I have been in any deer forest at all except passing through them by rail, seeing them at a distance.

38,135. So that your experience of a deer forest as such is confined to passing through deer forests by rail?—Except in the case of the Blackmount.

38,136. Did you travel the Blackmount?—No, I did not travel it, but I know the Blackmount.

38,137. Do you know the ground pretty well?—No, I don't.

38,138. So that, practically, with the exception of the Blackmount, you know nothing of deer forests in the Highlands?—I know it: I have seen the land.

38,139. Name one deer forest you know?—No, I will not.

38,140. You cannot give the name of one?—No, I will not.

38,141. Do you know any large sheep farms in Caithness?—I know them by name only; and I have seen the stock off them.

38,142. You did not see the farms?—No.

38,143. In Sutherland-shire, then?—No.

38,144. In Ross-shire?—No.

38,145. In Inverness-shire?—Yes.

38,146. In Skye?—No, but I know the stock.

38,147. You have not traversed any of the large grazing farms in Inverness?—No.

38,148. Is there any large grazing farm in Inverness that you know personally?—No.

38,149. Is there any large grazing farm in the county of Argyll that you know personally?—Yes.

38,150. Name it.—There is a farm that we hold on a nineteen years' lease,—Succoth, between Tyndrum and Dalmally.

38,151. Is that the only one that you know personally and practically?—Oh no; I know a number in Argyllshire.

38,152. Do you know any in Mull?—Yes, I have been in Mull.

38,153. Do you know any large grazing farm in Mull from personal knowledge?—I have not inspected the whole of it, but I know some. There is a farm of Scuir: I have seen the sheep there, but I have never entered on a personal examination of the farm.

38,154. You know the stock of the farms?—Yes.

38,155. But you don't know the farms themselves?—No.

38,156. So that, practically speaking, although you know the terms of the remit, but won't condescend to give the substance of it, still you have no personal knowledge of the area embraced by the remit?—Oh, I have an idea: I have seen it by the map, you know: I have seen a diagram showing the whole of the deer forests in Scotland. We can get that in any of these guides.

38,157. And your personal knowledge of the area

Tobermory.

George Willison.

embraced within the terms of the remit to the Royal Commission is confined to a map knowledge,—a knowledge from maps and diagrams?—Yes, as to area.

[Adjourned.]

FORTY-FOURTH SITTING.

Acharacle, Ardnamurchan.

ACHARACLE, ARDNAMURCHAN, MAY 22, 1894.

Present:—

George Gordon, Esq. (acting as Chairman).
Rev. Malcolm Maccallum.
Henry Munro, Esq.
William Mackenzie, Esq., Secretary.

Colin Nisbet.

Colin Nisbet, Crofter, Ardtoe (58).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

38,158. Mr Gordon.—Do you appear here as an individual, or were you appointed at any public meeting to appear before us?—I was appointed by the people of the district.

38,159. Was it at a public meeting?—Yes. The following is a resolution passed:—'We, the crofters and 'cottars of this end of Ardnamurchan, held a meeting 'lately at Acharacle to appoint delegates to appear and 'answer questions regarding the big farms and land 'under deer or game in this district which could be 'divided into small holdings, whenever you will have a 'sitting in the district.'

38,160. Do you know any land that is suitable for crofters in your neighbourhood or in this district?—Yes, I know lands where there were crofters formerly.

38,161. And where you think crofters could be replaced?—I think they would be better in these lands than in the lands they now occupy.

38,162. Could you tell us where these lands are? Could you name the former townships?—Gortan-eorna.

38,163. Were there people there formerly?—There were fourteen or fifteen crofters altogether.

38,164. Any other place?—Gortan-fearna, where there were five or six crofters. There are two places on Gortan-eorna, one called Drynan, and the other Innisdubh and Bailard. These places are included in Gortan-eorna, and were occupied by the fourteen or fifteen tenants mentioned.

38,165. Is there any other place you wish to speak of?—Laga and Tarbat on the south side.

38,166. How many crofters were in these places?—There were six—I may say eight—crofters in Laga in my time, and three in Tarbat. There may have been the houses of cottars, or one or two more like that along with them, but these were the crofters.

38,167. Any other place?—I am not aware that there is any other place in this district.

38,168. When were the crofters removed from Gortan-eorna and Gortan-fearna?—I cannot say how long ago.

38,169. Do you remember them being there?—Yes; I was often in and out of their houses.

38,170. What size of crofts had they?—They were not big crofts: the people were crowded into that place at the time the sheep farms were being formed. They were sent from the other end of the country and crowded in there.

38,171. But they had a few acres each?—Each of them had a cow, or two cows, but no sheep.

38,172. Mr Maccallum.—Then Gortan-eorna was not an old township at all, was it?—Yes, it was an old township, but there were not so many in it until they were crowded in from these other places.

Acharacle, Ardnamurchan.

Colin Nisbet.

38,173. Can you mention any farm from which they were removed?—Some of them came from Swordale: one Maclachlan, and one Lachlan Macdonald were taken from one of the Swordales to Gortan-eorna.

38,174. Swordale was a better place than that to which they were put, I suppose?—Yes, without any doubt. There are others who were baffled, and sent back and fore. There were crofters in Gortan in my grandfather's time.

38,175. Is there any crofter there now?—There are two.

38,176. Are they sub-tenants?—Yes.

38,177. They have not the benefit of the Crofters Act then?—No.

38,178. What sort of croft have these got?—One of them has a croft somewhat like the other crofts in the district; but the other croft is a small one of the value of £1, and it has no cow at all. I believe the man could have a cow if he were able to buy one.

38,179. How are these crofters employed? Are they employed on the farm?—No, the tacksman does not give them any employment except on rare occasions. They work back and forward wherever they can get work to do.

38,180. Do they engage in fishing?—Yes, in some places, and sometimes in this place itself.

38,181. Is there a good fishing place near them?—Yes, as good as there is in Scotland, or in England or Ireland.

38,182. What fishing is there?—White fish and herring; ling, cod, haddock, turbot, and all that kind, and plenty of salmon, but the salmon belongs to the gentry: the poor crofters are not allowed to finger them.

38,183. Do you know what led to the crofters being removed from Gortan-eorna?—When the landlord himself had Gortan, he brought tenants from other places and crowded it; but when a tacksman came to take Gortan from the landlord, the tacksman said you must clear out.

38,184. Did the proprietor provide other crofts for those that were cleared to make way for the farmer?—He might give a little moss, or a little bit on the edge of the rocks; that is to say, if the crofter received any favour at the hands of the laird; but if not, betake to your heels as quick as you can. That was all in my young days, from thirty to fifty years ago.

38,185. And that was the highest favour they looked for; to get a bit of moss, was it?—Yes; some of them would not be able to take more.

38,186. And was there rent put on that?—Oh yes; there never was any to my knowledge in this country who was not charged rent. The landlord had to get his own rent, and there was one Allan Cameron who lifted the cattle in that district.

38,187. The crofters' cattle?—Yes; the tenants who were in the three Swordales and in a part of Kilmory. Allan Cameron was the ground-officer, and as he was so serviceable to the landlord in doing his business, he got a piece of the estate rent free. He was the only tenant in that part of the country who sat rent free, so far as I know.

38,188. What was done with the cattle that were lifted?—The cattle were sold, and then the landlord got his own from every one. At this time Robertson of Kinlochmoidart was factor to Sir James Riddell, and had the control of the place.

38,189. What places do you refer to on which the cattle were lifted in that way?—The three Swordales and a part of Kilmory.

38,190. Were the cattle put to market by the proprietor himself in that way?—Undoubtedly.

38,191. Can you tell us about what time that happened?—About forty years ago. There are some who know the exact year.

38,192. Where were the cattle sold?—I am not sure whether they were sold at the market here, or whether they were rouped; but they were disposed of in one way or the other.

Acharacle, Ardnamurchan. — Colin Nisbet.

38,193. And the people were put out of the land at that time?—Yes, and they are not back to the place yet; the place is unoccupied by them.

38,194. Where are these people now?—Some in the grave, some in other countries, and some at the edge of the shore, at the other end of the country. Others are on the poor roll.

38,195. Then, when they got a little bit of land as a croft, were houses built for any of them?—No, but they were building houses for themselves as well as they could.

38,196. Is the township of Ardtoe congested?—Yes, there are five of us there; it is divided in three divisions. There is one who has an individual holding at the one end; two joint tenants in the middle, and five of us at the other end.

38,197. I think you said you are a crofter yourself in Ardtoe?—Yes.

38,198. At what rent?—My rent was fixed by the Commissioners at £4, 8s.

38,199. What was it formerly?—£6, 10s.

38,200. What stock do you have?—I have not many at present—a cow and two heifers, and a few sheep.

38,201. How many sheep are you entitled to keep?—I am not sure of the exact number. I think it is from fifteen to twenty: sometimes we have fifteen, and at other times twenty, according as they get on.

38,202. Then do you consider the croft at Ardtoe to be a suitable size?—No.

38,203. What sort of croft would you regard as more suitable?—Ardtoe, if they got a road to it, would maintain two tenants intead of five.

38,204. Then are some of them desirous of leaving Ardtoe and getting larger crofts elsewhere?—There is one here, at all events, who would like to leave and get a croft elsewhere.

38,205. That is yourself, I suppose?—Yes. I think I have been long enough a mere horse.

38,206. You mean by that, that you have to cultivate a place without a plough? Is it spade work?—All my ploughing is done with a spade; and everything that I take to the house must be carried on my back.

38,207. Do you think if you got a larger croft in some of the farms we are speaking of, you would be able to stock it?—No, not at the beginning.

38,208. Were you expecting then to get assistance?—No, unless the kingdom or the justice of the world would give me help, from whom was I to get help?

38,209. But then, supposing you would not get assistance from Government, would you be able yourself to undertake a croft of that kind?—If I got a place at a low rent I think I would do. The rent would certainly require to be low at first, as the place is coarse and unbroken.

38,210. But if you got it at a fair rent, would you undertake to use it profitably for yourself?—Undoubtedly I would.

38,211. You think you would be able to pay a fair rent if the land were made available for such as you?—I think so.

38,212. Have you considered the matter seriously?—Yes: at present I have only a small piece of ground, and must go off elsewhere to earn what will maintain me: my present holding will not maintain me.

38,213. And you think it would be more profitable if you had as much land as would take up your whole time?—Just so.

38,214. But, I suppose, you must have considered also that you would have to provide houses?—That would not be easy.

38,215. But you could not take up the land otherwise, could you?—No poor man can build houses on a bare place without some help.

38,216. Did not you tell me that the crofters put up houses on the bits of moss and rocky ground that were given them?—Yes, they did that, but the little they had they expended in erecting these houses.

38,217. You think then that it would be advantageous for them to get money from Government at interest?—I think a man would get on more quickly with that.

38,218. You have not, I suppose, been looking to get it without paying it back?—No, I never expected that.

38,219. And do you think there would be any risk in advancing money to crofters for putting them back upon the land in that way?—If the crofter had enough extent of ground, how could the money be lost, seeing he would be stocking the ground with it?

38,220. Then, do you think the crofters could pay as high a rent as is now being paid by the farmers?—I think the crofters could pay a higher rent that some of the larger farmers now pay.

38,221. Are the farmers getting large reductions in this neighbourhood?—Yes, large reductions; is not the rent of Gortan-eorna itself very low?

38,222. Can you tell me what reduction has been made there?—I know that at one time the rent of Gortan-eorna was £400, between rent and taxes.

38,223. And what is the present rent?—I am told it is now £125 or £130, but that is hearsay, so far as I am concerned.—(The Secretary. I think there has been some re-arrangement of these farms. Gortan-fearna and Achateny were advertised. Achateny is down in the valuation roll at £500, and I think that also includes Faskadale. Gortan-eorna appears in the valuation roll as let to Donald Cameron, at a rent of £125.)

38,224. Did you say it was £400 at one time?—Yes, between rent and taxes.

38,225. Has any part been taken from the farm?—No.

38,226. Have the large farmers got a greater reduction in their rent than the crofters have got?—Yes. The crofter never got any reduction till now, and they are not reduced now so much as the big farmers are reduced. For a year or two, before the Crofters Commission came here, they got a reduction of a few shillings.

38,227. The proprietor has to give a larger reduction to his big tenants than the Crofters Commission has given to the crofters?—We think that the Commissioners have not reduced the rents of the small holdings to the level of the rents of the big holdings.

38,228. But you have not quite answered the question as to the reduction,—whether the large tenants have got a greater reduction than the crofters?—I cannot say what reductions they got, except as to Gortan-eorna. I know they all got reductions, but I don't know how much; and I know that the crofters on the estate have not received a proportional reduction.

38,229. Mr Munro.—Did it ever occur to you to ask the landlord if he was willing to give you more land?—No, there is no land in our immediate neighbourhood which we could get, unless we were to remove, some of us, from Ardtoe, and settle down elsewhere.

38,230. Do you think that if you got access to some of these farms, and got them broken up, you could cultivate them as crofts with profit and advantage to yourselves?—I think we would.

38,231. And pay a fair rent?—Undoubtedly.

38,232. If such a farm were broken up, would a sufficient number of crofters be found to take the entire farm, good and bad land together, and divide it into lots?—I think so; more tenants could be got than would be required to occupy one big farm.

38,233. I notice that you are a fisherman. Now, if you got a croft of sufficient size, would you be disposed to give up the fishing altogether, or would you combine fishing and crofting?—I would give up fishing altogether, if I got enough land.

38,234. You have yourself raised the difficulty regarding the building of a house, and the stocking of an enlarged holding. How would you get over the difficulty?—I could not do without some help; but if I got a little help I would, after a year or two, be able to repay a part of that.

38,235. How do relations stand between you and Mr Dalgleish as landlord; is he generally considerate of the interests of his smaller tenants, the crofters?—Our landlord does not take anything to do with us at present.

38,236. I suppose he leaves it all to his factor?—

Acharacle, Ardnamurchan. Colin Nisbet.

Those who have got under the Commission, he takes nothing to do with, except the taking of the rent; but those who hold from himself direct, he deals with as he thinks proper.

38,237. Are his dealings with these tenants generally of a kindly nature, or otherwise?—We do not take much notice; he does not take anything to do with us.

38,238. Mr Gordon.—Does the pasture of Ardtoe extend back as far as the Newton of Ardtoe?—No, not quite, not our share of it.

38,239. How far back to the eastward does it go?—The two joint tenants in the middle march with the Newton of Ardtoe. The march of Ardtoe goes in a straight line to Loch Moidart.

John Cameron.

JOHN CAMERON, Gortan-fearna (78).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

38,240. Mr Gordon.—Are you a sub-tenant?—Yes, paying rent to Mr Coulthart.

38,241. Are you anxious to get a croft yourself?—Yes.

38,242. Are there more sub-tenants near Gortan-fearna?—Yes.

38,243. Is there any land near your house that you could get?—Yes, the tacksman has land there.

38,244. Is your house near the tacksman's house?—It is not far from it.

38,245. Is there any other land in your neighbourhood, except on the farm of Gortan-fearna, that you could get for a croft?—There is Gortan-eorna on this side of it.

38,246. Is there much arable land, or land that could be made arable, on the farm of Gortan-eorna?—There is not much land that could be ploughed; the soil is not very good.

38,247. Is there any other land that would be suitable for a crofting township?—There is Swordale.

38,248. Did you hear the evidence that Mr Nisbet gave?—No, I am a little hard of hearing.

38,249. Is there anything else you would like to tell us from your own knowledge?—They were changing the crofts and shifting the crofters back and fore. If they were settled for a year here, they would transfer them to some other place, and shift them this way and that.

38,250. Would they shift you that way after you had built a house?—Yes; I was at one time in a croft, and I was shifted from that and sent to another one, and then to another, and after that I came to the croft I am in now.

38,251. Have you some land at present?—I have that croft.

38,252. Can you keep a cow?—I have two cows on it.

38,253. Do you only pay £1 of rent?—£3. Before the Crofters Commission came I was paying £6.

38,254. You are in the County Valuation Roll as a tenant valued at £1; but that must be for your house only?—I don't know.

38,255. What size of a croft would you like?—If I got what would keep four to six cows, that would do.

38,256. Would you manage to stock a croft of that size yourself?—Yes.

38,257. I suppose you must get help at present from your family?—The people are so poor in the place where I live, that every penny the members of their families earn is sent to the parents to maintain them.

38,258. At present you depend upon your families for support?—Yes.

38,259. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—How many houses, besides the tenants, are on that farm?—Five, in addition to mine. They reside at Carsaid, and are sub-tenants.

38,260. Have they all got land?—Small crofts, but they are not good.

38,261. And is it their desire to get large holdings?—Undoubtedly.

38,262. Did they all get a reduction as well as you?—Yes.

38,263. You were reduced, I think, from £6 to £3?—Yes. Acharacle. Ardnamurchan.

38,264. You said you were several times removed from your croft: where was your first croft?—It was not far from the strath of Gortan, the tacksman's house. John Cameron.

38,265. Is that Gortan-fearna?—Yes.

38,266. How did you leave that one?—I was obliged to leave by the order of the tacksman; and I then went to a house about two miles further away.

38,267. Did the same tacksman give you that house?—No.

38,268. From whom then did you get it?—It was one Boyd, who was tacksman at that time; he removed me from one place and gave me the other.

38,269. Was the place you got as good as the one you left?—It was better, but it was not Boyd that gave it to me. When Boyd left the place I came back to where I am now.

38,270. Was the present house that you occupy built by yourself?—I built it myself.

38,271. Did you build any of the other houses in which you were?—I repaired them and improved them.

[ADJOURNED.]

FORTY-FIFTH SITTING.

Castlebay, Barra.

CASTLEBAY, BARRA, June 16, 1894.

Present:—

JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq. (Acting as Chairman).
GEORGE GORDON, Esq.
REV. MALCOLM MACCALLUM.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

Michael Macneil.

MICHAEL MACNEIL, Bruernish (55).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

38,272. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a crofter at Bruernish?—I am nominally a crofter, but mine is not an old croft, it is only an imitation of a croft.

38,273. Then, do you live mainly by fishing?—Yes, since I was forty years of age.

38,274. Have you enough land to keep more than one cow?—It could not keep the one alone very well.

38,275. Do you represent the views of any of the other people? Have you been appointed as a delegate at any meeting?—Yes.

38,276. And what is the nature of the evidence you wish to lay before us?—That we need to get something to help us from the state in which we are; but the state is something better than to put us out of it altogether.

38,277. Does that point to more land for cultivation if it were to be had?—Decidedly.

38,278. Do you, and the people whom you represent, wish for holdings of considerable size, or merely for fishermen's crofts?—All whom I represent are for more land, simply because they cannot do without it.

38,279. Can you tell us where you think this land is, in the neighbourhood?—Where my father was born.

38,280. Where was that?—He was born in a township called Kilbar: he is ninety-five years of age.

38,281. How is the land occupied just now?—The Macgillivrays possess it.

38,282. Then, it is at present part of Eoligarry farm?—Yes.

38,283. Mr Gordon.—Is Eoligarry at the north of the island of Barra?—Yes.

38,284. Is there a wish generally to get crofts on which they could reside without fishing?—I am aware that there are some who are done with the fishing for ever.

38,285. But why are they done with the fishing?—Because they would not go through the world as hired men any more, going to the east coast from where they were, and taking the best half of their living.

38,286. They go to the east coast as hired men, and they are tired of doing so?—Exactly.

38,287. Are there any crofts in this part of the country on which the men are living without fishing?—No: I don't know any such on the east side of this island where we live.

38,288. Is Eoligarry the only place where you think land can be got in this island?—It can be found in some two or three places.

38,289. You say that there are some fishermen here who would like to give up fishing and take to farming altogether?—Must they not give up of themselves when they cannot fish?

38,290. If they cannot fish, they cannot work?—They can work, but they cannot work as hired men any longer.

38,291. How much land or how much stock would a man require to keep himself and his family if he did not fish?—If I could get as much land as would keep three cows and a horse; I am not very well skilled in agricultural affairs, but I think I could live by that.

38,292. I am afraid such a living would not be a very fat one in this country: I doubt you would take to the fishing again of your own accord. But what rent do you suppose you would be willing to pay for the three cows and a horse?—I know nothing at all about that, but I know the rent which I was paying when I had no cow at all.

38,293. Are there any crofts about that size in the island?—It is known that there are.

38,294. And are the people who occupy crofts, that keep three cows and a horse, living solely by their crofts, or not?—I am not aware that there are such on the island: they must all go to sea.

38,295. Have you, yourself, ever done any agricultural work at all?—I worked a little for myself.

38,296. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Is Bruernish an old township?—Yes.

38,297. What number of crofts have you there just now?—Twenty.

38,298. Are these sub-divided, or are there just twenty crofters in the place?—They are not divided, but there are certain additions made by themselves.

38,299. Did they apply to the Crofters Commission to have their rents fixed?—They were before the Commission for fixity of tenure, for fair rent, and for cancelling of arrears. But the Commissioners did not divide the place for them.

38,300. Has not each crofter a separate piece of arable land for himself?—They are divided among themselves; they were waiting for some estate official to come and divide it for them.

38,301. Does each crofter pay the same rent?—Yes, each pays the same rent. They were not paying the same rent when they got it first; but what I got was taken from me. I had twice as much as the others had, and half of mine was taken away, and then they were all placed on an equal footing.

38,302. Then, when that was taken from you, was not your new place pointed out to you?—No.

38,303. You don't know how much was taken from you, or how much you got?—They took the half of what I had, and they gave us an equal space of land, and put the same rent on each one.

38,304. What rent was paid by the crofters before the Commission visited them?—As we asked our land first, it was 2s. per setting on a barrel of potatoes, and there were twelve barrels. Some of them had only space enough for seven barrels of potatoes.

38,305. And what rent did the Commission fix for you?—25s.

38,306. Was your former rent £1, 4s.?—Yes.

38,307. Then, was your rent raised by the Commission?—But did not I lose the land?

38,308. If you lost the land and your rent was raised, that would make the case still worse for you?—I paid a year of it at the rate, but next year it was taken from me and given to the man who asked only for space to plant seven barrels of potatoes. He then had the same quantity of land that I had.

38,309. How was the land occupied before you got it?—It was on a tack.

38,310. Whose tack was it on?—It was occupied by a man of the name of Macrae.

38,311. What was the name of the farm?—Bruernish.

38,312. And is there a tack of Bruernish now?—Macrae's son has the half of it, and the other half is occupied by the twenty crofters.

38,313. Are there any families in Bruernish who have no land at all?—Yes, there are eight.

38,314. Do they get potato ground from the crofters?—No, simply because they have not got it themselves.

38,315. Do these cottars get potato ground at all?—Perhaps they may get a 'lazy-bed' or two.

38,316. From whom?—From several: there are many who would give it. From Macrae himself they are getting small bits: and from the sons of the Doctor from whom they used to get it. It was from them that we ever got it.

38,317. Are they charged for the potato ground?—Oh, surely, they are paying something for it.

38,318. Do you know the arrangement between them and those who give them the ground?—I am not aware, but they give them some days' labour at harvest-time, or some other work at another time.

38,319. Is it on the crofters' ground that these cottars have got their houses?—Yes; nowhere else.

38,320. Are there many cottars on the farm of Eoligarry itself?—There was only one, and she has been removed from there and put over upon us. We are the men who had the space [or the breadth.]

38,321. Have these cottars been there for a long time, or can you say when they were placed there?—They have been put there since we got a small bit of that new land. There were some there, men who came from the island of Hellisay, put away by the Macgillivrays, and placed on the wee bit that we had.

38,322. Did you say when they got the addition from Bruernish?—I think about seven years ago, but I am not quite sure. Mr Macdonald there knows when it was. [Mr Ranald Macdonald, Commissioner for Lady Gordon-Cathcart..—Eleven years ago.]

38,323. Do you know the number of cottars there are altogether in the island of Barra?—Indeed, I cannot tell you that.

38,324. Is there a large number?—It is likely that there are, since we have that number at Bruernish.

38,325. You are aware, I suppose, that there is a very large number of cottars who have no land of their own?—It is very likely that there is.

38,326. Are these cottars on the land of the tacksman, or on the crofters' land?—They are on the lands of the poor men. they are not on the land of any tacksman in the country, unless they are herds or shepherds on big farms.

38,327. Is the land that the tacksmen occupy suitable for cultivation by the crofters?—Yes; it was cultivated by crofters before.

38,328. And, in your opinion, is it quite as suitable as the land that is presently occupied by crofters?—It is better than the lands occupied by crofters; fourteen times better.

38,329. What are the large tacks which you refer to that are so much better than the land occupied by the crofters?—The land in which the best tenantry were settled; is it not tacksmen that have got it to-day?

38,330. What are the names of these tacks?—There were tenants in Cliat.

38,331. How long ago is that?—Sixty years since the men were well situated.

38,332. Can you tell us about their condition: were they in a comfortable condition then?—All that I heard about it was that they were kept well. There were no sheep in Barra at the time: the produce of the soil kept the people, without going to Glasgow to buy a bannock; and it is very likely that that same bread should be in the land yet.

38,333. Do you know where they went to from Cliat?—To America.

38,334. Did they all go there, or did some of them settle in other parts of the parish?—They were shifted from it and placed on the worst places on the island. They were shifted from it at different times as they decayed out of it, and then they were gathered out of it altogether and sent to Canada.

38,335. Then, they were not sent direct to Canada from Cliat,—is that what you mean, but were sent to some worse places in the island first?—Yes, before they went to America.

38,336. And were they crowded in upon other crofter townships?—Yes, where I am to-day, in the township of Bruernish, it was full of them; 27 families were cleared away from that township in one day, and there was only one family that remained; these two stuck like limpets to a rock.

38,337. Do you know why they were removed from Cliat, or did they leave it of their own accord?—I am not aware about that, the time is so long ago.

38,338. You know Cliat, though?—Oh, yes; but I know when my father left Kilbar where he came to. He came to Arog, and when he was put away from Arog he went to Bruernish, and he is there yet.

38,339. You think Cliat is a place that could be cultivated by crofters with profit?—Yes, and Vaslan as well.

38,340. What tack is that on? Is it on Eoligarry?—Yes, it now belongs to Eoligarry, though it was formerly on another tack.

38,341. Were there crofters formerly in Vaslan?—Yes.

38,342. Are there any people there now?—There is a rabbit catcher there now.

38,343. Is there any land cultivated?—Not a bit of it for a long time.

38,344. And your opinion is, I take it, that it is very suitable for crofting?—Oh, yes.

38,345. Can you name any other place on Eoligarry Farm that would be suitable for crofters?—Yes; what the people had before.

38,346. You mentioned Cliat and Vaslan; can you mention any other place where there were formerly crofters?—Yes, I can; Cille, where my grandfather was.

38,347. Is it long since that place was cleared?—Yes.

38,348. Do you know the number of tenants who were in it?—There were forty in it.

38,349. How long ago is that?—My father was born there. He is ninety-five years of age, and he was twenty years old before he was shifted from there and put to the island of Hellisay.

38,350. They were removed from Cille to Hellisay?—Yes.

38,351. And how long did they remain in Hellisay?—Six or seven years, when they were removed to Orag.

38,352. Where is Orag?—To the north-west of North Bay.

38,353. Is that on Eoligarry Farm?—Yes.

38,354. Was that a good place for crofters?—Yes, it was very well: they praised it well.

38,355. And from that they were removed to, where?—To Bruernish.

38,356. Can you tell me the reason of his removal from Orag?—To give them more room.

38,357. That is to the farm of Eoligarry?—There was no farmer at Eoligarry then at all; it was only tenantry; with the exception of Barra House there were none there but young Roderick, as he was locally called,—the late General Macneill.

38,358. Your father's croft was added to a large holding, was it?—Yes.

38,359. Can you mention any other place on this large farm of Eoligarry that was formerly tenanted by crofters?—The island of Hellisay and the island of Fuday. There were five tenants on the island of Fuday.

38,360. And how many on Hellisay?—Twelve at the most, but generally eight.

38,361. And all these old places are now included in the tack of Eoligarry?—Yes.

38,362. You told us that there is a great number of cottars who have no land at all placed upon the crofters' holdings. Did these apply to get land from Eoligarry?—I did not hear that they were asking for land, but if they were they were not encouraged or received. They used to gather and talk, like others, but they did not get anything.

38,363. But they have a strong desire, I suppose, as they have a great need, to get land?—Oh, yes, the cottars are very desirous of getting land if they can get it; and we may say ourselves that we are cottars.

38,364. The principal occupation of the cottars and crofters, I take it, is fishing?—Yes, I have been working at all sorts of it for the last forty years.

38,365. If they got land at Eoligarry, would it interfere with their fishing?—No, it would not: it would rather encourage them. The man who was at Eoligarry, in my father's time, was able to go to Glasgow with his own fish, and there are none to-day who can do that.

38,366. Then, it is your decided opinion that they would make better fishermen if they had small crofts?—If I had as much as what I had on the Eoligarry Farm, though it is little, I would see myself well enough.

38,367. I suppose the fishermen have a great deal of spare time, which they could occupy in cultivating the land?—They can use land very well, because they know they won't make a mistake in doing so.

38,368. But there is a great deal of other time that could not be taken up with the fishing?—They could work their lands in the winter time with the seaware which they use as manure, and in one week they could cultivate a lot. They will take the spring season to work at the sort of land which they have got, and after all it could not maintain them for a quarter of a year.

38,368*a*. With what will they bring it out?—With a spade.

38,369. Are the cottars able to get milk for their families?—No, poor men; where can they get it? There is no dairy where they can go to buy a halfpenny worth of milk.

38,370. So that even if they had the money, it would not be possible to get milk?—No, because it is not to be found who has it, unless I give my neighbour a mouthful of what I milk from my own cow, and when that is divided into nine portions my share would be very little.

38,371. What are the benefits which you derive from the neighbourhood of the large tack?—He is only taking off my property day and night with a stock of fillies.

38,372. So that, in your opinion, the crofters get no benefit at all from the large farmers in Barra?—No, I do not see any benefit to the poor man in being in the neighbourhood of the big farm: if he got it just now it would be away again.

38,373. What do you mean by that?—If he got a little assistance from them to-day, to-morrow he would not get it, and he is as needful of it as ever.

38,374. Do the large farmers give much work to the people?—We did not see that. They are only storing their money and putting it into bank. If they were even fishcurers or merchants we would get some benefit.

38,375. They don't cultivate much?—Very likely not, or else they would be selling us the produce, as they do in other parts, and we would be better off.

38,376. Is it your opinion that the crofters would suffer no loss at all by the doing away with the large farms?—No, it would benefit the poor creatures. The one or the other must go: the empty man cannot go, but the man who has got the money can go. My people were sent away before, and they died when they arrived in America.

38,377. The small tenants were sent away before for the benefit of the large farmer, and you think now the large farmer should be sent away for the benefit of the small tenants: is that so?—Oh, there is no need to send them away at all: let them be content with a reasonable quantity of land the same as I had, and let them work for it; as long as a man pays for what he gets himself I don't want to take the world between my hands; I will take a bit of it.

38,378. But there are so many people in Barra, that you think no one should have a very large farm?—Decidedly. When the late Macneill of Barra had it, he never placed a big farmer on it; it was in his own occupation.

38,379. And when it was in his own occupation, had he crofters and cottars on it?—Yes, but there was a certain piece set apart purposely for the crofters, a place called Scurrival.

38,380. And do you think that if the land were properly divided amongst the crofters and cottars of Barra, there is sufficient to make them quite comfortable?—Yes: there is as much land in Barra as will serve every one of them.

38,381. Mr Ranald Macdonald, Commissioner for Lady Gordon Cathcart.—Did you say that your father was a crofter at Kilbar when you were born, fifty-five years ago?—No: how could I say that? I said he was twenty years of age before he left Kilbar.

38,382. Did you not say before that, that you were born at Kilbar?—No, I was not born there, but my father was.

38,383. Do you know what rent your father paid for the croft at Kilbar?—I don't know: I did not ask him. My father could tell.

38,384. There were no tenants in Kilbar sixty years ago?—I do not know.

38,385. You spoke of some grievance you had yourself at Bruernish. What was your chief grievance with reference to the land which you say was taken away from you at Bruernish when the last division of the lands took place?—Nothing, but that the land was taken from me, and that I was worthy of it myself if it had been left with me, but other men got it. Why did they not ask it before? But taken from me, after I had got it and paid it, and taken from me next year again.

38,386. Did you not think it would be fair when the rent was equalised that the land should also be equalised among the people?—Of course, it is only right that the rent should be the same when the same quantity of land was given to each man.

38,387. Do you think it would be fair to give you double the share, when you were paying only the same rent as your neighbours?—Was I not paying it formerly when first I got it? Did I not get it first and pay it?

38,388. Was the arrangement not this at first, that the fishermen paid 10s. 6d. for a house stance, 2s. per barrel of potatoes, and 12s. for their share of the commonty?—Decidedly.

38,389. You paid 10s. 6d. for your house stance, £1, 4s. for twelve barrels of potatoes, and 12s. for your share of the common lands?—Yes.

38,390. Which made £2, 6s. 6d.?—Yes.

38,391. And when the land was equalised and each one got a fair share, then the extra quantity that you had before was divided among your neighbours?—I was quite content with that, if it had been only divided and my own share given; but a bit here and there!

38,392. Was it not your own people that made the division?—They divided it for a year, and after the year was past it is that way yet. If I had it in one piece, I would have it with more pleasure than now.

38,393. But is it not the case that the people themselves, if there is a bit that they think is better than another, want a share of that good bit?—The one profits by that, and the other loses by it, but it is the case. When I am away at the east country fishing and nobody at home but a woman, my property is taken from me before I come home: but if it was in one piece—

38,394. Don't you know that the estate officials always wish that the land should be put in as large a piece as possible: that one piece should be made as large as possible, but that the crofters themselves say there is a good bit here and I must have a share of it; and then that is the reason they have so many bits?—It is not customary in the place, but those who hold the best bits are sticking to it still.

38,395. I wish you to think about that question again, because I know that it is the custom, and that we have very great difficulty in getting the consent of the crofters when any division takes place to put the portion belonging to them in one piece. They say there is a good bit here, and each one wants a share of that good bit.—I like to tell the truth. The people want to have the land divided among themselves, and they cast lots among themselves.

38,396. If that is the wish of the people, and seeing that they were allowed to divide Bruernish among themselves, why did not they divide it, giving each one one piece instead of two or three pieces?—They did not do it: they tried a year of it as it was, and it fell that way still.

38,397. They were allowed to do it the best way they thought proper themselves?—Yes, but the people themselves can never make it without somebody along with them.

38,398. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Have you named all the places where tenants were at one time on the farm of Eoligarry?—I did not mention Ard Mhor.

38,399. Do you state that there were tenants once in Ard Mhor?—Yes.

38,400. Have you any idea how many?—There was first one tenant, then two, and then five.

38,401. And now it is without anybody?—Yes.

38,402. Is there any other place?—Flodday.

38,403. Is that one of the islands?—Yes.

38,404. How many tenants were there?—Three.

38,405. Is there any other island that you have not mentioned where tenants were at one time?—The island of Finay.

38,406. How many were there?—Five; but there should be only three.

38,407. Any other island on the farm of Eoligarry?—Fiaray, one family.

38,408. Any there to-day?—No.

38,409. Any other island?—I am not aware.

38,410. Go back now to the mainland part of the farm. Is there any other old township that you have omitted on Eoligarry? Did you mention Kilbar?—Yes, I mentioned it, and Cliat and Cille.

38,411. How many tenants were in these three put together?—The greatest number that ever was there was forty.

38,412. Then did you mention Grean?—No.

38,413. Is it a good old township?—Yes.

38,414. How many tenants were there at one time?—I am not aware how many were there.

38,415. Did you mention Ard Veanish?—Yes, there were seven crofts there.

38,416. Do you remember when the township in which you live, Bruernish, had no crofter tenant at all?—Yes, as well as I remember to-day.

38,417. How many years is it since tenants were put into Bruernish?—It is thirty years since I went there.

38,418. Were you among the first who were put there?—Yes, I was among the first.

38,419. How many were put to that place at that time?—Nineteen families.

38,420. Were they cottars before, or were they crofters who were removed from some other place?—They were all cottars, every one of them.

38,421. How was your rent fixed?—It amounted to 32s. with all its taxes; site for house, site for peats; a piece about ten yards broad for the house, just about the space where I should spread a herring net; about 20 fathoms long.

38,422. Did you not get a piece of arable land, and an interest in hill grazing?—I have nothing in the world except that.

38,423. Tell us again all that you had for the 32s.?—A house site, a peat stance, and 20 yards long by 10,—it would make a small bit of a garden.

38,424. Is that all that you had?—Yes. It is there yet.

Castlebay, Barra.

Michael Macneil.

38,425. What is the name of the place in Bruernish?—Carnan Point and Creag Ruadh.

38,426. And there were nineteen of you put there at 32s.?—Yes.

38,427. Who was the factor at the time,—was it Mr Birnie?—Yes.

38,428. Then you got an addition ten or eleven years ago, did not you?—Yes.

38,429. But let us go back to the place given to the nineteen, thirty years ago. Give us the name of the tacksman on whose land you were put?—Farquhar Macrae was the tacksman of Bruernish.

38,430. What rent was Farquhar Macrae paying for Bruernish before you were put there?—To the best of my opinion, I do not like to say, as I do not exactly know, but to the best of my opinion it was not more than £30.

38,431. Do you believe that it was £30 or about £30?—Yes, it was not far off that.

38,432. How much was Farquhar Macrae's rent reduced when the nineteen tenants were put upon the farm?—I did not ask the man himself when he was living, but I heard it was £4 or £5 of a reduction.

38,433. So that £30, 8s. was put on the crofters for the land, and only £5 was valued for it in dealing with Macrae?—Yes.

38,434. Now eleven years ago you got about the half of what remained to Macrae?—Yes.

38,435. Were more tenants put on, or was it divided among those who were there already?—There were others that came in. Some of them came from the island of Hellisay, from Macgillivray's farm.

38,436. Altogether, how many was it divided among under the new management?—Twenty.

38,437. What rent was put on each of them?—As they got the land at first it was 2s. for the setting of a barrel of potatoes, and they had seven to fifteen barrels each.

38,438. But when the rents were equalised, there were twenty tenants at how much each on a lump rent?—38s. or 40s.

38,439. Was that for the half of what Macrae had for £30?—Yes.

38,440. Then is this the fact, that for about the half of the land that Macrae held for £30, and which proportionately should be charged £15, you twenty cottars were charged by the factor between £38 and £40?—Yes; 10s. for the site of the house, 10s. for the peat stances, and poor rates, &c., and doctor's salary.

38,441. You said already that when the last arrangement was made, each of the twenty was charged 38s. or 40s. for his share?—I said so: 11s. and 24s. was the first rent.

38,442. This is the sum and substance of the matter, is it not; Macrae had the whole farm for £30; the half of that is £15; you got the half among twenty, paying 35s. each; that is to say, what he had for £15 you are charged £35 for?—Each was not charged the same rent the first year.

38,443. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Were you not paying between you £37, 16s. for what you had? Is that the total rent paid by the twenty?—I don't know.

38,444. But you know that twenty of you were paying £1, 15s. or so each?—Yes.

38,445. You were paying between you £37, 16s., and that for an area representing half of the original farm of Bruernish?—Yes.

38,446. Mr Donald Macrae.—Mr Macdonald asked you whether, after the holdings of all the crofters were made equal in size, it would not be fair that their rents should be equalised, and I think you agreed?—Yes.

38,447. You think it fair that the rent should be equalised when the subject is equalised?—Decidedly.

38,448. Would you go a little further than that now, and say that if all the land of Barra occupied by tacksmen were thrown in with the rest and the whole land equalised, the rent should also be equalised and that the big tacksmen should have a share like yourselves and pay the same rent?—Very likely: as I had to divide the little I had with my neighbour I should like him to do the same with me.

38,449. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—You, no doubt, felt it a grievance that your holding was decreased?—Yes.

38,450. And you would rather pay a higher rent for what you had than have it reduced?—Yes.

38,451. Was there any reason why the other holdings should not have been increased out of some other land and not taken from yourself?—Yes, it could.

38,452. You think that in equalising them they could all be increased to the size that you had?—Yes.

38,453. Mr Ranald Macdonald.—Did you intend to convey to the Commissioners the impression that you paid 32s. for a small piece of ground, 20 yards by 10?—I paid 5s. for the piece of ground.

38,454. Was it not 10s. 6d. that you paid for that instead of 32s.? (No answer.)

38,455. How much did you pay for each,—the house site, the peat stance, and the garden?—10s. for the peat stance, 10s. for the house site, and 5s. for the small bit of land. The poor rates sometimes came to 3s. and the doctor's salary to 4s. or 5s.

38,456. To whom did you pay the 10s. for the peats?—I was paying it to the factor, Mr Birnie, to whom I paid 25s. altogether each time.

38,457. I have here a rental which shows that before 1883 you paid 10s. 6d. for the house site (which, of course, includes the peats), £1, 4s. i.e., 2s. for each barrel of potatoes, and 12s. for the common land; in all £2, 6s. 6d.; is that correct?—Yes, that is quite correct.

38,458. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Did you build your houses yourself, or by whom were they built?—I built my own house. I had to keep my materials dry,—my herring-nets and sails and all sorts of lines; I could not have them well secured without a house to keep them dry.

38,459. Did you put up your own house?—Yes.

38,460. And that is the case of the rest of the crofters?—Yes.

Castlebay, Barra.

Michael Macneil.

MURDOCH MACKINNON, Crofter, Ault, Ersary (70)—examined.

Murdoch Mackinnon.

38,461. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a croft?—The fourth part of a croft.

38,462. What stock do you keep?—Only one cow and one small heifer in the meantime.

38,463. How did the croft of which you hold a fourth come to be sub-divided?—When Cliat was cleared and Grean, some of the people were put upon us and we just gave them the land without asking.

38,464. You wish to say that it was owing to crofters having been cleared off other places that the croft came to be divided so small?—Yes. Most of the ground is dying away, it has been turned so often.

38,465. Then, how do you get a living, as you have such a small holding?—There is no living can be made upon the croft; the money which I earned when I was young is keeping me alive till I am done. But it is nearly done now, and God knows what is to support me now.

38,466. Was there a public meeting at which you were appointed a delegate?—Yes.

38,467. What is the desire of the people of Ersary with reference to land?—The whole of them are in the same position as myself; some are even worse, because there are now twenty-two on the place, which at one time (before I remember) was divided among three farmers who had it at £5 each. In my father's days we had the first part of it for a long time, and we were very well off then: the whole croft kept four cows and four horses, and maybe forty sheep, but now we cannot keep any stock at all.

38,468. There are too many of you now?—Yes.

38,469. And do you think if you had sufficient land you could make a living by it?—Although I am an old man myself, if I had the land I could live well enough and pay the rent right enough.

38,470. Of course, you speak on behalf of your neighbours as well as yourself,—perhaps your neighbours could take up land if they had the chance?—Oh, yes, the older men have mostly sons who could use the land for them.

38,471. You have heard the evidence that was given of considerable length by the last witness, Macneil, about Eoligarry?—Yes.

38,472. He stated that that is a large farm in the north of the island?—Yes, I was born there myself.

38,473. And that it is suitable for crofter occupation?—Oh, the best place in Scotland for crofters, because there is plenty seaware to be had in winter; it can be brought up in winter time when there is no other work that can be done. In spring they can work on the ground, and then they can go and fish wherever they like. There are plenty good harbours and fish handy on the west side and on the east.

38,474. Then your idea is that there should be fair-sized crofts for the people, and that they would make part of their living by fishing as well?—Oh, a great deal. In my young days there were people on the whole island, and they were very rich, because they never bought any meal at all. I, myself, can remember seeing thirty boats going to Glasgow and coming home with clear money; this was keeping the island rich with the fishing money. Now that is dying away by merchants. For the last forty years I have been paying about £20 for provisions for the family; that would easily pay the rent of a large holding.

38,475. Is there any other place besides Eoligarry about here that you think suitable for crofters?—All the places.

38,476. I mean in any other part of Barra?—There is Vatersay, down opposite here: it is a good place for crofters.

38,477. Do you say that the holdings should be sufficient for two or three cows, or do you think they should be larger still?—In the time of Macneil I was eleven years upon Cliat with my father before we were flitted to Ersary. At that time each crofter had four cows, two horses, and about twelve sheep; and this ground was plenty to keep the family for the whole year. They used to pay the rent by means of the kelp.

38,478. But there is no kelp now; how do you think they would do nowadays?—If there would be any good price for it, about £3 a ton; I was making the kelp myself several times.

38,479. Don't you think that the people nowadays need more in the way of supplies and groceries,—that they have learnt new tastes since those days and would not be so easily satisfied?—I don't know what became of them, they are so well taxed now with the tea: but I would think that if they had other things they could do with less luxuries. For my part I can do with very little, though we have no milk, nor butter, nor anything else.

38,480. You think if the people had milk and butter and the chance of growing some oats, they would be more inclined to go back to the simpler way of living that used to satisfy them?—I don't know how the younger ones would do.

38,481. It is the younger ones I want to know about?—I cannot say about them, but I think I could turn to the old living myself if I could get a chance of it. I would try it, at all events, for, in my opinion, black tea has nearly killed us.

38,482. And supposing such a chance was given in that kind of holding, would there be any difficulty on the part of the people in stocking or building?—I suppose most of them could not stock in the meantime without some help.

38,483. Have you formed any ideas in Barra here as to where that help was to come from?—Unless from Government: they give money for boats through the Fishery Board. I got a boat myself and I paid it up. I could show you a letter I got returning the deed of mortgage. If I got the money for the other business it would keep me up and I could pay the instalments in the same way. If I had the money in hand I could do well with it. This is the letter I got. [Letter produced.] But I lost a good deal by the boat. She was not properly built, and she was too small to work properly.

38,484. This letter shows that you have paid up the whole of the instalments on your boat?—Yes, and if I had an advance for stocking I am sure I would do well.

38,485. You think that as you were able to pay up all the instalments for your boat, so you would be able to pay up an advance from Government for stock?—If I got the first year of it free; the first year would be the worst.

38,486. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—What rent do you pay?—I pay just now after the Crofters Commission £1, 8s., which I think is rather much, but before the Commission came we paid £2, 4s. 6d.

38,487. And you still think the rent is rather high?—It is rather high. We have a bad croft: the half of it is rocks. Then the land is quite exhausted, and £3 would be plenty for the whole croft, in my opinion.

38,488. You do not get very much from the land?—Almost nothing: only ten pecks of meal from the land during the last ten years, and I am sowing oats and barley.

38,489. Do you think that is because the land does not get justice, is never left out in grass?—That is just the point: the ground has been turned over for the last sixty years, and it can give no grain crop.

38,490. And if you had a larger croft you would treat it in a different way?—Yes, we could leave out a piece of it, and give it manure, and it would yield better corn.

38,491. Have you any cottars in Ersary?—Yes, there are some.

38,492. Do you know how many?—Five, I think, but I am not exactly sure.

38,493. Do these pay any rent?—I don't think they pay anything at all, either to the crofters or to the proprietor.

38,494. What is their condition?—They are commonly working out at the Lowlands and some at the fishing here, and they get small bits of potato land and peats.

38,495. From whom do they get the potato ground?—Here and there.

38,496. But is it from crofters they get it?—From the crofters too.

38,497. Small as the crofters' land is, they had to give some of it to the cottars?—Oh, yes, the cottars upon our land get a bit of the croft.

38,498. Have any of the cottars got a cow?—Yes, some of them have a cow and a horse.

38,499. But they have no land of their own?—Not a bit.

38,500. And the crofters have to supply them with the use of the land?—Our croft is good for them all the year, except maybe these two months. When the crop is in the ground they must keep them up on the hill; but whenever the crop is gathered in, their beasts go through the place the same as the rest.

38,501. Now, do you think that some of the people in Ersary would be willing to remove to some of the land that you were talking of, say to the island of Vatersay?—Oh, yes, I hope they will be removed, because they cannot live where they are: they cannot get a livelihood for their families. I think they wish to remove.

38,502. But can you not speak more definitely than that? Say, with regard to yourself now, would you be willing to take a holding anywhere else on Eoligarry or on Vatersay?—Well, you see, I am rather old to work about the house; where I am, the house is up already, and it would be bad for me to put up a new house.

38,503. But you think that there are some who would be quite willing to remove?—I understand so: I hear that they will be very willing to remove anywhere they could get the chance of a croft; so they tell me.

38,504. And do you think they would be able to put up houses without help?—Well, I don't think so; that is the worst of it, they are keeping so poor, all that they earn at the fishing being spent on the support of their families. They require to lay out a great deal of money on nets and material, and this year most of them made nothing at all by the fishing. It has been a bad year for the fishing, owing to the coarse weather.

Castlebay, Barra.

Murdoch Mackinnon.

38,505. But still they did build the houses they occupy at present?—Oh, yes, they themselves built them.

38,506. And if they got larger and better crofts elsewhere, is it not likely that they would be equally able to put up houses themselves as in the old townships?—In a year or two they might be better able; but in the meantime it would be hard on them to put stock even on the ground, unless they get some assistance.

38,507. And the people who are in Ersary now, were they taken from their places and put in there?—Yes; some of them came from Grean.

38,508. That is in the farm of Eoligarry?—Yes, or the Manse. There were eighteen crofters upon Grean.

38,509. Do you know why they were removed from Grean?— To clear it out to a tack to Dr Nicolson.

38,510. The holdings at Ersary were very much diminished when these people were put in there?—Very: they were put to great poverty when this number of people gathered on the place.

38,511. And at one time I think you said there were three farmers in it?—Three farmers, and in the latter part of my father's time there were five.

38,512. Would it keep five farmers still, fairly comfortably?—It would be leaving little enough for five to do, because the ground is dying away; it has been turned over so often that it is going away with the rain: it has got quite thin.

38,513. Now, is it your opinion that the crofters occupy the more inferior lands in Barra?—I think so.

38,514. Do you think the land occupied by the crofters is poorer than the lands in the tacks?—To be sure, because the crofter is turning the land so often. The land where I am is four feet lower since I first remember.

38,515. It has deteriorated in that way by reason of the crowding of the people on it?—Yes.

38,516. But when the people were sent there, do you think that the land that is in Ersary was as good as Grean?—No, nor half.

38,517. So that they were sent to the inferior lands, and these inferior lands have got still worse through constant working; is that the case?—To be sure.

38,518. You mentioned the island of Vatersay, which you consider suitable for crofters?—Yes. I was far from it in my young days, but for all that I know it is suitable enough.

38,519. And in the meantime it is a tack?—It is a tack: and Sandray too was inhabited.

38,520. Is that the same tack as Vatersay?—Yes, the same tack.

38,521. When were the people removed from Vatersay?—A good while ago: it was the time of Macneill, but when he left the place they were removed about eight times. It was left under trustees for a time before Gordon took it.

38,522. Have you anything else to add to what has been already brought out? Have you any other farm you can speak to?—No farm but Vatersay and Eoligarry.

38,523. Has there been any attempt made by the estate to meet the wants of the people by giving new lands to the crofters? Have they made any endeavour to better the condition of the people by giving them land recently?—Well, I don't know that we got any till the Crofters Commission came and laid down the rent. The rent is still the same as it was before.

38,524. Has the estate not added land to any crofter townships or formed any new townships?—They got land up at the Glen: Mr Macdonald here gave them land at Leenish, and the half of Bruernish, and Garrygal.

38,525. Now, with regard to these Glen crofts, did the people get arable land as well as pasture?—Oh, yes, the arable was laid in the Garrygal, but there were crofters in it before that.

38,526. And were some of the crofters in Glen removed and placed on Garrygal?—I am not exactly sure, but there is a man from Glen here who could tell; he knows better about Glen than I do. I am a good bit down on the east side.

Castlebay, Barra.

Murdoch Mackinnon.

38,527. Was there any application made by the crofters of Ersary to the estate to get new crofts?—I don't think so: I never saw any of them, but we made application long ago to Cluny. It is a good long time ago. [Mr Ranald Macdonald.—I have no recollection of it.]

38,528. Is there any tack in your own immediate neighbourhood from which any addition could be taken?—Nothing else near us.

38,529. The only way in which you could be relieved would be to find a place to which some of you could be removed?—Most likely.

38,530. You think that there is a general desire for removal to other parts of the island suitable for crofts?—Yes.

38,531. Mr Gordon.—What has become of the boat you had, the Daisy?—I sold her.

38,532. Where is she now?—In Bernera, Harris.

38,533. Why did you sell her?—She was too small for the fishing here.

38,534. What was her length of keel?—Twenty-two feet.

38,535. How much did you pay for her?—I paid £22 for the bare share of her.

38,536. You had the half, had you?—I had her all; I paid £22 and interest for four years, also the insurance, making in all about £28 or £30 that I paid.

38,537. And what did you get for her when you sold her?—£10 only.

38,538. Had you made a profit on working her, if you lost £18 by the sale?—Well, I don't think I lost that, but I lost £8 at any rate.

38,539. Had you nets with her?—No, she was too small.

38,540. Then you would use her mostly for line fishing?—Yes.

38,541. Are there many boats of that class in Barra?—A great many, but none so small.

38,542. What is the keel of the biggest boats you use?—They are coming up now to 34 or 35 feet of keel.

38,543. How do these boats compare with the east coast boats?—There is a shoot here for the winter fishing, and some of them work the nets here in the meantime.

38,544. Is there any demand among the Barra men for assistance to buy such boats as these?—Not just now; they were getting help from Government, but it was stopped. They are now trying to get help from the fishcurers.

38,545. You, yourself, say that you are getting too old for fishing, and that you would like to get a croft?—If I don't get more land, although I am old I must turn to the fishing or something, or I cannot live.

38,546. You have a large population in Barra here,—I don't exactly know the number, but judging from the number present here to-day there is a pretty large population in the island?—I believe it is very large.

38,547. And you have the whole island already in the hands of crofters except the farms of Vatersay and Eoligarry?—Yes, and North Bay.

38,548. Well, suppose the whole of these farms were divided among you, that would only supply a very small number of the present inhabitants?—I believe it would be too little, unless by shifting some of them to other places.

38,549. Would it not be advisable to have two sizes of crofts,—a few of the larger size and a good many of the smaller size where younger men than you could still practise the fishing?—Oh, yes, and they could do with a smaller croft.

38,550. You would recommend a good many small crofts for fishermen on which they could keep one cow and have potato ground?—Yes, but they would not be very good without a horse.

38,551. But the horse is very heavy upon your grazing, is he not?—Yes, he costs a good deal in grass, but in some parts they cannot carry the ware upon their backs.

38,552. But one horse might do among half a dozen fishermen's crofts if you would agree about it?—In old times they commonly had two horses. Macneill kept

Castlebay, Barra.

Murdoch Mackinnon.

horses and cows, and if they lost a horse or a cow he would give them one to keep up the stock.

38,553. They are not so generous now?—No.

38,554. But in any division or in giving land to the people of Barra, would it not be advisable to make smaller crofts, or fishermen's lots?—Well, he would like to make them smaller and divide it among every one.

38,555. But though you got the whole island to yourselves, it would only supply a small number. The land that the crofter has already, although of considerable extent, is very little suited for spade husbandry and very little for ploughing?—Oh, very little where we are, but there is ploughing ground in Cliat and in Grean.

38,556. I suppose you experience no difficulty from the want of good harbours,—you have good natural harbours?—A good natural harbour.

38,557. You suffer no inconvenience from the want of harbours?—No, we can get a harbour here anywhere. Were it not for the harbour here, people could not live at all; but whenever they come to the east shore they find it difficult to get in.

38,558. Your principal complaint is in reference to the land which you now occupy, that it has become deteriorated from too frequent turning over?—Yes.

38,559. It has got much worse?—Yes, and down to nothing.

38,560. And you think if you had as much more as would enable you to leave a part of it under grass for a few years it would become good cropping ground again?—Yes.

38,561. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—You say there is a large population in Barra, but I suppose that population is confined almost altogether to the land that is occupied by the crofters?—Oh, to be sure, they are all upon the crofters' land.

38,562. There are very few people on the land held in tacks?—Very few.

38,563. Just shepherds?—Yes, and those who belong to it.

38,564. And these farms constitute a large proportion of the island of Barra, do not they?—Yes.

38,565. More than a third, I should think, is under large tacks?—Eoligarry road goes straight into North Bay, and North Bay goes straight into the west.

38,566. And, in your opinion too, is not this land which has no population at all best fitted for having the population?—Oh, surely.

38,567. Now considering that the fishing round Barra is good, are you not of opinion that if the land were divided among the population of Barra they would have fairly comfortable crofts?—For a good while, till they multiplied.

38,568. But for the present population?—I would think they ought to stand for twenty years at any rate quite comfortably.

38,569. In the meantime the condition of the crofters and cottars is exceedingly poor?—Exceedingly poor.

38,570. On account of their being confined as they are?—Confined as they are.

38,571. I suppose they are not accustomed to any high living, even the young people in this island?—No, they are not accustomed to high living: the half of them would do with potatoes and fish.

38,572. I suppose if they got once more the old living they used to get in Barra, you would consider it much better than the living they get now?—To be sure: I wish I could see it again. The milk and butter was very plentiful in those days, but now there is hardly a house where you could get butter and milk. It is mostly foreign butter that is used,—Dutch butter.

38,573. And are they accustomed to use butcher meat?—Oh, very little.

38,574. But I suppose they used to have meat in the old times?—Oh, plenty in the old times. I remember seeing them kill pigs in Cliat; and every family would have an odd stirk.

38,575. You think then that having been accustomed to no great comforts, they would be very willing to go back to the old conditions?—Oh, yes.

38,576. And you think they are quite sincere in asking it, and would put it to the very best advantage?—I think so.

Castlebay, Barra.

Murdoch Mackinnon.

38,577. Mr Ranald Macdonald, Commissioner for Lady Gordon Cathcart.—Are there any harbours on the west coast of Barra?—There is a harbour at Cliat, which used to be a good place for skiffs to draw up. My sons are in to-day, working at lobster fishing.

38,578. Do you think fishermen could make a living at the port of Cliat, where they would have to draw up their boats?—They could do very little in winter, but at this time of year they could leave out and in. I have seen plenty cod fish come in there.

38,579. Do you think it would be a judicious thing for a fisherman to settle down at Cliat to prosecute the fishing there?—Without any land?

38,580. Supposing he had a little lot of land?—I am quite sure they would make more money at fishing there than now, because my son has to travel across to Ersary mostly every night from Cliat.

38,581. The lobsters are caught on the west coast?—Yes, and most of the ling also is worked on the west coast, but they have to come round with it.

38,582. I would like to get your opinion as a fisherman of considerable experience and as one who I know will state fairly and candidly what you believe to be correct,—whether it would be a judicious thing to plant down a colony of fishermen on the west coast at Cliat?—Well, in winter they could do nothing at Cliat: the sea is so bad, and I would think the harbour would need to be very well built before it could stand the winter sea at Cliat.

38,583. But you know that complaints have been made all round the west coast here, that in certain places they could not prosecute the fishing because they had no boat shelters or harbours, and that the Government had been giving assistance to build these. Then I may take it as your opinion that it would not be judicious to plant a colony of fishermen crofters at Cliat?—In winter they could do nothing at the fishing, it is too wild; but at this time of the year they could manage.

38,584. Then although the land at Ersary may not be quite equal to the soil at Cliat, it is better suited, is it not, for fishermen?—Oh, Ersary is the most unhandy place in Barra for fishing.

38,585. The whole of the east coast is more handy than the west?—There is nothing at Ersary except the harbour. The fish are not there.

38,586. How far are you from Castlebay?—About three and a half miles.

38,587. And how far from North Bay?—About the same.

38,588. Then you have two good harbours, one on the right and one on the left?—Yes.

38,589. So that you have not very much to complain of?—There is neither fish nor land in Ersary; there is a harbour, but that is all.

38,590. But the east coast of Barra is better suited for fishermen than the west coast; may I take that generally to be your opinion?—Yes, for harbours, because we have harbours along the east coast.

38,591. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Have you a family?—Only one son: the others have families of their own. They are soldiers of the Queen, to keep up her Kingdom.

38,592. Have you a married son?—Yes.

38,593. Where does he live?—In Bad.

38,594. Where does the second son live?—In Ersary.

38,595. Is that the place where you say there is neither fish nor land?—Yes.

38,596. Has your son any land there?—He has a small bit, the third part of a croft.

38,597. But there is no land there worth having?—No.

38,598. He makes his living by the fishing?—By the lobster fishing.

38,599. Does he fish himself?—Every day, and sends the lobsters to England.

38,600. What fishing does he turn to at other times of the year?—The ling fishing now and again.

Castlebay, Barra.

Murdoch Mackinnon.

38,601. Where does he fish: is it in Ersary or in Cliat?—He comes near Cliat: he rises every morning maybe at two o'clock and walks down to Norsary, and fishes off Cliat. He has thus to walk four or five miles twice a day.

38,602. Would he find it more convenient to live near the place where he follows the fishing?—If he were living at Cliat he might get six dozen where now he gets two.

38,603. So the factor put him in a place where he cannot make a living, and he has to travel five miles twice a day?—Yes, and he is in a bad vessel.

38,604. Whereas if he was allowed to have your way, to settle down in Cliat, he could make six times more at the fishing?—Yes.

38,605. And half the labour?—Half the labour, and get some help. There are only three of them to draw up an 18 feet keel boat, and in bad weather that is not very easy for three men.

38,606. You are aware that the opinion has been expressed that it would be much better for men who prosecute the fishing to have no land at all; you are aware that that is the opinion of some people?—In my opinion no person could live in Barra without land, because the winter is too wild and he could get nothing on the sea. I was a long time at the fishing myself, and all that I earned in summer would be spent in winter

38,607. If you now had your own way as a practical man, a native of this place, an old man of experience both on land and sea, would you re-divide the land, and settle down the fishing population on small holdings, where such holdings are suitable and available, upon which they could live partly from the produce of the holding and partly by the fishing?—To be sure, that is the way to live here. I will tell you one thing if you listen to me. I got land in the year 1853, when I married. Well, I was a young man then, and I earned a great deal of money since; I was very successful at the herring fishing. If I had had my father's croft then, I would have £200 in bank now, which I paid to merchants for meal. It is the want of the land that spoilt us; the others are the same as myself.

38,608. Sometimes you are told that the fishermen on the east coast have no land at all, and that they are much better without it. Did you ever hear the east coast fishermen themselves say so?—We heard them say that they wished they had some land, but that they did not get it. I have often been amongst the fishermen.

38,609. Are you aware that there are factors who say that the east coast fishermen had land at one time, but that they begged of the laird to take it from them as they did not wish it?—They cannot get it: but there is a very great difference between them and us. Whenever they go out on the east coast they get a shoal of haddocks, and there is a market for them near.

38,610. Are you aware that the cottars of Barra in large numbers petitioned the proprietor two years ago or thereabouts for land?—I am not exactly sure: but they are always calling for land.

38,611. Do you, as a delegate, know that the cottars have a strong desire for land?—There is a delegate here from them,—Duncan Campbell.

38,612. Have all the crofters in Barra half or less than half of the island?—I cannot say for certain, but the map will tell you. [Mr Forsyth.—They seem to have fully two-thirds of the acreage.]

38,613. Have you any idea how many acres there are in the island altogether?—I cannot say.

38,614. Would you be surprised to know that there are 10 acres for every one of the population?—We measured the croft we had last year by Wilson and Meikle. It is 19 acres we have divided among four of us,—that is 5 acres each, arable and grazing.

38,615. Was the farm of Vatersay occupied by tenants in your own memory?—In my memory it was marked at £30, and a good piece of it was a tack. Macneill's sister was living on it.

38,616. And there were thirty tenants on the rest?—Yes

38,617. Do you remember them well?—Fine that; I saw the houses. I remember the houses in Grean and Cliat and Vaslan and all round the North Bay.

Castlebay, Barra.

Murdoch Mackinnon

38,618. And how many in Vatersay did you see altogether?—Thirty in my own memory.

38,619. Now, were these crofters in more comfortable circumstances than the crofters of to-day?—Oh, they were very rich: the crofters have nothing now.

38,620. But although they had the land, did they make their living partly by the sea and partly by the land?—Surely.

38,621. They followed both?—Everybody got the fish and sent them to Glasgow when they were dried; and they got a good bounty at first.

38,622. In order to improve the condition of the island, would you divide it among the people and settle them down?—Yes, if I got the chance.

38,623. And you believe they would prosper much more?—Yes.

38,624. And make a better fishing?—Yes.

38,625. Mr Ranald Macdonald.—Do you know from your own knowledge that there were thirty tenants paying rent in Vatersay sixty years ago, in Macneill's time?—Yes, I know there were thirty.

38,626. I have no doubt there may have been thirty families or thereabouts, but were they in the position of crofters paying rent, or were they in the position of servants to Miss Macneill, or dependants?—I am not certain, because I was far from it in my young days: but there are others who could tell.

38,627. I hold in my hand one of Macneill's rentals about that time, and there were no crofters in Vatersay then?—We are not exactly sure whom they would be paying.

38,628. They may have been servants or dependants of Miss Macneill?—They were not servants at all: they were farmers taking their living out of the ground: but I am not certain to whom they paid rent.

JOHN MACNEIL, Crofter, Breivig (No. 2) (58). John Macneil.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

38,629. Mr Forsyth.—Have you been asked to give evidence on behalf of other people?—Yes, I was appointed by a meeting.

38,630. Have you heard the evidence given by the previous witnesses?—Yes.

38,631. Can you think of anything you would like to add to what they said?—They did not know about the settlement of the tenants on our side of the island.

38,632. Are there many crofters on Breivig?—Twenty.

38,633. What size of holdings have they?—I believe they were cut or surveyed about 16 acres originally. There were 6½ crofts originally, and they are now divided among 20 crofters.

38,634. Does that include the pasture?—Rocks, and everything else.

38,635. Do they live principally by fishing?—I am taking half my livelihood out of the sea, and no other man need say he could take anything else out of it.

38,636. Do you mean by that that you could not live entirely by the fishing but require the land to help you?—Yes, everybody knows, and you, yourselves, gentlemen, know that no one could live on the fishing without the help of the land.

38,637. Then, do the people at Breivig desire larger holdings?—Those who have got nothing are very desirous,—even I myself and many others who have less or more are quite desirous and earnestly wishing to get more land.

38,638. Are there more crofters now in Breivig than there used to be?—There are twenty instead of five.

38,639. Then the crofts have been sub-divided?—There were only five crofts altogether formerly.

38,640. How did they come to be so many now?—I will tell that specially and clearly. When John Macgregor was ground officer and factor in the parish he forced the crofters on the west side to clear these places already mentioned for the late Dr Nicolson, and sent them out to the east side.

Castlebay, Barra.

John Macneil.

38,641. And these people were crowded in upon you, were they?—Yes, they were crowded upon us; and some of them went to America owing to the potato failure.

38,642. Would any of you people at Breivig be inclined to move to a new holding in a different place?—Yes, I am fifty-eight years of age, and poor as I am I am quite willing to remove.

38,643. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—I think you said that the size of a croft at Breivig is 16 acres?—Yes, but that is my guess of it.

38,644. Are they now of the same size as the original five?—It is just now that I mean. There are now 20 crofts instead of the original 6½ crofts.

38,645. Are there 16 acres in each of the 20 crofts that are at Breivig?—I think according to the surveyor's measurement they are about the same breadth; but they are not the same length. There are 16 acres among four crofters.

38,646. And what rent do you pay just now?—£1.

38,647. What was the former rent?—I was paying £1, 10s. when I took the land.

38,648. Were you before the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

38,649. And was the rent reduced?—Yes: my rent was reduced before then by Mr Macdonald here, who made it 5s. less, as he removed that stance or site of a house that was set apart for the use of fishermen.

38,650. There was part of your croft taken away for some buildings, is that so?—Yes.

38,651. And you got a reduction of 5s.?—I got a reduction of 5s. from Mr Macdonald.

38,652. Leaving your rent at 25s.?—Yes, and the Crofters Commission then brought it down to £1.

38,653. What stock do you have?—Two cows and two horses.

38,654. Are there any cottars in Breivig?—Yes.

38,655. How many?—It is more than likely there are some of them here, but I have not got the exact number.*

38,656. Where did the cottars who are there come from?—They were born in the place itself, and they got married in the place, and they are without land.

38,657. They could not get land anywhere else in the island, and so had to settle down at Breivig?—Decidedly: they had no alternative.

38,658. You stated, I think, that the crofters came originally from Grean and Cliat?—Some of them did.

38,659. Was it five crofts in Breivig originally?—Yes, Alexander Macdonald was the first, Roderick Macneil the second, Neil Macneil the third, Murdo Mackinnon the fourth, and Alexander Macneil the fifth.

38,660. And those who came from Cliat and Grean, did they build houses for themselves at Breivig?—They have built houses themselves,—some of them are still to the fore, and some are dead: others went to America.

38,661. Were they removed from these places against their will?—It is very likely they were, when the places were cleared: they could not pay the rent when the potato crop failed.

38,662. They were better off, were they, at Cliat and Grean than they could possibly be at Breivig?—There is no doubt, because they had some land there from which they could get meat.

38,663. And were they settled in Breivig against the will of the people of Breivig?—Undoubtedly: they were crowded into huts on the foreshore where they had no land.

38,664. Have they made application recently to the estate for getting land, the people of Breivig?—Yes, I myself did; whether the cottars did or not, we did. I was several times asking for more land.

38,665. And where did you expect to get it?—Where it was in Vaslan, Cille, Cliat, Kilbar, Fuday, Fiaray, Leenish, Hellisay, and different other places, and on each side of North Bay where there is a good anchorage.

* Macneil has since written stating that the number was nine.

38,666. And what answer did you get from the estate?—Since I applied for what I want in the way of land, I never got a reply since 1877.

38,667. Was there land out of lease that might have been sub-divided among crofters lately?—I am not aware, unless there was Vatersay or North Bay; whether the doctor's son's lease ran out or not I don't know.

38,668. Don't you know whether Vatersay was out of lease and whether there was an application for it by the crofters?—Within my own knowledge, I am not aware that they asked any more of it than potato land.

38,669. You are not aware of an application being sent to the estate for Vatersay?—I am not aware of that: it might have been the case.

38,670. Do you consider that Vatersay is a suitable place for settling crofters in?—Yes, if they would only make lots suitable to fishermen: the poor man's money is equally valuable with the rich man's.

38,671. Do you think the crofters would be able to pay as good a rent for it, if it were divided amongst them, as the tacksman pays?—I am only a decrepit old man without a son and but one daughter, and I pay the last farthing.

38,672. But speaking for the people in general, can you give an opinion as to the amount of rent they would pay if the whole of Vatersay were divided amongst them?—Decidedly.

38,673. And you think they would prosecute the fishing with even greater vigour than they do just now if they had more land?—They would not be indebted to the merchant so much at any rate.

38,674. But the working of the land would not take them from the fishing, would it?—If they got three acres they could work it well in the winter time.

38,675. And they would be more comfortable and better able to have a boat and fishing implements generally?—There would be always suitable harbours with a little land.

38,676. Are there suitable harbours with a little water around Vatersay for fishing?—Oh, yes, indeed.

38,677. And at Cliat, if there were people settled there, would they be able to prosecute the fishing?—They would be able to prosecute the lobster fishing with a boat that could be launched and hauled as required in the winter time as well as summer.

38,678. So that you think the crofters would be able to make a comfortable living if they had a suitable holding of land?—Undoubtedly, if they could get as much as they would like, they would take the best part of their living out of them.

38,679. Mr Ranald Macdonald, Commissioner for Lady Gordon Cathcart.—Can you say at what time there were only five crofters at Breivig?—Yes. Were there not trustees on the island of Barra, the trustees from whom Col. Gordon bought Barra?

38,680. Could you mention the year as nearly as possible?—I did not mark the year, I had no schooling, but I will give as good a guess as I can. I was five years of age on coming to Breivig, and I am now fifty-eight.

38,681. That would make it about fifty-three years ago?—These men were there when I came, and they were there afterwards. You, yourself, Mr Macdonald, remember one of these men, Alexander Macdonald, that went to Inverness.

38,682. I have in my hand the rental of the estate of Barra sixty years ago, or to speak quite accurately fifty-eight years ago, and I find from it that there were twenty-three crofters in Breivig at that time?—I will give the names of those whom I have seen there, and you can compare them with the list.

38,683. If you will be good enough to mention the names, I will mark them off on the list?—Alexander Macdonald (No. 1) marching with Skallary.

38,684. Yes, he is entered at a rent of £6.—Roderick Macneil next.

38,685. The tailor, entered at £6.—Neil Macneil his brother.

38,686. Yes, at £10.—Murdo Mackinnon.

38,687. Yes, also £10.—Alexander Macneil.

Castlebay, Barra.

John Macneil.

38,688. Yes, £10.—These are the men I have seen there.

38,689. Do you remember a man of the name of Donald Mackinnon there paying £5?—I do not indeed, unless he was on the south side of Breivig. He was a crofter in Breivig.

38,690. Can you remember a crofter of the name of Donald Macneill paying £5?—Donald Macdonald was not in Breivig but in Leenish.

38,691. But it is Donald Macneill not Donald Macdonald?—That is the township constable: he was in Leenish, but he died in Inverness. He was not in Breivig unless he was cultivating his father's land. Alexander Macneill was his father.

38,692. Alexander Macneill is entered as paying a rent of £10, and Donald Macneill £5. Do you remember a crofter of the name of Rory Macdougall who paid £5?—I don't know who he was.

38,693. Do you remember another one of the name of John Macneill (Gallion)?—Yes, that man was there; John Macneill (Gallion) and Roderick Macneill (Gallion). John Macneill (Gallion*) had no land there.

38,694. He paid £5 of rent?—He might have done so before that time, but not since the time I have stated.

38,695. He was there fifty-eight years ago?—That was my age going there.

38,696. Then, Rory Macneill (Ronald), £5, 10s.?—That man was there, undoubtedly.

38,697. Rory Macneill (Gallion), £5, 10s.?—He was there, but he went away to America.

38,698. John Maclean, £5, 5s.?—I did not see him there.

38,699. Peter Taggart, £6, 10s.?—He was there, but recently; he was in Criochan where the planting is.

38,700. Donald Macintyre, £6, 10s.?—He was in Criochan.

38,701. John Mackinnon, £6, 10s.?—Yes, there was a John Mackinnon on the south side, and his son is living there.

38,702. Stephen Mackinnon?—Yes, he went to America.

38,703. John Macneill (Mary Ann), £6, 10s.?—Yes.

38,704. Allan Macintyre, £6, 10s.?—He was on the south side.

38,705. Angus Macpherson, £6, 10s.?—He was on the south side too.

38,706. Widow Macmillan, £5, 10s.?—I believe she was called so.

38,707. And Donald Gillies, £5, 10s.?—That is a man that went to Lochmaddy poorhouse.

38,708. Donald Macneill (Roger), £5, 10s.?—There is a son of his here.

38,709. And Archibald Macvicar, £6?—He was there too, on the south side.†

38,710. Then, I think you stated that the crofters at Grean and Cliat could not pay the rent after the potato failure and that that was the reason they were sent to Breivig?—Undoubtedly, I did believe it and do still believe it; and I had a great right to believe it.

38,711. I think you also stated that you thought Vatersay would be a good place for crofters?—It is that, and I can prove it.

38,712. Are you aware that there is a great scarcity of water in Vatersay?—There is plenty of water in Vatersay; it is easier to make a good well in Vatersay than in Bernera.

38,713. How could you make a well there?—A man could make a well there by sinking it under the level of the sea.

38,714. Are you aware that the tenant of Vatersay, when he gave up Ben-Tangaval to the fishermen, made a condition that he should have liberty to send over his cattle to Ben-Tangaval in dry seasons?—They might have done so of their own accord, but there were other conditions. There were people formerly in Vatersay who had any amount of water.

Castlebay, Barra.

John Macneil.

38,715. Then, do you think it would be a suitable thing at this time, when it is very important that the children of every one, rich and poor, should be educated, that they should be sent away to an island where there is no school?—There is not a day in the whole year, except perhaps a few days in the winter, when they cannot cross the small sound of Vatersay. I see them doing it every day.

38,716. I think you stated that the only way in which the fishing could be prosecuted on the west side opposite Cliat would be by little boats which they would have to pull ashore in rough weather?—Undoubtedly, they would not be safe unless they were.

38,717. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—With regard to the size of the crofts at Breivig, do you distinctly say that you remember a time when the land now occupied by the twenty crofters was held by five?—I was five years of age when it was so held.

38,718. So you have no doubt of it?—No.

38,719. And you have no doubt that people were taken from other parts and settled on that land held by these five crofters?—I have no difficulty in saying so.

38,720. The crofts, then, are now much smaller than they were in your early recollection?—Oh, yes, they are that.

38,721. Do you think the island of Vatersay would accommodate a large number of crofters?—It would hold a good few, because what there is of land is good.

38,722. How many crofters do you think it would hold in a fairly comfortable way?—I think about twenty very well.

38,723. Would it not be reasonable to suppose that if there were twenty crofters settled there, a school would be built to accommodate the children?—I don't know, but that would be less expensive.

38,724. Have you not heard of schools being built for fewer than twenty families?—I have not heard it at Mingulay at any rate, because there were more than twenty families there.

38,725. But it would be quite reasonable to expect that a school would be put up for such a population as that?—Very reasonable, to build a not very expensive school.

38,726. Was there ever a church in Vatersay?—I am not aware; I do not remember that there was, but there was a house for congregation.

38,727. Had the minister of Barra to preach in Vatersay?—No, I did not hear of it, unless he had the goodwill himself to do it.

38,728. Are you aware that in the Statistical Account it is said that he had to preach there once in every four weeks*?—I never heard that.

38,729. But you know that there was a place there for meeting for worship?—I did hear so, but I did not know the place.

38,730. And if there were twenty crofters there, you have no fear that their spiritual interests would be neglected?—No, if they would see it for themselves,—if they did not want to keep their children without any education.

Duncan Campbell, Glen (32).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

Duncan Campbell.

38,731. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a croft?—I have not.

38,732. Do you live with some relation who has?—I have nothing of the kind.

* 'Gallion' is a local translation of the old Gaelic name Gillebnan, or rather Gille-Adhamhnain, 'servant of Adamnan.'

† Macneill, in correcting the proof, wrote: 'With reference to questions 38,679 to 38,709, I can verify that there were only five crofters and five crofts in Breivig at the time I spoke of.' He further adds that he saw the men as stated in Mr Macdonald's questions, but these were in Lenish, Garrygal, and Creachan. Ten men were sent from Grean and Chat to Breivig and Lenish, where they got shares of crofts.

* 'There are three places of worship, viz., Kilbar, Borve, and Watersay. The minister preaches two Sundays at Borve, which is only a mile and a half from his own house; the third Sunday at Kilbar, at the distance of three miles, and the fourth at Watersay, which, including a ferry of one mile, is at the distance of five miles.'—Old Statistical Account, Vol. xiii., page 339.

38,733. Then, are you a cottar?—Yes.

38,734. Do you appear on behalf of the people of Glen? Were you appointed at a meeting to represent them?—Yes.

38,735. Have you any special evidence to lay before us as to the desire of the people of Glen for land?—The oldest men can walk upon the old places that men had in former times.

38,736. Do you mean upon the places formerly held by large tenants?—Yes.

38,737. How many crofters are there in Glen?—I am not sure of the number on that new land that was cleared recently, but the old township of Glen consists of ten crofts.

38,738. But the township has been enlarged a little, has it?—Well, yes; they got more land at any rate.

38,739. Are you anxious to get a croft if you could?—Yes, that is what we are for, and every one whom I represent.

38,740. But you do not wish to give up the fishing, do you?—No, we cannot get as much land as that; but we would like to have both.

38,741. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—When did Glen get an addition?—I am not certain of the exact year, but it is not very long since.

38,742. And when that addition was made, were some removed from Glen and settled in Garrygal?—I did not know any of them; but the cottars who were there formerly got over yonder.

38,743. Some of the cottars were removed and got land on Garrygal?—Yes.

38,744. Are they getting on well there?—They are better off than where they were at any rate.

38,745. How was the land occupied previously, before they got the addition?—It was a tack before then.

38,746. What was the name of the tack?—The sons of Dr Macgillivray had it; or else the Doctor himself at the time.

38,747. Were houses built for them by the estate?—I don't know anything about the arrangements among themselves, for I was not going into these matters.

38,748. Then you do not appear, do you, for the cottars of Garrygal?—I am here on behalf of the landless cottars.

38,749. And you are one of them yourself?—The identical man.

38,750. You are at present a cottar in Glen?—Yes.

38,751. How many cottars are there?—Between sixteen and seventeen, at a guess.

38,752. Who have no land?—Nor a house.

38,753. What do you mean by that?—They have got sorts of tenants in crevices on the foreshore; and some are in each other's houses.

38,754. How is it that they have not built better houses?—Because they won't get sites for houses at all.

38,755. Do you say that the estate refuses to give them sites for houses at Castlebay here, for prosecuting the fishing?—They did so, and to myself in particular first of all. (Produces letter.)

38,756. This letter which you exhibit shows a refusal, does it, on the part of the estate?—Yes, they were refusing, but they did not pull down the house above my head.

38,757. And how are you situated now with regard to a house?—I was bold enough to erect a small bit of a house, over yonder on the foreshore.

38,758. That house that you built is made of wood?—Yes.

38,759. And according to this other letter which you put in my hand, you are requested to take it down by 1st September and remove the materials. That refers to September of last year?—Yes.

38,760. How is it when Castlebay is such an important place for fishing that sites should be refused to fishermen?—We have no knowledge of the reason for the refusal; but we know that there are many places such as Vatersay, North Bay, and others where fishermen can thrive better than they do at present.

38,761. There are better places even than Castlebay you think?—Far ahead of Castlebay in every way, particularly for bait.

38,762. But has not Castlebay been regarded by the estate as the most suitable place for a fishing population?—We did not know anything like that; we were under the impression that they were huddled so close together and would get nothing at all.

38,763. So that your experience is that they refused to give you even as much of land as you could build a house on?—Likely, as I have tried it: I went and asked for it wisely and legally.

38,764. Are you a native of Barra?—Yes.

38,765. Is your father alive?—Yes.

38,766. Is he a crofter?—Yes.

38,767. Where does he live?—In Glen.

38,768. Have you been prosecuting the fishing yourself?—I still follow the fishing.

38,769. Have you a share in a boat?—Yes.

38,770. So that you are undoubtedly a bonâ fide fisherman?—Yes.

38,771. How do you expectto carry on the fishing without a stance for your house?—I do my best to keep the sort of house I have, and to improve it.

38,772. Is your house built on your father's croft?—No, it is only on the top of rocks, about five yards from high-water mark. I have seen the tide passing it.

38,773. You want to present these letters to the Commission to show your case, I suppose?—That was my intention,—to keep them so as to present them to you whenever you came, to show how we were persecuted.

38,774. You leave these letters with us for the present in reference to your case?—If it would make any difference.

38,775. The letters will be taken care of and will be handed back to you.—Before we leave where we are I will make up my mind whether to leave my letters or not.

38,776. I think the best plan would be as you have submitted the letters, that we should keep them in the meantime, and you can get them whenever you wish?—I will leave them, but I would like to leave them in the possession of this man (indicating Mr Donald Macrae), because I am better acquainted with him.

38,777. Are there any others in the same position as yourself,—refused a stance for a house?—There are worse than I am, by far.

38,778. In what way?—Because they have no houses. Badly off as I am, I have got a sort of a house, on the top of a rock.

38,779. The others have not ventured to put up a house against the regulations of the estate, and so have to live in their parent's houses, have they?—Some of them, and others in friend's houses.

38,780. And you do not think that that is any great encouragement for prosecuting the fishing?—None at all: it will keep back everything, themselves and the fishing as well.

38,781. But you would be quite willing, I suppose to take a croft too, as well as a stance for a house?—I would be willing to take some bit, I and every other one who has no land.

38,782. And you think there is plenty of land on the island of Vatersay?—Plenty, both north and south, where they could get land to put a beast on.

38,783. Do you agree in the main with the evidence that was given by the former witnesses?—I am in my own opinion and that of those whom I represent.

38,784. But you know the former witnesses mentioned the places specifically that were considered suitable for crofters. Do you agree that these places are so suitable?—Yes, I have heard that.

38,785. And do you agree with them as to these lands being suitable for crofter settlements?—Well, yes: but I thought those who had no land were the first men who should get some.

38,786. But you agree with them as to the suitability of the lands,—I am not speaking of the people who should be put there?—Oh, yes.

38,787. And do you think that having a croft would help a man to prosecute the fishing?—I think it would be the only way. I am under the belief that they would be very well helped if they even got only the site of a house.

Castlebay, Barra.

Duncan Campbell.

38,788. And would they be better with a croft as well as the site of a house?—It is well known that they would.

38,789. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Did you duly apply to the estate authorities for a house stance?—I did.

38,790. Whom did you ask?—The factor.

38,791. Did you ask him more than once to give you a site?—I did, several times.

38,792. What answer did you get?—As I had no lands he would not remain speaking to me, and would not give me a reply.

38,793. Did he distinctly refuse to give you a stance?—He did, in presence of witnesses.

38,794. Did you go to any higher authority than the factor for a stance?—Well, no; but when I was refused I sent to the Fishery Board for the Fishery Act.

38,795. Then after you put up this hut, did the factor tell you you must pull down that house?—Yes, he told me so on the quay when he met me on his way going down to South Uist; and brought down policemen as witnesses, as it were.

38,796. What time did he give you to pull down the house and shift?—He came where I was, and he said twenty-four hours the law would give me, and to leave the ground in the same state as I got it: and then a little after he came with the police constable and told me that I would get forty-eight hours.

38,797. Do you know other fishermen who live in huts as you do, and who are being ordered out?—Yes, I know them: they are down in Breivig, one or two of them, and some of them are present here to-day.

38,798. Do you know any in Garrygal?—I know another man in my own neighbourhood,—if he got the chance of a site for a house I am not aware of it.

38,799. What is his name?—Malcolm Johnston.

38,800. Did you join with other cottars in an application to the estate for land for holdings?—I and they went together to hold meetings, but after what we had done the poor people did not get anything.

38,801. Did you sign a petition to the estate asking for land?—I was in the centre of them wherever they were.

38,802. Were you a party to a petition sent to the estate for land, and signed by about forty cottars?—I was there, but I am not sure whether my name was there or not. My name ought to be there, though I don't know whether it was put down or not.

38,803. Did you ask your name to be put to a petition from cottars?—No, I did not ask it separately.

38,804. With regard to the fishing industry, what portion of the island is most suitable for securing bait for the lines?—I live on the south end: they talk about Vatersay, but there is no place in Vatersay where they can get such bait as they get every day of the year.

38,805. My question was, what part of the island is most suitable for supplying fishermen with bait for their lines?—Vatersay and Eoligarry are suitable to procure bait.

38,806. And because of that, do you consider Vatersay and Eoligarry very suitable for fishermen's holdings?—Very suitable.

38,807. And do these two places afford good and safe anchorage for fishermen's boats?—Yes.

38,808. Do you think that a fishing population would be much more comfortable there than where they are placed?—As big as they are coming here, besides the native boats; it is in these places that they always take shelter.

38,809. So that alike for the matter of bait and for the matter of shelter for large boats and small boats, these two places are, in your opinion, eminently suitable for fishermen's holdings?—That is my opinion.

38,810. And further, do you believe that if facilities were afforded to the cottars for taking up lands there, they would be able to put up houses and use the land to profit, and follow the fishing as well, so as to improve their condition?—Yes, indeed, that is the only hope for them.

38,811. Mr Ranald Macdonald, Commissioner for Lady Gordon Cathcart.—Are you aware that before the passing of the Crofters Act Lady Cathcart very carefully considered the circumstances of the cottars who are fishermen in Castlebay, and made arrangements to give them 45 allotments on this side of Ben-Tangaval and 40 allotments at Garrygal; and that she also offered to give them house stances at 10s. 6d. along here at Castlebay?—I never heard of any such being done for cottars, but I have heard that those who got that new land would require to go into it with their houses,—to erect new houses.

Castlebay, Barra.

Duncan Campbell.

38,812. And you are not aware that the offer was printed and made publicly known?—I am not aware, nor have I heard them speaking about it for cottars.

38,813. Were you in Barra in the year 1883?—I must have been in it before then.

38,814. And you did not hear this?—No, I never heard anything like it, nor saw it.

38,815. And your father was the constable at Glen?—Yes, but through persecution they put me out of his house and I have built this wooden erection. They put him out of his employment as constable.

38,816. Are you aware also that although 45 allotments were offered, only 35 accepted the offer?—There might be two or three even at this day who would not take them; but I understood there were only three or four which were left without being taken.

38,817. Then you do know that there were a few of them who got the offer but did not accept it?—I have heard this very year that there were lots to be had there, but it would not suit the Glen people to come down there to the west end of Ben-Tangaval to a place called Keolach or the 'penfold.'

38,818. Did you not know that the intention was that the fishermen should have their houses in Castlebay, just as they have on the east, coast where the fishing is successfully prosecuted,—the houses being situated close together so that they could go in early and come out late, and one member of the crew need not wait for the others?—Oh, I have seen that, but I have seen them here far away and near the shore: those who were far away used to be the first men to come, and those who were near the shore the last.

38,819. Don't you think it is a very great convenience that those who are members of a boat's crew should have their houses near each other?—That is very likely; but a boat may have a certain crew this year and a very different crew next year.

38,820. But if the 75 fishermen were all to have their houses in Castlebay, even if they changed about, they would still be conveniently near each other, would not they?—Yes. We could not manage to get even as much as the site of a house.

38,821. You go to the east coast, do you not?—I was ever going there till last year.

38,822. Then you must be aware from your own knowledge that in all the parts of the east coast where fishing is successfully carried on the fishermen live near each other?—Yes, that is right enough.

38,823. And I suppose you also know that although the offer I have referred to was made to the Barra fishermen, they insisted upon having their houses scattered here and there over the land,—to have their crofts separate and their houses scattered all over the place: that is what they considered the best arrangement?—I don't think it would be as suitable; but I think if they were spread further apart it would be more comfortable than to have them huddled together as they are.

38,824. You said before that it was more convenient for the fishing that they should be near each other?—Yes, crews of the same boats, but it would not suit the fishermen to be huddled so close together.

38,825. Don't you know that the only place which has succeeded as fishing ports are those where there are a number of fishermen collected together,—I won't say huddled together, but collected near each other?—I don't know: I have not travelled many places, but as I see them here.

38,826. But you know this, that if a large quantity of fish is landed at a particular spot, arrangements can be made for selling it at a higher price: you will get the benefit of competition, or you can make arrangements for sending it quickly to market; whereas if it is in little places scattered all over, it is impossible to make these arrangements with the same conditions?—Not at all; they would get the ferry any time.

38,827. But where there is a large quantity of fish landed at the same spot, you are aware that there are fish salesmen there, and that the fish are put up to auction, so that the fishermen get the very highest price?—I know distinctly this, that most of the fishermen are in Castlebay.

38,828. Don't you know that where there are only a few fishermen, they must just take whatever price the fishcurers offer them, as there is no competition?—They must take what is going if they don't get better, whatever it may be.

38,829. Then you admit that in very small centres the fishermen do not get the benefit of competition?—I do not say as much as that: I only say that a big place could be made out of a small place as well as Castlebay.

38,830. May I ask on whose croft you built the wooden house you live in?—At the time when I built the house I never asked whose land it was: and I believe I was a quarter of a year there before I knew whose land it was.

38,831. It is built at Garrygal?—Yes.

38,832. And you know that Garrygal is let to tenants whose rents have been fixed by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

38,833. Don't you know that if any of these crofters allow a cottar like you to build a house on his croft he loses the right to the holding?—I have very little knowledge of what they might do or say, but I know they have done very little to me as yet.

38,834. Did you get permission from any of the crofters at Garrygal to build your house?—No, I was not so far back, because I knew they had no permission to give me.

38,835. Did you know that it was against the Crofters Act, against the law of the land?—I knew that very well, as well as they knew it themselves.

38,836. Then you went deliberately and transgressed what you believed to be the law of the land, and you put the crofter into the position that he might be deprived of his holding. Do you think that was the right thing to do?—I was only looking out for myself: I was not looking for any other person.

38,837. What would be the result in Barra if every cottar were to do exactly as you did?—The result would be that they would have houses, whereas to-day they have none.

38,838. You know that the sub-division of lands and the building of additional houses on crofts has been the cause of a great deal of injury to the crofters themselves?—Very possibly, but any day that I do any damage to the interests of the crofter I will pay him.

38,839. Are you not aware that the estate officials have been found fault with for allowing cottars to build houses on crofts belonging to others?—I knew that well: but where were they to go? Were they to go out into the sea?

38,840. Did you know that the Garrygal people complained to Mr Paterson, the factor, that you built this house there without any authority?—He did not tell me, nor did they themselves tell me anything about that, but I think they are good men yet.

38,841. Now consider the position: don't you know that Mr Paterson was bound to take notice of what you did?—Possibly.

38,842. Because if he allowed you to do that, after the crofters had complained to him, all the other cottars in Barra would very likely do the same thing?—Indeed, and they will do it, if they do not get anything else.

38,843. Do you think they will deliberately violate the law of the land, the Crofters Act?—They won't go against any law: they have the Civil Law of the Kingdom any day, that they can put up a wooden hut of that sort.

38,844. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—I think you stated that you made application to the estate for a stance for the house?—I asked of no person but the factor. Castlebay Barra. — Duncan Campbell.

38,845. But you asked it of the factor?—I asked it of the factor several times, in presence of witnesses.

38,846. And you were refused a stance?—I put it up then: I did not care whether I got permission or not.

38,847. So that it was not a matter of choice, your putting up a house there: you had to do it if you had to get a house at all, because the estate refused it?—If I had had a choice it would not be there.

38,848. And have they sufficient land near, not under the Crofters Act, that they could give you for building a house?—I was not aware, but through some proofs that I got myself that there were some bits of land over this way which they could use and which were not in the possession of crofters.

38,849. Mr Gordon.—What is your objection to building a house over at Castlebay here, where you were offered a stance?—No objection at all, but would take it very soon.

38,850. Did you answer correctly when you said you knew there were three or four places not taken up in Castlebay here?—I suspect there were, according to what I heard from men who knew better about it than I did.

38,851. Did you ask for any of these stances?—I did not ask in that particular place, but where it would be most suitable for himself to give it to me.

38,852. But you knew that there were several stances ready waiting if you chose to ask for them?—The only thing I asked was the site for the tent. I was waiting long for it, and did not get a reply: I was rather too much in a hurry, and could not wait longer.

38,853. Well, suppose you were to ask now for a stance in Castlebay and give up the tent, would you do that?—To-morrow morning if I had the chance.

38,854. Before you can say that you have been refused a stance for a house, while you are in the knowledge that stances were offered, you ought to exhaust the question by asking one of the stances that were publicly offered?—I have done so: I have exhausted the question to the utmost of my ability.

MICHAEL CAMPBELL, Crofter, Garrygall (about 70). Michael Campbell.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

38,855. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a croft at Garrygal?—Yes.

38,856. What rent do you pay?—30s.

38,857. Then you have not very much land, have you?—No.

38,858. Have you in common with the other witnesses a desire for a larger holding?—There is no one but would ask more if the land can be got; I, myself, may not be so anxious about it: such land as I have will do my turn.

38,859. Then you do not desire any more?—No, what I have will do me. I am an old man now, and cannot work land. I have, however, a large and able family, and I would wish more land for them.

38,860. Perhaps you make your living mostly by fishing?—I don't live by fishing, but by the proceeds of fishing from my family.

38,861. Your family fish?—Yes.

38,862. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—When was this township of Garrygal formed?—I am not quite sure,—seven or eight years ago, perhaps. [Mr Ranald Macdonald.—Eleven years ago.]

38,863. Were the people taken from Glen and settled there?—Every one of them was taken off, except some who came from Mingulay.

38,864. How did they remove from that island?—The island is so stormy that they could not live there; and there are too many there already.

38,865. And the remainder came from Glen where they were cottars before they settled in Garrygal?—Yes, every one of them.

38,866. Have they been benefited by the crofts that

Castlebay, Barra.
Michael Campbell.

they got in Garrygal?—Indeed, was it not a very great profit for a man who had nothing to have a little? Small as it is, they will in the winter time get potatoes out of it; but if they were without it, looking at the sea in the winter time they would have no potatoes. There are three in my house at sea all this year, and they did not do as much as would buy their meat.

38,867. Then you think that all the crofter townships in Barra might be benefited in the same way by the removal of the cottars and such of the crofters as might go to other places?—That is so. No man can make a living without a bit of land, particularly in these places. It is a wild place and they cannot get to sea in rough weather.

38,868. Do you think there is sufficient land in Barra for the settlement of the cottars in comfortable crofts?—Plenty, plenty.

38,869. How many crofters were settled in Garrygal?—Forty, between Castlebay and Breivig, on the Garrygal, all paying the same rent, 30s.

38,870. How were the houses built on that new township?—By the men themselves.

38,871. Were they able to build these houses without any assistance?—They were not quite able to build them; they have built them bit by bit. They were far from being able to do it at first; they began with a hut, and they would be working at the new house and living at the hut while at work.

38,872. Did they manage to put them up without getting assistance from the estate?—Yes: I am not aware of their getting any assistance from the estate: they did not ask it. There is no doubt if they did ask it they would get it.

38,873. And I have no doubt they stocked it also in the same way?—It was six years before they could put even a little upon it; but some of them were getting one beast after another till such time as now they have now more stocking.

38,874. But the place is stocked now, is it? Is there a sheep stock on it now?—Each has two cows and a few sheep, and some have none.

38,875. Was 30s. the original rent?—£2, 10s. was the original rent: the Crofters Commission reduced it to what it is.

38,876. When you went there the rent was £2, 10s.?—Yes.

38,877. Mr Ranald Macdonald, Commissioner for Lady Gordon Cathcart.—Did you, yourself, get any assistance from the proprietor when you put up your house?—Yes.

38,878. What was it?—He gave me slate and couples to put on it, till such time as I paid it.

38,879. You paid part of it?—I don't know whether I paid it all or not: I never got the account.

38,880. I may state that it was not all repaid: but this is a deserving man, and he got that assistance and was not pressed for the money.

Duncan Campbell.

DUNCAN CAMPBELL, Kentangaval (38).
(Examined partly in English and partly in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

38,881. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a crofter?—I go under the name, but I am not a crofter.

38,882. You have a very little bit perhaps?—My name was put down to it two years ago, but I have not got the croft yet.

38,883. You call yourself a cottar, do you?—I call myself a cottar as yet.

38,884. You are expecting to get some more land?—I hope so.

38,885. Or do you come before us with a desire to get more land? Have you any promise of land already?—My name has been down for land two years, since May last, but I have not got that land yet.

38,886. You mean on the estate?—Yes.

38,887. Have you heard the evidence that has been given to-day at great length?—Yes.

38,888. Do you agree with it?—Yes, I agree with some of it very well.

Castlebay, Barra.
Duncan Campbell.

38,889. Have you anything to add to it?—I have to add that it would be a good thing for the fishermen of Barra to be scattered down to the north end of the island and not kept down in Castlebay as Mr Macdonald desires they should be.

38,890. Mr Ranald Macdonald, Commissioner for Lady Gordon Cathcart.—Did not you enter into a written agreement some time ago about one of the lots in Kentangaval?—Yes.

38,891. And you paid the year's rent for it?—The half year's rent.

38,892. I suppose you know that there were seven people applying for it at the time, and that you were selected out of them?—I know that there were.

Anthony Campbell

ANTHONY CAMPBELL, Crofter, Kentangaval (67)—examined.

38,893. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a croft at Kentangaval?—Yes, a very bad one.

38,894. It is not a good one?—It cannot be much good.

38,895. Are you desirous of getting a croft in Barra?—A little croft would do me.

38,896. But you have a family perhaps who may come after you?—Yes.

38,897. Have you anything special to say about Kentangaval, or fresh evidence to give of any kind?—It is about forty years since I went to Kentangaval, and I see three families on one man's croft to-day.

38,898. The crofts there are too small?—Yes.

38,899. Do you agree generally with what the other witnesses have said about Barra?—I did not hear them.

Allan Macneil.

ALLAN MACNEIL, Crofter, Tangasdale (49).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

38,900. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a croft?—Yes.

38,901. What is the rent of it?—£7.

38,902. What stock do you keep?—Two horses, four cows, and a heifer, and about forty sheep, including lambs.

38,903. Are you able to make a living out of your croft?—No.

38,904. Have you a family?—Yes.

38,905. Do you follow the fishing at all?—No.

38,906. Then it is by the work of your family that the living is made, is it?—I have been troubled with rheumatism for some years and cannot do much work, but I generally employ a male or female servant to work for me, as my family are under age.

38,907. You keep a servant in addition to your family, owing to your complaint?—Yes, particularly in the autumn and spring time.

38,908. Then you could hardly take up more land if it were offered to you, could you?—Yes, if I could get suitable land; but the land I have is sand, and I have got quite enough of that.

38,909. But a good deal of Barra is either rock or sand, is it not?—There is a part of it at the west side.

38,910. Do you agree with the evidence you have heard?—I have no difference of opinion.

38,911. Have you any additional evidence to give besides what we have heard already?—I have nothing to add.

38,912. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Are there many cottars in your township?—There are six.

38,913. Do these get potato ground from the crofters?—Sometimes they get small bits, the setting of a few potatoes.

38,914. Are these cottars fishermen?—Some of them are fishermen: others are labourers, and some are old maids.

38,915. Would those of them who are fishermen be willing to take crofts of their own?—It is my belief that they are very desirous of getting them, and that they would be better than they are.

38,916. Mr Ranald Macdonald, Commissioner for Lady Gordon Cathcart.—May I ask whether you have the best croft in Tangasdale?—I have the largest croft there.

38,917. Did you accept a share or an allotment on Ben-Tangaval when it was refused by the fishermen?—Yes, I had a share of it, whether it was refused by fishermen or not.

38,918. And you gave it up of your own accord?—Yes, I did.

38,919. Would you be willing now to give up a portion of this large croft that you have to accommodate some of the fishermen, seeing that it is near Castlebay?—No.

Murdoch Mackinnon.

MURDOCH MACKINNON, Crofter, Tangasdale (86)—examined.

38,920. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a croft?—I have half a croft.

38,921. Have you a family alive who maintain you?—I have only a daughter left along with me; the rest are away.

38,922. But do your children who are away help you?—Yes, I could not live unless they did so. I have one son who does exceedingly well to me.

38,923. Have you heard the evidence that has been given to-day?—I did not hear it very well.

38,924. Mr Gordon.—What size of croft have you?—Very little indeed, only half a croft.

38,925. Do you want any more land?—I do not want it, because I cannot use it, unless my son would help me as he is doing.

38,926. Is there any desire for larger crofts among the people in your township?—Where there is a young man in a family there is such a desire. I lost my assistance, and I have not the courage to take any more land.

Hugh Maclean.

HUGH MACLEAN, Crofter, Borve (42).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

38,927. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a croft in Borve?—I have the half of one croft and the fourth of another.

38,928. That is not very much altogether, is it?—No.

38,929. Then do you live by fishing?—At times of the year.

38,930. Have you a good harbour at Borve?—Not except in good weather.

38,931. You have to haul up your boats there, have you?—Not except in very bad weather: we can ride them at anchor.

38,932. How many families are there in Borve?—Thirty-three families.

38,933. Are there any cottars?—Yes, thirteen extra families.

38,934. Do these cottars all have houses upon the crofters' land?—Some of them, but the greater number are on the common. They are all a burden on the crofts.

38,935. Is there a desire among the crofters to get larger holdings?—Yes.

38,936. And is there land available in your neighbourhood, or would you have to go to the end of the island?—I don't know of any other land in our neighbourhood, unless we go to the north end of the island, or any part of the Eoligary Farm.

38,937. Or possibly to Vatersay which has been mentioned in evidence?—Just so.

38,938. Would some of you Borve people be willing to leave Borve and take new holdings if you were offered them?—I think they would.

38,939. Mr Gordon.—Did you hear what the other witnesses said?—Yes.

38,940. And do you agree with them generally?—Yes.

38,941. Mr Ranald Macdonald, Commissioner for Lady Gordon Cathcart.—When did you get your croft at Borve?—About fourteen or fifteen years ago.

38,942. Is it quite as long as that? Was it not when the people went to Allasdale?—It was then that I got the fourth of the croft.

38,943. Were not you a cottar about eleven years ago when I was over in Barra here?—I was two years married without land after I left my mother's family: before then I was in my mother's house keeping up the land that they had.

Castlebay, Barra.

Hugh Maclean.

38,944. But you were not the crofter then?—No.

38,945. You had a horse and a cow and two stirks with eight or nine sheep eleven years ago?—Yes.

38,946. Then when the people went to Allasdale you got lands of your own?—Yes.

38,947. Could you give me the names of any of the crofters at Borve who would be willing to remove?—I did not examine them, but I, myself, am one.

38,948. What sort of a croft would tempt you to go away?—I think any man to take the best part of his living out of a croft would require about 8 or 9 acres of arable land, exclusive of the Common.

38,949. How many acres have you now?—I don't know how to measure in acres, but I can give a guess of it.

38,950. Well, would you give a guess?—I believe I have 4 or 5 acres of land that could be ploughed somewhere or another, with the help of a spade.

38,951. And how many of pasture?—I believe upwards of as much again.

38,952. Then you have no share of the common ground,—the machair and the hill?—Yes.

38,953. Can you tell me what stock you have?—Two cows, two horses, a heifer, and a stirk.

38,954. And how many sheep?—Seven or eight and about three one-year olds.

38,955. How many sheep altogether?—About twelve.

38,956. Are you sure you have no more?—None except this year's lambs.

38,957. Don't you think that is a very fair stock for a £3 rent?—If we had a living ourselves after feeding our stock. I buy a third part of the feeding for the stock.

38,958. Were you ever on the mainland of Scotland?—Yes, in parts of it.

38,959. Did you ever meet a crofter there paying £3 who could keep the same number of stock that you have?—I never inquired what they were paying or keeping, but I am sure one cow there would cost as much in food as all my cattle together.

38,960. Does that mean that you were overstocking your place?—Yes, because they are not kept.

38,961. Is not that bad management?—Well, we cannot do without them. I am compelled to do it by my circumstances.

Donald Macintyre

DONALD MACINTYRE, Castlebay—examined.

38,962. Mr Forsyth.—I understand you wish to make some statement to us?—It is about my own affairs.

38,963. Do you mean that you come on your own behalf, and not representing anybody else?—Well, of course, to help others as well as I could if possible.

38,964. And you want to make a statement as to our own affairs. Is it in connection with land?—Yes.

38,965. Have you a croft?—No.

38,966. You have a house, I presume?—No.

38,967. Are you living with relatives?—I live with my father-in-law.

38,968. Are you a Barra man?—I am a Barra man, and my ancestors before me.

38,969. You are desirous of getting a holding, are you?—Yes, I came for that purpose too, but I have been for the last eight or nine years in my father-in-law's house. I asked for a stance to build a house: I offered to build a cottage with slated roof at Castlebay, where I would be near my boats and my comrades. I was willing to pay whatever rent they might put on it, even on the rocks close to the shore; it would not matter so long as the sea did not wash me away. I could not get the chance, however.

38,970. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Is your father-in-law a crofter?—Yes.

Castlebay, Barra.

Donald Macintyre.

38,971. And you say you have been for many years asking for a croft?—For nine years regularly: I never missed a year.

38,972. Did you sign a letter asking for a stance?—I offered in Garrygal where there was a lot to let, but another man got it.

38,973. Do you follow the fishing?—Yes, that is how I make my living.

38,974. Have you got a family?—Yes.

38,975. Can you suggest any reason why you were refused a site, seeing that the estate make out that they wish to encourage the fishing industry at Castlebay?—No, I cannot say why I should be refused a stance. I don't see why I should not get one as well as any other.

38,976. Did they give you any reason for refusing it?—Not that I remember, until I was told there was no place to put up one.

38,977. Are there others in the same position, who are refused sites?—It appears there are a good many.

38,978. Can you name any person who is in the same position,—who wishes to build but cannot get a site?—John Maccallum, Malcolm Johnston, Glen, Rory Gillies, and others.

38,979. You stated that these men, like yourself, are being refused stances for their houses?—Yes.

38,980. Did any of these put up a shed or kind of dwelling-house for themselves against the will of the estate?—Not that I know.

38,981. What about Johnston?—He bought the shed, and it is there still.

38,982. From whom did he buy it? [Mr Donald Macrae.—Mr Malcolm Johnston has requested me to state on his behalf that he is present, and is very anxious to make a personal statement with regard to his own stance.]

38,983. Mr Ranald Macdonald, Commissioner for Lady Gordon Cathcart.—Were you aware that stances were marked off for fishermen along this road in 1883?—No, I was not aware of such a thing.

38,984. Was it not printed and circulated among the people here?—If it was I did not see it or hear of it.

38,985. Were you aware that forty-five allotments for fishermen were marked off at Ben-Tangaval and that only thirty-five applied?—Yes.

38,986. Did you apply at that time?—I applied for any part where I could get a stance or a station.

38,987. Did you apply for a stance at Ben-Tangaval?—I did.

38,988. Why did not you get it?—That is more than I can say: I have been wondering why I did not.

38,989. Did you make a written application?—I made no application whatever, because an application from the like of me is nothing.

38,990. My information is that forty-five allotments were offered and only thirty-five accepted, and in order to divide the place among the people the rent had to be increased to more than was originally contemplated?—Yes, that is right enough; but if it was forty-five over again what benefit is that to me when I could not get it?

38,991. I was here myself at the time, did you apply to me for it?—No, I did not apply to you, but I thought the person to whom I applied might give me the chance as well as you; I thought he had the command and control over the land that would enable him to give me a place if it was to let.

38,992. Are you aware that Lady Cathcart has no power to allow you or any one to build upon the crofters' holdings?—Yes, I know that.

38,993. And are you aware that the crofters have no power to allow you or any one to do so?—Yes, I know that.

38,994. And you know that the law was enacted by Parliament in order to prevent the congestion which takes place whenever too many are allowed to settle on the land?—Yes, but I am aware that there are other places where houses could be built as well as on crofters' lands.

38,995. There is no great available land for fishermen's crofts just now, but there is a lot in Ben-Tangaval which you could apply for?—Yes, but it is not sufficient for me. The only reserved land hereabout is the fish-curing station.

Castlebay, Barra.

Donald Macintyre.

38,996. You can offer for this vacant land if you think proper.

38,997. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Do you know that there are lands in Castlebay that are not occupied by crofters?—Yes, I know by hearing it from old people here. I am not very long in Castlebay, but by hearing from other people I know that there is land in Castlebay and pretty close to the house where I stay at present; it was to be put for stances of houses and then let out to the crofters again instead.

38,998. But here, along the shore here?—I don't know anything about this at all.

38,999. Do you know that there is plenty land here for sites that is not crofter land?—So far as I understand, it is all crofters' land here.

39,000. Mr Ranald Macdonald.—It is all crofters' land except the curing station. [To witness.] What sort of a house would you be able to build?—That is more than I am able to state.

Malcolm Johnston.

MALCOLM JOHNSTON, Fisherman, Garrygal—examined.

39,001. Mr Forsyth.—Did you wish to get a stance for a house here?—Yes.

39,002. In Castlebay?—Yes.

39,003. And do you find you cannot get one?—Cannot get one.

39,004. You are anxious to continue your work here as a fisherman and you find that a great drawback, do you?—Yes.

39,005. I suppose you are aware that there are, so far as we understand, nothing but crofters' lands and curing stations in Castlebay?—I am aware that Mr Paterson, the factor, promised me the site of a house over about here, and after applying for it the next time I did not get it. Seemingly, it was under the Crofters Act when I asked for it.

39,006. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—What exact place do you refer to?—There is a house down there, between here and Mrs Glancy's, at the head of the little loch.

39,007. Do you know if there is any part of Garrygal reserved from the crofters?—Yes, all the curing station was reserved from the crofters when they took Garrygal.

39,008. In that part that is reserved, would it not be possible for them to give a stance for a house?—I should think so.

39,009. Would that be a suitable place?—Yes.

39,010. There was some mention made of your having purchased a shed. What have you to say about that?—I applied to Mr Paterson here for the site of a house and was refused. I then asked Mr Ross, fishcurer, Castlebay, for the loan, for a while, of his wooden shed on the curing station until I should get up a house for myself. He gave me that, and no sooner was I in than Mr Paterson came and told me I must leave it. He promised me the site of a house on condition that I would leave the shed. So I left the shed, and I came from Canna purposely to get the site of the house and the share of the hill in Garrygal. He asked me for security, and I gave him the letter of security, and the next time I asked him for it he said there were so many after it that her ladyship was to choose who was to get it, and I did not get it. After that he would not stop to speak to me, but I followed him to South Uist, and he made me write a letter stating what sort of house I would like to build. I stated this in a letter and sent it in to him at the hotel here, but never heard a word of it since. This shed that I was formerly in I bought from Mr Ross for £12. I understand that Mr Paterson has been at Mr Ross for letting me into the shed at present.

39,011. That shed is not situated on the crofters' land?—No, at the curing station.

39,012. You, first of all, removed from this shed which you now occupy under promise of getting a site for a house?—Yes.

Castlebay, Barra.

Malcolm Johnston.

39,013. Which promise has not been fulfilled?—No.

39,014. And now they wish to prevent you from returning to the shed?—Yes.

39,015. Without the promise of a stance?—Yes, I have had to go back to the same old place again.

39,016. Did you buy this shed with the idea of its being a dwelling-place for you?—Yes, I could not take anything else.

39,017. But you simply wish to have it there as a temporary place until you get another house of a more permanent character?—It was under that impression that I bought the house. I had to go there until I could get somewhere else.

39,018. You are perfectly distinct in your statement that you have been refused a site over and over again? [Mr Ranald Macdonald.—I may state at once that Lady Cathcart is most anxious to encourage the fishermen, and her object all along has been to concentrate the fishing at Castlebay, and so far as she has the power to give them stances at Castlebay, provided they put up decent houses.]

Ranald Macdonald.

RANALD MACDONALD, Cluny Castle, Aberdeen, Commissioner for Lady Gordon Cathcart (59)—examined.

39,019. Mr Forsyth.—You have a statement to submit to us I believe?—Yes.

39,020. Kindly read it.—'I am the factor on Lady 'Cathcart's mainland estates and I have also, for a 'long period, acted as secretary and adviser to her 'ladyship in connection with the management of her 'affairs generally. I took special interest in guiding 'the improvements she endeavoured to carry out after 'she succeeded to the Long Island Estates, including 'the re-arrangement and enlargement of crofter holdings, and the erection of piers and hotels, &c. Before 'Lady Cathcart's succession I was factor for the late 'Mr Gordon, and I was previously private secretary to 'the late Colonel Gordon for several years, up to the 'time of his death in 1858. I have spent the whole 'of my business life in the service of the successive 'proprietors of the estates now belonging to Lady Cathcart. I am a native of the Long Island and have been all my life intimately acquainted with the position of the estates and of the people. I must explain, 'however, that during recent years I have not been so 'closely associated with the management of these 'estates as I was down to a comparatively recent period 'when extensive estate improvements were carried 'out.

'The Estate of Barra, which includes the main island 'of Barra and the smaller islands, comprising the 'parish of Barra, was at one time the property of the 'late General Macneill of Barra. It was purchased by 'Colonel Gordon in the year 1840 at a price of '£38,050.

'Particulars of estate before 1840.—So far as I can 'ascertain the old estate documents do not appear to 'have been delivered to Colonel Gordon along with the 'title deeds of the estate, and there is not much material 'from which to gather information as to the holdings 'on the estate during General Macneill's time prior to 'the purchase, but I have the rental for the year from 'Whitsunday 1836 to Whitsunday 1837, being the 'rental, I believe, on which the estate was purchased. 'The total rental of land let to tenants and crofters in '1836 was £1948, 17s. 7d. This was in addition to 'subjects in General Macneill's own hands of the 'estimated annual value of £950. The total rental 'at the time of the purchase, including mansion-house 'and fishings and £500 for kelp, was brought up to '£3695. The present rental of the estate is about '£2268, which includes the rents of houses and other 'subjects created since the estate was purchased by the 'expenditure of capital. The land rental, including 'curing stations, is £2122; as against £2995 in 1836, 'the reduction being about 30 per cent.

Castlebay, Barra. — Ranald Macdonald.

'States showing effect of visits of Crofters Commission. '—In the years 1890 and 1891 Barra was visited by a 'division of the Crofters Commission, and I have framed 'a statement showing the result of these visits, and 'also how the rents fixed by the Commission have been 'paid. I will state the totals brought out in this state- 'ment which I put in (Appendix A, page 935). The 'Commission dealt with 278 holdings of a total rental 'of £814, 13s., the arrears on which amounted to £7583, '15s. 10d. For these holdings the Commission fixed 'the rent at £524, 14s., being a reduction of 35·801 per 'cent., and of the above sum of arrears submitted to 'them the Commissioners ordered to be paid £1423, 19s. 'or 22 per cent. Including the rent up to Martinmas '1893, and giving credit for all payments to this date, I 'find that the rents and arrears due under the decisions 'of the Commission amount to £2643, 6s.; of this sum '£2391, 8s. has been paid, leaving £251, 18s. still 'due or slightly more than a half year's rent. There 'are at present 69 crofters in arrear and 229 clear.

'Barra Fishing.—The population in Barra is de- 'pendent to a considerable extent on fishing, and I 'believe I am right in saying that, with properly 'equipped boats and other favourable conditions, they 'make admirable fishermen. The harvest of the sea, 'properly developed, is much more important for the 'Barra people than the harvest of the land, which is 'more adapted for grazing than the production of crops, 'and, therefore, the general tendency of all the re- 'arrangements by Lady Cathcart has been to bring the 'crofter fishermen nearer to the great natural harbour 'of Castlebay and the other natural harbours on the coast, 'as it is undeniable that the fishing industry cannot 'prosper when the fishermen are scattered here and 'there. It is absolutely necessary that a considerable 'number of fishermen should be residing in close prox- 'imity to one another to enable crews to start together, 'late and early as circumstances require, and to attract 'fish buyers to a common centre, and to make proper 'arrangements for the disposal of the fish caught. The 'importance of these requirements is well understood 'and acted upon by the most successful fishermen on the 'east coast of Scotland. It was Lady Cathcart's inten- 'tion to place these advantages within the reach of the 'Barra fishermen as far as local circumstances would 'permit. In addition to allotments, it was proposed 'to give to the fishermen at Castlebay building stances, 'with gardens attached, at the annual ground rent of '10s. 6d., so that they could be conveniently near each 'other, and that they would get the benefit of competi- 'tion for their fish which can never be got to the full 'extent where the fishermen are distributed in small 'numbers at different places.

'General improvement by Lady Cathcart.—Lady 'Cathcart on her succession devoted a great deal of 'care and thought to the position of the people on her 'Long Island Estates, and devised and carried through 'various schemes for their improvement. In Barra, 'where the principal industry was fishing, she con- 'structed a pier, erected an hotel, and gave encourage- 'ment for the erection of shops and curing stations. 'She also entered into an arrangement under which the 'telegraph was extended first to Lochboisdale under a 'large guarantee from herself alone, and afterwards to 'Castlebay under a joint guarantee by the Fishery 'Board and Lady Cathcart.

'The question of the relation of the people to the 'land began to occupy a good deal of public attention 'shortly after Lady Cathcart's succession, and it was a 'matter to which she gave most anxious consideration 'from a date long anterior to the public agitation in 'regard to it.

'In the year 1883 the island of Vatersay, which 'had been in the possession of a single tenant, fell out 'of lease and an application was made by 45 crofters 'and others living at Glen and Castlebay who wished 'to have the island divided up among them, and to 'remove with their families to the island. This 'application came before Lady Cathcart, who, after 'careful local inquiry, sent the following letter to the 'petitioners:—

'Titness Park,
Sunninghill, Berks,
'14*th March* 1883.

Castlebay, Barra. — Ranald Macdonald.

'To Mr John M'Lean, and the other crofters and 'cottars of Glen and Castlebay, Barra; offerers 'for the island of Vatersay.

'My secretary reported to me the import of the 'interview he had with your deputation at Aberdeen, 'and your written offer for the island of Vatersay, 'dated 15th February, has been since submitted to me.

'I regret that I do not see my way to accept your 'offer; but, although it is not usual for a proprietor to 'give reasons why an offer for a farm has been declined, 'yet in the special circumstances of this case, I think 'it right to make you aware of some of the reasons 'which have influenced me in not acceding to your 'proposals. I need scarcely assure you that this matter 'has received my most anxious consideration, and after 'weighing the whole circumstances, and taking the 'best advice, I have come to the conclusion that, even 'if you had offered a full rent for the island it would 'be a great mistake to plant a crofter population in the 'isolated island of Vatersay—never hitherto occupied 'by crofters—for the following among other reasons: '—(1st) the water supply in this island, in dry 'seasons, fails, and to meet the difficulty connected 'with this risk Bentangaval has hitherto been let to 'the tenant of Vatersay, as a shift for the stock in very 'dry seasons; (2nd) the offer submitted to me has the names of 45 people appended to it—each the head of, 'or representing, a family all presently located at or near 'Castlebay, on the main island of Barra, and mainly 'dependent on the fishing industry. With the view of 'developing the fishing, and thus helping these people, 'I have recently expended a large sum of money in the 'erection of an excellent pier in a sheltered position at 'Castlebay, most conveniently situated for them, and 'have also built there a comfortable hotel for the 'accommodation of the fish merchants and others, 'where also the principal public school has recently 'been built: to transfer 45 families with upwards of '100 children, or even a less number,—from a locality 'where these advantages have so lately been provided 'at great expense,—to an island without a school, 'church, shop, post office, medical practitioner, or 'any other civilizing influence would, in my opinion, 'be a retrograde movement, and against the best 'interests of the people themselves; (3rd) in your offer 'for Vatersay no information is given as to the ability 'of the applicants to pay the rent, or stock the island; 'or how the outlay necessary to provide houses and 'offices for 45 families is to be met, while most of 'those making the application to be so transferred are 'already deeply in arrear with their present rents; '(4th) I am satisfied, from past experience, that it 'is injudicious from every point of view; and a misfor- 'tune alike for proprietor and people, to have a populous 'crofter colony in a small isolated island. I refer to 'Mingulay, an island in the Barra group, as an instance 'of this. It has a considerable crofter population, and 'their social condition may be judged of by the fact that 'they are upwards of nine years in arrear of rent. The 'rental of Mingulay is £57, 7s., and the arrears when the 'accounts were last made up amounted to £534, 10s. 8d. 'The other small island inhabited by crofters is Eriskay, 'and it was from this island that the cry about want of 'food was first heard this season. But while I am con- 'vinced that your translation to Vatersay would be a 'great mistake, even in your own interests, I am 'desirous so to arrange the re-letting of this grazing 'as to benefit the Barra crofters, by setting free land 'in the main island of Barra, which on certain definite 'terms may be let to crofters to augment their present 'crofts,—my object being to carry out in Barra the 'scheme commenced, and so far successfully carried out 'in Benbecula, so far as the special circumstances 'permit, viz.:—to increase as far as practicable the size 'of the crofts occupied by tenants who depend on 'husbandry for their livelihood, so that they may be

Castlebay, Barra. — Ranald Macdonald.

'large enough to provide work for a family all the 'year round, and yield at least as much as would be 'food for the family. The Estate Regulations, 'specially prepared in 1879 for the encouragement of 'crofters, give all reasonable facilities for the improve- 'ment of the crofts by fencing and draining, &c., and 'I may mention that leases have already been given 'to upwards of 200 crofters in the development of my 'plans for their improvement.

'Most of the forty-five applicants for the island of 'Vatersay are, as already mentioned, mainly engaged in 'the fishing industry, and I am in hopes that they will 'adopt more and more the system of prosecuting the 'fishing found by the east coast fishermen, by ex- 'perience, to be the most successful and conducive to 'their prosperity and comfort.

'The increasing demand for fish in the large towns, 'and the increasing facilities for sending fresh fish to 'the markets, promise better chances of success to the 'fishermen than to the small crofters; and from the 'geographical position of Barra, surrounded with 'excellent fishing banks, I believe the social condition 'of the inhabitants will be improved by developing the 'fishing industry, and in order to promote this, every 'effort should be made to secure more satisfactory 'postal and telegraphic communication with the main- 'land, and greater facilities for conveying fresh fish to 'the railway terminus at Oban. By concentrating 'your energies in that direction, rather than seeking to 'obtain a precarious living on a small isolated island, 'with all the drawbacks I have mentioned, you would, 'in my view, not only improve your own condition but 'assist in the development of an industry of national 'importance.

'I am not stating mere theories in tendering to you 'this advice, for I can state from my own personal ex- 'perience and knowledge that not one of hundreds of 'the successful fishermen on the Cluny Estates in the 'counties of Aberdeen and Banff has as much as one 'acre of land. Having found from experience that the 'cultivation of land and the prosecution of the fishing 'cannot be successfully carried on concurrently, they 'have voluntarily given up the lots formerly occupied 'by them, and now concentrate their efforts on the 'fishing, which they find pays better; and the lots, still 'known as "Fisher lotted land" are let to others. I do 'not expect a change like this to take place at once in 'Barra, where in present circumstances, it is necessary 'for the comfort of a fisherman's family, to have land 'for potatoes and for keeping a cow for milk, but I 'hope you who are mainly occupied in fishing will, on 'reconsidering the whole matter, be satisfied that the 'interests both of proprietor and tenant will be best 'promoted by acting on the principles which I have 'thus indicatad in a general way, and which it will be 'my endeavour to carry out for the good of all con- 'cerned. I remain, yours faithfully,

'(Signed) EMILY GORDON CATHCART.'

Lady Cathcart's Experiments.—'While, for the reasons 'stated in this letter Lady Cathcart did not divide the 'island of Vatersay into crofts, she has made several 'experiments in the way of breaking up considerable 'portions of large grazings, in all extending to over 4500 'acres, to be divided as large crofts and as allotments 'to fishermen, the particulars and the results of which I 'shall now endeavour to explain.

'I have already referred to the application by 45 'crofters and others to have the island of Vatersay 'divided among them and to Lady Cathcart's reason 'for declining the application. In the letter conveying 'her decision Lady Cathcart stated that she was desirous 'so to arrange the re-letting of Vatersay as to benefit the 'Barra crofters by setting free lands in the main island 'of Barra which might be partly divided into large 'crofts and partly into allotments for fishermen.'

Bentangaval.—'The grazing of Bentangaval, situated 'on the main island of Barra, conveniently near the 'harbour of Castlebay, and extending to 1750 acres, 'had, prior to 1883, been let with the island of 'Vatersay. In re-arranging the lease of Vatersay, the 'peninsula of Bentangaval was reserved with the 'object of letting it to the fisherman settled near Castle- 'bay. A memorandum was prepared at the time 'setting forth the terms on which Lady Cathcart was 'prepared to let. That memorandum was as follows':—

Castlebay, Barra. — Ranald Macdonald.

Memorandum.—'Lady Gordon Cathcart has sus- 'pended consideration of the offers received for 'Bentangaval, to give an opportunity to fishermen and 'others who want potato ground and cows' grass to 'make definite proposals to take this piece of ground, 'containing 1750 acres.

'It is proposed to give an opportunity to 45 heads 'of families who can produce certificates of good char- 'acter to take Bentangaval as a club-farm, the rent to 'be £3 each per annum, each tenant to take at valua- 'tion seven of the sheep at present on the hill. A 'preference will be given to energetic fishermen who 'can be well recommended. All new houses are to be 'built, not on Bentangaval, but at or near Castlebay 'so as to be conveniently near to the harbour. Suitable 'sites will be marked off by the factor, with a small 'piece of ground for a garden attached, the rent of 'which will be 10s. 6d. per annum.

'Sub-letting and over-stocking will be prohibited. 'Proper regulations are to be made by a committee of '5 selected by the 45 tenants, every 9 tenants to 'elect a member of committee from their own 'number. After these rules are approved of by the 'factor, they will be obligatory on all the tenants. 'The committee and the factor will set apart from 'time to time suitable pieces of land for cultivation and 'will make such rules as will be most conducive to the 'general benefit of the whole tenants, and any tenant 'who will continue to transgress these rules after being 'twice reported to the factor as being a delinquent, 'will be deprived of his share of the grazing at the 'first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas thereafter.'

Division of Bentangaval.—'It was estimated that 'Bentangaval, if divided as allotments among 45 fisher- 'men, would maintain for each a cow, a stirk, and 7 'sheep. After considerable delay, Lady Cathcart's 'offer was accepted by only 35 heads of families, but 'they did not, as expected, pay for the stock according 'to arrangement, and Lady Cathcart had to take at 'valuation from the outgoing tenant, the whole sheep 'stock, and to clear the ground. As only 35 applicants 'came forward, the shares were proportionately larger 'than under the original scheme, and the rents were 'fixed at £3, 16s. per share, making a total rent of '£135; and I may mention that practically the same 'rent was offered by a single individual, who would 'have been an excellent tenant.'

Garrygal.—'About the same time the grazing of 'Garrygal near Castlebay, extending to about 1250 'acres, was divided among other 40 fishermen. The 'grazing had been for some time in the tenancy of Dr 'Macgillivray, the tenant of the farm of Eoligary, and 'his lease had not expired, but Lady Cathcart made 'terms with him under which he consented to give up 'his lease, as regards Garrygal, getting Sanderay and 'Flodday in exchange. These two islands formed up 'to that time part of the grazing of Vatersay. The 'grazing of Garrygal was given out at a total rent of '£100 in 40 shares to 40 tenants chiefly connected 'with the fishing industry, and it was intended that 'it should be worked as a club-farm, this having been 'also the intention as regards Bentangaval.'

Bruernish.—'In the same year, 1883, a part of the 'farm of Bruernish, extending to 360 acres which had 'been in possession of one tenant, was also divided 'among 20 heads of families, chiefly fishermen, and 'the farm of Leenish, extending to 70 acres, was divided 'into allotments and let to 12 families, at a total rent 'of £18.'

Allasdale.—'Lady Cathcart got a careful survey 'made of the parish of Barra, and it was felt that the 'want of a gradation of holdings in Barra was a draw- 'back, and to remedy this an effort was made to try the 'experiment of large crofts alongside the other experi- 'ment of allotments for fishermen. Accordingly, in the

Castlebay, Barra.

Ranald Macdonald.

'year 1883, arrangements were made with the tenant of 'the farm of Allasdale, consisting of 1080 acres of the 'best land in the island, under which he vacated the 'farm which was thereupon divided into seven crofts 'of different sizes and let at rents varying from £14 'to £18, the tenants entering into leases, under which 'they received assistance and encouragement to build 'houses and improve the ground.'

Nature of Experiments.—'The experiments which 'Lady Cathcart made were thus of a twofold character. 'The farm of Allasdale, which was a considerable 'distance from the fishing centres, was divided among 'crofters who were expected to devote themselves to 'the work on the crofts entirely, while the grazings 'of Bentangaval, Garrygal, Bruernish, and Leenish 'were let as allotments on the club-farm system to 'fishermen—the object being to give them facilities for 'growing potatoes and keeping cows to produce milk 'for their families. The intention was that the club 'tenants of Bentangaval and Garrygal should live at 'Castlebay, Glen and Kentangaval in the fishing 'hamlets where their houses were situated conveniently 'near the harbour of Castlebay.'

Result of Experiments.—'The results of these experi- 'ments have, without exception, been extremely dis- 'appointing.'

Bentangaval.—'Bentangaval was let with entry as 'at Whitsunday 1883. In 1891 the Crofters Com- 'missioners heard applications for fixing fair rents for '25 out of the 35 Bentangaval tenants. The total 'arrears submitted to the Commission were £772, 'showing an average arrear for each holding of £27, '11s. or thereby. The average payment per holding 'for eight and a half years, from the date of entry up to 'Martinmas 1891, was £4, 15s. or thereby, as against '£32, 6s. the rent for the period mentioned. The lands 'had not—at least for some time—been properly 'stocked, and such stock as had been put on the lands 'were not properly managed, the people not having 'had previously adequate knowledge or experience 'necessary for the management of stock, and I believe 'the possession of the grazing had not been a source of 'material profit to the holders of these lots. The 'Crofters Commission reduced the rent per share to £2, 'and ordered a sum of £198 to be paid out of the 'arrears of £772. The total rents and arrears which 'have become due in the twenty-eight cases referred 'to since the Commissioners issued their decisions 'amount to £310, of which there have been paid sums 'amounting in all to £251 leaving £59 unpaid.

'Similar results may be shown as regards Garrygal, 'Bruernish, and Leenish, and I now submit a tabulated 'statement showing these results.' (Appendix B, page '936.)

Allasdale.—'In the case of Allasdale the arrangement 'under the leases was that the tenants were to sit the 'first year rent free to enable them to build houses 'and start their crofts. They had leases for ten years, 'from Whitsunday 1883. In December 1888 the 'tenants had fallen very heavily into arrear. Exclud- 'ing the first year under the lease which, as already 'stated, was not charged, four years' rent had become 'due, amounting in cumulo for the seven holdings to '£440, and only £161 has beed paid, the average aggre- 'gate yearly payment being £40, as against a total rent of '£110. Matters had become so very unsatisfactory 'that Lady Cathcart served all the Allasdale tenants 'with summonses, and the result was that the tenants 'entered into communication with the agents, and 'made representations, which were duly transmitted to 'Lady Cathcart, to the effect that they had sustained 'severe losses through not understanding the manage- 'ment of land and stock, and through going into debt 'at the start, and that they had never been able to meet 'their liabilities to the proprietrix. They also repre- 'sented that the rent they had undertaken to pay was 'more than they ever would be able to pay, and they 'asked a reduction of rent. Lady Cathcart, after 'consideration and inquiry, agreed to reduce the aggre- 'gate rent from £110 to £80, the reduction being from '£18 to £13, 6s. 8d. on the larger crofts and from '£14 to £10 on the smaller crofts. She also agreed 'that the reduction should date back to the com- 'mencement of the leases, provided the arrears on 'the reduced basis were duly paid. All the tenants 'thankfully accepted the liberal concession made, and 'undertook to pay the arrears. When the Crofters 'Commissioners were sitting in Barra in 1890, these 'tenants applied to the Commission to have fair rents 'fixed and the arrears dealt with. Four of these with- 'drew their applications and Lady Cathcart opposed 'the applications by the remaining three crofters as 'being in breach of the good faith of the arrangements 'made in 1888, and the Commissioners dismissed these 'applications. The leases have now expired and the 'result of the experiment over the whole period of the 'lease can be seen. For the nine years' possession, the 'total sum which became due in name of rent calculating 'same from the first at £80 was £720, and the total 'sums paid amounted to £481, leaving an arrear of '£239, as at the close of the period of the lease, which 'has been since increased to £279. I have prepared a 'tabular statement showing the general result of the 'Allasdale experiment.

'The Allasdale case I consider specially important 'in various ways. The tenants who were selected as 'being the most suitable in the parish of Barra stated, 'when they applied along with others, in the most 'absolute and unqualified way that they were in a 'position to cultivate and stock the ground and to pay 'the rent which they offered. It is not doubted even 'now, after very disappointing results, that they fully 'expected and believed that with large crofts they 'would be able to pay the rent and maintain their 'families in comfortable circumstances, and this was the 'general expectation when the crofts were let to them. 'Again in 1888, when the re-arrangement was made, it 'was pointed out to them that unless they could pay 'the reduced rent and honourably carry out their obli- 'gations as modified by the arrangements, any re-adjust- 'ment was useless. They again gave the most absolute 'assurances that if the reductions asked and ultimately 'given were conceded, they would clear off the arrears 'and pay regularly for the future. They have not 'done so, and I suppose it must be assumed that the 'reason is that they have not been able to do so.

Castlebay, Barra. Ranald Macdonald.

39,021. I may supplement my statement by saying that since I came to Barra, three or four days ago, I went down and made an inspection of the farm of Allasdale. From the reports which had reached me before I came to the island I was quite prepared to find that the tenants there were not in comfortable circumstances, but I am sorry to say that I found their circumstances were very much worse than I could possibly have anticipated. It was my own confident expectation after this place was divided among them that they would be able to earn a comfortable livelihood, and the result is to me very disapponting indeed, because I had something to do with the suggestion that this place should be divided into large crofts. It was partly in order to meet the cry which was raised in the island that there was no gradation of holdings,—nothing between the very small crofts and the very large farms, and I was particularly anxious to watch the experiment which had been made in the case of these large crofts at Allasdale. The place is not now worth anything like what it was when they got it: they have been cropping the machair land, and the consequence is that a considerable proportion of what was producing fine green grass, eleven years ago is now little better than a sandy desert. I came to a slope which seemed to be nothing but white sand, and I was told by the ground officer, who accompanied me, that the former tenant grew potatoes there during the time he was tenant of Allasdale, and that the crop raised was equal to 25 times the quantity planted,—for every barrel of potatoes planted he lifted 25. That piece of ground I was very sorry to see is now completely useless. They have been attempting to cultivate little patches here and there: I have not the slightest hesitation in saying that some of them have been exceedingly industrious, and the main reason why they have not been successful must be that the kind of soil and the rocky nature of the place render it really unsuitable for arable crofts. There is one tenant in particular to whom I wish to make reference. It might be supposed that the want of success of these holders of large crofts at Allasdale was attributable to their want of experience and want of knowledge how to cultivate these crofts; but one of the tenants there was for many years a ploughman first and afterwards a farm grieve in the county of Nairn. He is known by the Nairnshire farmers to be an exceedingly skilful, smart man, thoroughly acquainted with the best modes of farming. He was brought under Lady Cathcart's notice in Nairnshire, as grieve upon a farm a few miles from Kinsteary, and she was particularly anxious to get a place for him in Barra, because she was assured by Mr Anderson of Lochdhu, Mr Hugh Mann, and other gentlemen who recommended him as a most deserving man, that if he came out here his example would be the means of doing good to his neighbours. I have not the slightest doubt that if I had taken him to Aberdeenshire and given him a small farm of 35 to 40 acres there, he would have been a very successful farmer indeed. I am really very sorry that he has lost his own money and has done no good to himself and no good to the others. I can thoroughly rely upon what he told me. He said he came there with about £300, and to-day, after losing the best part of his lifetime in attempting to make a living on what was considered to be one of the best crofts that the soil of Barra could produce, he has lost the most of his money. The experiment is specially disappointing in the case of this man. Another tenant at Allasdale whom I saw the day before yesterday said to me that he was very sorry that ever he left Borve, and the remark he made was 'It is much better to have a little 'fire that warms you than a large fire that burns you. I 'would have been very much better if I had remained 'upon my little croft at Borve than come here.' He attributed his want of success largely to the way in which horses, sheep, and cattle from the neighbouring farms were allowed to trespass over Allasdale. He said it was impossible to protect their crops. His wife repeated the same idea in a different form. She said 'This place is suitable for a tack, and it ought always 'to be a tack.' She was against coming there, because it was not suitable land for cultivation. Her sons when they found the place was not likely to pay them, all left herself and the old man. I went to another of the crofters at Allasdale, and I found the wife at home, the husband having gone to the fishing at Fraserburgh That man is not any better off with this large croft at Allasdale than he would have been with one of the little allotments at Garrygal or Kentangaval. I should like very much if the Commissioners had an opportunity of going round the west side of the island on Monday to see the place for themselves and see what the people had to say. I can only add that I am quite satisfied that we could not at the time have made a better selection of suitable tenants for these crofts than we made in 1883, and I attribute the failure rather to the fact that really the land is not suited for profitable cultivation. I shall be very glad to give any explanations which the Commissioners may desire to have on any of the points mentioned in my statement.

Castlebay Barra. Ranald Macdonald.

39,022. Your statement is very full and complete as to details. There seems to have been an increase in the number of holdings since 1840?—Yes.

39,023. I think they increased to 304 as against a smaller number in 1840?—Yes, but these new holdings of allotments for fishermen are included.

39,024. Then, with the exception of these, your policy has not been to allow sub-division?—Our policy has been all along to prevent sub-division, but from what you have seen to-day, you can, I think, appreciate the extraordinary difficulty we find in checking it.

39,025. But, as a rule, you find that you have been able to prevent the sub-division of land?—Not successfully, but we have always endeavoured to do so, in the interests of the people themselves.

39,026. I see that if it were not for the new holdings there would be no great increase in the total number?—No great increase.

39,027. Then your opinion generally is, that crofting and fishing combined is necessary in this country?—That is the very opposite of my opinion: I do not think so at all.

39,028. I mean to say, that they cannot live by crofting alone?—Oh, certainly not.

39,029. And that if they are to live at all, fishing must be resorted to along with the crofting?—In present circumstances, where there are no farmers to sell them potatoes and milk, I felt that it was in a measure necessary to give them small allotments; but I am decidedly of opinion that if, like the fishermen on the east coast, they could get milk and potatoes to buy, it would be much better for them to concentrate their whole attention on the fishing. But in these islands at present that is impracticable. However, the lots should be very small.

39,030. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—I notice you give a rental of the island for the year 1836–37?—Yes.

39,031. Which shows a much higher rent than now?—Very much higher.

39,032. That rental refers to the time of General Macneill?—Yes. I stated, I think, that the purchase was made on the basis of that rental; but we found that the rents were too high, and the late Colonel Gordon of Cluny found it necessary to reduce the rents in some cases to one half.

39,033. Do you think that these rents were ever exacted?—I could not, from my own knowledge, give you an answer. I think it is likely.

39,034. But it is not certified in any way that these rents were ever paid or charged?—Well, the proof is that it was given to us as a bonâ fide rental by the agents of General Macneill.

39,035. And was it certified that it was let to these people at these rents?—Oh, yes, certainly.

39,036. And you do not know whether there is anything fictitious about it; whether it is not more an estimate of what they must let at, rather than really the actual rents charged?—Oh, no, it was no estimate; it was a real rental.

39,037. You don't know though whether these rents

Castlebay, Barra.

Ranald Macdonald.

were paid by the people or not, or whether they had been charged for any considerable time?—I could not tell for how long.

39,038. Or whether the rents were put up just for the sale of the land?—I would not like to make that insinuation, but I can say this: a few years after the estate was purchased, it was found that the rents were too high, and a very large reduction was made. There are some cases where this might have been accounted for by alteration of boundaries, but if you take, for instance, the case of an island like Mingulay, there could be no such reason there.

30,039. Did you state how many cottars there are in the island?—I think I have a statement to that effect. I have the notes which I took when I was here in 1883, and I can give you the cottars in every township:—

	Crofters.	Cottars.
In Craigston, . . .	41	8
Tangasdale, . . .	26	16
Keutangaval, . .	18	19
Bruernish, . . .	14	19

I am sorry I have not a summary at present to refer to, but there was a very large number of cottars. I can put that in if necessary.

39,040. There is still a large number of cottars?—Still a large number: but there should not be so many now, because there were 75 allotments offered to fishermen who were most of them cottars.

39,041. The number of crofters at present is, I think, 304?—Yes.

39,042. Now we find that a very large portion of the parish of Barra is held in large tacks?—Yes.

39,043. These include not quite the half, but nearly the half of the island?—But these two tacks include islands which, in my opinion, are totally unsuited for crofter holdings. I prepared a statement showing the amount of land held in large tacks on the main island of Barra, and it is not very large.

39,044. In round numbers the two tacks include very nearly the half?—I find that if you allow the same extent of land as the Napier Commission allowed for an ordinary croft (27$\frac{1}{2}$ acres), the extent of land on the mainland of Barra would just make 52 crofts. On the same basis the parish of Barra would make about 80 crofts.

39,045. And the other half of the island you say is divided among 304 crofters and a large number of cottars?—Well, the cottars, of course, have no right to it.

39,046. We had evidence over and over again here to-day that the land in these tacks is suitable for crofter holdings. You heard that evidence, did you not?—Yes, and I have no doubt the people think so.

39,047. Yes, you certified to their truthfulness and honesty: and they stated that the land in these tacks was much better fitted for occupation than the lands they have?—Yes, but some of them explained that the quality of their land had deteriorated by being so frequently cropped without regular rotation.

39,048. They did not quite get the full benefit of the land they held, but still they contended that it was very much better land in the tacks. They explained, of course, that the land in the crofts did not get justice, on account of the smallness of the crofts. Now, do you think that that is by any means a reasonable division of the land of Barra?—Well, if I could make an ideal division of the lands of Barra, I would not make it exactly as it is; but I am satisfied that considering the low value of agricultural produce and of stock, it will not pay a crofter to work a croft in an island like Barra. The crofts must either be arable or pastoral; if the croft is arable it is necessary that a certain piece of it, a few acres, should be in such a condition that the man can plough it. Now, I think, it would be very difficult to get three acres in one piece on the mainland of Barra where you could work a plough. All the arable land is in small patches surrounded by rocks, and considering the value of labour now, it would not pay any man to devote his time to the cultivation of such land. It is only as a sort of accessory that it would be profitable or judicious to have any cultivation at all on the island. It is necessary that a certain quantity of potatoes should be grown in Barra, and it is also necessary that a certain amount of the soil should be under crop in order to provide winter keep for cattle, but beyond that, very little cultivation is, in my opinion, advisable.

39,049. Does not that seem to point to this, then, that it would be necessary to give the land presently held as tacks to the cottars of Barra in order to work it?—No, it points in the very opposite direction, because if you work land economically at all, such land as there is in Barra, you must have it in a large piece. I think that on Monday night, after you have gone round the tack of Eoligarry, you will agree with me that Barra is peculiarly suited only for pastoral purposes, and that it is impossible to have such land as Barra profitably used by any one in small patches.

39,050. But do not you agree with the cottars, who say that they are under a very great disadvantage in not having land, and that the crofters of Barra, small as the crofts are, are much better off, because they have as much land as they have?—I do not.

39,051. You admit their truthfulness, and they have asseverated over and over again that they suffer for want of land?—Yes.

39,052. But should they not know from their own experience what would be better for them?—They are quite mistaken, they have had no experience at all of that sort of thing.

39,053. Don't they see the crofters alongside of them?—But I don't know that the crofters are very much better.

39,054. They have been telling us,—particularly one man whose veracity you vouched for,—that the crofters were very much better off than the cottars?—I have not the slightest doubt that every cottar would say he would be all right if he had half a croft; and every one with half a croft would say he would be all right if he had a full croft. But it is quite a mistaken delusion of the people.

39,055. These men have been admitting that the land is a great benefit to them,—the crofters would take more, but they admit that the crofts they have are a great benefit, and it would be a tremendous disadvantage to them to be deprived of the land; and surely they are good enough judges of that?—They are not good judges, I think. I do not for a moment doubt that they are saying what they think is correct.

39,056. Would they be better off without land?—I think so, except small allotments for potatoes and cow's grass.

39,057. Would you get any man in Barra to agree to that?—I don't know that.

39,058. So that you are perfectly singular in holding that opinion?—I think any man with any agricultural knowledge at all would agree with me that no man can profitably work a croft in Barra.

39,059. But those who have been asking crofts have given evidence quite contrary to that, saying that they derive a great deal of benefit?—Those who have been asking crofts are just like the Gaelic saying, 'Faoileag an droch cladaich,' they don't know the value of their labour. I met two men from South Uist who are getting 5d. an hour for work at Oban, and I venture to say that you will not get one man in Barra working on his croft who will get anything like that as an equivalent.

39,060. You would not wish the people to remove from Barra?—Certainly not.

39,061. They wish to prosecute this important industry of fishing which is so much for the benefit of the country?—I am very anxious that they should get every facility for doing so.

39,062. And for their comfortable living in this island they say over and over again that they require to have land?—Yes, they say so, and I have said that in present circumstances it is very desirable that they should have small allotments if they are fishermen: and I say further that in consequence of the nature of the soil in Barra and from the experience that I have had, and from what I have seen, I am satisfied that it is impossible, looking at it from a purely economical or commercial point of view, to profitably cultivate a croft in Barra.

Castlebay, Barra.

Ranald Macdonald.

39,063. You now come to admit that they would be the better of a little croft?—I said so in my statement, —not now for the first time,—that small allotments in present circumstances are necessary.

39,064. I could not get it from you just now,—I thought you said they would be better without any land. Now would they not be the better of land sufficient for having a cow or two?—I think one cow would be quite enough for a fisherman. My very decided and distinct opinion is this, that any man who is a fisherman ought to have as little as possible to take him away from his main industry. In present circumstances I say that to have a small allotment, a cow's grass, and potato ground, is very desirable, and we are very anxious to give them that. We offered them that, years ago.

39,065. That is very much what they have been saying they want, crofts along with fishing, in this island: that seems to be the general testimony. But, now, would it not be desirable further to remove the cottars from the various townships and give them crofts on the tacks, thereby relieving the crofters and giving them suitable and comfortable crofts that would keep them?—No, I think not.

39,066. How would you do it?—I would like any person to show me how a cottar can make a living on a croft in Barra.

39,067. Nobody proposes that he is to make a living on it; but that it will be a certain stay to him, and that he will employ his off-time on it. Don't you know that they have a great deal of off-time in Barra here from the fishing?—No, I don't agree with you there at all.

39,068. But don't you know that they say so themselves?—Yes, but I hope if I do not see it somebody will see the day when they will be able to follow the fishing all the year round the same as the fishermen on the east coast. The fishermen on the east coast come here; why should not they go there as well? The east coast fishermen go to Lowestoft, and they fish from the beginning of January to the 31st of December.

39,069. But in the meantime the fishing is prosecuted in this way that they have a great deal of spare time?—Well, that is a very bad way of prosecuting the fishing.

39,070. But are not they good fishermen?—Excellent.

39,071. Then they ought to know pretty well themselves how it should be conducted?—I think they have something to learn yet in regard to that.

39,072. And you know that the east coast may be different in some respects from the west coast?—Well, not in that respect.

39,073. But in some respects?—I don't see in what way it would affect the success of the fishermen.

39,074. Is there not a more continuous fishery on the east coast than on the west?—I don't think so; the east coast men come round here when they cannot fish profitably at home.

39,075. But, generally speaking, is it not more continuous on the east coast?—Just because it is not prosecuted here. The crofts take the people away when they might be at the fishing.

39,076. But there are a great number of cottars. In this ideal position that you wish them to be, a landless people, how don't they make a good living at the fishing?—I don't wish them to be a landless people at all.

39,077. How do not they make a good living at it? That cannot account for the failure of the fishing on their part. You say that the crofts will account for the failure of the fishing here, but there is a great number who have no crofts: how do you account for the fishing in that case not proving a success?—Well, I have given a very great deal of attention to the fishing industry: I felt an interest, naturally, in the fishing carried on here, and—

39,078. Don't you see that the reason you give is not adequate,—that the crofts take them away from the fishing?—The crofts do take them away.

39,079. But that is not an adequate reason for the failure of the fishing, seeing there is a great number who have no land, who would be quite willing to prosecute the fishing if it could be done to profit?—I am not prepared to say why the crofters do not prosecute the fishing all the year round.

39,080. You say the crofts take them away?—There is doubt of it. I attribute the failure of the fishing largely to the attention of the fishermen being diverted from the main industry.

39,081. But you forget the great number of cottars: they, at all events, should be able to make it a profitable fishing?—Well, I would not like to say what is the reason in the case of the cottars.

39,082. Evidently, it is not an adequate reason. Don't you see this, that the people of Barra here say that if you give them a croft they will prosecute the fishing more successfully than without the croft?—Yes, but I don't think they would. They say so, but I am quite satisfied they would not.

39,083. Can you say that the cottars are more successful fishermen than the crofters?—I could not say.

39,084. They all say, and you have admitted their bonâ fides over and over again,—they say every one of them that a croft would be a help to them, and that they would he independent men, many of them, if they had a croft as a stay?—Well, I am perfectly satisfied that except for the convenience of having potatoes and milk which they cannot get conveniently without a small allotment,—having more land would be a great drag upon them.

39,085. Don't you think milk is to them a very great convenience,—not a small matter in any sense?—I am not saying it is a small matter.

39,086. You make a small matter of it by calling it an exception, but I do not think it is a small matter. We have heard the people here speak of the poverty in which they are, and the want of butter and of milk; surely that is a serious matter, is it not?—Well, I believe, and I am very glad to think so, that the standard of living is higher and better now than it ever was.

39,087. Without butter and without milk?—They said they got Dutch butter.

39,088. But I think some of them said there was very little butter used, and no milk?—Well, I am sure I should be delighted if their circumstances could be improved.

39,089. Don't you think the living could be very much better if they had crofts?—No, I don't think so.

39,090. They would have potatoes and butter?—They would have the same with these allotments.

39,091. Then, of course, you agree with the crofters that there is a very great amount of land here in this island, at least equally good, if not better than the land which is occupied by the crofters?—Well, there is not very much to say about that: I should say that Borve—

39,092. You say that farmers pay 2s. an acre?—Yes.

39,093. That shows that the land must be pretty valuable?—The farmers pay 2s. and the crofters 1s. 11d. per acre.

39,094. There cannot, I daresay, be a better way of contrasting the value of the land?—I don't know that that is just a very sure criterion. I would like if you would take a look at Borve and Craigston to-morrow, and compare the land there with the land you see farther down, and take into account the extent to which it has been deteriorated by miscropping.

39,095. But there is no denying the grave state of matters that there is a large number of cottars,—landless cottars,—here, and a great stretch of country occupied by two tacks?—I don't exactly put it that way. There are two tacks in the parish of Barra: one of these is composed altogether of islands, and the other one largely composed of islands. The portion of the latter

Castlebay, Barra.

Ranald Macdonald.

tack (Eoligarry) which is on the main island of Barra would, according to the estimate made by the Napier Commission, afford crofts of decent size to 18 families.

39,096. What is the acreage?—277½ acres for each croft.

39,097. What is the whole acreage of the tack of Eoligarry,—is it 5000 acres?—That includes the islands.

39,098. It would take in a good number of crofts of the size they are in Barra?—Yes, but I don't suppose anybody would wish to perpetuate that state of matters.

39,099. It would accommodate a good many of them?—It would accommodate them badly.

39,100. Why, badly?—Because they are dissatisfied with the present state of things: the crofters cannot make a living.

39,101. How do you say that Eoligarry would accommodate them badly?—The small crofts would accommodate them badly.

39,102. But they have been saying that these crofts are a great benefit to them, and that if you remove the cottars and go on and remove a few of themselves and enlarge their holdings to a small extent, they would be very well off indeed. But they do not deny the benefit they get from them just now, small as the crofts are?—In present circumstances there is nobody would think of removing them, but that is not the question. The question is to what extent these crofts can be profitably occupied.

39,103. But they have been telling us about the advantages they derive from these crofts; and you get a rent from them?—But that is not the question at all.

39,104. That is the question I am speaking of?—But that is not the remit to the Commission.

39,105. Oh, but excuse me: I have been pointing out to you that they have been deriving a great deal of benefit from them, and that the estate has been getting a benefit from them: the estate has been getting a rent from these crofts, and the people have been deriving a benefit from them, and they say their circumstances have been very much improved by having them?—Well, I have to say that instead of depriving them of anything, we are most anxious to assist them in every way in our power. Upwards of 4000 acres have been given to crofters from what was formerly large grazings, during the last thirteen years.

39,106. I see that you made important experiments, with the desire no doubt of benefiting the crofters?—With a sincere desire to benefit the crofters.

39,107. I have not the slightest doubt of it, and I am very sorry to learn that, in your opinion, the results are disappointing?—Very disappointing.

39,108. But after all these people who came from Garrygal expressed themselves as having been considerably benefited?—I am not so much disappointed although Garrygal was not a success as I am with the large crofts. I did not express disappointment so much with the fact that they had fallen into arrear of rent, and that they did not carry out their promises especially about Ben-Tangaval, because I hope in time that will come all right: but I expressed very great disappointment that those large crofts which were tried as an experiment have been such a great failure.

39,109. But don't you think you had a good deal of reason to be pleased with the result of the Garrygal experiment and not disappointed at all?—I did not express any disappointment about that.

39,110. I thought you said similar remarks applied to Garrygal?—But if you read about Bentangaval, and how they fell into arrears of rent, and did not keep their bargain about taking over the sheep, and paid only a small fraction of their rent for a number of years, there is some room for disappointment. But I do hope that these lands round Castlebay will in course of time turn out better than they have done at first, and consequently I did not express the same disappointment about them as about Allasdale.

39,111. We had not the crofter view about that. We have heard your point of view, and we have no doubt these facts as you state them are perfectly correct, but still I just simply note that we have not the tenants' version of the matter. But may I ask whether they themselves applied for Allasdale,—was it a proposal of the crofters themselves to take that farm?—Of course, they were always wanting more land, as you have heard, and stated they would move to wherever they could get more land and large crofts. The proposal was made on my own suggestion that this grazing which was a most valuable place at the time, and would have let very readily at the full rent that they offered to give for it, should be divided into two parts, and that the one half should be made into three crofts and the other into four, and that it should be offered to some of those who were believed to be the most suitable, having capital and skill to make the most of these crofts. There were several applications for the crofts, and the men were in some cases selected.

Castlebay, Barra.

Ranald Macdonald.

39,112. But the proposal with regard to that particular farm did not originate, did it, with the crofters themselves?—Not originally, but whenever they heard that the farm was to be divided into crofts, as you may readily imagine there were numbers of applications for the crofts.

39,113. Then, this is very much a proposal of your own which they afterwards adopted. But was there not an application originated by themselves for taking Vatersay, which you refused?—Yes.

39,114. So that you see it is rather important to follow the views of the people themselves, and might it not be possible that if you had experimented according to the desires of the people themselves your experiment might have been more successful?—I don't think so: I certainly don't think so. None of those who applied for Vatersay were capable of taking these large crofts. They were a different class of tenants altogether.

39,115. I saw that several reasons were given for the refusal. It was stated in that letter that was sent to them that the place had never been occupied by crofters?—Yes.

39,116. Are you persuaded in your own mind that that is correct?—From the best information I could get, that is correct.

39,117. But still, we had information to-day to the effect that it was so occupied?—You had information to the effect that Miss Macneill was there, and that there were a certain number of dependents.

39,118. The witness said they were tenants there?—But they were not in the rental.

39,119. That matters very little: the people know about these things, not from rent rolls but from even better evidence than that?—Well, I don't know that it is better evidence, for with every intention to speak what is strictly true, it is not such strictly reliable evidence as a rent roll.

39,120. But the rent rolls do not show sub-tenants?—No.

39,121. And these are in reality very creditable to the Highlands, such tenants as those who paid rent to the landlord, and there is no doubt at all that there was a very large population?—There was a class of people here as you know who were called sgallags.

39,122. And another of the reasons put forward for refusing this application was put forward by themselves, the want of water. Now, don't you think that perhaps too much stress was laid on that?—I know we got the very best information at the time.

39,123. But you see a large population lived there before, and they must have lived somehow or other?—Oh, they get water a certain portion of the year. There is a certain population living there,—33 I think at present,—equal to the number on six average crofts.

39,124. The only place then that you consider a complete failure is this, Allasdale?—That is the greatest failure.

39,125. Are these crofts that were meant to be self-sustaining, where the people were not to fish at all?—Yes.

39,126. Well, you see, the witnesses before us to-day did not approve of such being formed in Barra: their idea was that they should all be crofts that would be merely an adjunct to the fishing?—Yes: well, I suppose these are the most suitable crofts,—something like these allotments here.

39,127. Then with regard to that failure, I am sorry I do not know the particulars of it from the people's point of view, but you, yourself, admit that the idea of going there did not originate with them, and that the holdings are not formed on the principle which the people here generally approve?—With all due respect, I don't think that is putting it quite fairly, because they were most anxious to go there. I am very sorry that I made the suggestion, now that it has turned out so very different from what I expected.

39,128. I have no doubt it was meant with the very best intentions; but you see the failure may be accounted for very well upon the principles which are held by the people, that self-sustaining holdings are not practicable here, and that fishing crofts are what are really wanted?—Of course, it shows this, that excepting for potato ground and for milk to their families, it is really not profitable to cultivate land in Barra. These little places near fishing ports are very useful and very necessary, and we wish to encourage them; but we are quite convinced that considering the soil and the climate of Barra, large crofts are not profitable.

39,129. I think there is a general consensus of opinion in regard to that,—in fact the people wish it to be divided into smallish crofts,—not self-sustaining, but what would in other places be considered small. Now it would be desirable to know a little more about these stances that have been offered at Castlebay at 10s. 6d. Have these been taken up to any considerable extent?—We offered them by means of printed notices which we circulated, and we did not get a single application from the fishermen. They seemed determined that any house they built should be built here and there in isolated places upon crofts. Some of them who built houses in Garrygal could have built them alongside the road, and they obstinately refused to do so.

39,130. You heard these witnesses saying to-day that they asked for stances,—that they would be willing to take such stances if they could get them, and that they had been refused?—They have been refused only in a certain kind of way, because I repeat that we are quite desirous of encouraging the building of houses for fishermen who are able to put up a decent house,—not an expensive house. We would like it to have stone and lime walls about seven or eight feet high, and a slated roof, and they can fit up the inside as plainly as they like; the house to cost about £60 or £70. We don't want ugly wooden erections alongside the road.

39,131. How can you account for these sites being refused?—I cannot account for the sites being refused, except that since the passing of the Crofters Act, Lady Cathcart has, to a large extent, lost the control of the ground set apart for these cottages.

39,132. But still, this offer was made, and we have men coming forward and saying that they had been asking for stances and could not get them; that they were asked to submit a letter showing the sort of house that was to be built; that they did so, and after all were not able to get the stance?—Of course, you have got letters from a man who took up a defiant position,—a man who said that irrespective of the Crofters Act or of the law of the land he would do so and so.

39,133. Did he say so when he made his application?—He stated that here to-day.

39,134. But you cannot account for the refusal then by anything that was said to-day?—No, I can only repeat that Lady Cathcart has always been anxious to encourage the concentration of the fishing industry at Castlebay, for reasons which I give fully in my statement; and that if any refusal is made, it is because these people want to get sites upon ground over which Lady Cathcart has no control at present.

39,135. Still, they have said they would take it anywhere about here?—They may have said that here, but I don't think they communicated that to Lady Cathcart. They want to get croft houses built on land near their fathers' places.

39,136. It is rather curious that there should have been so many cases showing so distinct a refusal?—It is not at all strange to those who know how difficult it is to stop sub-letting and the building of two or three houses on one croft. Castlebay, Barra. Ranald Macdonald.

39,137. This is not sub-letting you see?—Well, it is a decided step in that direction; because the first step in the way of sub-letting is to put two dwelling-houses on a small croft.

39,138. But they wanted a site anywhere, they told us, and that was refused; is that the state of matters?—I told him that he could apply for a vacant allotment at Ben-Tangaval; he seemed to know that that was vacant but he would not do it.

39,139. But still he got no promise that he would get the allotment?—I stated then, and I repeat now, that any fisherman who gets a proper certificate and who is able to put up not an expensive house but a decent house, costing £50 to £60, will get a stance for 10s. 6d., if Lady Cathcart has any available ground near Castlebay.

39,140. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—I should like to ask a question or two with regard to these experiments. I shall take the experiment which, according to your evidence, was most disappointing, that of Allasdale. Now, I should like to know from you, how was Allasdale occupied at the time of the potato failure?—I am not sure if I can tell you that. There were twenty-one tenants there in 1845, and the rent was £80, 1s. 8d.

39,141. I suppose that rent included a kelp rent?—I don't know.

39,142. I should like to ask two preliminary questions with the view of ascertaining what the £80, 1s. 8d. was really for,—I may mention that in 1840 the rent of Allasdale was £140, 9s., so I think it very likely that that sum would be what the people call a kelp rent, but that it was reduced to £80, 1s. 8d?—I should rather imagine that to have been the case.

39,143. That was by Colonel Gordon?—Yes.

39,144. Now, could we ascertain what the rent was in the year 1820, when we will have the rent before the production of kelp?—I am sorry I cannot tell you that. As I said in my statement, we did not get the old papers from General Macneill's Trustees, except that rental of 1836-37, to which reference has been made.

39,145. I have been told in the island that the rent was £60 before the introduction of the kelp manufacture?—It is possible.

39,146. Now assuming that £60 was the rent of Allasdale, say in the very beginning of the century, then the larger portion of the £140 which I think you said was charged immediately before Colonel Gordon bought the property would be purely a kelp rent?—Possibly: I have no proof or evidence either way.

39,147. But you who know the history of the country perfectly well,—you are familiar with it, I have no doubt,—can perfectly believe and understand that?—I have nothing to say, either for or against it.

39,148. So that it is quite possible that when Colonel Gordon reduced the rent to £80, still that rent included part of the old kelp rent?—Whether it did or not I am not able to say.

39,149. But it is possible?—It is possible.

39,150. Now in 1883, Lady Cathcart let this place to seven tenants?—Yes.

39,151. Am I right in saying that three were to pay £18 each and four £14 each?—That is so.

39,152. Making a total rent of £110?—Yes.

39,153. For land that possibly in the beginning of the century was rented at £60 before the kelp rent was put on?—Possibly, but I suppose you are aware that the rents in the beginning of the century and the rents in 1883 were very different.

39,154. They were fairer in the beginning of the century?—The increase of rents all over Scotland and England has been very great in a much less period of time than from 1820 to 1883.

39,155. But I suppose you will agree with this, that the land in Barra is very different, say from land in the Lothians or in the east country: there is very much less in the way of permitting improvements executed by the tenants on the soil or possible to be done on soil here, and yonder?—There are no permanent improvements here at all; it is now quite in the opposite direction.

Castlebay, Barra.

Ranald Macdonald.

39,156. So that by your own showing, by natural law, rents should be falling in the west while at the same time they might be going up in the east because of permitting improvements?—No, I don't think that would necessarily follow. There would be some rent created on the mainland by improvements such as buildings and drainage and dyking and so on, which naturally would not apply here.

39,157. These tenants then were started with a rent of £110?—Yes.

39,158. Now you admitted very shortly thereafter that that was a rack rent?—At the time when they got Allasdale, there was a bonâ fide intention to place them in comfortable circumstances, and the rent that was fixed at that time was not considered a high rent. In fact I had reason to believe that if the place had been put in the market, several good tenants could have been got to give £110 for Allasdale when the crofters went there.

39,159. Is it possible for us to ascertain from you what the separate rent of Allasdale was immediately before they took it?—Certainly; it was £70.

39,160. And they were charged £110?—Yes.

39,161. Did you consider that a perfectly fair start, entering upon a new era of estate management, introducing a new policy, the policy of creating new holdings? Did you not consider at that time that it was an essential element of success at the start that the rent should be a moderate rent?—Well, I believe it was a perfectly fair and moderate rent.

39,162. An increase of £40 over what the previous tenant paid?—Yes, even with an increase of £40.

39,163. I suppose you will agree that if the fishing industry in Barra had been a success that year and in the following years,—you all expected I have no doubt that it would be a much greater success than it has turned out,—is it not quite possible that if there had been an average amount of success at the fishing, these tenants would have paid even this big rent, and would be found to-day in comfortable circumstances?—I don't know that the fishing affected them at all, because they were away from the port altogether. These big crofts were given to them in order that they would have full work from the crofts, and would not have to depend upon any outside labour, and I don't think the fishing would affect them much.

39,164. But they have sons, and they have daughters?—Oh, I don't think they would fish much.

39,165. If the fishing had been a success, would not their sons and daughters have made a considerable amount of money at the fishing in Barra here?—I did not expect their sons and daughters would come to the fishing at all. I expected the entire family to find employment on the ground.

39,166. On £70 worth of land, among seven tenants?—Yes; there are 1080 acres of land.

39,167. But 90 per cent. of that land is not arable land. Did you expect that seven heads of families, and the sons and daughters could find employment all the year round on 7 acres of arable land?—I did expect they would find employment for an average family. I find, as a rule, five to a family,—the man and wife and three of a family—and what with their cattle, sheep, and horses, I fully expected there would be employment for them on a croft of that size.

39,168. For five able-bodied people all the year round?—Well, they would not perhaps be all able-bodied.

39,169. On 7 acres?—On the 1080 acres.*

39,170. There is no employment on the greater part of that?—Oh, yes, looking after the cattle.

39,171. Did you expect that five individuals out of each family would be employed on 7 acres of arable land and in looking after the pasture, all the year round?—Yes: I did not expect that any of them would go to the fishing.

39,172. And that the daughters would remain at home?—Yes, the dairy produce, and the poultry, and pigs would keep them employed at home.

39,173. What stock of milk cows did you expect one of these families to have?—The tenant who was there before them (Mr Macdonald) used to sell 50 head of cattle.

39,174. I am asking how many milk cows did you expect one of these families to have?—I expected six or seven. I mean that the larger crofts would have seven or eight cows, and the others about six. Crofters generally sell their cattle when one year old.

39,175. How much dairy produce in the shape of butter and cheese did you expect a family to export off 7 acres of arable land in Barra?—I know they don't do so much of that in Barra as in other places, but I think in these large crofts they should have a fair return from dairy produce.

39,176. We have got so much information in regard to stock. My next question is with regard to the reduction of the rent. You instituted legal proceedings against them?—We did.

39,177. Because they fell into arrear?—Yes.

39,178. In very bad years, starting on new land; and in which Court were the proceedings instituted?—We allowed them the first year there rent free.

39,179. But in which Court were the proceedings instituted?—In the Court of Session.

39,180. Why in the Court of Session?—Well, I cannot answer that question.

39,181. Did these men go to Edinburgh in answer to a citation from the Court of Session?—I don't know.

39,182. Would you be surprised to know that every one of them who was cited went to Edinburgh at his own expense?—I did not know that.

39,183. How many years had they been in this new place before proceedings were instituted against them in the Court of Session?—They were five years there.

39,184. Did the same seven families not complain that their rent was far too high?—They did, when they went to Edinburgh.

39,185. When they found that it was an impossible rent?—Yes.

39,186. So that the moral of the matter is that people who are landless, if they don't get what they would choose themselves, will be very likely to take anything that is offered to them in the shape of land at any price?—I don't quite see that that is of universal application.

39,187. They were not allowed to have their rents fixed as fair rents before the Crofters Commission?—They were perfectly satisfied with their rents when they went there.

39,188. They lodged applications with the Crofters Commission, and the landlady lodged a minute of objection, and totally opposed a 'fair rent' being fixed?—She did.

39,189. Now in regard to Ben-Tangaval.—Before you leave Allasdale, I may mention that when I was there two days ago I made a special inquiry as to the number of cattle they were able to sell off their places, and I ascertained that it is only about one-half of what the former tenant was able to sell. He told me that he used to sell forty two-year-olds at the Portree market, and ten to fifteen according to the season at the Barra market with about 100 sheep; and I found that the crofters—some of them—did not sell a beast at all last year and the year before that, about three. I think three would be about the average that six of them sold off their places.

39,190. But it is admitted, of course, that the experiment was a failure?—It was a failure.

39,191. What is the name of the tenant who had Allasdale immediately before these crofters took it?—Mr Donald Macdonald.

39,192. Had he other lands at that time?—He had no other lands.

* Mr Macdonald has since explained that, according to the plan of Allasdale, the extent is as follows:—

Arable and green pasture,	450
Hill ground,	630
Total area,	1080

39,193. This Allasdale was all the land he had?—All the land he had. I am very glad to say that he was able to go and take a farm that was three or four times the size of Allasdale.

39,194. But it is admitted, of course, that these people are very far down just now?—So that is a proof that he was not highly rented.

39,195. It is admitted that they are very low now?—Yes, I am very sorry to say so.

39,196. That accounts for their not having sold stock last year. Now, we will go to Ben-Tangaval. Is there any possibility of ascertaining what was the rent of Ben-Tangaval, or was it let as a separate holding?—It was not let as a separate holding: it was let as part of the grazing of Vatersay.

39,197. So that it is impossible to tell what any previous tenant paid for it?—I could not tell you what any previous tenant paid, but I may tell you that we got an offer of £131, 5s. from a man who would make a very good tenant, before it was given as allotments to the fishermen.

39,198. And what did you take from these crofters?—£135.

39,199. They applied to the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

39,200. And the Crofters Commission reduced your fair rent of £135 to a fair rent of £74?—I believe they did. If we had let it to this tenant we would have been getting £131 for it.

39,201. Yes, but you would have had 45 pauper families in Barra?—Oh, I am not by any means sure about that. It certainly has been a disappointment at first, and there were some very disappointing features about it, but it may lead to the development of the fishing industry at Castlebay, and I don't express the same disappointment with it as I do in the case of Allasdale.

39,202. But in putting new tenants into new places, you admit it is an essential element of success that all the conditions at the start should be absolutely fair?—Yes, I do; that is quite a fair observation.

39,203. And is it not your opinion also that the landlord on the one side is too much interested in the matter to be accepted as a fair judge of what is fair, as the crofters are on the other side?—Perhaps, it may be so.

39,204. Would it not be a wise thing in making such experiments to refer questions of boundary, questions of rent, and questions of the number of tenants and suitableness of ground to an independent body of men?—I do not think so.

39,205. You think the factor after all is the wisest?—I think the factor who is intimate with all the conditions and who has no interest in doing anything but what is fair, ought to be a judge of that sort of thing.

39,206. Do you then consider, on principle, that a man is a fair judge in his own case?—It is not his own case.

39,207. Is he not the landlord?—No, he is not the landlord.

39,208. He is the landlord's agent?—He, no doubt, acts in that capacity, but one of the first considerations is that the tenants should be put into a position where they can live, because if the tenants go to poverty the proprietor must suffer.

39,209. Now, there is another matter. You heard a witness here,—I think it was Malcolm Johnston,—state that he applied for a house stance pure and simple, finding, I presume, that at that time he had the means to put up a slated house; and that he repeated his application year after year. You had lands in Castlebay at that time and in the interval that were on your own hands absolutely, that you had to let,—lands that were not crofters' land?—I am not prepared to admit that. In the first place I know nothing about his application.

39,210. Did you not state yourself here repeatedly to-day, that stances were hereabout available for any fisherman who could take up such a stance and build a decent house?—I stated that we were most anxious to encourage the fishermen to apply for these stances.

39,211. Did you not state that the land was there for house stances?—I marked off the ground for them there.

39,212. That is not crofter land?—I think it is crofter land now.

39,213. Was it crofter land six years ago?—It was.

39,214. And when did you mark it out for stances?—In 1883.

39,215. You know the Crofters Act?—I think I should.

39,216. Thoroughly. You know that there is a special clause in the Crofters Act which says that the landlord has the power to resume possession of portions, or for that matter of it of the whole of crofter lands for building purposes or for any other public purposes?—Well, we should be very glad if fishermen of good character come forward to use every means in our power to give them stances so as to concentrate the fishing at Castlebay.

39,217. You have nothing against the character of the men who came here to-day?—Well, I confess I don't like the exhibition one of them made when he said he would set the Crofters Act at defiance.

39,218. But during the years he was applying for a stance, there was nothing against his character?—I am not saying anything against his character. I only wish to say that if any bonâ fide fishermen who are well recommended and are able to put up decent houses come to us we will use every effort to provide them with sites at 10s. 6d. each.

39,219. Where must they apply for a recommendation?—To any clergyman or justice of peace, or, indeed, any well known person.

39,220. Are we to understand then, that if any man who is a fisherman produces a recommendation from a minister of the Gospel, you are prepared to give him a house stance in Castlebay?—Yes, I shall be glad to give it so far as we have the power.

39,221. But you know that you have the power under the Crofters Act?—There is not the slightest difference in our attitude now from what it was formerly, or in our desire to give every facility for the concentration of the fishing at Castlebay.

39,222. But you admit that a fisherman who is not allowed a stance for a house, has not a fair opportunity of prosecuting the fishing in Barra?—Yes, I do.

39,223. How then can you explain the fact that respectable men have repeatedly applied,—one of them said he applied to the factor nine times running for a house stance, and that he was prepared to put up a slated house upon it,—and still they are without it?—I know nothing of the application: I need not repeat again and again what I have stated as to our desire.

39,224. But if you find that there is no land for building purposes here in Barra, you are aware that you have the power by a simple application to the Crofters Commission to resume possession of crofter land for that laudable purpose?—If we got applications from a certain number of fishermen who are in a position to put up decent houses along the road I am prepared to say that their applications will be favourably entertained.

39,225. You are aware that the cottars lodged an application with the landlady two years ago for land?—Yes, I am.

39,226. How many names were to that application?—There were a good many names: I did not count them.

39,227. Would there be between forty and fifty?—I don't doubt it.

39,228. Was that application by between forty and fifty cottars,—that petition I should have called it,—fully considered?—Yes.

39,229. Have you got a copy of the petition?—I believe I have.

39,230. Would you be kind enough to read it?—

'To Lady Gordon Cathcart of Barra, &c., &c.

'method may be devised for removing that difficulty. 'Before the passing of the Crofters Act many of our 'neighbours had been in the habit of giving us the privi- 'lege of the use of a small patch of potato land and a 'little grazing for our small stock, by which with what 'little work we could get and the gathering of shell-fish 'we were enabled to eke out a livelihood; but since the 'Crofters Commissioners have held their sittings in 'Barra under that Act, we are informed the crofters 'cannot be allowed to give us any potato land or graz- 'ing without incurring forfeiture of their own tenancy, 'and we are thus placed in the position of starvation 'facing us in the future. Such is our position, and we 'humbly petition your ladyship to give our petition 'your favourable consideration. And your petitioners 'will ever pray, &c.

39,231. So that it is possible that the education of cottars may be neglected in Barra, without removing them to Vatersay at all?—It is not so likely to be neglected now.

'5 Albyn Place, Edinburgh.

'To Mr Donald M'Intyre and the other subscribers of 'a petition to Lady Gordon Cathcart.

'Gentlemen,—We are directed by Lady Cathcart to 'acknowledge receipt of a petition addressed to her lady- 'ship signed by forty-seven heads of families in Barra, 'describing themselves as cottars, residing on the estate 'of Barra. The petition states that before the passing 'of the Crofters Act, the crofters had been in the habit 'of giving the subscribers of the petition ground for 'planting potatoes and grazing for their stock, but that 'since the Crofters Commission held their sittings in 'Barra the petitioners have been informed that the 'crofters cannot be allowed to give them any potato 'land or grazing without incurring forfeiture of their 'own tenancy. The petitioners invite Lady Cathcart's 'consideration of these circumstances.

'Since Lady Cathcart succeeded to the estates of 'Benbecula, South Uist, and Barra in 1878, she has 'given much consideration to the circumstances of the 'crofters and cottars, and has from time to time ex- 'plained to them the views by which she has been 'influenced in the management of her estates. The 'estate regulations, which were carefully framed, con- 'tain distinct provisions against sub-letting, and these 'regulations have been in force on the estates for a long 'period. The prohibition of sub-letting was intended 'to benefit the people as well as the estate, for it is 'obvious that the crofters, who in many cases com- 'plained of the smallness of their holdings, could not 'without injury to themselves sub-let any part either of 'their arable land or their grazings. Notwithstanding 'these wise and salutary regulations, many of the 'crofters allowed grown up members of their families to 'settle on the crofts instead of seeking to form indepen- 'dent homes, and earn a livelihood for themselves, and 'in many cases it seems that in defiance of the estate 'regulations, cottars have been allowed to build 'houses, to crop patches, and to put stock on the town- 'ship lands. The evil is one which is of modern 'growth, but has, in recent years, attained such propor- 'tions that the crofters have repeatedly complained of 'the encroachment of the cottars, who while paying no 'rent have, it is said, in some cases, placed upon the 'crofters' grazings a larger stock than that belonging 'to some of the crofters themselves. It is one of 'the evils inseparable from the crofting system, that 'lands in the common occupancy of a number of tenants 'are not so efficiently managed or so carefully protected 'as lands in individual occupancy, and that encroach- 'ments are permitted which would not be tolerated by 'an individual tenant. There is no doubt that the cir- 'cumstances presented a great temptation to a crofter 'having relations or dependants whom he wished to 'befriend, as in the individual case the injury was 'viewed as comparatively trifling, but by the multipli- 'cation of such cases the interests of all concerned 'have suffered serious detriments. When the Crofters 'Act was under the consideration of Parliament, the 'necessity for preventing sub-division and sub-letting 'was admitted on all hands, and the Act contains very 'stringent clauses which declare that a crofter who sub- 'divides his holding, or sub-lets the same or any part 'thereof, or permits the erection of cottars' houses 'thereon, is to forfeit his holding. What the peti- 'tioners now ask is, that Lady Cathcart should consent 'to this statutory enactment being violated, and the 'ruinous practice we have referred to perpetuated. In 'reply, we are directed to state that Lady Cathcart, 'however much she may regret the unfortunate circum- 'stances of the cottars, cannot sanction any infringe- 'ment of the provisions of the Crofters Act on this 'subject.

'The practice of giving land and grazings to the 'cottars must, in the circumstances we have explained, 'be discontinued, but we venture to think that this 'will not involve the hardship to the cottars which the 'petitioners appear to apprehend. The great majority 'of the cottars in Barra are fishermen, who depend on 'the prosecution of that calling for their livelihood, 'and Lady Cathcart is gratified to learn that many of 'them are the owners or part owners of the large- 'decked fishing boats which are now coming into use 'in the prosecution of the fishing on the west coast. 'With these boats the fishermen are able to prosecute 'their calling practically all the year round. The cod 'and ling fishing can be prosecuted when weather 'permits during the winter months and onward to the 'month of May. After that there is the west coast 'herring fishing season beginning in June, and when 'that is over, the fishermen find employment at the 'east coast fishing. A good many of the fishermen 'have recently been employed during the autumn 'months at the fishing at Canna and elsewhere in the 'Minch.

'What the petitioners appear to desire is that they 'should be allowed to continue the practice of dividing 'their energies between the sea and the land. There 'is a general concurrence of opinion among those who 'have studied the question, that it is not possible 'to combine the occupations of crofter and fisherman 'successfully. On the east coast of Scotland the 'fishermen are simply fishermen and nothing else, 'having voluntarily given up the fisher lands they 'used formerly to occupy, in order to concentrate their 'energies on the prosecution of the fishing, and 'authorities appear to agree in thinking that if the 'fishermen of the west coast would follow their 'example, they would share in the prosperity which the 'fishermen of the east coast enjoy. The Western 'Highlands and Islands Commission after minute 'local inquiry reported:—"If a race of professional "'fishermen could be established on the west coast "'pursuing their calling with the same assiduity, and "'in the same fashion as those on the east coast, we "'see no reason why the same measure of success "'should not attend the former as has already been "'achieved by the latter. We fear, however, that such "'a race of professional fishermen, devoting their "'whole time and their whole abilities to the sea, can "'never be found so long as the west coast fisherman "'is partly dependent on his croft, and we have "'consequently formed a decided opinion that the "'combination of crofting with fishing is inexpedient."

'Lady Cathcart has always held somewhat strongly 'the views thus expressed by the Western Highlands 'and Islands Commission. As, however, many of the 'fishing population of Barra did not share these views, 'and from time to time petitioned for land, Lady 'Cathcart, some eight years ago, as most of the 'petitioners are aware, resumed the grazings of 'Bentangaval and Garrygal near the harbour of 'Castlebay, which had up to that time been in the 'possession of tacksmen, and let these grazings to a 'number of cottar fishermen as club farms. The 'experiment has been an entire failure. The tenants 'have not put a sufficient stock on the lands; they 'have mismanaged both lands and stock; they have 'disregarded practically every stipulation in the agree-'ment under which they obtained possession, and 'they have paid scarcely any rent since they entered.

'From the considerations we have mentioned, it 'would appear to be the true interest of those of the 'petitioners who are fishermen, to devote all their 'energies to the prosecution of the fishing.

''The observations we have made do not apply in 'the same degree to those of the petitioners who 'are not fishermen but labourers depending on casual 'employment for a livelihood, which appears to have 'been in some cases supplemented by obtaining either 'gratuitously or for a consideration, permission to crop 'and pasture lands in the occupation of the crofters. 'Lady Cathcart regrets that to those in this position 'she cannot hold out any prospect of an improvement 'in their circumstances. There is not in the island 'of Barra much demand for casual labour of a kind 'which they are able to supply, and their prospects 'of obtaining constant and remunerative employment 'are of the most discouraging kind. At present a 'comparatively small proportion of their time is 'occupied with profitable labour, the greater part of 'it being, no doubt, unavoidably spent in idleness 'and in the misery which is inseparable from that state 'of things. Lady Cathcart has at various times and 'in various ways endeavoured to improve the position 'of the cottar labourers, but her efforts have not 'resulted in an enduring benefit to them. It was 'with the view of providing employment in the 'locality that Lady Campbell undertook considerable 'financial responsibility in connection with the estab-'lishment of the Normal Company which unfortunately 'resulted in failure, and her experience of this and 'other enterprises has led her to the conclusion that 'the circumstances do not encourage the expenditure 'of capital in establishing local industries in Barra. 'It would, therefore, appear that the true interest of 'the cottar labourers in Barra is to follow the example 'of their fellows in other parts of the country, and 'take their labour to the market where from time to 'time it may be most in demand, so as to secure 'constant employment at the highest rate of remuner-'ation. 'We remain, your obedient servants,

'(Signed) SKENE, EDWARDS and GARSON.'

39,235. That is the reply?—Yes.

39,236. Now, there is one statement in this reply, concerning which I should like to ask you a question. 'What the petitioners now ask is that Lady Cathcart 'should consent to the statutory enactment being 'violated, and the ruinous practice we have referred to 'perpetuated.' Now, is that really what the petitioners ask?—Well, that is the construction which the Edinburgh agents put on the petition.

39,237. Can you, yourself, find in the petition of the people anything to warrant this statement, that what the petitioners ask is that Lady Cathcart should consent to the statutory enactment against sub-division being violated, and the ruinous practice we have referred to perpetuated?—I think practically it amounts to that.

39,238. Would you read anything in the petition to warrant such a statement?—I do not see how the petitioners could get land without practically infringing the Crofters Act.

39,239. But could not the estate say that there was no land to give them, without saying that they were wanting a thing they never wanted? Would you be good enough to read the portion of the petition which bears out your inference?—They seem to want in that petition that the crofters should be allowed to give them potato land,—that is the construction the agents put upon the petition; and they said, we cannot take upon ourselves to allow the crofters to give them potato land, because it would be an infringement of an Act of Parliament. That is my explanation.

39,240. But you will admit that the crofters in that petition did not ask anything of the kind?—Practically, it amounts to that: it was to get potato land from the crofters. They wrote to Lady Cathcart, to see what she could do, and the answer was, that Lady Cathcart could not consent to that, because an Act of Parliament prevented it.

39,241. But you will admit that the petitioners did not, in the petition, ask to get potato land from the crofters?—That is the construction put upon the petition.

39,242. But what is your own construction? You are a witness here. Or do you leave it to them?—Yes, and I say this. They wrote to Lady Cathcart; they said the crofters cannot give us potato land the same as they used to do, and we are in straits, and the answer was that she could not ask the crofters to do what was against the Crofters Act. That is just putting the matter into simple language.

39,243. You admitted to-day that you heard evidence regarding Ben-Tangaval and Garrygal, and that practically the experiments there were a success?—Well, I would not exactly go so far as that: it was a very disappointing failure at the commencement, but it looks a little better now. Speaking about Ben-Tangaval and Garrygal, as it has a very important bearing upon this petition, I wish to point out again that Lady Cathcart, in 1883, gave an opportunity, and invited the crofter fishermen of Castlebay and Barra to apply for the 85 allotments. They did not do so, and the land had to be given to other people; and when a few years after that they apply, and other people have the land, it is very difficult to take it from them, especially when there is a Crofters Act which prevents sub-division. Lady Cathcart could not have given a stronger proof that she was anxious to accommodate the cottar fishermen of Castlebay and Glen, than to take these two grazings of Ben-Tangaval and Garrygal and offer them.

39,244. Admitted,—handsomely admitted.—And offer them to 85, and I don't suppose (I am speaking, of course, roughly) that the one half of those who actually applied were crofter-fishermen at all.

39,245. We will take then Ben-Tangaval, you will admit that now that the tenants are there, and that a judicial rent has been fixed, the experiment is satisfactory at the present moment?—I would scarcely go so far as to say that, but I hope it will turn out better.

Castlebay, Barra.

Ranald Macdonald.

39,246. What has been the result at the last rent collection?—At the last rent collection, how much was struck off? I make no complaint whatever about it, but it is certainly a very marked improvement upon the old state of things.

39,247. And you believe with the people themselves that this has been of very great benefit to them?—I have little doubt it was.

39,248. How can you account for this statement with regard to Ben-Tangaval,—'The experiment has been 'an entire failure'?—What is the date of that letter?

39,249. 1891.—That is before the Commissioners were here?—Well, if you consider the actual state of things at the time that letter was written you will not be surprised to see that statement made.

39,250. Quite so, but we are all delighted that the experiment, having now got a longer trial, is not an entire failure?—Well, it is not an entire failure.

39,251. I should like you to tell us what failure there is in the matter?—I don't wish to repeat what I put into my statement; but they failed to take the sheep; they failed to accept the offer that was made to them; they failed to pay the rent to a most lamentable extent up to the time when the Crofter Commissioners were here,—they paid hardly anything: there could not be a more disappointing failure than that up to that time. Then there were 78 per cent. of the arrears struck off.

39,252. By the Commission?—By the Commission, and since that time they have done better. But I do not at all attach so much importance to the payment of rent: I look more to the importance in putting these people here in a position to concentrate their energies upon the fishing at Castlebay.

39,253. Have you any reason to suppose that the fishing industry has suffered any detriment by Ben-Tangaval being given to these people for homes?—I did not say so.

39,254. So that really and truly, now that the people are there, and a 'fair rent' has been fixed by the Commission, the arrears that accumulated under a rack rent have been cancelled, and the case tested at the last rent collection day, you are prepared to admit that experiment is comparatively a success?—It is more hopeful, certainly.

39,255–56. And is there any reason to doubt that a development of that experiment would be beneficial to the island of Barra?—A development of that experiment is not so very easy, because you cannot now get land quite close to Castlebay, being all already let to crofters and fishermen, and it is obvious that fishermen cannot prosper if they are miles away from the harbour.

[Adjourned.]

FORTY-SIXTH SITTING.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

DALIBROG, SOUTH UIST, June 20, 1894.

Present:—

James Noel Muller Forsyth, Esq. (acting as Chairman).
George Gordon, Esq.
Rev. Malcolm Maccallum.
Henry Munro, Esq.
William Mackenzie, Esq., Secretary.

Neil Macphee.

Neil Macphee (40), Crofter, Kilpheder, [Cill-Pheadair] South Uist—examined.

39,257. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a crofter?—Yes, just now, but my name is not on the roll yet; I will be in next September. My father died.

39,258. At any rate your father had, until lately, a croft here?—Yes.

Dalibrog, Sonth Uist.

Neil Macpl

39,259. Have you got any written statement that you wish to read to us?—No.

39,260. But you wish to give evidence as to land in this district: is that so?—Yes, I will try my best.

39,261. What sized croft have you got, or what stock have you on it?—We have a full crop.

39,262. And what stock do you keep on a full crop in Kilpheder?—We have only three head of cattle and three horses just now.

39,263. Is that the ordinary stocking of a full croft?—It may be more than that.

39,264. Is it your wish to obtain a larger holding if it could be got?—Yes.

39,265. And do you represent the views of the people of Kilpheder?—Yes.

39,266. You were appointed as a delegate at a meeting held by the people, were you?—Yes.

39,267. Do the people of Kilpheder find that the crofts they have are not large enough to give them a living without assistance from work or otherwise?—Oh, they are always complaining.

39,268. You mean that they are complaining of the small size of the crofts?—Yes.

39,269. And is it their wish, if they could obtain it, to get larger holdings on which they could live by the croft alone?—Yes.

39,270. Do the people there do much or any fishing?—No.

39,271. There is no harbour near there at all, except Lochboisdale?—No. Some of them work at lobster fishing.

39,272. And do they assist themselves also with kelp-making?—Oh yes, they work at kelp along with that.

39,273. Mr Gordon.—Is your township very crowded?—Very much.

39,274. Are there many cottars in it besides the crofters? How many crofters are there in the township of Kilpheder?—Thirty-seven, but there are only twenty-three full crofts.

39,275. And so many of them are sub-divided?—Yes.

39,276. And how many cottars are there, do you know?—Three cottars.

39,277. Do these cottars have any stock at all?—Yes.

39,278. Do they pay any rent?—Not a penny.

39,279. Where do they keep their stock?—On the crofters' pasture.

39,280. How much stock would each of them have?—One has two cows and the other has a horse.

39,281. Do these cottars work at the kelp?—No.

39,282. What do they work at?—They are working at the railroad.

39,283. They don't live at home?—No.

39,284. But practically their stock live over the crofting township?—Yes.

39,285. What would be the average stock of the crofters in Kilpheder?—Some of them are overstocked.

39,286. You have no hill pasture, have you?—No, it was lost some time ago.

39,287. Who got the pasture that used to belong to the township?—The Lochboisdale crofters.

39,288. North and South Lochboisdale?—North Lochboisdale.

39,289. Was that Carrisaval where you had the pasture?—Yes.

39,290. Is there any land near you that could be got to make an addition to the township?—Yes, some of our pasture adjoined that Milton Farm.

39,291. But Milton is a long way from you. Does not the farm of Askernish come in between you and Milton?—No, the hills belong to Milton, but the west side belongs to Askernish.

39,292. Does your pasture cross the public road to the east?—No, we have only the peat stance.

39,293. You are bounded upon the north by the Dalibrog township?—At one time we were.

39,294. But now?—No, we lost the whole pasture.

39,295. But are you not bounded by the township of Dalibrog on the north?—Yes.

39,296. Well, you mentioned the farm of Milton, where you think land could be got?—Any amount there.

39,297. Is there any other place that you could get land on?—Yes, Kilbride Farm.

39,298. That is away down to the south?—Yes, and Glendale Farm. Donald Ferguson is the farmer at the south side.

39,299. You mean that for pasture?—Yes.

39,300. Is there any old arable land on Glendale?—Yes, near the Sound of Eriskay, and another on the east, Hartavagh Bay, and round the borders between Hartavagh and the south. There is land beside Lochboisdale.

39,301. How many crofts of a proper size could be got in your township, or, in other words, how many people would have to be removed from the township of Kilpheder before the crofts would be of a self-supporting size?—My idea is just a full croft to each crofter, and pasture along with it.

39,302. You think the township could accommodate 23 crofters if they had some hill ground?—Yes.

39,303. Would that make the crofts of a size sufficient to maintain a man and his family?—Oh yes, he may get some living off it.

39,304. Would he find employment on a croft of that size all the year round, or would he have to go to the mainland for work occasionally?—That is according to the price of cattle and the like of that; unless he has that, maybe the crop might fail, and he must turn to look elsewhere.

39,305. And could he employ part of his time at the kelp-making?—Well, but the kelp-making runs the same way: just according to the weather.

39,306. How much can a man, working a fair day's work, make at the kelp?—Maybe they might work some weeks and have nothing for it.

39,307. Why?—Because of the weather.

39,308. Too much wet?—Yes, it would spoil the whole, one wet day.

39,309. But suppose the weather is fairly favourable, what can a man make in the day or in the week, working from eight to ten hours a day?—Well, that question is not easy to answer.

39,310. I am not tying you down to a specific sum, but would he make say 15s. in a week?—No.

39,311. Would he make 12s.,—2s. a day?—No.

39,312. What do you get for the ton: is it 20s.?—They got 20s., I heard, last year.

39,313. Would you consider 20s. a fair price?—No, it would not make a penny a day to the people.

39,314. What would you call a fair price?—If they got £4 a ton for kelp, they may calculate it at about 2s. a day: I mean if the weather would be mixed, just like what we have. It is according to the weather altogether; the kelp trade is altogether dependent on the weather.

39,315. But you think that if the township was reduced to 23 crofters and no cottars, a living could be made by the crofters in it?—Oh yes, but they would require some hill pasture; it would be nothing without pasture.

39,316. And you think it could be got off the pasture of Milton?—Plenty.

39,317. Would that be within a reasonable distance of your crofting township?—Oh yes, but you see that new township Lochboisdale cuts us from Milton Farm; they come in between us. But in 1846, when my father was living, he had the whole pasture.

39,318. What the North Lochboisdale crofters now have?—Yes, the Kilpheder township pasture.

39,319. Now, assuming that land could be got for a part of the people, would the others be inclined to move to new crofts?—Oh, I believe they will.

39,320. Would you go yourself?—Yes, to-morrow, if I got the chance.

39,321. And a better place?—Yes.

39,322. Mr Maccallum.—How many families, did you say, are altogether in the township of Kilpheder?—Thirty-seven.

39,323. Do you remember a time when there were not so many?—Yes. In 1846 there were only 23 crofters in Kilpheder township.

39,324. Now, where did they come from, those who came there at that time?—They came from Loch Eynort, that is on Milton Farm; they came from South Frobost and North Frobost, also in Milton Farm.

39,325. They were placed there, I suppose, by the estate?—Yes, South Frobost is in the estate to-day.

39,326. Then is the increase of the population there at all owing to sons or relatives of the crofters settling down among you, or is it owing altogether to their having been removed altogether to Kilpheder from other parts by the estate?—A few of them came in their father's place; there was not much sub-division. There were only six in the township in 1882 by the landlord, not by the crofters themselves.

39,327. When was the township of Lochboisdale formed?—In 1846; the first new settlers as far as I know.

39,328. Then, besides the people that were settled on Kilpheder, was the township area diminished by the formation of Lochboisdale township: was that wholly taken from you?—Yes, that is the first, the new settlers.

39,329. The whole of the township of Lochboisdale was taken from Kilpheder?—From Kilpheder.

39,330. And how many were settled in Lochboisdale at the time when the land was taken from Kilpheder in 1846?—Seventeen. That was the second year, about 1846–8, or thereabouts. I was not born then, but that is my opinion.

39,331. The township of Lochboisdale was taken out of the old township of Kilpheder?—Yes.

39,332. And in the diminished township there were other settlers put in also?—From 1846 to 1882; that is just when they stopped.

39,333. From what place did the people that were settled in Lochboisdale come?—They came from Loch Eynort, I think, 15 of them; but there is a delegate here who can tell.

39,334. Why were they removed from Loch Eynort and from Frobost?—By force; by summonses. As far as I know, to clear the farm for Dr Maclean, the brother of Mr Charles Maclean, the present farmer. That is what I heard.

39,335. These places were cleared to form a large tack?—Yes.

39,336. And the people were settled on Kilpheder?—On Kilpheder pasture.

39,337. Do you think, now, that these people were removed from these places for their benefit? Was it with the intention of benefiting them?—No, no; it was a very, very poor place where they were put: the worst they could have got in Scotland, I think, at the time, and they can give evidence about it themselves.

39,338. And are the places that were cleared then still held in a large farm?—Yes.

39,339. And is that farm mainly pastured, or is it mainly cultivated?—It is waste land just now.

39,340. Some part of it, I suppose, is cultivated, but for the most part it is pastured?—Yes.

39,341. Is the land held in large tacks, generally speaking, better or worse than the land held by the crofters?—The land that the farmers have is better; the large farmers have the best land.

39,342. The large farmers, you mean, have the best land?—Yes.

39,343. And do you think now, that if the people were removed from the congested townships there they would be much more comfortable?—Oh yes.

39,344. Are you quite sure, in your own mind, that the land in the large tacks is much better fitted for crop and for cattle-raising and sheep-raising?—Oh yes; I remember one year that the townships here were buying seed; they gave seed to the crofters in South Uist for sowing the ground. They bought the seed from the farms for sowing the crops, and I was one of them myself.

39,345. How many large tacks are there altogether

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Neil Macphee.

in South Uist?—Five, I think:—Kilbride, Glendale, Askernish, Milton, and Ormaclette.

39,346. Did you mention Drimisdale?—No.

39,347. Is it a large farm?—A very large one.

39,348. So that there are six very large tacks?—Yes.

39,349. When were these large tacks formed? You told us when Milton was formed, but can you tell us when the other tacks were formed?—Just about the same time: it was the same clearances.

39,350. There were great clearances then?—Yes.

39,351. Then before these clearances, had the crofters the whole of the island?—Yes, except Ormaclette itself, and Milton itself: Maclennan is the name of the farmer. He was there in Milton in 1846.

39,352. Do you know when was Milton formed, or was there a time when the whole of Milton was held by small tenants?—Just about that time; the large farms were formed in two years out of smaller holdings, according to my information.

39,352A. Your information is, then, that at one time the whole of the island was held by crofters, before these large tacks were formed about 1846?—Yes, except Milton. At that time Milton was the name of the farm, but to-day Milton is the name of the whole townships that were added to it.

39,353. There was a small farm of Milton then, but Milton now includes a large number of other townships?—They added to Milton about that time Loch Eynort, Kildonan, Arivulin, and North Frobost.

39,354. All these townships were added in 1846 to the old farm of Milton?—Yes.

39,355. Then the old farm of Milton was comparatively a small farm?—Yes, it would keep a farmer comfortably enough.

39,356. Then is it the case that, when the estate was sold, and came into the possession of the Gordons, the rents of the crofters were very high?—According to the information I got when the kelp failed.

39,357. They were highly rented on account of the kelp industry then?—Yes.

39,358. The rents were put up because the people could engage in kelp-making?—They put the rent not on the land but on the kelp.

39,359. Kelp-making was a very remunerative occupation then, and the rents were therefore very high?—Very high.

39,360. But that rent did not represent the value of the land, but the value of the kelp?—The value of the kelp. The rent was valued on the kelp, not on the land, in 1822. It was then the crofts were formed.

39,361. And was that rent exacted from the crofters after the kelp industry failed?—Yes, till the Crofters Commission came.

39,362. But I suppose they were not able to pay: they fell into arrears on account of the rack-rent that was put on them?—That is in the estate books.

39,363. And was the failure to pay that rack-rent made the excuse for evicting them?—Oh no, but just to make the large farmers bigger. They did not like the people, and put sheep on them.

39,364. Were the evictions conducted in a kindly way? Were other places prepared for them, or was anything done to help them?—Oh, just by force of ground officer, or other officers, but altogether by force: oppressing them.

39,365. Can you tell us anything more particularly than that about the force that was used?—There are some delegates older than I am who can tell you.

39,366. But it was clearly shown, I suppose, that it was very much against their will?—So far as my information goes, the whole of them were so cleared.

39,367. Then, during the present management, has much been done for the crofters to make them more comfortable?—At that time they came to sub-divide crofts; full crofts were divided into small crofts.

39,368. You represent that the large farms were made larger, and the crofts were made smaller by sub-division by the estate?—Yes.

39,369. But, recently now, has there been much land added to the crofter townships?—No, but taken from them.

39,370. Has that been done recently?—Just putting new settlers, the same as Kilpheder has, not adding anything to the townships.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Neil Macphe

39,371. Can you give any instance of any new settler being put upon a crofting township by the estate?—Oh yes.

39,372. Where: have any been placed in Kilpheder on the crofters' land by the estate?—Oh yes, the whole lot: I told you about Lochboisdale, by the estate office.

39,373. But that has not been done recently?—In 1882; the last ones, the last six, were put in our township pasture.

39,374. And has that been going on in other townships as well as in yours?—Yes, in North Boisdale they put six in the pasture too, about the same time.

39,375. Where did these come from?—From Lochboisdale; the cottars got small pieces on Boisdale pasture.

39,376. And this happened as lately as 1882?—A little before that: maybe the delegates can tell you exactly.

39,377. We hear a good deal about the desire of the present proprietrix to better the condition of the crofters: can you tell us anything at all that has been done to the crofters of late to improve their condition?—No, not in this district, at any rate.

39,378. The chief improvement that they look for is to get more land?—More land: that is what they want.

39,379. And there has been no attempt to do that?—No.

39,380. Have any of the large tacks been out of lease lately?—Yes, Milton Farm was, at the last term; it got a new lease.

39,381. Any other lately?—Kilbride, last year.

39,382. And the other tacks? Was Bornish out of lease?—Yes, and a new lease on Drimisdale.

39,383. Now, in any of these cases, was there any attempt made to get the crofters settled upon any of them?—Ormaclette: it was there they put applications in to get more land, but there are delegates from it.

39,384. Applications were made for part of Ormaclette?—Yes.

39,385. And was that application successful?—They are not granted yet.

39,386. But were there any large tacks offered by the factor to be divided among the crofters, seeing there is such a desire on the crofters' part for land?—I never heard of such a thing.

39,387. These tacks, you say, would be useful: would Bornish, for instance, be useful?—The whole of the place between this and Ormaclette would be very useful.

39,388–9. Did you get no opportunity of offering for it, or of settling there: I suppose you made no application?—No: but the people intend to do that very soon—to put in applications for it; that is what they told me.

39,390. Then have these farms been let to separate tenants,—those that were out of lease? Is it the case that two of these large farms have lately got into the hands of one farmer?—Yes, that is so.

39,391. So that the large holdings are constantly being increased?—Yes.

39,392. And is it your opinion that there is sufficient land in this island for settling all the cottars and crofters comfortably?—And fishermen; they will keep them for a hundred years, better than they are just now.

39,392A. Generally speaking, are there many cottars in South Uist?—Yes, about 20 or 30. The delegates can tell, from the particular townships.

39,393. You want to confine yourself more to your own township?—Yes.

39,394. Mr Munro.—At the time that the lease of Milton expired, did it occur to you or any other of the crofters to make application to the proprietrix to have that farm divided amongst you?—No.

39,395. You made no such application to the proprietrix?—No. Some of the people did not know that the lease was out at the time, and, for another thing, they have no man to tell them anything that should be done.

39,396. But if there is so much 'land hunger' in the island, how did it not occur to you to apply to the proprietrix to divide this farm amongst you?—They were afraid, after their trouble, that they would not get it. They did not know the Crofters Act very well.

39,397. But why were they afraid they would not get it?—Maybe they were afraid from the estate.

39,398. Did they not think it worth their while to try the experiment with the proprietrix?—As far as I know, they did not understand that they could get it.

39,399. Now take this farm of Milton: supposing that that farm were offered to the crofters at present on the land, would they readily take it up?—To-morrow; they are ready to take it to-morrow.

39,400. And do you think they could cultivate it to advantage?—Yes, and stock it.

39,401. And build the necessary houses?—They would try their best.

39,402. What is the average size of a croft at Kilpheder?—Well, we have just 26 acres between outrun and arable,—that is the extent of the holding we have. Some little pasture we have, in peat stances; we had about 800 acres of good pasture, but lost it; it was given to the new settlers.

39,403. Was there a meal mill at one time in Milton?—Yes.

39,404. Is there a meal mill there now?—No.

39,405. What is the reason of that?—It is the fault of the estate, so far as it has fallen through.

39,406. If there was a meal mill at one time in Milton, it points to the fact, of course, that there was employment for that mill; the meal mill would not be there unless the people required it for grinding their corn?—No.

39,407. And now there is no corn there to grind, I suppose?—No.

39,408. Is that owing to the fact that corn is not now produced in the island, or that the people prefer to import the meal they require?—The people were cleared, you see, and they were put in the other townships.

39,409. I think you mentioned that the clearance took place about 1846?—Yes, about that.

39,410. Do you remember if there was a failure of the potato crop that year?—I heard about that.

39,411. And I suppose that the condition of the crofters at that time would have been very wretched?—They were working for a pound of meal a day as their wages, making the road.

39,412. Who was proprietor of the island at the time?—Colonel Gordon.

39,413. Was he the proprietor?—Yes; Dr Macleod was the factor, I think.

39,414. I suppose that the crofters at present in the island are not in a comfortable state?—No.

39,415-6. And you think that more land would put them in a comfortable condition?—Steamers were always coming with meal to keep them up. As to the Mingary Mill, that miller ran out to nothing. He fell into debt and is away. The Estate Office forced the man to give the rent, and he is away.

39,417. And the mill is not used at all now?—No; that miller was a crofter at Dalibrog before he went to the mill; but he is away now.

39,418. Mr P. R. Buik, W.S., Edinburgh, Agent for Lady Gordon Cathcart.—When you speak of the time when the crofters were settled on North Lochboisdale, of course your evidence on that point is hearsay: you cannot remember the time yourself?—I took that in, in the questions.

39,419. I did not hear your evidence very well: and when you said that the old rent was a kelp rent, that was also hearsay, to a certain extent?—I answered that question—that South Uist did not get any reduction at that time after the kelp failure.

39,420. Yes, but you did not know the land at the time, so that you could not say what was a fair rent? You cannot say what was a fair rent in 1846 if you do not know what like the land was then?—I will tell you just to give you a fair answer about that. You will hear other witnesses who will tell you about that.

39,421. But your evidence is not derived from your own knowledge, but from what you have been told?—I gave that notice to the gentlemen. Dalibrog, South Uist. — Neil Macphee.

39,422. You said something about those new settlers in 1882. I did not quite catch what you said: Was it on Kilpheder township?—Yes: Strom Dearg is the place.

39,423. Is it on land on which the North Lochboisdale crofters now are?—No, but the peat stance we have at Kilpheder, and we cultivated it into arable land and then they put new settlers in it.

39,424. Can you tell me their names?—Yes.

39,425. What are they?—John Macphee, Ronald Morrison, John Mackinnon, Alexander Macdonald, 'Currie,' Catherine Macphee, and John Macdonald, who is in Lochboisdale; he had the croft in Kilpheder township.

39,426. And who is the sixth?—Well, perhaps I made a mistake: it may have been only five.

39,427. Did you tell the Commissioners how long it was since the Mingary Mills stopped work?—No, I did not tell that.

39,428. How long is it?—About three years.

39,429. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Let us take the large tacks seriatim. I should like to ask you to name, at your leisure, the crofting townships that were cleared, and that were added to the farm of Milton, and so far as your knowledge goes, the number of tenants who were in those townships. What is the first crofting township you would mention as having been cleared and added to the farm of Milton?—North Frobost.

39,430. How many tenants were there?—Twenty-four.

39,431. Now, another township?—Airidh-'mhuilinn.

39,432. How many tenants?—I think 12.

39,433. Another crofting township?—Kildonan.

39,434. How many tenants?—Twenty-four.

39,435. The next crofting township?—Loch Eynort.

39,436. How many tenants?—I think 16, and down here, the east borders here, on Maclean's Farm, 12.

39,437. That is on the sea coast?—Yes.

39,438. And Milton was a big farm before then?—Oh yes, the farmer lived very comfortably.

39,439. Now let us go to the farm of Ormaclette, and let us in the same way get the names of the townships that were cleared and added to it?—Upper Bornish.

39,440. How many there?—I think 24.

39,441. And what is the next?—Lower Bornish.

39,442. How many were there?—I think 16.

39,443. Let us take now the farm of Drimisdale: give us the townships; try and make a good beginning, and follow them in their order. Begin at Usinish?—I will begin at Buniliggie.

39,444. How many tenants?—I do not know how many.

39,445. You know there were tenants there?—Yes.

39,446. But you don't know how many?—No.

39,447. The next township?—Usinish.

39,448. How many?—Eleven.

39,449. The next place?—Malatea.

39,450. How many?—Four or five.

39,451. The next place?—Glaiclea.

39,452. How many tenants?—Three, I think.

39,453. The next one?—Glaic-an-Ruaidh.

39,454. How many?—Three.

39,455. The next place?—Lamassie.

39,456. How many?—I cannot tell.

39,457. The next place?—Malakes.

39,458. How many?—I don't know.

39,459. The next place?—Russell.

39,460. How many?—I can't tell.

39,461. The next place?—Achkerscallich; that is in Drimisdale Farm.

39,462. How many?—I don't know.

39,463. What is the next?—Unish.

39,464. Next, Kilbride Farm: how many crofters were cleared there?—Fourteen.

39,465. From the place called———?—Eriskay Sound.

39,466. Then on Glendale, or South Lochboisdale Farm?—Bahartaval, eleven.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Neil Macphee.

39,467. Any other township?—Beat, the south side opposite the pier.

39,468. How many?—I cannot tell.

39,469. I should like to put a few questions with regard to the local industry. Do the people of South Uist follow the fishing as the people in Barra do?—No.

39,470. What industry do they depend upon instead of the fishing?—The kelp industry.

39,471. Are you, or have you been an agent for the people in the kelp industry?—Yes, one year; not for the Company.

39,472. Has the estate been assisting the people in the matter of the kelp industry, or has the estate been putting difficulties in the way?—They put difficulties in the way.

39,473. Name one of them?—Interdict.

39,474. Has the estate been interdicting crofters from gathering and disposing of kelp?—Yes, the people that worked to me that year were interdicted.

39,475. Were the people allowed to gather the tangle and dry it on the beach without any interference?—Not when they were working to themselves.

39,476. That is to the estate?—Yes.

39,477. But if the crofters were gathering the tangle for themselves, with the view to sell it in the highest market, would they be allowed to do that, or would the estate interfere?—When I start that speculation I have to give them more pay.

39,478. Were the people prevented from selling their tangle through you?—Yes.

39,479. Were they interdicted from doing it?—Yes.

39,480. Did the people suffer serious loss because of that?—Very.

39,481. Just state the loss in your own way?—They kept them from work for two years: every one, I think.

39,482. Everyone that dealt with you was kept from work by the estate for two years?—Yes.

39,483. What about the kelp? Supposing, just now, that we assume that the estate had a perfect right to deal with whomsoever they liked, did they interfere with the people in giving the kelp to you, and did they interfere with you in selling it to the highest market?—Yes.

39,484. Well, state your case?—I lost the whole of the markets by the estate, because of the North British Chemical Co.,—that is the Company which the estate got the kelp from. The other Company I was representing sent me away to start the business between the North British Chemical Co. and the estate; they will not take the tangle at any other chemical works.

39,485. Mr Forsyth.—You mean that the tangle had to be given solely to this individual Chemical Co.?

39,486. Mr Donald Macrae.—And only through the factor?—Yes, the whole trade must be going through the factor or the estate office; no one else, but only through them.

39,487. Mr Maccallum.—Where is that company located?—In Glasgow.

39,488. Mr Donald Macrae.—Have you reason to believe that you were not getting the highest market value for your kelp through the factor? Do the people believe that they were not getting the highest market price from the factor?—Well, they did not know whether they got it or not; they could not find out the selling price of the kelp, or the expenses, but what the factor for the chemical work said.

39,489. Did the factor give you an account every year of the kelp?—Yes, he told the people when the work was done; when they were going to settle the rents he would tell them how much they did, and the price of it.

39,490. Has the estate been summoning the crofters for rent, while a whole year's tangle, the property of the crofters, was on the hands of the estate?—I heard that some of them were summoned for arrears of rent and some money for tangle in the estate office.

39,491. How long does that money lie in the estate office, as a rule?—About half a year.

39,492. Is that the most?—Yes, every half-year, and maybe they get some payment every three months.

39,493. Is it in money they are paid?—Yes, but if they have any arrears against them they will not get them.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Neil Macphee

39,494. Do they get the value of the kelp in money, and are they entrusted with the payment of their own debts? Do they got money, or is it meal and abatement of rents?—They keep the rent from them, and they give them any balance due to the crofters.

39,495. Is there dealing in meal as well as in kelp?—Not just now, but some years ago there was.

39,496. But, to this day, the crofters are not allowed to dispose of any kelp except through the factor?—Through the factor.

39,497. Can you prove that; have you documentary evidence to prove that?—Yes.

39,498. You brought down the Member for the Inverness Burghs some time ago,—some two or three years ago—to examine into the question of kelp, didn't you?—Yes.

39,499. Have you got a letter from him showing how far he was able to investigate the matter, and where he was forced to leave it? Have you Mr Beith's letter?—Yes.

39,500. Can you produce it?—Yes. (Read by Mr Munro.)—'15 Belhaven Terrace, Kelvinside, Glasgow. 'There is only one outlet for tangle or kelp in the 'chemical trade. Mr Stamford is the sole buyer. He 'asserts that the crofters have no power to sell either 'tangle or kelp except through the factor, or with his 'consent. He is now being supplied by the factor, 'and says he will write and ask him if the crofters 'have power to sell direct. The writer stated that he 'would ask Sheriff Brand how the case stood, and if 'the Sheriff replied that the crofters were as free to 'sell their tangle or kelp as they used to sell their fish 'or potatoes, he would offer the tangle and kelp through 'Mr Hay, as from the crofters direct, and he hoped 'Mr Stamford would buy it. Mr Stamford said he 'would be pleased to have the stuff offered, if the 'crofters were free to sell it, but he did not promise to 'buy. He said that the factor told him that he paid 'over to the crofters all the money he got from him '(Mr Stamford), and did not keep back any of it to 'pay rent. MacPhee denied this, and Mr Stamford 'said he did not believe him. So the matter 'stands at present. The writer has addressed Sheriff 'Brand, and awaits his reply. (Signed) GILBERT BEITH, '8th February 1890.'

39,501. Mr Donald Macrae.—Do you know, as a matter of fact, that the factor has been keeping the kelp money to meet rent and arrears?—Yes, when he got the money; I don't know what is between the factor and the Company.

39,502. That is not the point I am asking. This is the question: In the dealings between the factor and the crofters, do you know that the factor keeps the kelp money from the crofters to put against rents,—that is, that he does not pay them the money, but that he keeps it from the rents?

39,503. Mr Forsyth.—Can you give any instance of that to your own knowledge?—Yes, myself. The whole of the crofters are the same as myself. I gave the kelp to the factor, and I asked the money, and he refused me.

39,504. On what grounds; does he give any reason?—On account of the arrears and rent he has against me.

39,505. You state that of your own knowledge, do you?—Yes, I just asked that from him.

39,506. Mr Donald Macrae.—Now, with regard to Sheriff Brand, are you aware that Sheriff Brand, as Chairman of the Crofters Commission, declined to give a definite answer as to the kelp? Is it a fact that Sheriff Brand left the legal question of the kelp without passing an opinion upon it?—He said so; the case was uncertain.

39,507. Mr Forsyth.—You mean with reference to the withholding of kelp money for arrears?

39,508. Mr Donald Macrae.—No, no, but the claim of the estate that no crofter had a right to pass kelp except through the estate. Sheriff Brand declined to pass an opinion upon that point: is that the case?—Yes.

ibrog, th Uist. — l Macphee.

39,509. And, as a fact, you know that the factor proceeded by interdict against a large number of the crofters for attempting to deal in kelp except through himself?—He interdicted them.

39,510. Mr P. R. Buik, W.S.—Can you tell me exactly what the interdict was for?—Against putting the tangles on Milton shores, or kelp-spreading ground.

39,511. Was this not the case, that the interdict was intended to prevent crofters from entering on the shores of Milton, and turning up the turf to build dykes on Milton?—No, the crofters that were working for the estate at the time were not interdicted.

39,512. But it was to prevent the crofters from turning up the turf on Milton Farm; not on the crofters' land but on Milton Farm?—Yes, on Milton Farm, the crofters that were working to me got interdict.

39,512A. Now do you think that Lady Cathcart makes any profit out of the kelp?—I think that she has something off it, or the representative.

39,513. Are you not aware that Lady Cathcart sells the kelp, and divides the whole of the proceeds amongst the crofters?—I cannot tell what is between Lady Gordon Cathcart and the chemical trade, and what is the price between them I never heard.

39,514. Did you never hear that the whole price was divided?—I heard one time when Ranald Macdonald here gave evidence before Sheriff Brand at the Land Court that they gave the price to the crofters, except the expenses, but the expenses I never heard, nor did any of the crofters.

39,515. Was that about the kelp industry?—Yes.

39,516. Was it not about the tangles?—The kelp.

39,517. You are aware, aren't you, that no pier dues are charged for kelp shipped?—Yes, I know; the dues are a shilling.

39,518. Are you not aware that that is not charged for tangle or kelp?—No, I did not know that, but regarding the mention of the pier at a shilling per ton, I pay a shilling per ton for kelp myself for what I ship at Lochboisdale, and I believe that that charge will be against the crofters as well.

39,519. You think that will be against the crofters, do you?—Yes, but I leave the crofters themselves to answer that question. The crofters knew nothing about the charges or expenses or the price: the estate office never gave them what is between themselves and the Chemical Co.

39,520. When does the settlement for the kelp take place between the estate and the crofters: is it not at the rent collection?—At the rent collection.

39,521. But before the rent collection, some of them, if they require it, get a little sum to account?—Yes.

39,522. And at the rent collection the crofters bring forward their memorandum of kelp shipped: they get a slip from the ground officer at the pier when it is shipped?—Yes.

39,523. And they bring that forward at the rent collection?—Yes.

39,524. Now did you never see a letter from the Company, I suppose to Mr Paterson, saying what the price of the kelp was?—No.

39,525. Did you ever ask for it?—Yes, I asked him that question myself.

39,526. When?—About two years ago, and he told me the price he would get for the kelp, and that he would give it to me. But I never saw the price nor even a statement from the Chemical Co., but what the factor said to me. He didn't give me a notice from the Company at all, nor the expenses either.

39,527. But did you ask to see such an invoice?—Yes.

39,528. When did you ask?—Before Sheriff Webster at Lochboisdale, and I asked the clerk.

39,529. But at what rent collection did you ask to see the account for kelp?—I asked the factor about it.

39,530. But you don't remember at what rent collection, do you?—Three years ago.

39,531. And did you never hear Mr Paterson read a letter from the Company, stating the price that he got for the kelp: just think a little, please?—I heard him one time read a letter, but he never gave it to me.

39,532. But he read it?—He read it that the last kelp fetched £1. Dalibrog, South Uist. — Neil Macphee.

39,533. He read that to you and to a lot of the other crofters?—To myself alone at the rent collection.

39,534. Did you say that you asked Mr Paterson for the money, and he would not give it to you?—He refused.

39,535. When was that?—The same day.

39,536. Three years ago?—Yes, I think three years ago.

39,537. What did he say?—He refused me, and would not give me a penny, he would give me a receipt; and I went out and I told the people 'that is what I have for my kelp, the receipt.'

39,538. You are quite sure of that, are you?—Oh, quite sure.

39,539. Do you know anyone else from whom money was kept back in a similar way?—I heard it from other people, when they had got too much money, that he kept the other half-year's rent from the kelp in advance.

39,540. Are you not aware that the people invariably asked that the money should be put to payment of their rent by Mr Paterson?—Well, when the people have the money in the factor's hand, the kelp money, the factor will give them a receipt for what they have to get, and if there is a balance he will give that to them, but I heard from people that if they have too much money to get, they wish to keep another half-year's rent from them, and that is what is done.

39,541. But do you not know that the people always ask Mr Paterson to put the kelp money towards the rent?—Well, they were afraid from the factor to ask such questions.

39,542. But you are not afraid of factors now-a-days?—Oh, I am not afraid of them at all, but the people were afraid. They were afraid from the factor if they were going to ask money he would keep them from the kelp altogether.

39,543. A sort of traditional terror?—Yes.

39,544. You made one statement which very much interested me, and that was that crofters were summoned for their rent when they had a year's tangle-money due?—Well, not a year, but a balance. I heard that there were 12 Court summonses, and when they went they found that there was money due to them for tangle.

39,544A. Was there more money due to them than they were due to the estate: did you hear that?—Fifteen or sixteen shillings I heard that the people got summoned for, and they had eight or ten shillings of a balance against that, and they put it against that, and the expenses besides.

39,545. And did they say that that money had not been credited to them before the summons was taken out?—No, they got the summons before they went to the office. The arrears of rent were sent to Lochmaddy to put against that, and that money should have been put to their credit before it was sent.

39,546. The summons was for a bigger amount than the amount they had at their credit for tangle?—Yes, a little more, but it is very hard for the estate to summon a poor man for 15s. while he has 8s. in the estate office for four or five months, and put him in 6s. or 7s. or 10s. of expenses at Lochmaddy besides that.

39,546A. But don't you think that it is very hard that the estate should not get their fair rents?—Oh, the estate was always crying out.

39,547. Now will you tell me the names of any of the tenants who were summoned while they had tangle-money?—Well, I heard Donald Beaton's name from the people.

39,548. Is that the only name you can give?—I will question the people about it.

39,549. Can you not give me the names?—I have no memory for it.

39,550. Mr Munro.—I would like to get a little more information from you regarding this kelp matter. Do you mean to say here to-day, now, seriously, that Lady Gordon-Cathcart or her factor makes a profit out of

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Neil Macphee.

this kelp industry?—Well, yes, according to the Company I was out from, but I don't know what is between the estate and the Chemical Company.

39,551. The position of matters is this, that Lady Cathcart insists that you conduct the kelp industry through her factor?—Yes.

39,552. Now does the factor give you a statement of the nett produce of the kelp that you hand over to him?—Never saw it, nor any in the whole estate.

39,553. In furnishing you with a statement of rent, does he not credit you there with kelp?—He gave me a return of kelp, and £2, 10s. is the price, and £1 is in the estate book. No word about expenses, no word about commission, but just that is what you have for the kelp. One ton of kelp, and £2, 10s. the price of it.

39,554. Does he not at any time show you the account sales of kelp when he disposes of it for you?—Never saw it.

39,555. I will put the thing this way: supposing that you gave five tons of kelp to the factor in the course of the season, how does he credit you with these five tons in the rent receipt?—This is the account: Five tons of kelp at £2, 10s., or say £3, or say £1; last year it was £1: that would be five tons of kelp at £1. We never heard any expenses, or any detailed accounts or sale statement.

39,556. Do you think that the factor arbitrarily fixes the price of the kelp himself?—I don't know about that, but, according to the Company I was with, I know what was between the Company and myself.

39,557. Then if you had perfect freedom of action to prosecute the kelp industry as you thought right yourselves, do you consider you would make more out of it than you can out of it through the factor?—Yes, if we got open market for it.

39,558. That is, if the interdict were withdrawn, and you were allowed to gather the kelp and dispose of it without any other restriction upon you, you consider you could make better of it than you now make through the factor?—Yes, to be sure.

39,559. Now was there any reason given when Lady Gordon Cathcart interdicted you from gathering kelp or tangle?—So far as I know, just to cut me away altogether, and leave the trade to themselves, through themselves.

39,560. Or was it to prevent you injuring the land, on Milton, for example?—Yes, for example, to keep the people back altogether. That spoiled me and the people.

39,561. Now does a belief prevail generally in the island that they are not getting fair-play in the matter of this kelp industry?—No, through the factor, every ounce.

39,562. But that is not an answer to my question. Are there many people who share the belief you now entertain that they are not getting fair-play from the factor in this matter. Do more people than yourself believe that you are not getting fair play in this matter of the kelp industry?—Oh, well, the poor people don't know what is the price of kelp and such like.

39,563. But do you know any other people besides yourself who have the same belief that you now entertain about this business?—They are all in darkness about the kelp trade except myself.

39,564. So that you are just speaking for yourself?—I know about the things, but they don't know about it themselves. They know nothing about the kelp or tangle trade except what they got.

39,565. Mr Maccallum.—By starting a kelp agency, you thought you would benefit the people, I suppose?—Yes.

39,566. That you would give them more than the estate was giving?—I gave them a penny more per yard.

39,567. And that you would also benefit yourself?—Oh, as to my benefit, I don't look for it; but I look for the people.

39,568. But it was not altogether a benevolent venture of yours, I take it; you meant to make a profit off it, I suppose, and to benefit the people at the same time?—Yes, I got letters to get the tangle.

39,569. And the people were willing to deal with you?—Oh yes, they were. They gathered about £300 worth of tangle, and it ran out to nothing, and two years besides that the factor would not give them any work. I have about 120 between crofters and cottars, and the factor kept them back for two years, in spite, because they gave me the tangle. That is fair evidence about the thing.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Neil Macphee.

39,570. So that that shows that these people were not convinced that they were getting the whole proceeds of the tangle through the estate?—Yes.

39,571. They were not satisfied with the dealings of the estate?—And, another thing, they were complaining against the tangles. When the kelp tangle started here at first—about 1882 I think was the date—it was Barney Sweeney who was agent for the tangles at that time, and he gave them 4d. per yard for the tangles, and paid them every month regularly. He was here for three years, and he was put away from the estate altogether, and then the factor came in in his place to pay the people, and when the factor got in, he paid the people every half-year, or just two or three instalments in the year.

39,572. How much a yard did the factor give?—Oh, the same price.

39,573. But settlement once in the half-year, instead of once a month?—Yes, but he kept 1s. per £ from them.

39,574. Why was that done?—Mr Paterson here.

39,575. So he offered lower terms?—He kept off 1s. per £ as soon as Mr Sweeney left.

39,576. Now it was put to you whether the tangle and the kelp did not go free on the pier, and I did not hear very well what your answer was. Did you say that you got your tangle and kelp free on your pier?—No, I paid more than 1s. per ton: I am not sure: it was either 1s. or 6d. a ton. (Mr Buik.—One shilling a ton is the proper dues.)

39,577. So that you got no privilege in that way?—No.

39,578. But the factor gets his kelp on that pier free, does he?—I cannot tell you that.

39,579. To whom does the pier belong?—It belongs to the estate.

39,580. Was this pier put up for the benefit of the people generally, do you think?—It is more comfortable anyhow than it was: but the dues are very heavy.

39,581. I suppose it was put up for encouraging the fishing industry, to a great extent?—Yes.

39,582. And what do they charge for a fishing boat every year?—The harbour-master would know that; I don't know the charges.

39,583. Is it not £1, 5s.?—I cannot tell you.

39,584. Would you consider that a high charge?—I cannot tell you what the dues of the pier are.

39,585. But suppose it to be £1, 5s. a year: would you consider it high for a poor fisherman to pay for a small fishing boat?—Oh, it is too high here, at any rate.

39,586. And you think that to charge £1, 5s. a year for a fishing boat is no encouragement at all to the fishermen?—No.

39,587. Mr Forsyth.—I should like to put a few questions to Mr Paterson to elucidate this matter, and he can put in a statement at the next meeting.

Donald Paterson

DONALD PATERSON, Askernish, Factor for South Uist (49)—examined.

39,588. Mr Forsyth.—Is it the case that the whole of the kelp manufacture passes through your hands as factor?—Yes.

39,589. And that the estate holds that the whole sale of kelp should pass through your hands?—Yes, for the British Chemical Company.

39,590. Then you are prepared to put in accounts to show that none of the profits still rest with the estate, but that the people get the whole of it: is that the case?—Yes, I can do that since 1887.

39,591. And with reference to the interdict of the crofters from kelp-making or kelp-gathering, are we to understand that this was with reference to the damage to the shore only, or with reference to the kelp-making: and also I should like to know what restrictions you do impose upon kelp-making?—It is damage to the shore,—damage to the machair lands: we were afraid the machair lands would be blown away, and, as a matter of fact, a good deal was blown away. Every man is free to make kelp if he conforms to the estate regulations. If he does not disturb the stock on the farm and does not bring too many dogs, he can land as much as he likes, and he gets £1 a ton for them delivered at Lochboisdale Pier. That refers to tangle. We deliver them to the Company.

39,592. That is the price fixed between you and the Chemical Company, and the whole of the price is given to the people, and accounted for at the half-yearly settlement?—Yes.

39,593. And do you hold that it is the desire of the people that the kelp or tangle-money and the rent should be put into account and stand one against the other?—They wish that done, and any balance is handed over. When the kelp is delivered at Lochboisdale Pier, the ground officer gives them a check-weight. There is a steelyard there, and he gives them a check from the counterfoil book. The man who makes the kelp keeps this slip, and at the rent collection he presents it, and is paid accordingly at the price we get from the Chemical Company. The price for the kelp is only fixed when it gets to Glasgow, where the cargo is analysed. We don't know what the price will be. I am sorry to say that last year the make was very small, and for the 30 or 40 tons we only got £1 per ton.

39,594. That would be upon the analysis?—Yes, upon the analysis in Glasgow. The year before was a very good kelp one, and I think we got £2, 2s., but that will be brought out in the statement.

39,595. Mr Munro.—I think you stated that the crofters had perfect liberty of action to prosecute the kelp industry, provided they conformed to the estate regulations?—Yes; of course on their own land we don't make any rules at all, but only on the tacks. Some tenants complain of too many kelpers' dogs and horses on the place.

39,596. So that the reason you prevented them from prosecuting the kelp industry on other land was that they broke the ground and destroyed it by forming dykes?—Breaking the ground was the principal cause.

39,597. But have they perfect freedom of action on their own crofting land?—Perfect.

39,598. And can they dispose of that kelp as they please?—We don't interfere.

39,599. They can give it to the British Chemical Co. if they please?—Yes, but they prefer to give it through us. They all say so.

39,600. Let me put this question to you, because it is a very important one. Is it the case, as Mr Macphee seemed to convey to us, that you did not give them the full benefit of what you obtained yourself for the kelp?—I am very sorry to think the Commission would think so.

39,601. Oh, we are not thinking so?—Well, I can guarantee that they get the whole of the benefit. In fact, they get my trouble for nothing.

39,602. You can see the importance, for your own sake, of getting the matter cleared up?—We give the pier and shipping of the kelp free, which would probably be worth £20 to £30 a year to the pier, so that the crofters get a bigger return. If we kept that off it would bring down the price.

39,603. You don't pay them the produce of the kelp in cash. I think you say you credit it to the rent?—They wished it to be so credited, and several of them wished it paid before the rent, and they got any balance.

39,604. And you do that without deducting any money at all?—Yes. Mr Macphee said we kept the rents in advance, but that was never done except at their own request. They would say: 'Well, we have 'got the money here, and it is as well for us to leave it 'with you as to be asked to pay it when we haven't it.'

39,605. Do you think the crofters generally are satisfied with that arrangement?—I think so, generally.

39,606. Do you ever furnish them with any statement of the actual result of the sales you make to the British Chemical Company?—Yes, I read a letter,—the letter that comes accompanying the cheque for the kelp. That letter states the amount delivered, so many tons in bulk at so much per ton, and we pay them according to that price. Dalibrog, South Uist. Donald Paterson.

39,607. So that, if a crofter delivers to you five tons of kelp in the course of the season, you give him what these five tons actually produce?—Yes.

39,608. Now, if any of the crofters asked you for a copy of that letter giving the details of the sale of the kelp, would you furnish him with it?—Most assuredly, and I read it at the collection, so that they are satisfied that I have done the best for them to get the largest possible price.

39,609. I notice a scale of pier dues exigible at the pier down here: do you always exact the full dues?—Not in every case.

39,610. Now, take the case of the herring boat: £1, 5s. is in the schedule. Do you exact the £1, 5s.?—I could not exactly say, but the pier master, Mr Brewster, will be able to tell.

39,611. Mr Maccallum.—There was an interdict got against Mr Macphee, was there, in connection with this?—Not against Mr Macphee, but against certain crofters who went to the Milton shores and broke up the ground in the machair, without asking the ground officer's consent as to where dykes ought to be allowed for tangle. The work, I may say, is superintended a good deal by the ground officer.

39,612. These crofters went and broke up the ground?—Yes.

39,613. And they were interdicted for that reason, and for no other reason?—No other reason.

39,614. Were these people who dealt with Macphee?—They were.

39,615. Was that a mere accident?—No, they broke the dykes without the ground officer pointing out where it should be.

39,616. But it happened, whether accidentally or not, that the people who were interdicted from using the ground were people that dealt with Macphee?—Oh yes.

39,617. And did no other person damage the ground at all, except people who dealt with Macphee?—No, those who worked for ourselves did not.

39,618. But were not they working for themselves rather than for you?—Yes, but under the superintendence of the ground officer.

39,619. But don't you see that this industry is for the people?—For the people.

39,620. And all who sold their tangle to you conducted themselves with perfect propriety, and all who worked independently conducted themselves with impropriety: is that so?—Well, we found that those who went there on their own accord were not so particular as to where they dug up the ground.

39,621. So you wanted really to keep this under your own control?—Oh, that was not the object at all.

39,622. What other object could there be?—To preserve the machair from being blown away.

39,623. And you thought that could not be done except by having the kelp under your own control?—And they are all working this year.

39,624. Because they ceased to deal with this man?—No, it was not, but because they did the work in a regular and orderly way.

39,625. Then you had no objection at all, had you, to their dealing with Macphee?—None at all, if he could find a market for them.

39,626. No objection whatever to their disposing of the tangle in any way they liked?—No, we never stopped them.

39,627. You had no objection to that?—None at all.

39,628. But still he states that he was charged for the pier, whereas you did not charge in the case of those who dealt with yourself; was not that putting him to a disadvantage to a certain extent?—Oh yes, if that is the case.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Donald Paterson.

39,629. They were put to that disadvantage that you charged those who did not deal with you pier dues, whereas those who did deal with you were not charged any pier dues?—It was only Macphee himself who shipped direct, and the quantity was very small: a ton or so.

39,630. But you charged him?—Well, he says so; I cannot tell you.

39,631. Why should Mr Macphee start now if there was not a reasonable prospect of his doing better for the people than you had for them?—I could not say.

36,632. Does it not show that you did not satisfy the people that you did the best for them?—I never heard any complaints from the people that they were not getting fair-play.

39,633. But was not it showing that by action, when they dealt with him, and was not that the most effective way of showing dissatisfaction?—But we have the very great majority of the people.

39,634. But we are talking of those who went away?—The majority worked with us.

39,635. But you would quite expect that from your position in the estate; you were in a great advantage in that way from having the power of the estate at your back. Then don't you think that it would be better to encourage the people to manage for themselves, and to dispose of their work freely?—Well, I think that they have every confidence in the estate to do the management for them and find the market.

39,636. That may be: they have great confidence in you: but I look for the good of the people themselves. Is it not a good training for them to study the markets for themselves, and to see how best to dispose of their own produce and industry?—Yes, that may be.

39,637. Should not every encouragement be given to them to manage for themselves?—Well, I have no opinion upon that point.

39,638. Is it not keeping them in babyhood to have them in leading strings like that?—Oh no, I think it is quite the other way; we give them several advantages.

39,639. Quite so: that is just leading strings. Would it not be better to allow them to work for themselves and to be independent, rather than to have the whole thing managed for them by you?—Well, I could not say, as it has never been tried.

39,640. But, generally speaking, is it not better that there should be no monopolies?—Oh yes, certainly.

39,641. And practically there is a monopoly here?—Well, I think it is a free-will monopoly. The people are quite willing to go on every year, more or less.

39,642. But, still, those who worked for an independent man were interdicted?—Yes, from breaking up the shore.

39,643. Now, with regard to this statement that is made as to the refusal to give payments in cash, did Macphee ever ask of you money for tangle or kelp?—I have no recollection.

39,644. You have no recollection of his ever asking you for that?—No. We don't get the money for the kelp until it is delivered at Glasgow.

39,645. Have you no remembrance of settling with Mr Macphee?—I have a recollection of settling with him at Dalibrog, I forget which year, and he had a certain amount to get for kelp, which he got. I think there was a balance which was handed to him.

39,646. At any of the settlements between you and him did he express any dissatisfaction?—No.

39,647. Never?—Not that I recollect. I went the length of satisfying him by reading the letter I got from the Chemical Co.

39,648. So that the settlements were always perfectly agreeable between you and him?—I think so.

39,649. And you cannot charge your memory with his ever having asked cash, except the balance remaining after paying his arrears?—I cannot remember; there are 600 or 800, and it is quite impossible for a man to remember them all.

39,650. But this is not the first time this case has come up?—Well, this particular case of Macphee's I never heard of before to-day.

39,651. Well, there has been a correspondence about it, and one would expect that you would specially remember this more than many of the cases that came up before you?—No, I have no recollection of it.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Donald Paterson.

39,652. Is it not rather curious, now, that having had your memory so often refreshed regarding it, you cannot tell us exactly what passed between you?—No.

39,653. But we have his distinct statement that he asked money and did not get it, and that you say you don't remember?—Yes, he says so.

39,654. But you do not deny his statement?—Well, I take it that he has told you what he thinks is correct.

39,655. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—With regard to the crofters and the kelp question, I should like to ask you if it is a fact that the foreshore lands are held under tack; in other words, that the crofter townships do not abut upon the foreshores where the tangle is gathered?—I cannot answer that question.

39,656. Take, for instance, Kilpheder and Dalibrog: do these townships border or extend down to the foreshore where they gather the tangle, or does a big farm come in between?—No farm comes in between.

39,657. You say that a tack comes between the crofting townships and the places where they gather the tangle?—Yes; you mean that the tacks are a good bit away from the townships?

39,658. No; what I mean is that the tack land comes between the crofter land and the shore?—Oh, the crofts abut on the shore.

39,659. Not the whole shore: they have to gather the tangle on the farms?—Yes, but they are quite at liberty to do so.

39,660. Yes, but that is another question. Now this is a question I should like to be answered clearly. How many crofters were interdicted from gathering tangle on that farm?—I forget the number, but I think it was either seven or nine.

39,661. Seventeen, I am told?—Well, I would not be positive, but that is my impression.

39,662. Assuming it to be 17: were those 17 always allowed to gather tangle there without let or hindrance until they began to have dealings with Macphee; were they ever interdicted before?—No.

39,663. Is it a fact that, after Macphee began to have dealings with the people and to deal in kelp, he had 120 crofters dealing with him or through him instead of through you?—I believe there was a considerable number for whom he measured the tangles instead of giving them to us.

39,664. Does not that, to your mind, clearly indicate that the people wanted a freer hand than they had in the estate office?—Well, I could not say.

39,665. You admit that over a hundred broke away from the estate office and began to deal with Macphee?—I suppose about that; I could not exactly say.

39,666. Is it not because they believed they would get better terms?—It is quite possible.

39,667. Is it not certain that that was their view?—At the time it might be.

39,668. And it was after these 120 began to deal with Macphee that you began to proceed by interdict against the men who were dealing with Macphee?—Oh, we only interdicted those who were breaking the green land on Milton.

39,669. But you never interdicted anybody before they began to deal with Macphee?—No.

39,670. Is it a fact that, after these proceedings, and after the people broke away from Macphee, that you refused kelp from Macphee himself?—He did not offer it to me; he sent it away of his own accord.

39,671. Is it a fact that Macphee offered kelp to you, and that it was refused?—No, he did not offer me kelp.

39,671A. So you say that you never refused kelp from him?—I have no recollection of refusing him; I know that he shipped his own kelp.

39,672. If Macphee would stand before the Royal Commission here, and state that he offered his kelp to you, and that you refused it, would you accept that as a fact?—I have no recollection of it.

39,673. Did you lead the Chemical Company in Glasgow to understand that you would not allow any kelp out of South Uist except through the estate?—Never. I had no communication with the Chemical Company on that subject.

39,674. Did you catch every word of what Mr Beith said in that letter which was read?—Yes, I heard the letter read.

39,675. Mr Beith says here:—'There is only one out-'let for tangle or kelp in the chemical trade. Mr Stam-'ford is the sole buyer': who is this Mr Stamford?—He is manager for the British Chemical Company.

39,676. 'Is the sole buyer. He asserts that the 'crofters have no power to sell either tangle or kelp 'except through the factor, or with his consent.' This is a statement by Mr Stamford to Mr Beith. Did you personally, or by letter, or did the estate lead Mr Stamford to understand that the crofters had no right to make or to export kelp except through the estate?—I did not personally, and I am not aware that the estate did.

39,677. Does the estate hold that the crofters have not the right?—I don't think I need answer that question.

39,678. You said that the people are perfectly satisfied?—Well, I think so; I hope so.

39,678A. Does not the fact that 120 began to deal with Macphee shake your belief a little?—Well, it is four years since this all happened, and the people have all worked since.

39,679. Were they satisfied then?—Well, the dissatisfaction has all blown away, at any rate.

39,680. Are you aware that four years ago, or about that time, there was a large public meeting and demonstration in South Uist upon the kelp question?—I heard about it.

39,681. You know who were the principal speakers at that meeting?—No, I saw it by the papers.

39,682. Are you aware that Mr Fraser-Mackintosh, M.P. for the county, was present?—I believe he was.

39,683. And Mr Kenneth Macdonald, the Town Clerk of Inverness?—Yes.

39,684. And Mr Alexander Mackenzie of the Scottish Highlander, and Mr Wilson, solicitor, Lochmaddy?—Yes.

39,685. And about 2000 people?—I don't know.

39,686. Does not that satisfy you that there was a good deal of dissatisfaction with the manner in which the kelp industry was managed in this island?—I don't know.

39,687. Do you believe that the people would have sent for these men, and that the people would have turned out to the number of 2000, to demonstrate against the matter if they were perfectly satisfied with the management?—I don't admit that there were 2000.

39,688. You admit that there was an indignation meeting?—I do not think there was an indignation meeting; it was simply free talk.

39,689. And resolutions?—I don't know.

39,690. I have a report of the proceedings, which I can submit.—I was not present.

39,691. And are you aware that, as a result of that meeting, a bill was introduced into Parliament for taking the kelp management out of your hands?—I never heard of that.

39,692. I will put in a copy of the bill.

HECTOR MACINTYRE, Cottar, South Lochboisdale (28). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter).

39,693. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a house at South Lochboisdale?—Yes.

39,694. Were you appointed to represent the people of South Lochboisdale?—Yes, for the cottars.

39,695. Are there many cottars at South Lochboisdale?—Seven.

39,695A. Have they any stock?—Some of them have: others none.

39,696. Their stock is grazing on the crofters' ground, I suppose?—Yes.

39,697. Are the cottars desirous of obtaining crofts if they could be got?—Yes, they are very anxious to get crofts. Dalibrog, South Uist.

39,698. Do they come here to say that there is plenty of land available in the island?—Yes. Hector Macintyre.

39,699. Mr Maccallum.—How many crofters are there in the place?—Twenty-one.

39,700. Are they large crofts, or what size, that they hold?—Small crofts, except one man; there are five large crofts with two on each of them; other six have very small crofts.

39,701. And seven families who have no land at all?—None at all.

39,702. Are the crofts sufficient for those who hold them, or do the crofters wish to get enlarged holdings also?—Yes, they consider what they have too small, and they would be glad to get more.

39,703. And would some of them be willing to move out of that place and go elsewhere, where they would get larger crofts?—They say so, but I am not sure what they might do. The delegate of the crofters is here, and will speak for them.

39,704. Do the cottars pay any rent?—No.

39,705. How did they come to be placed there?—They were crofters' sons who had to put up there because they would get no land elsewhere.

39,705A. Are they all crofters' sons?—Yes.

39,706. And are their parents in that township of Lochboisdale?—Most of them are dead.

39,707. Did older brothers succeed to their fathers' crofts, or how did these cottars not succeed to the crofts on the death of their parents?—They would not get them; others who did not belong to the place got the crofts.

39,708. Were there people taken from elsewhere and placed in these crofts?—They were on the same place, and they were put into these crofts when the old crofters died.

39,708A. Is it an old crofting township?—It is pretty old, but I don't know how old.

39,709. Have the crofts been in any way diminished in your recollection?—No. I heard that they were made less, but not in my time.

39,710. What occupation do the cottars follow?—They are from place to place fishing, and anything else that comes in the way for a day's pay.

39,711. What do they mainly depend upon?—On their work, the best way they can.

39,712. But what sort of work do they principally engage in?—Some sailing, and others at lobster-fishing at the present time.

39,713. Is this a suitable place for fishing: South Lochboisdale?—Yes.

39,714. And could they get holdings near their present places; is there any tack from which holdings might be formed for them?—Yes, if only just at the march between them and the present tack.

39,715. What tack is that?—Glendale.

39,716. By whom is that held?—Donald Ferguson.

39,717. Is that a suitable place for forming into crofter holdings?—Yes.

39,718. Were there crofts there before?—Yes.

39,719. What place on that tack was held by crofters; where was the old township?—A place called the 'big park' was formerly occupied by crofters.

39,720. Where is that?—Close to the sea-side.

39,721. How many crofts were there?—I don't know how many were there before.

39,722. Do you know when there were crofters there?—No, I don't know.

39,723. But have you heard that they were there?—There are some living and present here to-day who occupied crofts there before.

39,724. Is there any other place on that particular tack near you where there were crofters?—Bagharstava.

39,725. Have you any idea how many crofters were there?—I don't know, but some of the men are here to-day.

39,726. Any other place?—There were crofters bordering the sea all the way round from where they are at present until they reached Bagharstava.

Dalibrog, South Uist. — Hector Macintyre.

39,727. And is it on that farm that you would like to get a holding?—Yes.

39,728. Could the whole of it be taken up profitably, do you think, by crofters?—Yes, if they got the hill along with the sea-shore round.

39,729. I suppose they would have no difficulty in stocking it, would they?—I think they would be quite able to stock it.

39,730. The cottars have stock of their own at present?—Some of them have: the greater number.

39,731. Have you stock yourself?—Yes.

39,732. Is there a farmhouse and steading on the tack?—No.

39,733. The farmer is not resident, I suppose, upon the farm at all?—No.

39,734. If you got a croft on this farm, would you devote all your time to farming, or would you prosecute the fishing to some extent also?—If I got sufficient land to keep me going, I would devote my time to the land.

39,735. Is it your opinion that the farm should be divided into crofts of such an extent that they would be self-supporting, and that the crofters would not need to take to any other occupation?—I don't think it would suit to cut it into large crofts.

39,736. It would suit well for crofts for fishermen then?—Yes.

39,737. And would they be able to prosecute the fishing equally well if they had it, I mean as well as they prosecute it now when they have no crofts?—I think it would be easier for them.

39,738. How do you think that?—They would be more convenient to the fishing ground if they got crofts towards the sea-shore.

39,739. On the south side of the island?—On the north side of where they live.

39,740. They could be placed more conveniently for the fishing, you think, than they are just now?—Yes.

39,741. But would the time taken up with cultivating the croft interfere with your fishing?—No, at certain times of the year fishing is not suitable, and then I could work upon my croft.

39,742. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—I should like to ask if you or the other cottars got any assistance from the estate for building the houses you occupy?—No.

39,743. And if you and the other cottars for whom you speak were to get the land that you mention, would you be able to build houses without any assistance?—Yes, we could all build our own houses.

39,744. Mr P. R. Buik, W.S., Edinburgh, representing the estate.—Do you know where Mr Donald Ferguson lives?—Yes.

39,745. Has he any land near his house?—He has a croft at home.

39,746. And his steading is there?—Everything.

39,747. It is there that he keeps the stock for Glendale?—There, and back and forward between the two places.

39,748. Mr Maccallum.—Is Mr Ferguson's house on the tack of Glendale?—No, it is on his croft. There are five crofts between his house and the tack.

39,749. The croft is quite separate from the tack?—Yes, quite separate.

39,750. Is the house and steading on that croft suitable for the croft itself?—I think the house is rather good for the croft.

39,751. And as to the steading: is it too large for a croft?—I think it is too good and too big for the croft.

39,752. Were they built for the farm of South Lochboisdale?—He started there as a merchant at first, and the houses were going on building and increasing yearly.

39,753. And the house is not too large for a merchant?—It is not too big for him.

39,754. And have you a shop?—Yes.

39,755. So it is the merchant's house?—Yes.

39,756. And not the house of South Lochboisdale?—That is the only house for the tack.

39,757. But it was built for the merchant, and not for the tack?—I am not sure whether he had the tack, but there are some here who know better. Dalibrog, South Uis — Hector Macintyre

39,758. Mr Buik.—You are aware, are you not, that Mr Ferguson holds the house and land at South Lochboisdale and the land at Glendale under one tack?—I don't know, but he pays one rent for the two; but one thing I know, that they were separate.

39,759. Mr Gordon.—Were they always included in the one tack?—I cannot tell whether he got them both at the same time.

39,760. Mr Maccallum.—What is the distance between the tack and this croft on which the house is?—There are 15 crofters between them to-day.

JOHN CAMPBELL, Crofter, North Boisdale (70). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter). John Campbell.

39,761. Mr Forsyth.—You have a croft, I think?—I have a half-croft.

39,762. What is the rent of your half-croft?—£3, 6s.

39,762A. How many crofters are there in North Boisdale?—Twenty-four whole crofts; nine of them are broken into two.

39,763. And are there many cottars there?—No, only one cottar.

39,764. Will a full croft on North Boisdale keep a family fairly comfortable?—Yes, one of the best crofts would.

39,765. How did these crofts come to be made half-crofts?—Sons were coming in along with their parents, and they got liberty from the factor to divide their crofts.

39,766. Was that long ago?—About 30 years ago, and some of them more than that.

39,767. Have you much grazing outside your crofts?—We have £1 worth of grazing outside our croft,—each whole croft.

39,768. Would you go to a better croft if you got the chance?—My brother is along with me on the croft, and the one or the other would go if we got the chance.

39,769. Mr Gordon.—How many stock have you on the croft?—I have a stock that my holding would not keep; I have five cows and two stirks, two horses, year-olds.

39,770. Is your township overstocked for crofts; are there too many crofters in it at present?—They are all wishing to get more, and especially hill ground.

39,771. Is there any hill ground near you that could be usefully occupied?—It is not convenient, but there is one island in the neighbourhood that would suit, which they had in former years.

39,772. What is the name of the island?—The fishing island, Eilean Iasgaich.

39,773. Who has that island just now?—Kilbride Farm.

39,774. Has Kilbride any other island in Lochboisdale?—That is the only one.

39,775. Do you know the farm of Glendale?—Yes.

39,776. Is there any old arable land on that farm?—Yes.

39,777. Do you recollect any crofts being upon the farm?—Yes, I do recollect of them.

39,778. How many were there, in your memory?—I am not sure how many there were.

39,779. Were there four, or five, or six?—So far as I know there were 12 at least.

39,780. Would there be room for 12 crofters on it still?—I cannot tell you very well in regard to that.

39,781. Are you a fisherman yourself?—No, I am not a fisherman; I never put a hook into the sea.

39,782. You live entirely on your croft?—Yes, but what I take out of the croft won't keep me for half a year.

39,783. Then what do you do for a living?—I have children working in the country who send me all the money they can spare.

39,784. How much land would you require to give you steady employment on your croft?—I would need

Dalibrog, South Uist. — John Campbell.

40 acres before I could take bread and meal out of it, and some potatoes.

39,785. And how much of the 40 acres would you propose to cultivate?—14 or 15 acres every year.

39,786. Could you or your brother stock such a croft if you got it?—I have a good stock already, but they are in very bad condition; but we have no money.

39,787. Mr Maccallum. — Did the township of North Boisdale lose their grazing at any time?—There were five crofters set down upon the back ground, where we had the best grazing: it injured us greatly.

39,788. At what time were they settled among you?—About 20 years ago. Mr Drever was factor. I can't tell the exact date.

39,789. How many crofts were in the township before these five were added?—The crofts and crofters were as they were before, and continued to be so, but these were settled down on the outer grazing.

39,790. What size of crofts do these have that were settled on your grazing?—I don't know how many acres, but they are not big. The greatest harm they do us is driving away our sheep or cattle when they come near them; we don't complain so much for the quantity of land that was taken from us as for that.

39,791. Were your rents reduced when these were settled on your grazing?—No, until the Crofters Commission came round.

39,792. Were these settled there by the authority of the factor?—Yes, it was by the factor's authority, and the people collected together to go to the factor to complain, but the factor told them that they need not, it was of no use.

39,793. Then has there been any sub-division of the crofts by the crofters themselves?—No. I, for instance, and my brother divided the croft between ourselves.

39,794. And have you separate houses?—Yes.

39,795. This Eilean Iasgaich: was it always in the tack of Kilbride, or has it been held otherwise?—The old men were telling me that it belonged to Boisdale in former years.

39,796. And, since you remember, has it been held along with Kilbride?—It was connected with Kilbride ever since I recollect.

39,797. Do you know anything about the formation of Kilbride into a tack? Was it made out of some holdings, do you know?—It was a free estate all south of Kilpheder, at one time without crofters.

39,798. Were there any crofters in olden times on the farm of Kilbride?—No, there were no crofters in Kilbride proper, as it is to-day.

39,799. Kilbride is just of the old size. It has not been increased by taking in anything from crofting townships, has it?—I cannot tell that.

39,800. Do you know the land in Kilbride well?—Yes.

39,801. Is it suitable for crofter holdings?—It is very suitable for crofts, and very convenient to the township next it.

39,802. Do you think that the townships adjoining it could be conveniently extended by taking in parts of Kilbride?—Nothing could be more suitable; just go over the march.

39,803. Is there much arable land in the tack of Kilbride that is not regularly cultivated?—Plenty arable land, and what is not arable is very suitable and useful if we got it.

39,804. But is there arable land that is not cultivated by the present tenant?—Three-fourths of the land suitable for cultivation is not cultivated, and will never be, by the present tenant.

39,805. You think that if the crofters got an opportunity, they would cultivate these lands?—Every inch of it, and what the plough could not do the spade would.

39,806. Mr Munro.—Supposing that you got a croft of 40 acres, as you point at, how could you stock it and erect the necessary buildings for it?—The buildings would be of a very inferior quality, in the first place, unless we got some help from the Crown. There are no roads in these tacks where a cart could go at the present time.

39,807. So that the answer to that question is that you could not take such a holding and put up the necessary buildings and stock it properly without outside assistance?—No.

39,808. From whom would you expect assistance to come, then?—From the Crown; there is no other way.

39,809. Would you be able to pay the money back to the Crown, supposing you got it?—If I were prosperous, I would do what I could.

39,810. But if you were not prosperous, I suppose you could not do it?—In my opinion, if I got the land I would certainly succeed. What I spend at present in meal and food could do that.

39,811. You would make a strong effort, at any rate?—I would.

39,812. Mr Maccallum.—I did not ask you where the five came from that were settled on your pasture. Can you tell me where they came from?—Some of them were cottars about the outskirts of the township, and others came from Donald Ferguson's tack, who were shepherds there.

39,813. Did these men build their houses on your pasture without Government or estate aid?—They have only small houses that they built themselves. We could all build the like of that.

39,814. And you have all built the houses you have?—Yes, we built our own houses, but they are not very good.

39,815. If these people, instead of being settled on your pasture, had got good crofts, do you think they would have built better houses than they had built on your pasture?—They would do their best to build better houses. Everyone who builds a house to-day builds a better one than was built in his father's time.

39,816. Would it not also be an inducement for them to build a better house that they have security for compensation, if ever they were put out of them, or if they got security of tenure?—Yes, we would do our best in that direction.

39,817. And don't you think that the inferiority of the houses is very much owing to want of security, and to the people having been changed from one place to another several times?—That is certainly true, but every penny we earn we have to put out some other way, on account of the scarcity of land.

39,818. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Where were you born?—In Milton.

39,819. What is the name of the township?—Baile-a'-mhuilinn.

39,820. Of what tack is that a part to-day?—Milton.

39,821. Who is the tenant of that farm?—Charles Maclean.

39,822. Was your father a tenant in Milton?—Yes, for 20 years.

39,823. Who built the house in which he lived there?—I think it was he himself. I was only three years when he left it.

39,824. Did he leave Milton voluntarily, or was he evicted?—He and everyone along with him were put out in order to clear the land for the tack.

39,825. How many years ago?—Over 60 years ago.

39,826. Did your father get compensation for the houses when he was evicted from Milton?—He got nothing.

39,827. Where did he go after that eviction?—He went as a herd to the Askernish Farm.

39,828. Did he get land?—He got no land, but herding cattle.

39,829. Did he get any croft during his lifetime after his removal from Milton?—He was nine years as a herd in Askernish, and then he got a croft in Kildonan.

39,830. Did he get a house ready made, or did he build his house?—He got a kind of a house that was not much worth, that was occupied by the man before him.

39,831. Had he to pay for it?—He paid for the roof, but the stones were worth nothing.

39,832. Did he improve that house?—Yes, he did; he was obliged to do so.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

John Campbell.

39,833. Did he get any estate assistance?—No.

39,834. How many years was he there?—Four years.

39,835. Did he leave voluntarily, or was he evicted?—An order came home from Colonel Gordon that a tenant could not have a tenant under him.

39,836. Was he, in Kildonan, a tenant proper, or was he a sub-tenant of a tacksman?—He was a tenant of the tacksman.

39,837. When he was evicted out of Kildonan, did he get any compensation for the improvements he had made?—No.

39,838. Did he get a croft after this?—He got a half-croft in Bornish. When the order came home from Colonel Gordon that a tenant could not hold a tenant, the whole of them were sent away, and my father got a half-croft in Bornish.

39,839. Did he get a house in Bornish?—He roofed the walls that another man had for a time.

39,840. Did he get any assistance from the estate for the house, or the barn, or the byre?—Not a halfpenny.

39,841. How long was he a crofter in Bornish?—Eight years.

39,842. Did he leave voluntarily, or was he evicted from Bornish?—No, he and all the rest of them were again evicted out of it. It was cleared up for one Maclennan.

39,843. Did he get any compensation for his improvements?—No.

39,844. Did he ever after get another holding?—When a great many left South Uist, he then got a place in Boisdale, where he is to-day.

39,845. Was it a new croft or an old croft?—An old croft at first: two years afterwards the township was re-divided, and he then got one of the crofts.

39,846. Did your father get a house on the old croft?—Yes.

39,847. When the re-division was made, was it an old croft or a new croft that he got?—There was a house on it.

39,848. He built a new house?—Yes, my brother has that house to-day.

39,849. Did he get any assistance from anybody to build it?—No.

39,850. Now, looking at the whole of these facts, how much your father has been able to do in his day, do you believe that if the cottars of South Uist got the opportunity of taking up new holdings on fair terms, they would not be able to build houses as surely and as well as your father has been able to do?—Yes, and better.

39,851. So that, so far as the building of houses is concerned, they are perfectly certain to be able to build houses without any Government assistance?—I don't know what kind of houses my questioner means, but I know they would build houses as good as those that are occupied to-day.

Angus Walker.

ANGUS WALKER, senior, Crofter, Dalibrog (75). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

39,852. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a croft?—Yes.

39,853. What rent do you pay?—£4, 17s.

39,854. Have you any grazing with it?—No grazing but poor grazing.

39,855. There is no common grazing at all attached to Dalibrog, is there?—There is some common grazing.

39,856. And you have your share of it?—Yes.

39,857. But it is not good: is that what you wish to say?—It is good what there is of it, but it is small.

39,858. Are there many cottars on Dalibrog?—Yes, five.

39,859. Have they stock?—Yes.

39,860. And this stock is grazing on the crofters' land, is it?—Yes.

39,861. Can you make your living out of your croft?—It is not easy.

39,862. How do you get your living otherwise?—We must buy; whatever we take off the croft is consumed.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Angus Walker.

39,863. And do you do any work or fishing to help yourself?—We are working at kelp, tangle, or any other work that comes in the way.

39,864. Are the people in Dalibrog desirous of getting larger holdings?—Yes, if each of them had a whole croft we would be better off.

39,865. Would some of them go elsewhere if they got a chance to get a better holding?—Yes.

39,866. Mr Maccallum.—How many full crofts are there in Dalibrog?—Fourteen whole crofts.

39,867. And how many crofters?—Twenty-one crofters,—the seven halves and fourteen whole ones.

39,868. And how many families are there without any land at all?—Five cottars.*

39,869. And you think, if the holdings were divided among 14, that that would be a sufficient size of croft?—I think that would do, and that they would be well off.

39,870. Where could the others be settled? That would leave 13 to be provided for?—In the very township which I left myself; I know the marches yet, and could point them out.

39,871. What place is that?—Frobost.

39,872. Would Frobost accommodate 13 families?—Yes, and more: it kept more before. They had a good hill ground on which they had good stock.

39,873. How many were in Frobost?—Twenty-five crofts.

39,874. And you had a croft there yourself, had you?—Yes.

39,875. Why were they removed from Frobost?—To clear the place up for one who came from Arisaig to take the tack there.

39,876. And it is now in the tack of Milton, is it?—It belongs to Milton to-day.

39,877. Where did these people go who were removed?—They were scattered in the south end about Lochboisdale, and some went to Iochdar.

39,878. Did you come direct to Dalibrog?—Yes, to a half croft.

39,879. Were additional crofters settled at that time in Dalibrog?—Yes, some in Dalibrog were removed to make room for those who came from Frobost.

39,879A. And where were they removed to?—They were living in small houses about the place they were, and latterly they went off to America.

39,880. Do you know how many crofts were in Dalibrog before the people from Frobost came there?—The same number that there is to-day. There were no new crofts made for the Frobost people.

39,881. But some of the Dalibrog people were removed to make way for the people of Frobost?—Yes.

39,882. Were the tenants in a comfortable way before they were removed?—They were so comfortable that they had no occasion to buy anything all the year round; they took out of the ground enough to keep them going.

39,883. Then it was not because of the poverty of the people that they were removed from that place?—No, indeed, but to clear the place for the tack.

39,884. You think it was because Frobost was specially suited for cattle and sheep-raising that they were removed?—Yes, I think so.

39,885. And is it the case that the crofters are now confined to the places least suitable for crop and cattle-raising?—It is certainly the case that it is the worst ground they occupy.

39,886. You think they were allowed to remain on these lands because they were not suitable for large tacks?—I am sure that is the case.

39,887. Could an extension of grazing be got for Dalibrog?—Yes; the mountains between us and the sea would be very suitable.

* On 24th August 1894, Walker wrote:—'I respectfully beg to correct these answers. I should have said that there are 39 crofters now paying rent, or anyhow in the possession of crofters on the very space that 23 crofters had to themselves 50 years ago. The correct number is 39 crofters and 5 cottars.'

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Angus Walker.

39,888. That is the hill of Milton?—Yes.

39,889. Do you think there is any likelihood of the demand of the crofters being met by the estate management, without interference by the Legislature?—I don't know anything about it.

39,890. Have they shown any readiness to meet the desire of the people for land?—Yes, if there was land ready for it, but there were no new lands, and the only land that was settled was crofts; they were ready enough to give vacant crofts to others, but no more.

39,891. But the desire for land, on the part of the crofters, is perfectly well known to the estate?—I am not very sure; but the estate managers certainly understand that. I think it is well known to them.

39,892. And have they not had plenty opportunities of giving land to the crofters, if they were disposed to do it?—Yes, if they like to give it.

39,893. Some of the large tacks in the island have been out of lease recently, have they not?—Yes, some of them.

39,894. Was there any movement at all, on the part of the crofters, to get part of these farms?—I did not hear that there was.

39,895. How can you account for their not making some application?—They were waiting this Commission, as they understood that this was the Commission to give them land.

39,896. And were they fully convinced, in their own minds, that it would be useless for them to apply to the estate?—I don't know: I can't say anything in regard to that.

39,897. Mr Gordon.—Have you any recollection with regard to the stock put upon the crofts?—No.

39,898. Have you any common pasture in connection with the township?—Yes, we have machair grounds in common.

39,899. And does each crofter put whatever stock he pleases upon it?—Yes, all that he has.

39,900. There is no restriction as to the number?—No.

39,901. Suppose you got additional common grazing, would you propose to manage the stock on the same system as you now occupy the common grazing, or as a club-stock?—I think, if we had that, we would look after it better than we do to-day, but the little we have to-day is not so much worth looking after.

39,902. There is no club stock in these islands, I suppose?—I saw one man looking after the whole of the stock here.

Donald Maclellan.

DONALD MACLELLAN, Crofter, Garraheillie (58).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

39,903. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

39,904. What rent do you pay?—£2, 2s.

39,905. Were you elected to appear as representative of the people of Garraheillie?—Yes, I was told to stand here to-day.

39,906. What do you wish to state to us with reference to the people there?—Anything that is asked of me.

39,907. Are the crofts too small?—Yes.

39,908. Would they move to larger ones?—Yes, if they got it.

39,909. How many crofters are there in the township?—Thirteen paying rent.

39,910. And any cottars who do not pay rent?—Yes, six.

39,911. Have you any common grazing?—Yes, on the hill ground our cattle are in common.

39,912. How do you make your living otherwise than by your croft: do you fish?—No, I never fished any.

39,913. But you cannot live upon a £2, 2s. croft, can you?—I tried, but I could not do without the support of my sons.

39,914. You have sons who support you?—I have four sons, each of them stronger than myself, even the youngest one.

39,915. How do they live: are they fishermen?—Back and forward in this country and in others.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Donald Maclellan.

39,916. Mr Maccallum.—How do the six cottars come to be placed there?—One of them came from the north five or six years ago: another came from Milton, and other two again came from the north.

39,917. Were they put there by permission or authority of the factor?—They were, at any rate, getting places to build houses on when they lost their own.

39,918. By permission of the factor?—I think it was.

39,919. Are they relatives of the crofters?—I don't suppose so.

39,920. Do the people of Garraheillie look for an extension of grazing?—Yes.

39,921. Is that what they would chiefly want, or would they like some to get crofts elsewhere?—If they could get the grazing on the north side of the township they would prefer it.

39,922. In what farm is that?—Askernish tack, held by the proprietor.

39,923. Could crofts be formed for them there, having arable ground and grazing, without interfering with what is cultivated just now on the farm?—Yes.

39,924. Is the farm of Askernish mainly pastured or mainly cultivated?—A little cultivated, but mostly grazing.

39,925. And is it well suited for crofters' holdings?—Yes, it is.

39,926. Is it better than the land of Garraheillie, held by the crofters?—The same kind, only that that land is not now strong.

39,927. Your croft is so small that, I suppose, you have to be constantly turning over the ground?—Yes, I must turn the same ground every year.

39,928. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Is Garraheillie an old crofting township, or is it an experiment of the estate within recent years?—It is a good few years since the crofters got Garraheillie.

39,929. How many years is it?—About 35 years.

39,930. Now off what lands was this township made?—Off Askernish.

39,931. Was all the land of Garraheillie township taken off Askernish?—They only got a small border from Askernish.

39,932. And off what crofting township was the rest of Garraheillie taken?—It was taken from the Dalibrog people, a part of it.

39,933. Is it a part of the hill of Dalibrog, or was it a part of the arable lands of Dalibrog?—Part of the crofts, the arable land.

39,934. So that when the estate settled the township of Garraheillie, they found arable land for the new crofters by taking the arable land from the crofters of Dalibrog?—Dalibrog was cut off before the people got it.

39,935. For whom?—One Chisholm, that was in Askernish; there was a bit further south; what they got from Askernish was not sufficient, so they moved southward a bit, in order to supply the people that came.

39,936. So that the land of Garraheillie was partly taken from the arable land of Dalibrog and partly from Askernish?—It was land in its natural state they got from Askernish.

39,937. And arable land from Dalibrog?—Arable land from Dalibrog.

39,938. What rents were fixed on the crofts originally?—Dalibrog was reduced £20 on the rental, and it was laid on the people that came to Garraheillie.

39,939. But I am asking you what rent was put on the crofters of Garraheillie originally?—Some £2, and some £1.

39,940. I don't think you understand my question. What rents were the crofters of Garraheillie paying before the Crofters Commission came?—I myself was paying £3.

39,941. Were your neighbours paying at the same rate?—Some 30s., others £2, 10s. and £2, 15s. and £2, 18s.

39,942. Could you tell us what the rent of the

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Donald Maclellan.

township was before the visit of the Crofters Commission?—I cannot tell exactly.

39,943. Were the other rents reduced by the Crofters Commission in the same proportion as your own?—Yes.

39,944. Did these people, when they got holdings in Garraheillie, all build their own houses without any assistance from anybody?—Yes.

39,945. And do you believe, if the large tacks were broken up to-morrow, and offered to crofters and cottars, that the crofters and cottars of South Uist would build houses without any assistance from the State?—Yes, if they were removed there.

39,946. We will not remove anybody, but if the tacks were offered, do you believe that a large number of people in South Uist would be very glad to get holdings in the tacks?—Yes, those who have half-crofts in particular, and those who have none at all.

39,947. Would these, if they got the offer of lands in the tacks, build houses without any assistance from Government?—Some of them would.

John Macmillan.

JOHN MACMILLAN, Crofter, Smerclette (70).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

39,948. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

39,949. You have heard the evidence given by the previous witnesses as to the desire for land?—Yes.

39,950. Do you agree with it?—Yes.

39,951. Is there anything more that you wish to add to it?—No, I have nothing to add, but I am complaining of having too little land.

39,952. You have too little land, and you wish for more?—Yes, if we got land we would like to get it as near as possible to where we are.

39,953. Mr Gordon.—Is there any land near you that would suit for extension?—Yes, Kilbride Farm.

39,954. Is it arable or pasture land: is it new crofts or an extension of grazing that you want?—More arable land.*

39,955. There is no grazing near that you could get for an extension?—Yes, there is.

39,956. Where?—In the same place, Kilbride.

39,957. Are there many cottars in your township?—Three.

39,958. And how many crofters?—Twelve.

39,959. Have the cottars any stock?—Yes, two of them have stock.

39,960. And their stock grazes upon the crofters' land?—Yes.

39,961. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—How many crofters are in Smerclette?—Twelve.

39,962. How many whole crofts are in Smerclette?—Three.

39,963. How many crofts are divided?—Nine.

39,964. Into how many crofts are the nine divided?—Eight of them were divided into two, and three families on the other.

39,965. Do the eight that are divided into two make 16 crofts?—Yes.

39,966. That makes a total of 22 crofters?—Yes.

39,967. About 40 years ago there were only 12 crofters there?—Yes.

39,968. And to-day there are over 20 crofters?—Yes.

39,969. Was that sub-division of crofts made by the estate or by the people themselves?—They were not cut down by the order of the estate: father and son divided them between them.

Donald Currie.

DONALD CURRIE, South Lochboisdale (58)—examined.

39,970. Mr Forsyth.—Have you heard the evidence of Hector Macintyre, South Lochboisdale?—No, I was out at the time.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Donald Currie.

39,971. Did you hear the evidence given by the other witnesses?—No.

39,972. Were you not in the church?—No, not at that time.

39,973. Is your township greatly overcrowded?—Yes, there were only five crofts, and there are 14 tenants. But there were others as well.

39,974. Do you speak for yourself, or were you appointed a delegate at any meeting?—I was appointed by the township.

39,975. Are the whole of your neighbours anxious to get larger crofts than you have at present?—I believe most of them are.

39,976. How many crofts could the township contain comfortably?—That is a hard question to me. One of them has a croft already, and there are three on each other croft.

39,977. Would they be willing to go to other crofts if they got them?—Quite willing.

39,978. And do you think they would be able to stock them if they got them?—They could be able to stock a fair one.

39,979. Do they fish there?—Sometimes, but they are not dependent on the fishing at all.

39,980. They don't own boats, do they?—Small boats: they can't do without boats.

39,981. Do they go to the herring fishing?—Yes, as hired men to the East Coast.

39,982. But they have not a boat for herring fishing in this quarter?—No.

39,983. They make their living partly off their croft and partly by fishing and labour on the mainland?—Yes, they are Jacks-of-all-trades.

39,984. Do you think they would be able to take crofts, and stock them?—Most of them could, and I do believe they would build houses to suit themselves too.

39,985. There is no land in your immediate neighbourhood, is there, that would be suitable for an extension?—Yes.

39,986. Where?—There is a place capable of being cultivated that is very suitable in Baghartaval, in Glendale tack, and another place in South Lochboisdale, opposite the north side of the pier.

39,987. Is that near the Sound of Eriskay?—No.

38,988. Is it called Stor House?—Yes.

39,989. Is there some arable land there?—Yes, very good land.

39,990. Have there been crofts there before?—Yes, but not in my day. I have seen 13 or 14, but I was very young at the time: it was at the famine time.

39,991. But there is a general demand for land in the township?—Yes.

39,992. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—I should like your opinion as to the size of holding that would suit the people that you represent, and the part of the country you speak about. Would they go in for large crofts that would keep a family all the year round without any labour of any kind outside the croft, or would what is called a fisherman's croft suit them better?—I think a middle size of that kind would suit us better.

39,993. The smaller size?—Yes.

39,994. Do you believe it would be a great advantage, then, on the coast there, where there is old arable land to make small holdings, say, that would carry a cow or two and a small stock of sheep, and combine the croft with the fishing industry?—Yes, 14 or 15 acres or even 12 acres would suit them fine, as far as I could judge. But a pastoral land is every bit as good to them.

39,995. But not a large holding?—Not on our side.

39,996. And combining a croft with fishing, making the two work together?—Yes, that is my opinion.

Ronald Macdonald.

RONALD MACDONALD, Crofter, North Lochboisdale (79)—examined.

39,997. Mr Forsyth.—You have heard the evidence that has been given to us about North Boisdale: do

* Writing on 20th August, Macmillan stated:—'A short explanation regarding questions 39,953–4 is necessary. There are 200 acres, roughly speaking, of arable land on Kilbride Farm, contiguous to our present holdings. This land is quite convenient to our township, and can be assigned to us without material damage to the remainder of the farm. There is plenty of pasture land on this and South Lochboisdale which might be assigned to us.'

you agree with it?—I do not belong to there; it is about Loch Eynort I wish to give evidence, although I am residing at Lochboisdale in the meantime.

39,998. Is there land in Loch Eynort suitable for crofts?—Plenty.

39,999. Could large crofts be made there, or fishermen's crofts?—There were men in it in my days; I was for 30 years living in it myself, and my father was in it all his days, and my grandfather and my great-grandfather, but at the time that Dr Macgillivray got that into his tack, along with Ormaclette, we were forced by law out of that, and I was sent out to the height of Inishival there: they made a new mill, and the miller was shifted up, and my small croft was put into his, and I had to move again, and then I took the road to Glasgow, and I was over 30 years before I saw this country, and when I came back I could not get rest in it at all. I was not belonging to the place at all, and I had to go to Lady Gordon Cathcart before I would get liberty to build a turf house in North Lochboisdale. I have got a letter from Edinburgh to give a statement from the north side of this island before the Royal Commission.

39,999A. It is about Loch Eynort: can you tell us anything more about Loch Eynort; is it a good place for fishing, a good harbour?—I could tell you every place; you can call them crofts or lots or whatever you like. There were 17 on Loch Eynort, and there were 32 families living in them.

40,000. It has a good harbour?—Yes, but it is very difficult to get into.

40,001. And suitable for fishermen's crofts?—Yes.

40,002. How long is it since you returned from Glasgow?—Fifteen years.

40,003. And you were 30 years in Glasgow?—Yes.

40,004. Have you got any land now?—I have got a wee bit, by the order of Lady Cathcart, to build a house on, and a wee bit round it for potatoes.

40,005. Do you pay any rent?—No.

40,006. What land is there near you that you could get for crofter holdings?—I have no call for land.

40,007. You don't want land for yourself?—No, I am quite content with the wee bit I have, till I go to my grave, for I am an old man, but there are plenty in the locality where I am that need land.

40,008. Where is the land that could be converted into crofters holdings?—There is plenty of land.

40,009. Tell us the farms?—Down from Russell to the Sound of Loch Skipport, all the north side of the country, where I have seen in my day 40 crofts in that distance: it was 54 families that lived in it in my days, about 50 years ago. Now it is only shepherds that have it.

40,010. Is there room to-day for 54 families there?—Yes, but at that time what killed them altogether and spoiled this country was when they lost all the hills.

40,011. The pasture, you mean?—Yes, all the places put for sheep and cattle and made into tacks. And the fact of the matter is that the land of this country altogether is in the hands of strangers, and those who were natives are crushed into every corner and worthless.

40,012. Can you tell us the name of the tack that these townships are in?—Milton and Ormaclette.

40,013. Do you remember the evictions from those places yourself?—I should have mind of that.

40,014. When was it now?—I could not give you the exact date.

40,015. Was it about 1846?—Indeed, it is about 35 or 36 years ago since it was put into Ormaclette.

40,016. Mr Maccallum.—Are there many people now on Loch Eynort?—I don't know how many are crowded on the head of the loch. I never was in the place for a long time back.

40,017. Have these got any land, do you know?—I don't know; I could say nothing about it: I have had no great knowledge of it since I left.

40,018. Then, when you remember that, there were townships, I take it, on the north side and on the south side of Loch Eynort?—Yes.

40,019. The north side is Ormaclette?—Yes.

40,020. Now, can you give us the names of the townships that you remember there?—Yes.

40,021. Name them, beginning at the head of the loch going east?—The first one at the foot of the loch they call Na Haun.

40,022. How many families were there?—Three.

40,023. And they held land, did they?—Yes.

40,024. And I suppose they prosecuted the fishing too?—Yes.

40,025. The next?—Rudha-na-Glaic.

40,026. How many families were there?—Four.

40,027. And what is the next one?—Rudha-mhuilt.

40,028. How many families?—Two.

40,029. Then the next?—Horscec.

40,030. How many families?—Only one family,—my father. I was brought up there.

40,031. Any more?—Airidh-nam-ban.

40,032. How many there?—Three.

40,033. Any more on the north side of Loch Eynort?—Rudha-na-meinn.

40,034. How many families?—Two.

40,035. Any more?—Strom-Dubh.

40,036. How many families?—One.

40,037. Next?—Calavie.

40,038. How many there?—Two.

40,039. Any more?—Ianava, at the head of the loch. That is all in the north.

40,040. And these are now in Ormaclette?—Yes.

40,041. Were there any townships on the east side of Ormaclette, not on the loch side?—I don't know how far they were down. There is Bolum.

40,042. Was that an old township?—Yes, Bolum.

40,043. How many families would be there?—Two. Then comes Cormascott.

40,044. How many were there?—One. Next is Liadle.

40,045. How many there?—Three. Hellisdale, two families. I suppose that is as far as Ormaclette goes north.

40,046. Then in the farm of Milton, on the south of Loch Eynort, can you give us the townships there?—Yes. But I suppose they don't all belong to Milton. Some of them may belong to Bornish, but I could give you them all.

40,047. On the south side of Loch Eynort then?—Kirkidale, one family; Cragavaig, one; Aird-bhuidhe, one; Freacarry, one; Unasary, one; Poltorran, one. That is all that were there in my days.

40,048. And you think that all these places are well fitted for fishermen's crofts?—They were not fishermen at that time, but they had the penny bit of outside land.

40,049. They had the hill along with it?—They could put as many sheep and cattle there as they liked. I have mind of one of the name of Macrae, who was in Askernish, who had the Frobost North and Frobost South rented, and he had crofters on them, keeping only Askernish for himself, and the hills, and had his own herds and shepherds. He was keeping 190 black cattle and 600 sheep on the hills.

40,050. Do you think that the places on Loch Eynort would be taken up by people now if they got the opportunity of getting them?—Well, I could not say: I believe so. I believe there are plenty of poor men in the country who would be glad to have it if they could get it.

40,051. Then do you remember of tenants being in Bornish?—Yes, in Upper Bornish and Lower Bornish.

40,052. How many tenants would there be in the two Bornishes?—There were 20 crofts in Upper Bornish and 17 in Lower Bornish.

40,053. Then, coming to the tack of Milton on the west side, what are the townships that were occupied there?—I could give no information about them at all south of Bornish, but it is the two branches of Ormaclette that were opposite where I was brought up, and I know how many crofts were there and all the people that were living in them.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Ronald Macdonald.

40,054. Were the tenants of the two Bornishes in comfortable circumstances when you remember?—Oh, yes.

40,055. And you think that Bornish would still support a tenantry comfortably?—Oh, yes.

40,056. Is the land in Bornish much better than any land that is held by the crofters?—It is not better than any other, but as good as any other anywhere, and there are very few places that the crofters have as good as the two Bornishes.

40,057. Then, are these the only places that you wish to speak about?—Yes, that is all: I could go no further than that.

40,058. Do you know the farm of Drimisdale?—Oh, yes, I know the place, but I don't know what way it is situated: but there are plenty here who could tell you about it.

40,059. Mr Donald Macrae.—You have given very fully the population on both sides of the loch. I should like to know if you could give equally fully and clearly the names of any townships that were occupied between Loch Eynort and Lochboisdale, on the east side of the island, in the neighbourhood of the coast. Were there crofters there at one time?—Yes.

40,060. How many do you know?—I have mind of Rory Steele being beside the Clachan, and I don't know what you call the other man: a man in Glen Usifal of the name of Mackechnie. There was also one in Caolas Folla; Donald Macdonald in Rudha Gate, and Dougald Macissac in Glenmore, and that is all that were between the two lochs.

Angus Campbell.

ANGUS CAMPBELL, North Lochboisdale (70).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

40,061. Mr Forsyth.—There has been a good deal of evidence about North Boisdale. Have you got anything to add to it?—We complain of the small size of the crofts, and we want to get more land.

40,062. Do you agree with what the others have said?—I, myself, complain of having too small a croft, and my children are obliged to leave the country and go to sea.

Donald Maccormick.

DONALD MACCORMICK, Crofter, North Lochboisdale (60).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

40,063. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

40,064. Do you agree with the evidence that has been given us, largely from North Lochboisdale, as to the want of more land?—Yes, I fully agree with all I heard as to the scarcity of land.

40,065. Would you go and take a new croft yourself if you got a better one than you have?—Yes, it is I that need that and I would be very glad to go.

40,066. Then we may take you as agreeing generally with the evidence before us?—Yes.

40,067. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—When did you get the croft that you occupy to-day?—Thirty-six years ago.

40,068. Had you a holding before then?—No.

40,069. Had your father a holding?—Not in Lochboisdale.

40,070. Had he a holding anywhere else?—He had land in Loch Eynort.

40,071. What is the name of the township where he lived?—Unasary.

40,072. What rent was he paying there?—He was paying no rent, he was a herd.

40,073. Had he a croft there?—He had no croft.

40,074. Do you remember your father leaving that township?—Yes.

40,075. How many tenants were in it?—There were none on the very spot where my father was because he was a herd.

40,076. Would a croft there be better than where your present croft is?—Yes, much better.

40,077. Who built the house in which you reside?—Myself.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Donald Maccormick.

40,078. If you got a new holding, would you be able to build the house without any help?—Yes, I would prefer to be without the land.

Angus Maclellan.

ANGUS MACLELLAN, Loch Eynort (64).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

40,079. Mr Forsyth.—Have you a house on Loch Eynort?—Yes.

40,080. Do you pay any rent for it?—No.

40,081. How do you support yourself, is it by fishing?—By fishing. I hold a croft from Mr John Ferguson: I was paying the rent to him, but his cattle were falling in upon me and spoilt me so much that I was not able to continue to pay the rent, and, therefore, Ferguson tried me harder.

40,082. Was this at Loch Eynort?—Yes.

40,083. And now you have no land and are paying no rent?—That is so. He took the croft from me and I am paying no rent now.

40,084. And you have no land?—When the Crofters Commission was here Sheriff Brand interfered with the business between me and Ferguson. They lifted £27 from me for arrears of rent.

40,085. Who took £27 from you?—John Ferguson, Bornish. Then I could not pay those who were supplying me with meal. All that I had was taken from me, and I could not pay my debts.

40,086. Do you come here to state that you are willing to take a holding if you had the chance of one?—Yes.

40,087. Mr Maccallum.—What is the name of the place where you reside?—Poltorran.

40,088. Is that on the farm of Bornish?—Yes.

40,089. And is it a croft house you have, or who built the house in which you live?—My own children, two years ago.

40,090. Did you get permission for building it?—I had the croft at the time the house was built, and the children built the house on it.

40,091. On your own croft?—Yes, on my own croft.

40,092. You were paying rent, were you, to the tenant of Bornish?—Yes.

40,093. As sub-tenant?—Yes.

40,094. What rent did you pay?—£4, 10s.

40,095. Did you apply to the Crofters Commission to fix a fair rent?—Yes, but the Commissioners said they would have nothing to do with me, and they were sorry for that.

40,096. And you understood the reason why they could not fix your rent was that you were a sub-tenant?—Yes.

40,097. Was it after you applied to the Crofters Commission that you were put out of the land?—Yes.

40,098. Was that shortly after you made the application?—About a year after the Commission came.

40,099. How is the croft now occupied that you had?—A neighbour of mine has it: a friend of the tacksmans.

40,100. Has the occupier of the croft a house on it?—He has a house but not on that croft.

40,101. It was added to a neighbouring croft, was it?—Yes, the one was added to the other.

40,102. Are there any more crofts in your neighbourhood?—Three crofts altogether.

40,103. How long did you occupy that croft?—I was 35 or 36 years there.

40,104. And you were paying rent during these years, I suppose?—I had the cattle before I had the croft, but when he saw that I had a small stock coming on, he then cut out a small bit for me, and made a croft of it.

40,105. Do you follow the fishing now?—Yes, I have nothing else to bring myself through but that.

40,106. Is there much land in your neighbourhood that could be utilised for crofts?—No, excepting those that are cut into crofts already.

40,107. You mean that there is suitable land on the alibrog, outh Uist.

ngus aclellan.

mes aclean.

Bornish tack: is there land there suitable for making new crofts?—Yes, plenty on Bornish tack for crofts: there were plenty crofts there before. Every inch of it was crofting land before.

JAMES MACLEAN, Crofter, Stoneybridge (58). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

40,108. Mr Forsyth.—How many crofters are there in Stoneybridge?—Forty crofts.

40,109. And how many crofters?—Forty also.

40,110. Are there any cottars?—Fourteen cottars.

40,111. What rent do you pay?—£1, 15s.

40,112. Have you got a whole croft in Stoneybridge?—A half croft.

40,113. Are many of the crofts in Stoneybridge half crofts?—Twelve.

40,114. Do these 14 cottars keep stock, or the most of them?—Some of them do.

40,115. Are your crofts too small?—Yes.

40,116. You cannot live on them, can you?—No, we cannot.

40,117. How do you make out a living, the croft being so small?—No way but working from place to place, at anything we can get to do.

40,118. Is there a desire among the people of Stoneybridge for larger holdings?—Yes.

40,119. Would some of them move out and go elsewhere if they could get better holdings?—They would be very glad.

40,120. Would they give up their present holdings so that they might be added to those that remained to make them larger?—Yes, they would do that.

40,121. Then that is the desire of the Stoneybridge people, is it?—Yes, so they tell me.

40,122. Mr Maccallum.—Where would the people like to remove to?—To the nearest land: the land that was taken from themselves. That is what they want.

40,123. What land is that?—Ormaclette.

40,124. Were they at one time removed from Ormaclette to Stoneybridge?—Yes, when Ormaclette was let to Dr Macgillivray, 15 of them were removed and sent to Stoneybridge. There were only 24 crofts before that, and it was then that the number of crofts were increased. There was no room for the people but to press them together.

40,125. So they were put there by the proprietor or the management of the estate?—Yes.

40,126. At what time was that?—About 50 or 52 years ago.

40,127. And had they to give up crofts in Ormaclette?—Yes, good crofts; the machair and hill ground was taken from them at the same time that the people were sent to Stoneybridge.

40,128. And to what place was the machair added?—To Ormaclette farm.

40,129. That was part of the most valuable land in Stoneybridge, wasn't it?—Yes.

40,130. Was your hill pasture diminished?—We lost the whole of it almost: only a small patch of mossy ground was left to us that no beast would live in.

40,131. How is Ormaclette held: who is the tenant of it?—Ranald Macdonald.

40,132. He is Commissioner for Lady Gordon-Cathcart, isn't he?—Yes.

40,133. Now, seeing that you are so very much congested, did you not think it well to make application to the Crofters Commission for an extension of your grazing and arable land?—We do not care to whom we apply: we will take it from whomsoever we get it.

40,134. Did you make application to the Crofters Commission then for an extension of holdings?—Yes.

40,135. And did you get it?—No.

40,136. Do you know on what ground it was refused to you?—I don't know.

40,137. Has the application been heard and decided?—We never heard any more about it.

40,138. Has it been made known to you that your application is not granted?—We heard last week that they might get some. Dalibrog, South Uist.

40,139. From whom did that letter come?—From the agent of the proprietrix. James Maclean.

40,140. But I want to find out from you the result of the application to the Crofters Commission?—We never heard anything about it.

40,141. Do you know whether the application was opposed, on the part of the estate for instance?—I don't know that.

40,142. When did you make the application?—When the Commission was here last.

40,143. And do you state that you have no knowledge as to whether that application was concurred in or was opposed by the estate?—I know nothing about that.

40,144. But, in your opinion, there is land in your immediate neighbourhood very suitable for additions to your holdings?—Yes, I am convinced that it is suitable for crofts.

40,145. And you have been applying for that land year after year for a long period?—Yes.

40,146. And you have been refused?—Yes.

40,147. And the land is held by the Commissioner for Lady Gordon-Cathcart?—Yes.

40,148. He has shown no readiness therefore to accommodate you or to meet your wishes?—No, I know nothing about it.

40,149. You were not aware that the finding of the Crofters Commission was that the land could not be granted because the farm was let on lease to Ranald Macdonald for a period of 19 years, from Whitsunday 1876?—We are not sure, but we were thinking if it was in the hands of any other body he would not be so hard upon us.

JOHN MACDONALD, Cottar, Stoneybridge (35). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.) John Macdonald.

40,150. Mr Forsyth.—Are there 14 cottars in Stoneybridge?—Yes.

40,151. And they have no land at all?—No.

40,152. Are you desirous of obtaining holdings in that neighbourhood, if they were to be got?—Yes.

40,153. Would you prefer a holding that would be a self-supporting one, or would you wish to support yourself partly by labour?—I would prefer a croft to keep me going all the year round.

40,154. What size would you require for that; or to carry what stock?—Six cows and two horses and twenty sheep.

40,155. And you think there is plenty of land in South Uist available for that if you could get it?—Yes, plenty.

PETER MACINTYRE, Howbeg (40). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.) Peter Macintyre.

40,156. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

40,157. What rent do you pay?—£1, 10s.

40,158. How many crofters are there in Howbeg?—Eighteen.

40,159. Have you got a whole croft?—The third part of a croft only.

40,160. How have these crofts got so divided?—The people being numerous and the land scarce.

40,161. They were sub-divided by sons coming into their father's crofts, were they?—Very few of them in that way: they were divided by the proprietor.

40,162. Did the proprietor sub-divide any of them?—It was the proprietor that divided them.

40,163. Do you appear on behalf of this township?—Yes, but there is another man too.

40,164. Do you people at Howbeg wish to live on self-sustaining crofts?—Yes, we cannot live as we are.

40,165. And would some of you be willing to move elsewhere to make room for the remainder?—Oh, yes: one-half of us would be willing to move to-morrow morning.

40,166. Mr Maccallum.—You say that the crofts

Dalibrog, South Uist.

Peter Macintyre.

were divided by the authority of the proprietor. Can you say where the people came from that got these sub-divided crofts?—There were five crofts originally: there are some living yet who saw them divided into five crofts. There are ten now; two whole ones and eight divided.

40,167. Where did the people come from who took up parts of the crofts?—One of them came from Barra, and some from other townships, but I cannot tell very well.

40,168. What is the place that you look to for relief?—Drimisdale is the most convenient.

40,169. Is there room on Drimisdale for a large number of new holdings?—Yes, it would take one-half of the crofters between this and that.

40,170. Is it a large farm?—One of the largest in Uist, there is only one larger I think.

40,171. Can you give us any idea of the stock of it?—No, I cannot, the man is newly there and I don't know what stock he has.

40,172. Is it mainly a sheep farm or a cattle farm?—Both.

40,173. Can you give any idea of the number of cattle on it for instance?—No.

40,174. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Is there old arable land in the immediate neighbourhood of Howbeg that could be added to the township?—Yes, in Drimisdale: but there is a township between us and that: we are blocked up in the middle between two townships.

40,175. So that there is no arable land bordering on you in the farm of Drimisdale that could be added to your township?—East and west, and we had it on the east coast before.

40,176. Was arable land taken from Howbeg and added to the tack of Drimisdale?—No, but there was hill ground. Usinish was once in the possession of the Howbeg people, but it is now added to Drimisdale.

40,177. Is this the fact then, that Usinish at one time was a part of Howbeg, and that they had arable land there, and that that part called Usinish is now a part of the farm of Drimisdale?—The hill ground that was taken from us up to a march dyke, that is between us.

40,178. Is there land there that could be made into arable land?—Plenty.

40,179. When was that hill taken from Howbeg?—About 50 years ago.

40,180. Has the township of Howbeg ever applied to the estate for restoration of that land?—I think they did, many a time.

40,181. Is there a fence between you and that land?—Yes, an iron fence.

40,182. When was it put up?—They are working at it to-day and for more than a year.

40,183. When did they begin to put it up?—In the beginning of June last year.

40,184. If, instead of putting up a fence there, they had given you that land, would you be able to add enough, to reclaim enough land to make your crofts large enough and your arable land sufficient if you got plenty hill along with it?—Yes, if we got the shore of Usinish, and the hill.

40,185. So that by breaking this farm and by giving you down to the sea and giving you Usinish, and restoring the old boundaries of the township, do you believe that would put your township into a comfortable condition?—Yes, and if some of us would be allowed to go out and live there.

Neil Johnston.

NEIL JOHNSTON, Cottar, Howbeg (46)—examined.

40,186. Mr Forsyth.—You have no land, have you?—No.

40,187. Have any of the cottars any stock at Howbeg?—Yes.

40,188. How many cottars are there altogether there?—Six.

40,189. Then if you have any stock it is kept upon the crofters' land?—Yes. Dalibrog, South Uist.

40,190. How do you men who have no land manage to make a living at Howbeg: is it by getting work?—Yes. Neil Johnston.

40,191. Just by such work as you can get about the country?—Yes.

40,192. Do you go away to the herring fishing?—No.

40,193. You have a pension yourself?—Yes.

40,194. You were a soldier, were you?—I was.

40,195. But some of the other cottars have no pension, and how do they manage?—Just by getting work.

40,196. And are all the cottars desirous of getting crofts, if crofts could be found for them?—Yes.

40,197. And you have come here representing them to state this before us to-day, that they all wish for land if they could get it?—Yes.

40,198. And do they wish enough land to maintain them altogether, or do they just wish small crofts?—Large crofts.

40,199. Self-sustaining crofts on which a man could live, without work elsewhere?—Yes.

40,200. Mr Maccallum.—What, in your own opinion, is the most suitable place for them to be placed in, the cottars of Howbeg if they were removed?—Drimisdale.

40,201. Then you agree with what the preceding witness said with regard to Drimisdale?—Yes.

40,202. And is there any other place that you would like to speak about besides the farm of Drimisdale as suitable?—Unish is also suitable, a place called Laidle, in the Drimisdale hill ground.

40,203. We have heard all that from the preceding witness, unless you would like to speak of some other large farm?—Yes, Geirinish farm.

40,204. Is that a large farm?—Yes.

40,205. Is Geirinish cultivated for the most part, or is it left on pasture?—Cultivated and grazing both.

40,206. Is there much old arable land left under pasture?—Yes, plenty.

40,207. Were there crofters in Geirinish before?—Yes, plenty.

40,208. When were they last there?—About 50 years ago.

40,209. How many tenants do you think there were in it 50 years ago?—I am not very sure, but there would be a dozen at any rate.

40,210. You heard that there was about that number of people there, did you?—Yes.

40,211. And do you think that it is fit to support that number of families comfortably now?—I think so.

Donald Macintyre.

DONALD MACINTYRE, Crofter, Snishival (63). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

40,212. Mr Forsyth.—Were you appointed a delegate from Snishival at a meeting?—Yes.

40,213. How many crofts are there there?—Twelve at first: 14½ to-day.

40,214. How did these crofts get to be divided?—Two came from Ormaclette Farm: they were removed from it and sent to Snishival.

40,215. Were they put upon your township by the estate?—It was the factor that ordered them there.

40,216. What rent do you pay?—£3, 5s.

40,217. That is for a full croft, is it?—Yes.

40,218. What stock have you?—Four cows and two horses.

40,219. Do you find yourself able to live on your croft, without doing work outside?—No.

40,220. Do you go and get work outside?—Yes, I do get work sometimes for payment.

40,221. Do you fish at all?—No.

40,222. Are the people of Snishival desirous of getting larger holdings?—Yes, every one that speaks, speaks of the scarcity of the land.

40,223. Mr Munro.—You say you don't live on the croft you occupy at present?—No.

40,224. If you got a larger croft, could you live upon it without any outside assistance?—I think I would.

40,225. What size of croft do you think you would require to live upon?—About 40 acres.

DONALD MACINTYRE, Cottar, Snishival (67).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

40,226. Mr Forsyth.—Were you asked to come to represent the cottars?—Yes.

40,227. How many cottars are there?—Two, along with myself.

40,228. And do the cottars there require land?—Yes.

40,229. They are all anxious to live on the land, are they?—Yes.

40,230. How are they getting a living now?—They get a little from other three townships, Howbeg, Snishival, and Stoneybridge. They live on the common ground between them.

40,231. And there is not much work to be had close by, is there?—No, I don't know of it: if there is work, we don't get it. We require land very much.

HECTOR MACINTYRE, Crofter, Howmore (77)—examined.

40,232. Mr Forsyth.—How old are you?—Seventy-seven, according to the information I got from my mother.

40,233. How many crofters are there at Howmore?—Twelve crofts, and two on each of them, except four.

40,234. How did these crofts get sub-divided so much?—The people were getting so numerous and so poor and they could not pay the rent, and part of it was given to them.

40,235. Then the crofts are altogether too small now?—Yes.

40,236. And you cannot live on them?—When my family were weak, I could not pay the rent, so I had to let part of the land go, but if I had it to-day, when my family are strong, I could pay my rent.

40,237. Then, could you undertake a fair sized holding if you got the chance of it?—Yes, wherever I would get it.

40,238. And you would move to another place to get one, would you?—Yes, anywhere.

40,239. And do you think there is land available in this island?—I know there is. There is a tack close to us and only one man with one child on it.

DONALD BEATON, Loch Skipport (56).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

40,240. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a crofter?—No.

40,241. A cottar?—Yes.

40,242. Are there any crofts in Loch Skipport?—Only one.

40,243. You have a house and no land?—Yes.

40,244. How do you maintain yourself?—I live at the expense of others.

40,245. You mean that you have some stock which you graze there?—I have some stock, and I am a fisherman.

40,246. Who grazes your stock for you?—Mr Ferguson, Drimisdale, gives me grazing now.

40,247. Is there any arable land on Loch Skipport available for crofts?—Yes, people lived there before.

40,248. On which side of the loch?—On the south side where I live.

40,249. Are you anxious to get a croft there if that could be arranged for?—Yes.

40,250. Mr Maccallum.—Is Loch Skipport side a suitable place for fishing crofts?—I think it suitable for fishing crofts; it is a good fishing place.

40,251. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Could the people who want land and who want crofts that would permit of their prosecuting the fishing industry, build the necessary houses in the event of their getting the land without Government aid?—I think so.

JOHN CAMPBELL, Crofter, Eriskay (55)—examined.

40,252. Mr Forsyth.—How many crofts are there in Eriskay?—About 62, and 90 tenants.

40,253. What kind of rent do these crofts pay, most of them?—In former times they paid pretty hard rents for them.

40,254. But since the visit of the Crofters Commission?—They got a little reduction of course: some of them pay 35s. to 40s., and on to £4 and downwards.

40,255. There is a good deal of fishing done in your island?—It is all fishing together.

40,256. It is mostly by fishing you live?—Mostly.

40,257. Do you find these holdings too small for fishermen's crofts?—Too small.

40,258. Although you prosecute the fishing, you would like more land?—Decidedly, we are all jammed together and have hardly room to walk.

40,259. Where do you think there is land available for men like yourself near you?—Across the Sound where we have been flitted from.

40,260. Glendale?—Glendale and Kilbride Farm. We have all been flitted across from that place or from Barra.

40,261. Are there many men on Eriskay who have no land at all?—There are ten cottars.

40,262. Are any of the cottars here to-day?—I am acting for them.

40,263. You represent the cottars as well as the crofters?—Yes.

40,264. And these men who have no land would like to get even a small holding if they could?—Yes, that is the one thing for them if they can get it, but they have waited a long time for it.

40,265. I suppose you would require considerably larger holdings if you could get them?—Yes.

40,266. But you don't wish to leave the sea?—No, just a small holding, with the sea and the croft both.

40,267. But still larger than you have?—Yes, larger than we have.

40,268. You Eriskay people find that fishing helps to a good living, and you would rather combine fishing and a bit of crofting?—Yes, to keep a few cattle and sheep.

40,269. And that is the mind of the people of Eriskay, is it?—Yes, fishing and land.

40,270. Mr Munro.—How is it that the fishing is prosecuted so successfully in Eriskay and not in Uist?—Because we were all fishermen there, since ever we were born, and following the sea always. It is not like the South Uist men at all, because we are at the seaside and have plenty of boats, big and small.

40,271. Or is it really because the people have nothing else to do but to fish?—Nothing at all but the fishing.

40,272. Is it your experience that a man can cultivate land and prosecute the fishing, and do justice to both?—Decidedly.

40,273. Because I have heard a number of people say that that could not be done?—Well, it could be done in our island whatever, and in all the seaside portion.

40,274. The whole of Eriskay is occupied by crofters?—Yes.

40,275. And you could not get additional land without coming to Uist?—Not an inch.

40,276. Would you be willing to leave Eriskay and come to Uist?—To-morrow morning.

40,277. And would you pursue the fishing after coming to Uist, the same?—Yes, exactly the same.

40,278. Where is the most suitable land for fishers?—The most suitable land for Eriskay people is to thin the people out of the island and send them across the Sound to Kilbride, where there is a place suitable for boats. Then at Bagharstava again for big boats, there is plenty room to come in. Six farmers could do there with their boats and fishing, but no more.

40,279. Supposing that a number of you were planted in Uist, do you think it would have the effect of inducing or tempting the other crofters to try their hand at fishing too? Would your example have that influence upon them?—In our side they must do it; there is nothing else for them: they cannot get a day's work there at all.

Dalibrog, South Uist.

John Campbell.

40,280. But I wish to know what you think would be the probable effect of your leaving Eriskay and settling down in Uist as regards fishing: would that have the effect of inducing the other crofters in Uist to experiment in fishing also?—Well, I don't think that either: I don't see through that at all.

40,281. You don't think it would induce the other crofters to engage in fishing?—I don't suppose so; I don't see how that could be.

40,282. Where do you get a market for your fish?—There is a merchant there who buys it from us fresh as we catch it, and salts it and sends it to market. It is they who get the benefit of it.

40,283. Mr Maccallum.—The island of Eriskay is a very barren island, is it?—Yes, all rocky together.

40,284. How did the people come to be settled on this island?—The way it was settled is that they were sent away from Uist across the Sound: they were in Kilbride Farm: and some of them were down at Usinish there and others at Bagharstava, and others at the north end of Barra Island, in the islands that Eoligarry has now.

40,285. Were they removed from the old places with the view of benefiting them?—If they were moved to the old places they would have something to go and come upon.

40,286. But I am speaking of the first removal: when they were removed from Kilbride and the other places, by the proprietor I suppose, do you think it was with the view of benefiting these people that they were sent to Eriskay?—No, it cannot be.

40,287. Why were they removed then?—That is more than I am able to tell you in the meantime; I was born just about that time.

40,288. In your opinion they were sent from much more comfortable places than they have in Eriskay?—Well, some of them.

40,289. They were removed from a better place to a worse?—Yes.

40,290. All of them?—Yes.

40,291. And crowded there?—Crowded there.

40,292. In a place where they could not possibly make a living from the land?—Not at all: nothing near it. There is no land there now to make a living from: it is all away with the wind and rain, washed away altogether: nothing but rocks now.

40,293. How much do you pay for the whole island between you?—By George! that is no little. [Mr Paterson, factor.—£85.]

40,294. The rent as now fixed by the Crofters Commission is £85. Do you think that is as high a rent as any one farmer would give for it, if it were let as one tack?—Well, I believe it is: it is too much for it in the meantime.

40,295. You would think that any farmer who would have it at that rent would be highly rented?—I really think so.

40,296. On the island of Eriskay I understand that they are well situated for fishing?—Oh, yes, there is no mistake about that.

40,297. But if they got new places in Kilbride and South Lochboisdale, would they be quite as well situated for fishing as they are on Eriskay?—Just every bit.

40,298. Mr Gordon.—Where is the harbour you would use in South Lochboisdale?—Lochboisdale itself; the whole of Lochboisdale is all hollows together, both sides, that is all creeks and corners.

40,299. But not on the Sound of Eriskay?—No, there are only two places there for safety: what they call Rudha-na-mona and Saltavich, and then Bagharstavagh, again on the east side of Glendale.

40,300. Mr P. R. Buik, W.S., representing the estate.—Who had Eriskay before the crofters went there?—As far as I can learn, I think it was Mr Ferguson and Mr Cameron and someone else.

40,301. And do you know what rent they paid?—No I don't know.

40,302. You are not aware that it was £120?—I don't know at all.

Dalibrog, South U

John Campbe

40,303. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Your opinion is of very considerable value in this matter. You are a fisherman and a crofter?—Yes.

40,304. Do you know men in this part of the country who are fishermen but who have no land at all, who follow the fishing, and who have to make their living altogether out of the sea, say in South Uist or in the Long Island generally?—Yes, there are some there, of course.

40,305. Are there some in Eriskay, heads of families, who have no land at all?—There are ten.

40,306. Is it a great advantage to a man who has to follow the fishing in these parts to have a piece of land?—Yes, a great advantage and a great benefit to the family.

40,307. Can these men who have these crofts follow the fishing quite as well as those who have no croft at all?—Just the very same.

40,308. They are fishermen, every bit just as good as the others?—Every bit.

40,309. And there is more comfort in their families?—Yes.

40,310. And the fishermen who have no land have a strong desire to get a small croft, are you aware of that?—Yes.

40,311. And perfectly satisfied that it would be a great benefit to themselves?—Yes.

RANALD MACDONALD, Cottar, Lochboisdale. (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

Ranald Macdonal

40,312. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a cottar at Lochboisdale here?—Yes.

40,313. You have heard to-day a great deal of evidence of all kinds: have you anything that can throw fresh light upon our inquiry here?—No, I have nothing further.

40,314. Are there many cottars at Lochboisdale itself?—Seven.

40,315. These have no land at all?—No.

40,316. How do they get their living?—They get a bit here and there, and work back and forward.

40,317. By work of all kinds wherever you can get it?—Yes.

40,318. And are you like the rest, anxious to get land to live upon?—Yes.

40,319. That is the opinion of the other cottars who have signed this petition which you have sent in just now?—Yes, undoubtedly.

40,320. Then we may take you as representing them?—Yes.

40,321. Mr Gordon.—Where is the land that you think you would like to get?—For nine miles, extending down the country: I don't care where it is, for there is plenty land.

40,322. It is land to cultivate that you want?—Two kinds, arable and pasture.

40,323. And you think there is plenty of land that would suit you in South Uist?—Yes, supposing there were as many more to get it.

40,324. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Is it entirely out of the sea that you make your living?—No.

40,325. Do you follow the fishing at all?—No.

40,326. If you got a holding as you wish, would you like to follow the fishing along with being a crofter?—I would not be pleased unless I was enabled to follow the fishing partly.

40,327. So that the croft you have in view is a croft that would be a home for the family, and that would permit of your following the fishing?—That is the very thing: if my wife and family had plenty of potatoes and meal, and I could follow the fishing myself.

40,328. Do you believe that the class that you represent would be able to erect the necessary buildings without any assistance from the Government?—I never heard of any of my people getting any assistance from the Government. They had houses good enough to live in, and I would do the same myself.

40,329. And have the people also this in view, that if they got the land they would pay regularly a Fair Rent for it?—We want nothing for nothing.

(The petition referred to in question 40,319 is as follows):—

LOCHBOISDALE, SOUTH UIST,
20*th June* 1894.

To the Royal Commissioners on Deer Forests.

SIRS,—We the undersigned cottars residing at Lochboisdale, respectfully submit for your consideration the following claim:—

As cottars, we are deeply interested and concerned in the objects for which the present Commission has been appointed, and, therefore, we humbly pray that our evidence may be taken in regard to such local matters as bear upon said objects. We wish, in particular, to bring before you our own case, and we feel confident that in doing so we shall be able to throw some light on such other questions as may fall to be considered by you in the course of your visit to South Uist.

We are,
Sirs,
Your obedient servants,

(Signed) 'RANALD MACDONALD,

FORTY-SEVENTH SITTING.

IOCHDAR, SOUTH UIST, June 22, 1894.

Present:—

GEORGE GORDON, Esq. (acting as Chairman).
REV. MALCOLM MACCALLUM.
HENRY MUNRO, Esq.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

Alexander Og Macdonald.

ALEXANDER OG MACDONALD, Crofter, Airdnamoine (76). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

40,331. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

40,332. What is the size of your croft?—I am not sure of the number of acres.

40,333. Are there many crofters in your township?—Yes, but several have only half-crofts.

40,334. How many crofters are there altogether in Airdnamoine?—Seventeen. At first there were eight crofts, but now there are seventeen.

40,335. So that a good many of them are sub-divided into two or more crofts?—Yes, but they have a full share in the machair, and in the sea-ware.

40,336. Are there any cottars in your township?—Yes.

40,337. How many?—Six or seven.

40,338. What stock does a full croft keep?—There are four cows to the souming.

40,339. And how many cows have you?—Five. I have two crofts, or rather two half-crofts.

40,340. Your former rent, I see, was £8?—Yes.

40,341. And your present rent is £6, 2s.?—Yes.

40,342. Is there a demand in your township for larger crofts?—I believe some of them want larger crofts.

40,342A. Do you, yourself, want one?—No.

40,342B. You think your croft is sufficient?—I have plenty land, but it is detached and in too many pieces.

40,343. Are you able to live on the produce of your croft?—It would be hard enough, without assistance from somewhere else. It is the family that supports me.

40,344. Do the crofters in your township make kelp?—They used to, but few do it now. I am the only one in our township who makes it this year.

40,345. How are the other crofters and cottars in the township employed? How do they make a living?—In the same way; they are constantly buying and importing goods, with the assistance of their families.

40,346. They also are dependent on their families for the means of living?—Yes.

40,347. Do the cottars have any stock?—Yes.

40,348. How many have they?—Some have one cow and others two; some have a cow and a horse.

40,349. Do they keep their stock upon the crofters' land?—They are not coming to the crofts exactly just now, but they go on the common grazing, the hills.

40,350. And how do they winter them?—By their own labour.

40,351. Do they buy food to winter them?—They cultivate the land themselves.

40,352. But if they be cottars, they have no land?—No.

40,353. Where is the land they cultivate?—On the other tenants' holdings.

40,354. Would it be a great relief to the crofters if the cottars were removed from the township and got land somewhere else?—Certainly it would.

40,355. Do you know of any place where they could get that land?—Many a place in the country and many a tack in the country.

40,356. But you would require to be a little more specific. Can you mention any particular land?—I am fully aware that those who now prosecute the fishing would be most willing to take lands on Loch Skipport and Ben More, where there used to be plenty tenants.

40,357. You mean on the pasture land, the present hill grazings of Loch Skipport and Ben More?—Yes. Those who were not up to the fishing industry would prefer to be on the arable lands along the west coast.

40,358. Where are these lands to be got?—On the large farms; the largest farm could be given.

40,359. You mentioned incidentally that some of the people are fishermen; are there any harbours about Loch Skipport or the east side of Ben More that would be suitable for a fishing station?—I think so.

40,360. Do you believe that people would be found who would be willing to take land as fishermen on the shores of Loch Skipport?—Yes, there are some here who would.

40,361. Are there many crofter fishermen in Airdnamoine who would take land on Loch Skipport?—I think not; they are not used to a sea-faring life.

40,362. Where do those people live who you think would go to Loch Skipport?—People from Loch Carnan, and from Iochdar here.

40,363. Mr Maccallum.—Do you remember a time when there were fewer crofters in Airdnamoine than there are now?—Yes.

40,364. When was that?—More than 40 years ago.

40,365. How many crofters were in it at that time?—Eight crofters.

40,366. How did they come to be sub-divided to their present number, 17?—Because there were too many people on the place, and two on each croft; they gave them a full share of the machair and a share of the sea-ware, so as to make two holdings out of one.

40,367. Were they divided by the factor, or by the estate, or was it the people themselves?—The estate gave them the places, but the tenants themselves divided the lands.

40,368. Where did they come from?—Some from the township itself, and some from other places.

40,369. When was the last division of a croft made?—Not long since. My own croft was the last one divided.

40,370. And how did that come about?—It happened all right, with the regulations of the estate.

40,371. Was it done by your desire, or only with your consent?—Our own consent; the factor put us all right.

40,372. Has there been any diminution of the land held by the township? Has any land been taken from it?—One croft was taken from us a long time.

40,373. To what was it added?—It was given to another man. The croft was taken from the outrun.

40,374. And how did the cottars come to be settled there?—Every man making a house for himself on the outrun.

40,375. You mentioned Loch Skipport as a suitable place for fishing crofts; do you remember any time when there were fishermen on Loch Skipport?—Yes, I have seen tenants there.

40,376. When was that?—Forty years ago.

40,377. Did they follow the fishing as well as cultivate the land?—Yes.

40,378. What places on Loch Skipport do you remember as having been occupied by crofters?—All those places may be mentioned.

40,379. Just give us them separately, please. What is the first place you remember where there were tenants at one time?—Caolas Liursaidh.

40,380. How many tenants do you remember there?—Only one.

40,381. How large was it?—A good-sized holding.

40,382. Can you give some idea of its size, or of the stock it carried?—I remember the man who was there; he kept eight cows.

40,383. And some sheep?—A few sheep and a horse.

40,384. What was the next place that you saw?—Camus-nam-faochag; it was but a small place.

40,385. Was it just one who was there?—Yes.

40,386. And the next place?—Manach.

40,387. Tell us about it; were there more than one there?—Only one man, in a small lot.

40,388. Any other place?—Airidh-ard.

40,389. How many were there?—One.

hdar, uth Uist.

exander Og cdonald.

40,390. And the next place?—Baile-na-birlinn.

40,391. Was there more than one there?—I only saw one.

40,392. Was that a good holding?—Very middling.

40,393. Would it be a suitable place for a fishing croft?—Very suitable, but rather far away.

40,394. Can you mention any other place?—Ceann-an-tairbeirt.

40,395. Is that on the north side, or on the south?—On the south.

40,396. All the others you mentioned are on the north side of Loch Skipport?—Yes.

40,397. Now, mention those on the south side?—Ceann-an-tairbeirt.

40,398. Tell us how many were in it?—One man.

40,399. What sort of holding was it?—A small place, just for one man.

40,400. Do you remember any other place?—Yes, Cnoc-a'-bhreacain.

40,401. Tell us about that place?—It was a small place suitable for a fisherman.

40,402. Any other place?—A' Chairidh: there were men there before.

40,403. How many families?—One family.

40,404. Is there any person there now?—Yes, there is a man there just now.

40,405. And has he a croft?—Yes.

40,406. Do you remember there having been more than one?—I never saw more than one.

40,407. Can you mention any other place that you remember as occupied?—All along the back of Ben More; but I don't know that place so well as another man here.

40,408. What is the name of the man you refer to?—Roderick Mackinnon.

40,409. These places that you mention are now in the large tacks, I suppose?—Yes.

40,410. How did the people come to be removed from Loch Skipport?—To make room for tacks.

40,411. Is there any place in your own neighbourhood that could be used for an extension to your township, either of arable or grazing land?—No, except what we have ourselves.

40,412. Can you mention any other place besides those already mentioned that would be suitable for removing the people to?—I cannot mention any place, beyond the tacks.

40,413. What tacks?—Any tack you like.

40,414. Are they all suitable?—I think they are.

40,415. What is the nearest large tack to the crofters here?—Geirinish.

40,416. Is that suitable for occupation by crofters?—Yes.

40,417. Is all the arable land on it cultivated?—Yes; there were tenants on it before, all over it.

40,418. Was there more cultivated when the crofters had it than is cultivated now?—Yes.

40,419. So in that case there must be a good deal of the old arable left out?—Yes, plenty of it was never ploughed since the old tenants left it.

40,420. When were the tenants cleared out of Geirinish?—When Mr Gordon bought the estate.

40,421. Where were they sent to?—Some went to America, and some were scattered all over the place, wherever they could get land, here and there.

40,422. Were some of them planted in the crofting townships?—Yes, I was in Geirinish myself.

40,423. And were you removed from that place?—Yes, I was in a place called Gearraidh-fliuch.

40,424. Was that at the time the others were put out of Geirinish?—Yes.

40,425. Were they fairly comfortable in Geirinish?—Yes.

40,426. Better than they are now?—Yes.

40,427. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Did those who were removed from the tacks and who were settled down on crofting townships get any assistance from the estate for building houses?—They did not.

40,428. And yet were they able to build houses themselves as comfortable as the houses of the crofters who were there before them?—Yes.

40,429. Were the people who lived in the old crofting townships more comfortable, in the matter of food and clothing, than the crofters of to-day?—Indeed, they were; their food was better, but the clothing is pretty good yet. Iochdar, South Uist. Alexander Og Macdonald.

40,430. The ancestral pride has not died out?—No, it has not.

40,431. Was money more plentiful? Were the crofters in these townships in command of more money than those of to-day?—Yes.

40,432. Do you remember when the Roman Catholic Chapel and Manse of Bornish were built?—Yes, and the township too.

40,433. Are you aware that there was a large number of tenants round about that Manse at that time?—Yes, plenty.

40,434. How near to it?—All round, north and south of it was full of tenants.

40,435. Is it a fact that those crofter tenants subscribed between £30 and £5 per family for the erection of those buildings at that time?—I know some could give £20, and I know that several did give £5.

40,436. Is it a fact that there are no crofter tenants within miles of that Manse to-day?—The nearest crofter is several miles away.

40,437. Now, supposing the minister left Bornish because there were no people there, and took it into his head to get a manse and a chapel built where the people are, would the crofters of to-day be able to give £5 and £10 per family to assist in the building?—I know they could not: they have enough to do to pay their rent.

40,438. And is the reason for that a change for the worse, that the people were removed from the good lands where they had plenty of it to the poorer lands where they had not enough of it?—That is quite true.

40,439. And are you satisfied, as an old man who has seen the former condition of things and who has had a long experience of the new condition of things, that if the people were removed to the machair lands of the tack, the Highlanders would pull up and be able to pay their way and live in comfort?—Certainly, a man in that place is better of than a man in a bad place.

40,440. Do the people of this quarter look to Government for money to assist them in building houses? Or, if they got new land, would they be able to build new houses without Government assistance?—Yes, they could if they got the lands.

40,441. Mr Maccallum.—With regard to the church and priest's house at Bornish, do you think these buildings were put up by the tenants principally; was it their subscription chiefly that went to the building of the church?—I know that is a fact that I heard.

ANGUS CAMPBELL, Crofter, Stilligarry (73). Angus Campbell.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

40,442. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter at Stilligarry?—Yes, but I have only half a croft.

40,443. Do you appear on behalf of the township, or do you speak for yourself?—For myself.

40,444. Were you appointed at a public meeting to come here and give evidence?—Yes, they told me and others too.

40,445. How many crofters are there in your township?—Ten crofts; one man has got four of them and another man two, and there are three other crofts with six crofters on them.

40,446. That leaves still one to be accounted for?—One has a croft and a half.

40,447. Is there a desire among the smaller crofters for more land?—Yes, how can they live without more land, after being fenced in with an iron fence all round.

40,448. Have you any stock?—We have stock, but we do not keep it on our own lands: we have to pay others to keep it on their land.

40,449. On whose land do you keep the stock?—Those who have plenty lands on the crofts keep their stock there, and that gives an opportunity of sending more stock to the hillpasture.

Iochdar, South Uist.

Angus Campbell.

40,450. The smaller crofter gets the hill grazing?—Yes.

40,451. How did Duncan Maceachan come to have four crofts?—He got them. He had one croft at first, then the Rev. Roderick Macdonald left Grogarry and went to Drimisdale, and he got other two crofts from the factor, Mr Birnie.

40,452. Then he got the crofts from the estate, and not by succession?—Yes, from the estate.

40,453. Now, are there not cottars on your township?—Not many; two.

40,454. And do they keep stock?—They have no stock except perhaps one beast.

40,455. Is there any land near you that could be got for an extension of the crofts, or for new holdings?—Yes, plenty. There is plenty in Drimisdale, land that I was cultivating before, and paying for.

40,456. Were you a crofter in Drimisdale?—No, but in Stilligarry.

40,457. Did you see crofters in Drimisdale?—Yes, I saw crofters there.

40,458. In what part of it?—In every bit of it.

40,459. Are there any old townships in the hill pasture of Drimisdale?—Yes, there were.

40,460. Where?—Every bit of Drimisdale that is cultivated now: upon the home farm. They had some hill pasture along with that.

40,461. Have there been any holdings in your lifetime on the farm of Drimisdale,—any crofts?—Yes, the place belonged to the minister there, who was taking the lands from the proprietor there, and sub-letting them to the people.

40,462. Mr Maccallum.—Was there any diminution of the township of Stilligarry?—No, I am not aware.

40,463. You understand that Stilligarry is just the same size of arable and pasture as it was when you first remember?—No, a good piece of the machair was taken off, and also a piece of the hill pasture.

40,464. Was there much of the machair taken from Stilligarry?—Yes.

40,465. On which side,—the north or the south?—The south.

40,466. When was that?—About 48 years ago.

40,467. Were they removed from Stilligarry altogether when the addition was made to Drimisdale?—No, they were heaped together.

40,468. And did they get a reduction of rent?—I am not aware that they did.

40,469. You said that some of the common pasture also was taken from the township and added to Drimisdale; do I understand you aright?—Yes.

40,470. Do you know why that was done?—The proprietor or the factor wanted to make the farm large.

40,471. For whom was the tack of Drimisdale enlarged in that way?—For John Maceachan, who held it for two years.

40,472. You also said that you remember crofters being in Drimisdale. Can you tell us when they were removed?—About 60 years ago.

40,473. Were they sub-tenants of the tacksman of Drimisdale?—Yes, Maceachan had no tenants then.

40,474. The crofters were removed from Drimisdale before the addition was made to it from Stilligarry?—Yes.

40,475. Can you mention any other place besides Drimisdale that would suit for settling crofters on?—Many a place.

40,476. Just give us the names, please.—I saw tenants in Gearraidh-fliuch, where I myself was born.

40,477. In what tack is that?—Drimore.

40,478. Can you tell us when there were old townships in Drimore?—There were several,—Gearraidh-fliuch, Kilvanan, Geirinish, and Drimore itself.

40,479. Was Drimore cleared of the tenantry all at one time?—Yes, from the four townships at the same time.

40,480. In order to form a large farm, I suppose?—Yes, to make large farms.

40,481. Had the people good crofts on Drimore? Were they larger than the crofts they have now?—Yes, they were both good crofts, and larger.

40,482. And were the people able to make a comfortable living in those days?—A very good living, both in food and clothing, sheep and cattle.

40,483. Did they pay as high a rent for the land as is now paid by the tacksmen?—Yes, and more: they have it to-day for nothing.

40,484. Mr P. R. Buik, W.S., Agent for Lady Gordon Cathcart.—Do you remember a time when a part was taken off Drimisdale and added to Stilligarry?—It was taken from Stilligarry and given to Drimisdale.

40,485. But do you not remember when some ground was taken off Drimisdale and added to Stilligarry?—No, I do not; I don't think any such addition was ever made.

40,486. What rent have you paid before the Crofters Commission came here?—£3, 12s. 6d.

40,487. For how long did you pay that rent?—For 53 years.

40,488. Think again; was it not £7, 5s. from 1866 to 1871?—Yes, when I had the full croft.

40,489. And did you at one time pay a rent of £6, 10s.?—Yes.

40,490. And do you say that you got no increase of land when your rent was raised from £6, 10s. to £7, 5s. in 1866?—I will tell you how that happened. The rent was raised because there was a piece of hill pasture added to the township lands.

40,491. And some of your neighbours were in the same position; they got some hill pasture also?—Yes, the whole of the township got it.

40,492. Now, before you got that hill pasture, who had it?—It was a kind of outrun between Grogarry and Drimore.

40,493. Do you know what rents the crofters paid when they were in Drimore?—Yes, £5 each croft.

40,494. How many crofts were there?—Ten crofts in each township.

40,495. And how many townships were there?—Four; Geirinish, Kilvanan, Gearraidh-fliuch, and Drimore, all now in the possession of one man.

40,496. But they were not all in Drimore?—The traces of them can still be seen, although they are now fenced off.

40,497. Between 1866 and 1871 your rent was raised by 15s.; now, did you, at that time, get a valuable addition to your holding?—Nothing at all.

40,498. You acknowledge that you got some hill grazing?—Yes, we did.

40,499. Was it, in your opinion, worth the additional rent?—It was dear enough: if we had not got it we could not turn a beast outside.

40,500. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—I understood you to say that the township of Stilligarry was deprived of machair land and of hill grazing, which was added to the big farm?—Yes, I have witnesses enough to prove it.

40,501. Did the estate reduce the rent of the township when they deprived the township of those lands?—I did not notice any reduction; I did not get any.

40,502. How many years is it since the land you refer to was taken off the township?—I believe about 48 years ago.*

40,503. Was the rent changed at that time?—We never felt any change.

40,504. Did you ever hear the township complain of being deprived of that land?—Every day.

40,505. Did you ever hear the township complain of not getting the rent reduced when they were deprived of that land?—Yes.

40,506. How many years is it since the estate gave this man Maceachan the other two lots?—I am not very sure when he got these two, but I am certain it was when Mr Roderick [Rev. Roderick Macdonald] left Grogarry,—I daresay about 30 years ago.

* In August 1894, Campbell wrote to the Commission:—'The rent may have been slightly reduced, but nothing to speak 'of. I experienced no reduction whatever. I have only to add 'that, 24 years ago, two of the township crofters were removed 'from their holdings, and one-half of my croft was given to one 'of them. Formerly I had the whole croft.'

Iochdar, South Uist. Angus Campbell.

40,507. Is it because he was the poorest tenant in the township that he got the two crofts added?—He was not the poorest; he was the wealthiest.

40,508. So that, in fact, it was not to benefit the township that the land was given to him, but to benefit the man who needed benefit least?—Just as you say; that is quite the case.

40,509. Did the township make any representation to the estate that those crofts should be divided among the tenants so as to benefit them all?—Yes, and I for one, but we could not get it.

John Macinnes.

JOHN MACINNES, Crofter, Stilligarry (50).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

40,510. Mr Gordon.—Did you hear the evidence of the last witness?—Yes.

40,511. Do you agree with his evidence?—Yes.

40,512. Have you anything to add to what he said?—Not much.

40,513. Then, perhaps we may hold you as concurring in his evidence?—I concur, but I am myself a man of very small holding, and I want more land.

40,514. But otherwise you concur in what Mr Campbell stated?—Yes, that is quite correct.

Hector Maceachan.

HECTOR MACEACHAN, Cottar, Geirinish (38)—examined.

40,515. Mr Gordon.—You are a cottar in Geirinish?—Yes.

40,516. Have you any land at all?—No.

40,517. Do you get a cow's keep on the farm?—No.

40,518. What is your occupation?—Breaking metal on the road side, but I get a cow kept by the neighbouring farmer, Mr Ferguson, Drimore.

40,519. You are a roadman, but would like to get a croft?—Yes.

40,520. And do you think there is land in your neighbourhood where land could be had?—Yes, in Geirinish where I live,—plenty.

40,521. Did you sign a list of cottars who wish land in the district of Iochdar?—Yes.

40,522. Do you know the rest of the men who signed the list?—Yes.

40,523. And they all want land like yourself?—Yes.

40,524. Did they appoint you as their delegate to represent them to-day?—Yes.

40,525. What size of crofts would the cottars aim at getting?—About 30 acres, with a share in common hill pasture and machair pasture.

40,525A. Thirty acres exclusive of the machair?—No, inclusive of the machair.

40,526. And what number of stock do you think that extent could keep?—I think it would keep four cows and two horses, in good condition, I mean.

40,527. Would they get work for their horses on anything except their crofts?—I don't think so.

40,528. Do you not think you keep rather many horses for the good of the cattle?—I don't think so: I could keep a filly or a young beast.

40,529. You would keep them for brood mares?—Yes.

40,530. Is there any land in your neighbourhood that could be got except in your own township?—Yes.

40,531. Where?—The other townships which the last delegate here mentioned,—Geirinish, Kilvanan, Gearraidh-fliuch, and Drimore, all in the two farms of Geirinish and Drimore. The townships of Geirinish and Kilvanan are in Geirinish Farm, and those of Gearraidh-fliuch and Drimore are in Drimore.

40,532. Do you think if the people got the land their condition would be improved?—Oh, yes.

40,533. And that they would be able to stock the crofts themselves?—Yes.

40,534. And build the houses?—Some of them.

40,535. Without any assistance?—Some would require assistance.

40,536. If you got a croft would you be able to provide the houses?—Yes.

40,537. And stock it?—Yes.

Iochdar, South Uist. Hector Maceachan.

40,538. Mr Maccallum.—Are the 33 names on this list heads of families?—I think they are heads of families: there may be one or two exceptions, but I cannot remember any.

40,539. Are all these desirous of getting land?—Yes, and they need it too.

40,540. You appear on behalf of the 33 whose names are in the list?—Yes.

Angus Macdonald.

ANGUS MACDONALD, Viewfield, Griminish, Benbecula (65)—examined.

40,541. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

40,542. Have you a statement to submit to us?—Yes.

40,543. You are a delegate for the island of Benbecula?—Yes.

40,544. Were you appointed at a public meeting?—Yes.

40,545. I understand you are County Councillor for Benbecula?—Yes, that is so.

40,546. Kindly read your statement to us.—The only lands available in Benbecula for cottars are the hill pasture of Nunton Farm, viz.:—Hacklett, Minish, Scarloid, and Rosinish. There are about 30 landless cottars in the island. This hill pasture of Nunton was formerly in the possesion of well-to-do crofters. The lands are bordering round Loch Uiskavagh, where the crofters could plant plenty of potatoes and catch fish, which are plentiful round the coast. The cottars say they are worse off since the passing of the Crofters Act. Formerly they were getting small rigs of ground from generous crofters who could afford to do so, for planting potatoes, but they are now afraid to supply these poor people, as sub-letting is prohibited under the Act,—believing the same means sub-letting and that they would thereby forfeit their lands.

The island of Benbecula is in a congested state. After the Crofters Commission have given fair rent, I think the most part of the crofters are now paying from £5 downwards to 15s. Could any decent living be expected from such poor crofts? I do not think so: it is an impossibility even should they have their lands for nothing. If these poor people were settled on the east side of Benbecula and South Uist they could learn the sea industry and prosecute the fishing which abounds on our coast. The expectation of getting a quick transit by steamers and railway from the Outer Hebrides to the southern markets would encourage them to follow the fishing with advantage and make a respectable living and pay their rents equally with the tacksmen. It is lamentable to see the fine straths and glens in the Highlands converted into large sheep farms, together with sporting and hunting grounds, to gratify the desire of amusement of a few capitalists, while thousands of our brave race are landless, suffering poverty and misery, who, in times of emergency, proved to be the bravest soldiers, ever standing at the front of the enemy. It is surely high time Parliament should interfere without any loss of time, and restore the land to every son and daughter born upon it, thus fulfilling the end for which God created the earth.

(Signed) ANGUS MACDONALD, C.C.

40,547. You appear for the crofters and for the cottars also?—Yes.

40,548. Now, the only land that you have pointed to as being suitable for cultivation by crofters is the hill pasture of the farm of Nunton?—Yes.

40,549. Do you mean the hill pasture of the farm in connection with the arable land, or the hill pasture of the farm in the separate grazing on the east coast, or both?—Both; any place that is available.

40,550. Now, how many people do you think could be accommodated upon the hill pasture of Nunton?—I think a good many: I believe even the number that I mentioned there could be accommodated, not with very large crofts.

Iochdar, South Uist.

Angus Macdonald.

40,551. You mention 30 cottars, but you do not mention the number of crofters?—I refer to the cottars.

40,552. And you think that land might be found for these 30 on the hill grazings of Nunton?—I think so.

40,553. Were there crofter townships on the farm of Nunton within your memory, or have you ever heard of any?—I am not sure of that.

40,554. You do not allege that there were any crofters ever turned out of the farm of Nunton?—I am not sure, but perhaps at one time there were a few. I think there were some removed from Aird in order to enlarge Nunton.

40,555. From its appearance the farm of Nunton would seem to have been the home farm and in the proprietor's hands for years?—Yes.

40,556. Is it now in the proprietor's hands?—Yes.

40,557. Do you think that the crofters and cottars of the island get any benefit from that farm?—Oh, sometimes; it was very useful for selling grain.

40,558. You get some grain off the farm?—Yes.

40,559. Do the islanders of Benbecula not get some benefit from the farm in the way of a superior class of bulls being raised on it?—Oh, I think so.

40,560. And you, as representing the island, would not propose to do away with the farm of Nunton altogether, would you?—I don't think so.

40,561. You would only propose to take the hill grazings?—Yes.

40,562. But you would leave some arable land still on the farm, and some pasture land, on which grain and cattle could be raised?—That is so.

40,563. And, in your opinion, is that the best thing for the island?—I suppose so.

40,564. There is no other land on the island that you think could be utilised?—Very little that I know.

40,565. Mr Maccallum.—With regard to the hill pasture of Nunton, were there ever crofters on it?—Yes.

40,566. Where you propose that these should be settled?—Yes, there were crofters on it formerly.

40,567. And do you think that those who may be settled there, should prosecute the fishing?—Certainly, and they would not require much capital to start with.

40,568. It is on the east coast that the pasture is?—Yes.

40,569. How many separate parts are there of Nunton; it is not all contiguous?—The four places I have mentioned are connected, although they are separately named. They are in one piece, round the loch.

40,570. Are there not some islands?—I think there are a few.

40,571. How is the island of Wiay held?—It is held by a tenant.

40,572. But it is not on the farm of Nunton?—No.

40,573. Were there crofters on that island?—I believe there were at one time. One tenant has it now.

40,574. Is there a farmhouse and steading on it?—He built a house on it.

40,575. Do you remember, or did you hear of its ever being crofters' holdings?—Yes, I was told it was held by two or three crofters at one time.

40,576. And do you think it is a place that would suit for fishermen's crofts?—It would do very well; it is on the east coast, and it has good anchorage and a good harbour.

40,577. Do you know whether there used to be sub-tenants on the farm of Nunton?—I heard that there were crofts taken from Torlum and Griminish once.

40,578. Did the tacksman of Nunton have any sub-tenants, do you know?—I never heard of any.

40,579. I think you were saying that something was added to the farm of Nunton?—Yes.

40,580. Were considerable additions made to the farm of Nunton from the crofting townships?—There were a good many, at one time.

40,581. What were the townships from which these additions were made to Nunton?—First of all Griminish.

40,582. Is that township of Griminish pretty congested just now?—Yes, they have got an addition.

40,583. Are there good large crofts there?—Some of them.

40,584. Are there cottars on it?—Yes, there are about four cottars on the farm.

40,585. Without any land?—Without any land.

40,586. Now, mention some other township from which an addition was made to Nunton?—I heard of Torlum, that some of the land there was added to Nunton.

40,587. Are there cottars in Torlum?—Yes, a few. All the townships have cottars.

40,588. Is there any other township from which land was taken?—No.

40,589. Did you hear of Aird suffering any diminution?—I am not very sure: there are others here who can say.

40,590. On Balivanich?—I don't know of that.

40,591. Do you think it would be for the advantage of these people that they should get back the additions that were made to Nunton, for re-occupation?—I think it would be only just and right.

40,592. And do you think also it would be advantageous?—Oh, certainly.

40,593. How is the farm of Nunton held just now; is there a tenant in it?—It is held by the proprietrix at present.

40,594. Do you think it would be for the advantage of the other townships I have mentioned,—Aird and Balivanich—to get land from Nunton?—They are always complaining.

40,595. Do you think they would occupy it to as great profit as the present occupation?—Oh, yes, they would be very glad to get possession of it.

40,596. And would it be to their great profit?—No doubt of it.

40,597. Do you think now that it is really an advantageous thing for this island, that is so much congested, to have a large holding like Nunton on it?—It would benefit the people in one sense.

40,598. It is for the benefit of the island that this valuable farm should be held by the proprietrix and not by the people?—I think if the people got it, it would be more profitable to them.

40,599. More profitable than any benefit they get from it just now?—Oh yes.

40,600. That is your decided opinion?—Yes, my decided opinion, if there were respectable crofters on it.

40,601. Do the present crofters of Benbecula live principally by the land?—Yes.

40,602. And don't you think it would be a great advantage for them to have more land that they could cultivate?—Certainly, that is my opinion.

40,603. Do you think that this is what they need more than anything else,—to get the land? Would that be the best way to benefit them?—Yes, to get the land; no doubt of it.

40,604. You say they derive some benefit from the farm of Nunton being held as one tack. Can you tell us what these special benefits are that they presently derive?—Just what I referred to before,—raising grain and stock.

40,605. First of all they buy grain,—that is one benefit?—Yes.

40,606. Do they get grain there cheaper than they would from the south?—I believe they get it just at current prices.

40,607. Do you think they get it much cheaper there than they would from the south?—They get grain to suit them, such as bere and seed.

40,608. Could they not get that from elsewhere?—Not very easily.

40,609. Would not change of seed be for their advantage, rather?—The seed taken from Nunton is itself a change.

40,610. It is not a very great change, is it?—Oh, I think so.

40,611. What is the distance between the two places?—Not very much.

40,612. Is it not the same soil and the same climate?—Yes.

40,613. Don't you think now that it would be better for them to get the seed from elsewhere?—If they could get it.

40,614. Is there any other benefit?—The rearing of stock. The tenants used to buy stock from the farm.

40,615. And is it from the farm that they usually get their bulls?—Yes, always from there.

40,616. But if the tenants had these lands themselves, is there any reason why they should not be able to rear as good stock as is presently reared on it?—I daresay if they had good pieces of it, and were good well-to-do tenants, they would be able to raise good stock: but the land is better.

40,617. But if the crofters had it in fairly large holdings, would they not be able to keep up as good a stock as is on that land just now?—I believe they would.

40,618. So that they could get over that difficulty about the stock rearing perfectly well if they got the land?—Oh, yes.

40,619. Then, is there anything else that occurs to you as a benefit derived from Nunton?—I do not remember anything else.

40,620. Do you give it then, as your decided opinion, that it would be better to have this land divided into self-sustaining holdings?—There is no doubt of that. I believe the scarcity of land has greatly contributed to the increase of pauperism among us; and if they got the land I don't think there would be so much pauperism.

40,621. Mr Munro.—You mentioned, I think, that you were indebted to the large farms for an occasional change of seed?—Yes.

40,622. Now, supposing that the large farms were not there to give you the necessary change, where could you procure it?—We would get it elsewhere,—from the south.

40,623. Take the seed called bere,—where could you get that in the south?—I believe about Tiree, and on the mainland.

40,624. Could you get it as cheaply from Tiree as from the neighbouring big farms?—I think about the same.

40,625. Would the change from Tiree be better for you than a change from the neighbouring large farm?—Probably it would; it would be much better.

40,626. A change of bere from a distance is not quite so necessary, I understand, as a change of oats from a distance?—I daresay it is; they would have an equal effect. A change of bere would be just as necessary, I think.

40,627. Could you get a change of oats also from the island of Tiree?—I never heard of it being taken from Tiree.

40,628. Now, as a matter of fact, did you, or any of the other crofters, ever get a change of seed from Tiree?—Oh, yes, I have seen barley coming from it, and it turned out very profitably.

40,629. Did it give a better return than the change you got from the neighbouring farms?—Yes, indeed.

40,630. So that it would be to your advantage rather to get a change of seed from Tiree in preference to one of the neighbouring farms?—I daresay it would.

40,631. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—As a matter of fact, when the crofters in Benbecula need a change of seed, is it to the farm of Nunton they go, or do they go outside the island for it?—Sometimes: Nunton is where they always used to go.

40,632. Have they gone to Nunton for the last ten years?—I believe not so much since the Macdonalds left it.

40,633. Is that the old Clanranald family?—No; the last farmer.

40,634. How many years is it since he left?—Six or seven.

40,635. Then for the last six or seven years they have not gone to Nunton for seed?—Oh, yes, they go just now.

40,636. But not, as a rule?—There is not so much bought. They used to come from North Uist then; but at that time more grain was raised.

40,637. In the opinion of your constituents, how does the grain they get from the outside compare with the grain grown in Nunton; is it better or worse?—They get it good enough outside, and in Nunton too.

40,638. What is the opinion of your constituents,—is it that the grain they get from the outside is better or worse?—I believe their opinion would be that it is better from the south.

40,639. Now in regard to bulls. How many crofter townships are in Benbecula?—Six or seven.

40,640. How many of these get their bulls from Nunton?—They are not getting bulls just now.

40,641. Where do they get the bulls from just now?—I believe from North Uist partly.

40,642. So that the cattle would breed immensely well, and do as well if Nunton were sunk beneath the sea?—Yes.

40,643. That would not stop the multiplication of stock?—Perhaps not.

40,644. And, as a matter of fact, with the view of improving the quality, they go to South Uist for their bulls, do they?—Oh yes.

40,645. Is there a strong desire among your constituents for land?—Yes.

40,646. Is it a fact that six applications for enlargement of crofter townships were lodged with the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

40,647. To be taken from the farm of Nunton?—Yes.

40,648. Did those six applications represent six crofting townships?—Yes.

40,649. And altogether there are how many townships?—Seven.

40,650. Of the seven, six have lodged with the Crofters Commission applications for an extension of their townships at the expense of Nunton Farm?—Four, at least, have done so.

40,651. Now, did not two of these townships get an enlargement from the Crofters Commission?—Yes, two.

40,652. Name them?—Eilean Flodday and Griminish.

40,653. Was it Sheriff Brand and his Assessors who heard these applications?—Yes.

40,654. And these two were granted after a considerable amount of evidence?—Yes.

40,655. Did not he also grant a considerable extension of holding to the township of Aird?—Yes.

40,656. In every one of these applications did the estate put in an appearance and lodge objections?—Yes.

40,657. And in spite of the estate these two townships you mentioned got a considerable extension?—Yes.

40,658. And Aird also?—Yes.

40,659. Is it a fact that after Sheriff Brand had heard the case very fully, and had given an extension to Aird, the estate appealed against Sheriff Brand's decision?—Yes.

40,660. And the Commissioners, Hosack and Macintyre, came, and the Court sat in full?—Yes.

40,661. And the Crofters Commission, as a whole, upset the decision arrived at by Sheriff Brand, after a full investigation into the circumstances of the people?—Yes, that is so.

40,662. Does not all that prove to your mind that the people have their heart set upon the land of Nunton, with the view of breaking it down?—Yes.

40,663. And do you believe that the breaking down of the farm of Nunton, until the remainder of it was simply a small holding, would put the island of Benbecula on a perfectly satisfactory footing, so far as land is concerned?—It would go a good bit to help them.

40,664. Now, after you get all that, would there be a great disadvantage to the people living in Benbecula, from the fact that there are no harbours or piers? Has anything been done in the way of opening up the country to the world?—We are in the way of getting a pier now.

40,665. Have you got a pier?—No, we expect to get one.

40,666. Expectation is poor food for a hungry crofter?—Yes.

Iochdar, South Uist. Angus Macdonald.

40,667. Has any pier been built?—No, none.

40,668. Have you in view a pier to which trading steamers would come?—Oh, yes.

40,669. Do you believe that it would be an absolute necessity?—Most certainly.

40,670. For making the people tolerably comfortable?—Nothing could surpass that.

40,671. And regular steamer communication?—Yes.

40,672. And the extension of the railway to the west coast,—is your heart set on that?—A great deal.

40,673. How often do you get mails delivered from the mainland in Benbecula by steamer?—We do not get them by steamer at all; the mails come from North and South Uist.

40,674. Do the steamers pass you every day?—Yes, up and down.

40,675. And a pier would enable these steamers to call every day with letters to and from the place?—Certainly.

40,676. Mr Gordon.—I am sorry to interrupt you, but our inquiry does not relate to piers.

40,677. Mr Munro.—How does the price you pay for seed grown from Nunton compare with similar seed obtained from the south?—I think the price is about the same.

40,678. Supposing you were getting a quarter of bere from the south to-day, would it cost you more or less than a similar article from Nunton?—It would be dearer on account of the carriage.

40,679. So that there is some advantage in having a big farm near you?—Yes.

40,680. And perhaps they do not always insist on immediate payment?—That is generally the case.

40,681. They give a little credit?—Yes.

40,682. Mr Maccallum.—Is it a fact that Nunton is not so much cultivated since it fell into the hands of the proprietrix as it was under a tenant?—Yes, it is less cultivated.

40,683. Mr P. R. Buik, W.S., Edinburgh, Agent for Lady Gordon-Cathcart.—I want to ask you about the comparative size of Nunton Farm now with what it was in the days of Clanranald. Is it bigger now than it was then?—I think so.

40,684. Would you be surprised to learn that it is about 2000 acres less?—I don't know indeed; about the time of the Napier Commission, I saw an old book of Clanranald,—it was handed to me and I showed it to Sir Kenneth Mackenzie and Professor Mackinnon. They looked up about Nunton proper and saw a great piece of land taken from Torlum and Griminish and added to it. That was shown by a very old map of the time of Clanranald. Sir Kenneth saw the map and said it was very good, and he was glad to see it, and that is why I said there were additions made to Nunton,—I saw it so clearly on the map.

40,685. But was there not a lot of land formerly on the farm, but now occupied by crofters, e.g. Uskavagh and Rarnish?—I daresay that might be.

40,686. Was not the southern part of what is now the general commonty of Benbecula, part of Nunton in the old days?—I cannot say.

40,687. Do you know how Nunton used to run? Are you acquainted with its configuration in the Clanranald days? It is now a square on the one side and a hill at the east, but do you know how it used to run in the olden days?—No.

40,688. Do you know the present area of Nunton?—No.

40,689. I believe it is slightly over 3100 acres. Now, I see in the Minutes of Evidence taken by the Napier Commission a statement was made, which was not contradicted, that in the days of Clanranald, Nunton had a total area of 5200 imperial acres. If that was the case in 1836, it follows that Nunton was then considerably larger than it is now? (No answer.)

40,690. You said that Wiay was once occupied by crofters?—So I was told.

40,691. But you don't know yourself?—I never saw it.

40,692. What do you, as a practical man, consider the proper size for a croft?—To make a decent living I think a crofter should have £10 worth of land,—at a fair rent, I mean.

Iochdar, South Uist. Angus Macdonald.

40,693. Tell me what would you consider should be £10 worth in extent,—how many acres arable should he have?—I would say 20 acres at any rate.

40,694. And how many of pasture?—I suppose there would be a commonty.

40,695. But what would be the relative number of acres of hill grazing?—I cannot tell you the number of such acres as we have here in Benbecula: we have a long hill there.

40,696. Can you tell me how many crofts with 20 acres arable you could make out of Nunton?—I cannot say, but you could not take many of that size out of it.

40,697. Would you be surprised to know that you could only take 15, at the outside?—Well, I daresay just about that.

40,698. Then, it is not a great place for the over-population. Now you said to Mr Gordon that you thought that there should be a farm in Benbecula, and you said to Mr Maccallum that it was your firm opinion that the farm should be broken up. Will you kindly reconcile these two statements?—I said it was very necessary to have seed in the place; but what I meant was that the people would much rather have the lands; they would have them in preference even to the benefit they would derive from the farm in any other way.

40,699. But that scarcely reconciles the two statements. Is that all the answer you can give?—I don't think I can give any further answer. They would take it in preference.

40,700. You also said that Wiay would be a good place for crofters to settle. How would their children get to school?—It would be very difficult; but I think they would take the chance. They might send their children down to the schools.

40,701. Where?—Among friends.

40,702. The children in that case would need to live away from home?—Yes, they would have to do that.

40,703. You know, as a matter of fact, that that has always been a complaint of the present tenant, that he cannot get education on the island for his children?—Yes, he, himself, is dead, poor man, but his children are with friends.

40,704. So Wiay would not, after all, be very suitable for crofters?—Cottars would be very glad to get hold of it.

40,705. Mr Gordon.—With regard to the part of the farm of Nunton for which application was made by the crofting townships on the north side of the farm [Mr Buik.—Aird township], was it a portion of the arable lands or a portion of the pasture lands which Sheriff Brand agreed to give them as an extension?—A portion of the pasture lands.

40,706. That is what they applied for?—Yes.

John Gordon Macintyre.

JOHN GORDON MACINTYRE, crofter, Griminish, Benbecula (53)—examined.

40,707. Mr Gordon.—You are a crofter at Griminish?—Yes.

40,708. Did you hear the evidence given by Mr Macdonald, the County Councillor for Benbecula?—Yes.

40,709. Do you agree with what he said generally?—I agree with what he read in the paper he produced, but I did not hear the remainder of his evidence well.

40,710. Do you agree that there is a general demand for land in your township?—Yes.

40,711. And do you think that land can be got in your neighbourhood?—Yes.

40,712. Where?—On Nunton.

40,713. Did you hear what Mr Macdonald said with regard to the advantage of maintaining Nunton as a farm,—that the crofters got a supply of seed grain from it, and also that they got regularly or occasionally a supply of good stock bulls from it? Is that so?—It is a long time since they got a bull for breeding,—I think not since Lady Cathcart took the farm into her own hands.

Iochdar, South Uist. John Gordon Macintyre.

40,714. Then, the advantage, whatever it is, is confined to their getting some seed grain?—They are not getting much seed grain at present, but they used to get it from Mr Macdonald, late of Nunton.

40,715. Do they not get some from the present manager?—A little, but not much at all, as far as I am aware.

40,716. Why don't they get it from him at present?—They are getting it among themselves, and some from Glasgow.

40,717. Does the seed grain that you get grown in the island do better with you than when you bring it from a distance?—It would grow a great deal better from a distance.

40,718. If you get fresh seed?—Of course; a great deal better.

40,719. And do you pay more or less for it, when you buy it locally here?—Nearly about the same.

40,720. It is not much dearer when you have to pay the carriage of it?—Not much.

40,721. From whom do you get it in the south, from a dealer or from a farm?—From a dealer.

40,722. Did you, yourself, ever take any grain from the south?—No.

40,723. Do you ever buy any locally here?—Yes, often.

40,724. You did not get any from the south?—Oh yes, but I never sent for it myself.

40,725. Did you ever get any from Nunton?—Yes, at different times, but not since Lady Cathcart took it into her own hands. Before that I used to get it.

40,726. Would it, in your opinion, be beneficial to the island of Benbecula, that the farm of Nunton should be broken up into crofts?—I think it would be a great deal better for the crofters, and for the landlord also, because good crofters would pay very well if they had a sufficient amount of land.

40,727. Do you think the crofters would pay as much rent as the profit the proprietrix is making off the farm now?—I am quite sure they would.

40,728. Therefore, it would be a benefit both to the tenants and to the owner?—Yes, that is my opinion at any rate.

40,729. Mr Maccallum.—You say that if those poor people were settled on the east side of Benbecula, they could learn the sea industry, and prosecute the fishing which abounds on the coast?—Oh yes, they would.

40,730. What places on the east of Benbecula do you point to there?—Scarilode, Rossinish and Meanish.

40,731. How is Scarilode occupied; is it part of the farm of Nunton?—Yes, it is part of the farm of Nunton now.

40,732. And do you think it is a suitable place for putting fishing crofts?—Yes, very suitable indeed.

40,733. Do you know if there were ever people there?—Oh, there were.

40,734. Was there a considerable population there, do you think?—There was not much population.

40,735. Is there anybody there now?—None at all.

40,736. Any other place you mentioned as suitable for fishing crofts?—The whole hill pasture on the east side is suitable.

40,737. You have already said, that it is your decided opinion that it would be an advantage both for the people and for the proprietrix to have Nunton broken up into good crofts?—Yes.

40,738. Are the crofters of Benbecula paying their rents to the proprietrix just now?—They must, or else take to the high road in the course of two years. They run the risk of being made bankrupt, as was the case with one or more already.

40,739. You wish to convey that they do pay their rents now?—I think so, as far as I can make out.

40,740. Are they deriving any advantage from the security of tenure which they have got? Have they built better houses in consequence?—They have.

40,741. Has the improvement in the houses been going on to any considerable extent?—Yes, as much as possible, but they were impoverished by the arrears that were left upon them, and they are hardly clear of them yet, but their intention is to build neat houses when they get an opportunity.

Iochdar, South Uist. John Gordon Macintyre.

40,742. You think they have not felt the benefit of the 'fair rent', on account of the arrears of rack rent left upon them by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

40,743. But can you tell me that even under these disadvantages they have improved their houses?—They are doing their best. A great number of the houses are better.

40,744. Do they cultivate their lands better than they used to?—Yes, they pay more heed to it now, because they expect to stay in their crofts, and not be removed as they used to be formerly.

40,745. Is it your testimony, then, that there is a decided improvement in their mode of cultivating their crofts?—Yes, they take greater care and cultivate them better.

40,746. Now, can you give us any information as to the price charged at Nunton, and the price which the people have to pay for grain which they get from the south? Do they get it cheaper at Nunton than they can from the south?—I think it is just about the same in the case of barley or bere. That is the only seed we used to get, with rye and small oats. We do not get small oats from the mainland, but only white oats. It used to be 4s. per bushel for the bere seed at Nunton.

40,747. And the fact is that a great number do purchase from the south?—They are purchasing meal and corn from the south always.

40,748. And bere seed?—Very few of them purchase bere seed from the south; but some are getting a little from Tiree.

40,749. Do you think they would take it from Tiree if they could get it cheaper at Nunton?—They would prefer to have it at Nunton if it was to be got at Nunton.

40,750. Then they cannot get it at Nunton?—Not at all.

40,751. Then, with regard to the additions that were made to Nunton, do you know whether the farm of Nunton was added to from the neighbouring townships, or did you ever hear of that being the case?—I heard that there were some parts added to Nunton Farm at different times from the crofter townships.

40,752. Very valuable land, was it?—Very valuable in parts, but others only grazing.

40,753. Do you say that a good deal of arable land was taken from crofting townships and added to Nunton in olden times?—There was not much arable land at all added to Nunton, so far as I know, but there was some grazing. There was only one park,—the park we got was added to Nunton, and another park,—two parks of machair were added to Nunton on the south side.

40,754. From whom were these parks taken?—One from Griminish and the other from Torlum.

40,755. Is not that valuable for pasture?—Not for pasture altogether, but for arable land.

40,756. Have you any doubt at all in your own mind as to the desires of the people with regard to getting the land of Nunton, is that their wish?—They are very fond of getting the land if they can; but they cannot get it. They are refused by the Crofters Commission, and although they would lodge an application it would be of no avail.

40,757. They have tried all they could to get land, and have failed?—Yes.

40,758. The estate on every occasion objecting?—Yes.

40,759. Do you say that the cottars are worse off since the passing of the Crofters Act, because they cannot get potato ground from the crofters?—Indeed, that is so; they are very miserable, poor beings; they will not get a bit here nor there. They cannot get as much land as would keep one cow.

40,760. Under the Act, the crofters have no power to sub-let their land?—No.

40,761. Has the estate been discouraging the crofters from giving potato ground to the cottars, do you know? Have they been threatening the crofters with proceedings of any kind if they give land to the cottars?—Oh, not at all; I never noticed anything of the kind.

John Gordon Macintyre.

40,762. But the difficulty is that under the Act the crofters cannot give them land?—Yes, and they have too little land themselves.

40,763. And has the estate done anything for the relief of the cottars?—Nothing at all, but refusing their petitions.

Donald Paterson.

DONALD PATERSON, Factor for South Uist (49) —examined.

40,764. Mr Gordon.—Is there anything you wish to submit to us?—Yes, I would like to put in various statements which I have here. The first is a statement giving particulars of the Crofters Commission decisions in Benbecula, for the use of the Royal Commission (see App. A., page 979); the second a similar statement for South Uist (see App. B., page 980); the third is a statement giving particulars of crofters' holdings in Benbecula (see App. C., page 981); the fourth a similar statement for South Uist (see App. D., page 982); and the fifth a report upon the farms in Benbecula and South Uist (see after question 40,809, page 977).

40,765. Does this contain the area of the different farms in South Uist?—Yes.

40,766. I think you also lodge a statement with reference to the kelp industry in the years 1892 and 1893, showing the amount of kelp received, and how it is disposed of and accounted for to the crofters?—Yes. (See App. E., page 983.)

40,767. It appears from these that there was shipped by the 'Dunborve' of Wick, 114 tons 9 cwt., and by the s.s. 'Ballydoon' of Glasgow, 87 tons 5 cwts., the total quantity shipped being 201 tons 14¾ cwts., and the value thereof at 55s. per ton, £554, 15s. 6d. Now, you say here that you paid the crofters in the south district for 114 tons at 55s., first cargo, £314, 14 9, those in the northern district, second cargo, 58, 19 9, in the middle district, second cargo, . 164, 15 2, and in the south district, . . . 16, 5 10. There does not appear to be any charge here for commission?—No.

40,768. How did you fix the rate at 55s. per ton?—It was fixed by the Chemical Company. I put in a letter giving the particulars. It is dated 15th September 1892. 'I find from correspondence with Captain 'Grindlay and J. Maynord, that the s.s. "Ballydoon" 'will be able to overtake the tangle without assistance; 'please let me know if you have any doubt of this. With 'regard to the cutting up of the roads, we think a new 'traffic should be encouraged for the general benefit, 'but if you will let me know what amount you wish us 'to contribute, I will do all I can to get the matter 'fairly considered. I do not think we should object 'to a small payment if necessary. The kelp has all 'now arrived, and although made late in the year it is 'better than the average of last year, and I propose to 'allow 55s. per ton for it all over. Will you, therefore, 'send me an account of it, and it shall be paid at once. —I am, Yours truly, EDW. C. C. STAMFORD.'

40,768A. It would thus appear that your correspondent fixed the rate?—Yes.

40,769. In other words, he allowed the crofters what he thought was the value of the subject?—Yes, it was fixed after an analysis.

40,770. Has he any commission upon the transaction? He would not work for nothing, although Lady Cathcart or her factor might. How did he fix this rate of payment?—He was the buyer.

40,771. But the produce must have had a value over and above the 55s., because there would be a considerable amount of expense?—They paid the freight.

40,772. He paid the freight?—Yes.

40,773. Then, perhaps we may take it that the market value at that date was £3 or £3, 5s. per ton, in order to leave a margin for cost of transit and marketing?—Quite possible. I submit a bill of lading showing the weight.

40,774. But there was no money retained by Lady Cathcart,—she pocketed no part of the price?—No.

40,775. You handed over on her behalf all the money you got from the buyer?—Yes.

40,776. Without any deduction?—Yes, on that weight.

40,777. And this weight here represents the weight that was delivered?—There is a pay-bill put in showing the weight each man delivered.

40,778. And they correspond, do they?—Yes.

40,779. Then in 1893, only 32 tons 1 cwt. 2 qrs. seem to have been made?—Yes, that was owing to the scarcity of weed.

40,780. And the price seems to be correspondingly low?—Very low indeed.

40,781. Only 20s. as against 55s.?—That is all, and I think there is a letter dealing with that. I went to Glasgow personally in order to get as much as possible; but the buyer first of all said it was not worth the freight. However, I induced him to stretch a point, and allow something for the produce, so as to encourage the men to work another year.

40,782. The price seems to be very variable. Is there any doubt in your own mind as to the price coming back to a rate such as would pay the men?—Well, I can only account for the low price last year but by the weed being of such inferior quality. It was not what they call 'wrack' for making kelp; it was just rubbish that was thrown up on the shore; but the men were so anxious to make it that they collected an inferior article, hence the reduction in the price.

40,783. It has no doubt been extremely disappointing to the men in two ways, both as to the quantity they could get to make into kelp, and also the price they got for it when it was made; and the probability is that if they did not get any more than that price this year, the kelp industry would cease?—I had a meeting with the directors, and they said it was not worth the freight. I said if they were not to give some little price the possibility was that the industry might be stopped, and they ultimately agreed to give £1 a ton. But the quantity was very small, and the quality very poor.

40,784. Mr Munro.—I understand that you are anxious to have this matter of the kelp traffic thoroughly sifted, as it has been raised before the Commission?—I am quite willing to explain it as far as I can.

40,785. What is the chief object of the estate management in insisting upon the kelp industry being conducted through the estate office?—I don't know; it was done before my time, and I simply took up the duties of my predecessor. I got instructions to do so.

40,786. Is it possible to do full justice to the kelp industry by allowing each crofter to manage and dispose of his own produce?—I do not know.

40,787. You could not answer that question?—No.

40,788. In sending this kelp to the British Chemical Company, I notice in the letter that they themselves arbitrarily fixed the value attaching to the kelp?—Yes.

40,789. Is there any other outlet you could get for kelp if you wished?—That is the only company I know of that buys kelp. There was another company, but I believe it is now extinct.

40,790. Do you make a bargain with them before you ship the kelp, or do you leave it entirely to themselves to fix the price?—Leave it to themselves altogether.

40,790A. And you can trust them to deal fairly with you?—Well, that has been the habit and has been the rule.

40,791. But you never tried to get an outlet for it elsewhere?—No.

40,792. I observe that they fix a price all over per ton for it?—Yes.

40,793. Does not that operate disadvantageously to the crofter who produces a better kind of kelp than his neighbour with an inferior specimen?—There is no doubt of that, but the difficulty is when you ship the kelp of perhaps 40 or 50 men in one ship in bulk, you cannot tell one man's from another. I believe the stuff is sampled as it comes out, and the samples analysed.

40,794. So that the man who ships a good article is put to some slight loss in shipping it with inferior articles?—That is quite possible.

40,795. That is quite apparent to anybody. The mode you adopt in dealing with the crofter is, I think, this—when he delivers the kelp to you, you hand him a receipt signed by the ground officer, containing a memorandum of the exact quantity?—The officer weighs it himself, fills in the receipt, signs it, and gives it to the crofter.

40,796. Then the crofter delivers this receipt up when you account to him for the value?—Yes, he lays that receipt down as his delivery note.

40,797. Supposing that a crofter delivers kelp to you, say at this date, about what time may he look for a settlement?—At this date it would not be possible to deliver kelp, but say perhaps the end of July. He might then look for a settlement in October or November.

40,798. And do you hand him over the proceeds without any deduction whatever?—Yes. As a rule, he comes up to pay his rent, and he says "Keep what I am due you for rent and hand me the balance." You will observe that there is a small charge for grass in some of these lists.

40,799. That is just what I was going to ask you about.—It arises in this way. When a crofter makes kelp on a tack, he arranges with the farmer to pay for the grass used by the horse during the time the kelp is being made, and he asks that this charge should be retained and handed over to the tenant of the farm. The charge is so much per week.

40,800. As an example of your method of dealing with this matter, here is a case of a man who delivers two tons of kelp, which yields £5, 10s., and you deduct from him 7s., being the value of grass for 28 days?—Yes.

40,801. Who fixes the value of the grass?—It is an arrangement between the crofter and the tacksman.

40,802. And is the crofter satisfied with that arrangement?—I think the invariable rule is that they are very anxious to get their horses on to the tacksman's ground so as to get a good bite of grass. The work is not hard, the kelp spreading ground not being far off, and the horses are, I may say, about two-thirds of the time idle.

40,803. Do you not think it would be best, in the interests of all concerned, to allow the crofter perfect freedom of action in the gathering of kelp and the disposing of it?—Well, I have no opinion in the matter. I have been simply carrying out instructions to continue the old system.

40,804. Supposing the present estate arrangements were to cease, can you form any opinion whatever, that would be to the benefit of the crofter or otherwise?—I really could not say.

40,805. But the estate has no personal gain whatever in the matter of the management?—Oh, no. I may say that in Benbecula or in Barra we do not make a pound of kelp. It is a very uncertain industry.

40,806. Mr Gordon.—There is a report upon the farms in Benbecula and South Uist put in by you?—Yes.

40,807. It is a lengthy paper, and as we are a little short of time on account of the tide at the ford here, we propose to take it as lodged by you, with a note upon it that it was not read nor an opportunity given for cross-examination upon it?—Very well.

40,808–9. You have no objections to that?—None at all.

LADY CATHCART'S LONG ISLAND ESTATES.

Report on Farms in Benbecula and South Uist.

1. Nunton, Island of Benbecula.

This farm is in two portions. The low ground portion lies on the west side of the island, is bounded by the Atlantic on the west, and by crofters' land on the north, east and south. It extends roughly to 290 acres arable and machair, and 800 acres rough pasture. The hill portion at the east side of the island extends to about 2000 acres, and is bounded on the north and east by the Minch, and on the south and west by crofters' land. The farm is at present occupied by the proprietrix.

In 1887, the best agricultural part of this farm called Pennyloddan was let by Lady Cathcart to one of the crofters of Balivanich, and Island Wiay, also part of the farm which carried about 200 sheep and some cattle, was let to another crofter. Since then the farm has been further curtailed by the Crofters Commission, who assigned about 15 acres arable and 31 acres meadow pasture to the crofters of Griminish, and 96 acres of hill ground to the crofters of Island Flodday.

This farm has always been considered one of the best on her ladyship's property, as affording a good change of mixed pasture, and also for agricultural purposes.

The farm carries about 40 cows (Highland), with their followers, and about 600 sheep; about 100 cross lambs are reared annually on the low portion of the farm. The house and steading are in excess of the requirements of the farm. There are resident on the farm, including manager, servants, &c., 38.

2. Drimisdale, South Uist.

This farm, which was recently let to Mr John Ferguson, extends roughly to 650 acres arable, machair and green pasture, and about 9730 acres hill ground, and is bounded on the north by Stilligary township and Loch Drudibeg, on the south by part of Ormiclate Farm and by crofters, and on the west by the Atlantic. The proprietrix has erected a wire fence, at a large outlay, between the crofters and this farm.

There is no land on the hill ground of this farm suitable for profitable cultivation, and the proportion of arable and machair land is at present too little for wintering the hoggs the hill will produce, and also providing wintering for the number of cattle the farm will summer. From a look at the farm on the ground, it will at once be seen that the west side, where the arable and machair lands are, is already too narrow, and could not be conveniently worked without wire-fencing. Should any part of the arable and machair land be cut off this farm, the wintering of the hoggs would be spoiled, and a portion of them would require to be sent elsewhere, and would materially reduce the letting value of the farm. The dwelling-house and steading are good and sufficient for the farm as at present let. The marches as fenced are good and convenient. The farm carries about 16 Highland cows, 20 young cattle, 7 horses, and slightly over 2000 black-faced sheep of ewe and wedder stock. There are resident on the farm, including tenant, his household, servants, &c., 57.

3. Milton.

This farm is bounded on the north by Bornish and Loch Eynort, on the east by the Minch, on the south by the farm of Askernish partly and by crofters' land, on the west by the Atlantic, and extends to about 1500 acres arable, machair and green pasture, and 12,960 acres of hill pasture, and has been in possession of the present tenant for the past 23 years, and carries a stock of about 230 head of Highland cattle, consisting of cows and their followers and 2000 black-faced sheep, ewe and wedder stock. The part of this farm lying west of the public road and between it and the sea is composed of good grazing land and machair, but the portion lying to the east of the road and between it and the Minch is black hill grazing, no part of which is suitable for profitable cultivation, being considerably broken up by peat bogs. The marches at present are very suitable, being partly water boundaries. The dwelling-house and offices are good and suitable for the requirements of the farm.

This farm, like the farm of Drimisdale, will summer more cattle and sheep than the arable and machair will produce wintering for. All the hoggs are wintered on the low ground. There are resident on the farm, including the tenant, his household, servants, &c., 69.

Iochdar, South Uist. Donald Paterson.

4. Askernish.

This farm extends to about 1360 acres of rocky pasture, arable and machair land, and 500 acres of hill grazing, and is bounded on the north by Milton, on the east by Milton, and on the south by crofters, and on the west by the Atlantic. There is an exceptionally good dwelling-house and steading upon the farm, which are in good preservation and very suitable for the size of the grazing, which is neither too large nor too small, but just the size of farm that is at present being looked upon as likely to pay. The stock is principally cattle, and all the arable land is necessary for producing sufficient wintering; any curtailment of the arable land or machair would necessitate a reduction of the stock, and would consequently spoil the letting value of the farm, and throw part of the steading useless. Any cultivable land that could be cut off the farm is machair, which, in a wet season, yields fair crops of potatoes, black oats, rye, and bere, but in a dry, hot summer yields very little, being light, sandy soil, easily scorched, and on this particular farm very liable to sand drift. The farm carries about 45 Highland cows and 90 young cattle, 12 horses, 140 black-faced ewes, off which cross lambs are reared. There are resident on the farm, including grieve, household and servants, &c., 38.

5. Ormiclate.

This farm is bounded on the west by the Atlantic, on the north by crofts and the hill ground of Drimisdale, on the east by the Minch, and on the south by the farm of Bornish and Loch Eynort, and extends to about 1300 acres of rocky green pasture, machar, and arable, and 8510 acres hill ground.

The farm has a superior steading built about 15 years ago, and in every way suitable for the requirements of the farm as at present occupied.

A portion of the farm marching with Stoneybridge crofters is well fenced off by a substantial stone dyke running from the Atlantic in an easterly direction. The arable at present is well proportioned to the machair land and to the hill pasture. The marches are good, and the farm at present is convenient for working. The machair, if kept clean at the proper season of the year, viz.,—shortly after the beginning of August, is sufficient to winter the hoggs, but should any portion of it be cut off, some of the hoggs would require to be sent away to wintering. No part of the hill grazing on this farm is capable of cultivation to a profit, taking into consideration the distance of the hill from the sea-ware. The farm carries about 30 Highland cows and 176 young cattle and 1800 sheep, black-faced, of a ewe and wedder stock. There are resident on the farm, including manager, his household, servants, &c., 38.

6. Kilbride.

This farm marches with crofters on two sides, the farm of Glendale on the east, and the Sound of Barra on the remaining side, and extends to about 400 acres of green pasture and arable, and 930 acres hill pasture. The farm carries a stock of Highland cattle and some sheep.

The present farm dwelling-house is large and commodious, but rather too large for a farm of this size. The steading is good and suitable for the accommodation of the stock which the farm carries. The cropping ground, upon the whole, is fairly good, and just about sufficient to produce enough of wintering for the stock grazed upon the farm, according to its present marches. The farm is compact and easily worked, the arable land being convenient to the steading, which is placed about the middle and is also very convenient for seaweed. This farm, for the size of it, is one of the most desirable small grazings in South Uist.

Iochdar, South Uist. Donald Paterson.

The farm carries 29 cows and about 90 young cattle and over 100 sheep.

It also winters 300 to 400 hoggs. There are resident on the farm, including tenant, his household, and servants, &c., 22.

General Note.

The machair land attached to the various farms above mentioned forms the greatest inducement in those times of agricultural depression for tenants to offer a reasonable rent for them, because being dry and affording a good bed for sheep, with bent, green all the year round, the machair land proves to be good wintering ground and saves the tenants an outlay of from 5s. to 8s. per hogg for wintering. Were the farms deprived of the machair, their letting value would not only be very much reduced but they would practically be unlettable altogether, except as cattle grazings, and they are unsuitable even as such. In the islands a mixed stock of sheep and cattle is looked upon as the safest and best. The machairs do not stand cultivation to any great extent, and not in any case continual cultivation, the danger of drifting sand being so great.

The extent of green land, arable and machair, and hill pasture, on the various farms, is at present well proportioned.

(Signed) DONALD PATERSON.

Askernish, South Uist,
22nd June 1894.

40,810. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Who is the man that weighs the kelp at the pier?—There are three of them,—the ground officer for each district, south, middle, and north.

40,811. All estate officials?—Ground officers.

40,812. Is there anything done by the estate to satisfy the people that there is no error in the matter of weighing?—Well, they see it weighed; they are present at the weighing, and it is weighed in the ordinary way.

40,813. Have they as good an opportunity of seeing it weighed as the ground officer has?—It is done on the public road at the piers.

40,814. Would you now tell us, so far as you know, all that is kept off by the estate management,—discounts or other charges,—before the price is fixed to be paid to the crofters? Give a summary of all the charges made against the industry before the price is fixed for the crofter?—Nothing but grass: the company pays the freight.

40,815. Is not there a shilling per £ taken off?—What for?

40,816. You mentioned at Dalibrog two days ago, that there was 1s. per £ kept off; either 1s. for the ton of kelp or 1s. per £ sterling?—No, nothing at all.

40,817. What was the 1s. you spoke about?—For tangle.

40,818. A shilling per ton?—Yes.

40,819. Is it 1s. per ton of weight or 1s. per £ of money for the tangle?—The value of the tangle is £1 a ton, so it comes to the same thing either way.

40,820. Then is it a fact that there is a charge also of so much to the estate clerk for entering the weight in the books?—Not that I know of.

40,821. Are you aware that that is the practice anywhere else?—It is quite possible, but not on Lady Cathcart's estate.

40,822. And you don't know of the practice anywhere else?—No.

40,823. In giving credit to the people for the kelp, and in settling with them, do you give them every opportunity of seeing with their own eyes the price,—that is to say, the letter you get from Glasgow stating the price?—I read it and I gave it to the ground officer to read to them.

40,824. And the letter is produced to them?—Yes.

ASKERNISH, 22*nd June* 1894.

DOND. PATERSON.

Iochdar, South Uist. — Donald Paterson.

Iochdar, South Uist.

Catherine Morrison or Maclellan.

MRS CATHERINE MORRISON or MACLELLAN, Milton, South Uist.

(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

40,825. Mr Gordon.—I am informed that you are desirous of being heard. What is it you would like to say to the Commission?—I want to tell the Commissioners that my husband cannot turn a sod with a spade in South Uist.

40,826. Why not?—The factor took an ill-will against him.

40,827. Is he a cottar on the farm of Milton?—He was a miller until four years ago.

40,828. And he is now a cottar there?—Yes.

40,829. What does he work at?—He had to leave the country; he could not get a turn of work. I am left in the house with a weak family.

40,830. Do you allege that there was any undue interference on the part of the estate officials to prevent his getting work in the country?—They had a spite against him, but he gained his case both at Lochmaddy Sheriff Court, and also in the Court of Session.

40,831. I hope the estate officials and your husband may become better friends, and I would strongly recommend that.—Never; they sent the ground officer five times to evict me.

40,832. Mr Maccallum.—What was the cause of the dispute?—When we went to the mill, first of all, it was understood that the factor was to keep up the mill and keep the waters in order. But when the present factor came, he would not do any of these improvements, and he threw up the mill.

40,833. He did not keep to the arrangement made by the former factor to keep up the place?—No, he did not. Then my husband offered to give up the mill when it was not being kept up, but the factor would not take it.

40,834. Mr Gordon.—Did the factor sue him for the rent?—Yes, the factor sued him, but he put in a counter-claim for all the work he had done in repairing the mill.

40,835. What rent was paid for the mill?—£15.

40,836. And how much land went with it?—There were no lands attached to the mill; we paid for grazing to Mr Maclean, Milton. My husband had a croft for nine years at Dalibrog. He was not one penny in arrears.

40,837. And paid £15 for the buildings?—Yes.

40,838. Mr Maccallum.—Is the mill in working order just now?—It was closed when he commenced litigation, and the tenants did not get a chance to grind any more.

40,839. Are the people put to inconvenience through the mill ceasing to work?—Yes, they are, and willing enough to keep him there.

40,840. Mr P. R. Buik, W.S., Law Agent for Lady Gordon-Cathcart.—When were you last charged rent?—Four years ago.

40,841. And since then you have been charged no rent?—No, but evicted from the country altogether. One day last winter, the ground officer or the sheriff officer was there to remove me from my bed, and put me outside the house: there was a foot of snow on the ground at the time.

40,842. Why did not he do it?—The factor went for the doctor, and the doctor, when he came, would not allow them to interfere.

40,843. Does not the landlord hold a decree of removing against you?—I don't know.

40,844. Are you aware that the landlord also holds a decree for payment of arrears of rent?—He has not a penny against me: my husband gave the factor £10 three months before he was summoned.

40,845. Are you not aware also that your husband was several years in the mill without paying any rent to speak of? [Mr Gordon.—The witness has already said as much: she stated that the cost of keeping the mill in repair was equal to the rent.]

40,846. Are you aware that when your husband took the mill he undertook to keep it up?—Not at all.

40,847. Mr Gordon.—Was there a lease? [Mr Buik.—There was an offer made, in which he undertook to keep the mill up, but he neither did that nor paid rent.] Iochdar South Uist. Catherine Morrison or Maclellan.

40,848. Did you lose the case at the Sheriff Court, Lochmaddy? [Mr Buik.—We got decree for payment of rent, and decree of removing.]

40,849. Did the lease come to an end? [Mr Buik.—The lease was a yearly one; at all events, they had sat there for the last four years without paying rent.]

40,850. But the wheels have never gone round? [Mr Buik.—No, the wheels have never gone round; but all the same, they have prevented us from letting the mill to any other person.]

40,851. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—I beg to give notice that I shall ask questions with regard to this mill at the next sitting of the Commission at Lochmaddy, seeing that this inquiry is being adjourned. We can produce evidence to show that the statements made on behalf of the estate with regard to this mill are not strictly accurate. These statements are now on the records of the Royal Commission, and I intend to examine Mr Thomas Wilson, Solicitor, in order to speak to the facts at Lochmaddy. [Mr Buik.—I need only remark that I speak from memory about an occurrence which took place three or four years ago].

40,852. Mr Gordon.—I am afraid we are going a little beyond the scope of our inquiry in hearing anything at all about this case. It seems to be a mere dispute between the landlord and the tenant as to the effect of an agreement or lease. [Mr Buik.— It is quite irrelevant, I submit.] I trust, however, that no harm will come out of the good woman's explanation of her case.

[ADJOURNED.]

FORTY-EIGHTH SITTING.

LOCHMADDY, NORTH UIST, June 26, 1894. Lochmaddy, North Uist.

Present:—

GEORGE GORDON, Esq. (acting as Chairman).
Rev. MALCOLM MACCALLUM.
HENRY MUNRO, Esq.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

DONALD MACKINNON, Cottar, Baleshare, North Uist (74). Donald Mackinnon.

(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

40,853. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—I have been a cottar for the last ten years.

40,854. Were you a crofter formerly?—Yes, and my father and grandfather before me.

40,855. How many crofters are there in the township of Baleshare?—Twenty-three crofters, and one herd who occupies a croft.

40,856. Are these full crofts?—Yes; there are two of them sub-divided.

40,857. Is the township in a very congested condition,—thickly peopled?—Yes.

40,858. Are there any cottars in it?—Yes.

40,859. How many?—About a dozen.

40,860. What is the general size of the crofts?—Averaging 12 acres each.

40,861. Have they outrun to the south end of the island?—Yes, machair land, five or six miles.

40,862. What stock do the crofters have?—Four cows and two horses, and some have twenty sheep, others only four or five.

40,863. What is the average rent?—Between £5 and £6. [The Secretary.—I find from the Crofters Comhmaddy, th Uist.

ald ckinnon.

mission Report that the Commissioners fixed the rents of 20 holdings in Baleshare at a total of £103, 5s.]

40,864. Have the cottars any stock?—One beast each.

40,865. Have they any land at all?—No.

40,866. Do they keep their stock on the crofters' land then?—Yes, on the outrun. The crofters are not allowed by the proprietor to give them land. After they have manured the land with sea-ware the cottars dare not turn it.

40,867. Do the cottars derive their main living from the land, or are they fishermen?—They live partly by the produce of the land, and some of them are in the militia or the reserve, and others at work elsewhere.

40,868. Is there a general desire in the township for land?—Yes.

40,869. Can you tell us where any land could be got convenient for an addition to the present holdings?—The lands belonging to the two Lees, and the land adjoining on the south, at Eaval.

40,870. Would any of the crofters of the township be willing to remove to new ground?—Yes, I think so.

40,871. How many full-sized crofts do you think could be formed or left on Baleshare?—If one-third were taken and two-thirds left, it would be a just division.

40,872. A third of the crofters, and the whole of the cottars?—Yes, the whole of the cottars.

40,873. Is there any other land you can point out to the Commission except the hill of Ben Lee?—Yes, there is Chees-bay (Bagh-a'-chais) and Loch Portan on this side of Lochmaddy: there were 29 crofters there within my recollection. I was in their houses after I was grown up.

40,874. Were there townships formerly on the north side of Loch Efort?—Yes.

40,875. Where was that side of the loch occupied by crofters?—At Cainish.

40,876. How many crofters were there?—There were seven at Cainish; the late Dr Macleod had the other part of the land, and he had a shepherd at Breinish, who was at that time attached to the farm of Balelone on the west side.

40,877. When were the crofters removed from Cainish?—Fully 55 years ago. I distinctly remember them being there.

40,878. Can you point to any other ground suitable for crofters' holdings?—Yes, the Caolas Berneray: I was there when it was tenanted by crofters; also Newton or Baile-Mhic-Phail, Baile-Mhic-Conain, Trumisgarry and Clachan.

40,879. On what holding is Caolas Berneray?—On Newton Farm.

40,880. Do you say you remember crofters being there?—Yes, I was 16 years of age at the time.

40,881. Can you say what number of crofters there were?—There were seven crofters in Caolas Berneray, and I visited their houses.

40,882. Do you remember any crofters on any other part of the farm of Newton?—No, I do not remember the crofters being removed from the farm of Newton, but there were crofters on the portion of the farm called Cnocthaibhisgearaidh.

40,883. Do you remember seeing crofters on any other part of the farm?—Yes, I remember them on Trumisgarry and Oronsay. The latter is an island, but it does not belong to Newton Farm.

40,884. It belongs to Trumisgarry?—Yes.

40,885. Do you remember crofters being anywhere else?—I remember crofters being in Oronsay, in Athmhor, and in Trumisgarry. I was born in the island of Oronsay myself. I was 27 years of age before the crofters were removed from Granetote.

40,886. Do you remember how many crofters were there?—I believe about a score.

40,887. Was the whole farm of Granetote then under crofters?—Yes, every part of it.

40,888. Do you remember anything about Sollas?—Yes.

40,889. Did you see it occupied by crofters?—Yes.

40,890. Now, going back to the island of Berneray, do you remember when it was a crofting township?—Yes, I was in the crofters' houses there. There are delegates present from the island. Lochmaddy, North Uist.

Donald Mackinnon.

40,891. Can you tell us anything about the islands of Vallay and Griminish?—There were no crofters on the island of Vallay, but there were crofters in Griminish.

40,892. Was the farm of Griminish occupied wholly by crofters in your time?—Yes, it was wholly under crofters. They were evicted from Griminish, and the lands given to Captain Maclean of Hosta.

40,893. Can you tell us when that took place?—I believe it is about 60 years since Griminish was cleared.

40,894. Was there more than one township in Griminish?—Griminish was one township, and Airidh-Mhic-Guairidh adjoining it was another.

40,895. Which side is that upon?—On the east side.

40,896. Following round the coast, can you tell us about the estate of Balranald?—There were no crofters on Balranald, but there were in Paiblesgarry to the east of Balranald. I saw the tenantry there, and I knew some of the people who were removed.

40,897. It has been a part of the farm since you remember?—Yes.

40,898. Mr Maccallum.—Do you remember when there were fewer crofters in Baleshare than there are now?—No, I don't remember; when I first went to Baleshare it was divided into the same number of crofts as it is now.

40,899. Had they a right to common pasture which they have not now?—Yes, they had Ronay Island and Cnoc-Chuithein at first.

40,900. How did they lose that pasture?—It was taken from them by bad factors.

40,901. When was that?—Between 70 and 80 years ago.

40,902. And how is that grazing occupied now?—Captain Macdonald of Waternish owns Ronay, and Cnoc-Chuithein is leased to Roderick Macaulay, Tighary.

40,903. Would these places suit for an addition to the township pasture again?—Yes, very well indeed.

40,904. You mentioned the two Lees, I think, as land that would be suitable for pasture. How are these two hills occupied just now?—They are in the hands of the proprietor.

40,905. And are they under sheep?—Yes, under sheep.

40,906. Had the crofters on the island ever a right to these lands of Lee?—They were occupied by crofters in the olden times: there were 14 crofters on South Ben Lee.

40,907. When was that?—About 50 years ago. I used to visit their houses there.

40,908. Were these crofters cleared in order to form a sheep run?—Yes.

40,909. Were they in comfortable circumstances there?—Yes, very.

40,910. And where did they go after leaving these places?—They were driven like sheep to the landing place, and sent away to Australia and America. The steamers used to be guarded so that none could escape.

40,911. Did any of them remain in the island?—Yes, a few who managed to escape.

40,912. And where did these find shelter?—In various parts of the island; at Stromban and elsewhere.

40,913. Did you propose that there should be new settlements on the north side of Loch Efort, or that the lands there should be used in connection with the present townships?—I should think it would be settled on crofters.

40,914. And would they have arable land there?—Yes.

40,915. How many crofters do you think could be settled on the north of Loch Efort?—About a score, keeping in view the extent of land they formerly occupied.

40,916. Is that a convenient place for fishing?—Yes, very convenient.

40,917. Did those who were there before prosecute the fishing?—Yes, they used to fish sometimes.

Lochmaddy, North Uist.
Donald Mackinnon.

40,918. In your earliest recollection how was the south side of Loch Efort occupied?—When I first recollect, there were only four crofters there, and most of the land was left untilled. It is now occupied by 34 crofters.

40,919. Is it a suitable place for crofters?—Yes, very suitable.

40,920. But it is fully occupied now, is it not?—Yes, there are quite enough.

40,921. How did the number of tenants increase from 4 to 34?—They came from Sollas after the evictions there.

40,922. Are they as well off on Loch Efort side as they were in Sollas?—Yes, perhaps a little better.

40,923. How is that?—They were paying too much rent in Sollas. Now they pay less rent and are getting on better. Then they are used to work at kelp-making, which is now a bygone industry.

40,924. Is not the land in Sollas very much superior to the land on Loch Efort side?—Yes, twice as good.

40,925. They were removed from Sollas, you think, because they were unable to pay the rack rent?—No, that was not the reason. The factor and the tenants had a cast out, and he would not give them work.

40,926. Were they in arrears?—Yes.

40,927. And was that made the ostensible reason for removing them?—Yes, that was the reason given for evicting them.

40,928. Do you think they were paying a higher rent than is now paid for the farm?—They were paying double or three times what is charged now.

40,929. And they were compelled to leave Sollas, I suppose, very much against their will?—Yes; their houses were pulled down about their heads. Fifteen police constables were taken specially from Inverness to evict them.

40,930. Did they get a place prepared for them on Loch Efort side?—No. There was a steamer-load sent from Lochmaddy to Australia, but the half of them were buried in Ireland.

40,931. How did that come about?—Fever broke out on board ship, and many of them died.

40,932. How did those succeed who arrived safely in the colonies?—Some got on well, and others the reverse.

40,933. Have any of them ever returned to visit the place?—One of them returned two years ago, but he went back again.

40,934. I suppose he succeeded abroad?—Yes, he did well.

40,935. Do you know of any other who succeeded?—I never saw any other returning with anything.

40,936. Did those who remained in the island go direct to Loch Efort side?—Yes, every one of them.

40,937. Have they comfortable houses there now?—Yes, through time they built good houses for themselves.

40,938. Have these houses been put up wholly at their own expense?—Wholly at their own expense; they lived first of all in mud huts, and then made dry stone houses.

40,939. Did they themselves improve the land which they now cultivate?—Yes, they improved the lands; they are fit for tillage now, but at first they were only moorland, never cultivated.

40,940. In your opinion, are the houses at Loch Efort side more comfortable than the houses they had at Sollas?—Yes, they are better than any houses I ever saw in Sollas.

40,941. And they got no compensation for the houses they left?—No, they never got a shilling for them.

40,942. When they went to that waste and uncultivated piece of land at Loch Efort side, was rent charged on them immediately?—Yes, they were charged a small rent, but when the present proprietor came in, he charged them five times the original rent. The crofts which originally paid only 15s. now pay £2, 10s.

40,943. Mr Munro.—Do you remember the condition of the crofters before the evictions took place throughout the island? Can you tell us generally how they lived at that time?—They were quite comfortable, speaking generally.

Lochmaddy, North Uist.
Donald Mackinnon.

40,944. How did the condition of comfort then compare with their present condition?—I think they were much more comfortable then than they are now.

40,945. They were comfortable and contented, I suppose?—Yes.

40,946. Now, is it your opinion that if the crofters were restored to the lands from which they were evicted, they would attain a similar condition of comfort and prosperity to that which they formerly enjoyed?—Yes, I think so.

40,947. And if these lands were opened up to crofters, they would be readily taken?—Yes.

40,948. I think you stated that when crofters were moved on previous occasions, they built houses at their own expense. Could they do that to-day?—Yes, they would do the same to-day.

40,949. You are an old man, Mr Mackinnon, and I presume I may take it that you are appearing here to-day more in the interests of the younger generation than your own?—Yes.

40,950. At your time of life, of course, you cannot expect much benefit from any change that may take place in this matter?—No, not much, but I should like that the younger generation should have the benefit.

40,951. Now I suppose you could tell us something about the relations which at present exist between Sir John Orde as a landlord and his tenants, particularly the crofters?—They are very much dissatisfied; who but would be dissatisfied with Sir John? If the Almighty or the people do not prevent him he is likely to starve us altogether.

40,952. Does he take no interest in the welfare of the people?—No; he won't accept the rent from them if it is one penny short.

40,953. He is utterly indifferent to their prosperity and wellbeing, provided he gets his rent?—Yes, he fully appears to be that.

40,954. Now, supposing that the crofters combined to ask restoration of the lands from which they have been evicted, have you any reasonable expectation that Sir John would accede to their request?—No, he would not: he would not give even a boll of meal, small as that is, far less give them these lands.

40,955. Then, I presume, your only expectation, and that of those in this part of the islands, is of the legislature stepping in and making some arrangements by which Sir John might be compelled to give them access to the land?—Unless the legislature does it, crofters and cottars will go without the lands.

40,956. There is a strong desire, I suppose, on the part of the crofters, that some arrangement of that sort should be made?—Yes, they are very eager that it should be done.

40,957. Is there sufficient land in the island to satisfy the desires of all the crofters for reasonably-sized crofts?—Yes, and more.

40,958. Mr Gordon.—You have no land yourself?—No.

40,959. You do not appear here on behalf of the crofters?—No; I appear for myself and for the cottars.

40,960. But you have no authority to speak in the name of the crofters?—No, I have no special authority.

40,961. Is there any person here representing the estate? [Mr Wilson, Solicitor.—Mr Orde is here.] [Mr Orde.—I have no authority.]

40,962. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—You have stated that you are here with a mandate from the cottars to speak on their behalf and for yourself. I should like to ask whether you are aware that it was stated in the public prints, within the last few days, in a report of evidence given by the proprietor of this island before a Committee of the House of Commons, that there are about 380 crofters and 200 cottar families in the island, and whether you believe these are about the numbers?—I did not know that he was examined.

40,963. Do you believe the figures are tolerably correct?—I cannot say.

40,964. Now, I should like you to tell us whether it is a fact that these 200 cottar families have all along been living on the crofters, so to speak,—getting bits of land from the crofters and growing potatoes on them?—Yes.

40,965. And is it also a fact that before the passing of the Crofters Act, they were paying Sir John Orde a rack rent for the crofts and keeping up these 200 cottars upon their crofter lands?—Yes, they were in some cases paying double rents and also supporting the cottars.

40,966. And since the passing of the Crofters Act and the fixing of the rents, has Sir John Orde issued public notices threatening to evict under the Act any crofter that gave an inch of his land to a cottar for potato ground?—Yes, that is the truth. They came where I was myself, and they had Sir John's letter with them, and they told me not to till the ground although I got it and although I had manured it.

40,967. So that now the cottars of North Uist are in a worse position than ever?—Yes, doubly worse.

40,968. Would you be surprised to hear that Sir John Orde, before a Committee of the House of Commons, stated that about half the island is in the occupation of a few large farmers?—Yes, indeed, much more than half the island is occupied by tacksmen.

40,969. Are you prepared to state from your own personal knowledge that that half contains the fattest portions of the island?—Yes, it does, and it has always been the best part of the land. Three or four tacksmen now occupy lands which formerly supported a thousand souls.

40,970. Do you believe that that land would prove sufficient to make comfortable holdings for the 200 landless cottars in the island?—Yes, I believe so.

40,971. And would such a scheme of migration prove an immense boon to the crofters as well?—Yes, to be sure it would.

40,972. Would you be surprised to know that in the county of Argyll one of the largest tacksmen came before this Royal Commission, and stated that the people of the Highlands did not want land at all; that they were taught that they could get it for nothing, but that they did not really want it, and had no intention of using it, but that their intention was, if they got it, to go and sell it?—They would not sell it. Nobody who ever got lands parted with them willingly. That is not the custom here.

40,973. Did he misrepresent the feeling of the people in Uist when he said the people did not want it at all?—I think he was perfectly wrong; he misrepresented us as much as he could.

40,974. Did it ever come into the heads of the cottars of North Uist that they would get land for nothing?—No, they never thought so.

40,975. Were they always prepared to pay an equitable rent if they got land?—Yes, and they are now willing to pay it year by year.

40,976. Whether would they prefer Sir John Orde or the Crofters Commission to fix the rent?—They would rather it should be fixed by the Commission; or else Sir John will have to turn better than he is.

40,977. And if they got the land on fair terms, are they prepared to-day to take the land and to build the necessary houses without Government assistance?—They would pay every penny to-day if they only got it.

ANGUS CAMERON, cottar, Claddach Kyles, North Uist (67).

(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

40,978. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—I am a cottar.

40,979. Did you hear the evidence given by the previous witness?—Yes.

40,980. Do you agree generally with what he said?—Yes.

40,981. May we take you then as corroborating his evidence?—Yes, I quite corroborate what he said.

40,982. Mr Macallum.—Have you anything of your own to add to what Mr Mackinnon stated?—Yes.

40,983. State as shortly as you can what you wish to say?—I was evicted from my house by the proprietor.

40,984. Of course, you know that what we want to get at is evidence as to lands that would be suitable for occupation by crofters and cottars: have you anything bearing on that?—I know of plenty lands that would be suitable for cottars. There are four crofts vacant in Claddach Kirkibost.

40,985. How are these four crofts now taken up?—They are in the hands of the proprietor.

40,986. Are they cultivated?—There is one small spot of them cultivated by Roderick Macaulay.

40,987–8. How did the crofts become vacant? How did they fall into the proprietor's hands?—Some of those who possessed them left long ago, and they were for some time in the hands of the local medical practitioner.

40,989. When did he cease to occupy them?—About 14 years ago. I refer not to the present medical man, but one of his predecessors.

40,990. And have they been for 14 years in the proprietor's own hands?—One of them was attached to the island of Kirkibost, and the tenant of Kirkibost buys the grazing of the other.

40,991. Is there any other person who can speak with greater definiteness with regard to these vacant crofts, besides yourself?—They cannot know more about them than I do, because I was born there, and my people had one of them.

40,992. And were you put out of that croft against your will?—Yes, against our will.

40,993. Were they offered land elsewhere?—No.

40,994. Did they get compensation for the houses they left?—No.

40,995. Were they offered houses elsewhere, or how did they get houses?—They were not offered anything.

40,996. Then, did they build houses for themselves?—Yes, they built houses for themselves on the same land.

40,997. On the lands they had held before?—Yes.

40,998. And how are these people occupied now?—There are only two alive now, myself and another man.

40,999. Have you ever applied to get back the land, or are you willing to take back the land?—Yes, we are quite willing to take the lands, but we could not get them if we asked them; we would not even be allowed to remain in the houses.

41,000. And that house was built by yourself, I suppose?—Yes.

41,001. Did you get permission from the proprietor to build that house?—Yes, we got the permission of the then factor.

41,002. And do you think the proprietor gets a better return from these crofts that are left vacant, than from those that are occupied by crofters?—He has no return from them except the payment for the grazing.

41,003. What became of the old houses that were on the crofts?—They were tumbling to ruins.

41,004. What happens when a croft becomes vacant in this island? If a tenant gives up a croft, or if it becomes vacant in any way, what is usually done with it?—Unless the tenant leaves it to one of his family or somebody else, if it falls into the hands of the proprietor nobody gets it.

41,005. It is never added to existing crofts in order to increase the size?—No, never.

41,006. Then, with regard to Balranald farm, has it always been occupied as it is at present?—It has always been a farm.

41,007. Has any part been added to it from crofters' lands?—Not a foot except Ard-runary.

41,008. Is that a large place?—Yes.

41,009. How many crofters would have been there?—It was not tenanted by crofters, it was attached to the adjoining farm of Houghary.

41,010. When was it taken from that farm?—About 70 years ago.

41,011. Do you remember a larger extent of Balranald being cultivated than now?—I remember its

Lochmaddy, North Uist.

Angus Cameron.

producing more grain, but I never saw so much straw as it yields now.

41,012. But is it not the case that there is a large extent of land that was formerly under cultivation, which is not now being cultivated by the tenant?—That was done by the crofters in Paiblesgarry over a hundred years ago. Paiblesgarry is now part of the Farm of Balranald.

41,013. Did they cultivate it for the tenant of Balranald?—Paiblesgarry was occupied by sub-tenants. The farm was rented by one man, and that part of Paiblesgarry was sub-let to the others.

41,014. Is there a great extent of arable land in Balranald that is not presently cultivated by the tenant?—Yes, there is hill pasture.

41,015. But is there land suitable for cultivation if the crofters got it, which is not being cultivated just now?—Yes, but it is rather too far away from the manure, from the sea-weed.

41,016. And do you think that if Balranald were made available, crofters would not take crofts there because of that objection?—I cannot say: I don't know.

41,017. Do you mean distinctly to say that you don't know whether the crofters would or would not take the land in Balranald that was once cultivated but is now lying out of cultivation below the road?—I know it would make good land, but it is far from manure. I have no doubt, however, it would be occupied if it were cut up.

41,018. Is the land there quite as good as the land occupied by crofters elsewhere in this island?—Some of it is better than most crofts, and some of it worse.

41,019. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—When a croft falls vacant into the hands of the landlord, is it usual with the cottars to make application for that croft?—What is the use of that when they know they won't get it?

41,020. Did any cottar ask the proprietor for any croft that was vacant,—say for any of the four crofts you have referred to?—They asked them, but they did not get them.

41,021. Who asked them?—Roderick Macaulay asked it last year, but he did not get it. He is a crofter in Tighary.

41,022. He is not a cottar?—A cottar would not even be allowed to look at the lands.

41,023. Can you give the name of any cottar that asked the proprietor for any croft?—I asked lands myself, but did not get them. He was charging a guinea of rent for the house stance.

41,024. And you asked him for a croft?—I asked him for the guinea's worth.

41,025. Had he crofts vacant on his land at the time?—He had the common at that time, and he could do what he liked with it.

41,026. Had he a croft on his hands at that time?—No, and neither did he promise to give me one, supposing there were.

41,027. Can you give me the name of any cottar who asked a croft that was at the time in the hands of the landlord?—No, I cannot, they were afraid to ask it.

Alexander Maccuish.

ALEXANDER MACCUISH, cottar, Claddach Kirkibost (55). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

41,028. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—No, a cottar.

41,029. Did you hear the evidence given by the last two witnesses?—Yes.

41,030. Do you agree with what they stated?—Yes, it was all right.

41,031. And have you anything to add to what they said?—No, I have nothing to add.

Archibald Macdonald.

ARCHIBALD MACDONALD, Kyles Paible (36). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

41,032. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—No, I am a cottar.

41,033. Did you hear the evidence of the previous witnesses?—Yes.

41,034. Do you agree generally with what they said?—Yes.

41,035. Have you anything else you would like to add to it?—I have only to say that all the cottars were willing to take lands if they could get them. There are four cottars in the township and they all want land.

41,036. What size of croft would you like?—About £3 worth of land.

41,037. Are you a fisherman?—No.

41,038. How do you get your living in the meantime?—I sometimes act as herd for the township, and I work here and there when I can get work.

41,039. Would you be able to stock a croft if you got one?—I have a little stock.

41,040. Do you graze your stock upon the crofting township?—Yes, on the township grazing.

41,041. Have the other three cottars any stock?—Yes, they all have a little stock. The four of us keep one horse each and a cow and a few sheep.

41,042. Which are all grazed upon the township lands?—Yes; one of us has no horse.

ARCHIBALD MACDONALD, Claddach Kirkibost (57)—examined.

41,043. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—No, a cottar.

41,044. Did you hear the evidence given by the last witness?—Yes.

41,045. Do you agree with it?—Quite, so far as my recollection goes.

41,046. Do you know these crofts that were mentioned, which are situated on each side of you?—Yes.

41,047. The westmost of them is vacant in Claddach Illeray?—Yes, there are two there and two at Claddach Kirkibost.

41,048. They are vacant at present?—Yes.

41,049. Would they make suitable holdings for a crofter?—Quite suitable.

41,050. They are all under grass, I think?—They are in Sir John's hand, and are at present under grass.

41,051. Mr Maccallum.—Have you any particular statement of your own to make, with regard to the township of Claddach Kirkibost, which you represent?—Well, nothing in particular; I have nothing to say beyond what the former delegates have stated.

41,052. Are there many cottars there?—Yes, there are a good few.

41,053. About how many are there, do you think?—I believe between two miles by road there are upwards of 20 cottars.

41,054. Have any of these made application for the vacant crofts, do you know?—I am not aware if they did.

41,055. How do you account for that, seeing they are so anxious to get land?—I believe, myself, that the reason is that although they would ask, they would not get them. For some time past the proprietor has refused to give land to cottars on any account.

41,056. You think they have fully made up their minds that it would be useless to apply to Sir John?—Quite so.

41,057. And are you aware that he is threatening the crofters who were formerly giving potato ground to the cottars with eviction if they continue to do so?—Yes, that is quite correct.

41,058. Has he, himself, offered to do anything for these cottars?—Yes. He was charging rent upon these cottars all along: some paid this rent and others refused; and for those who are still paying rent I believe he was doing something, but nothing for those who refused to pay.

41,059. He was charging rent on some?—Yes.

41,060. What rent did he usually charge?—From 10s. to £1, generally £1.

chmaddy, rth Uist.
chibald cdonald.

41,061. Was that for the stance of the house?—Yes, and for the peat stance attached.

41,062. Was the house built on township lands, or on Sir John's lands?—Generally on the township or the crofts. Most of the cottars have their houses on the crofts, except a few who are on the common.

41,063. The whole of the cottars' houses are built either on the crofts or on the common belonging to the township?—Yes.

41,064. When did Sir John begin to charge the cottars rent?—It was long ago, but now he has given it up for some years past because he could not get it. There is no rent asked now.

41,065. What is done for those who pay him rent for the house and the privilege of peat?—He was giving some of them a piece of land near to their houses: I know one or two that got it.

41,066. In whose occupation was the land before he gave it to the cottars?—There was a piece of land at Cnoc-an-lin, and one James Macleod got leave to build a house there. There was a bit of land attached to his house and I believe he was paying a rent of £1.

41,067. To whom?—To Sir John, I understand.

41,068. Was the land that he got taken off the township common?—So I believe.

41,069. And yet the rent was not paid to the township but to the proprietor?—I am not positive about it.

41,070. Are you aware of his giving land to any cottar out of any of the large tacks?—I am not aware.

41,071. So that if he has done anything at all, it has only been from township lands?—Yes, that is so.

41,072. Does he refuse to give stances for houses, or has there been any demand for stances?—Yes, there is a demand for stances, and he refuses.

41,073. Who are the people who have been applying for stances for building houses?—I myself applied. My house is not situated in a very good place, and for some years past,—I think it was 18 or 19 years ago that I first applied to Sir John for a stance for which I was willing to pay a reasonable rent. He promised one then. I have asked him and his late factor at different times since, but I never got it.

41,074. What sort of house was it in your view to build?—An ordinary house; I would have built a house with two or three rooms and a kitchen.

41,075. You were prepared to build such a house, and applied for a site and were refused?—That is so.

41,076. You were willing to pay a reasonable sum for the stance, I suppose?—Yes, at the same time.

41,077. And could you get it on any terms whatever?—I was never offered any place. I applied to have the place where I now live put in better order, but I was not allowed.

41,078. Do you think that if stances were freely given, some fishermen would put up houses for themselves?—A great many.

41,079. And you think that this refusal on the part of the proprietor to grant stances works very much against the fishing industry?—Yes, quite contrary to it.

41,080. Where do you think is the place that is best suited for building up a fishing industry?—Generally speaking, I believe those places that were mentioned by the former delegates are all fishing places, but the island of Heisker is a very suitable place if there was a proper harbour built there. It is a good bit out of the channel, and boats would go into it.

41,081. What do you say as to the place where we are just now, Lochmaddy?—Lochmaddy was once a great place for fishing. I have seen a good fleet of boats here getting capital fish.

41,082. You think it is quite impossible for the fishing industry to prosper here so long as Sir John maintains his present attitude of refusing stances?—Yes.

41,083. Do you know whether natives of this island who prospered elsewhere, and have come back willing to spend their days here, have been applying for stances for houses?—Yes, I know some young men that were in Australia came back and applied for houses. They made money in Australia and came to set up on this island of Heisker, but were refused.

41,084. Do you think that to allow such men to put up houses here would benefit the place a great deal,—I mean such people as those who have done well elsewhere? If they were settled down in this island do you think it would be for the benefit of the crofters and their neighbours generally?—I think so, seeing they would spend their money on the island. Lochmaddy, North Uist. Archibald Macdonald.

41,085. And do you think there is a considerable number of such people, who would build houses in Uist, if they could get sites?—No doubt, if there was a start made.

41,086. How do you account for the complete refusal of the proprietor to give sites here? Would it not benefit him also?—I consider it would benefit him at the same time.

41,087. If these men got sites and built suitable houses, would he have a perfectly good security for receiving the rent they promised?—He would.

41,088. Can you tell us what place the cottars of your township look to as the most suitable for themselves to be settled on? We have gone over a great deal of the island already: can you tell us whether they have fixed upon any place near themselves as being suitable for settling on, if the land were available?—No, I am quite sure they would be quite satisfied to be settled down with all the rest of the cottars, whatever place might be chosen.

41,089. And if the cottars were settled on some or other of these farms, do you think they would be able to pay to the proprietor as good a rent as he gets from the tacksman just now?—I believe they would, if they got it at the same rate that the tacksmen are charged.

41,090. You think they would pay that and be much more comfortable than they are at present?—Yes, that is so.

41,091. Do the crofters and cottars of Uist derive any special benefit from the large tacks?—Not that I am aware of, but sometimes they get ground for potatoes: the crofters and cottars that work on these farms get a piece of land from the tacksman for potatoes.

41,092. But do you think that the people would suffer in any material degree by these tacks being converted into small holdings?—No, I am not aware that they would.

41,093. Are the tenants of these large farms all resident on the island? Do they remain on the farms the whole year?—No, they go to the east coast fishing, to the Militia, to the Reserve, and to lobster fishing and other occupations.

41,094. (Question repeated). — Balranald does not reside at Balranald; Vallay does not reside at Vallay; and Captain Macdonald, Ronay Island, does not reside there.

41,095. Then, is there any large resident tenant at all? There is the farm of Newton?—Yes, Mr Orde has it.

41,096. How is it occupied?—He resides there.

41,097. Is he the proprietor's son?—Yes.

41,098. So that, with the exception of the proprietor's son, there is no large resident tenant at all in the island?—There is another,—Mr Maclean, Sollas, and Mr Macaulay, Trumisgarry.

41,099. Do you agree with what has been said already, that these large tacks include the greater or the better half of the island?—I do; they occupy the largest and the fattest portions.

41,100. Mr Munro.—You have told us that Sir John threatened the crofters who should give any land to the cottars?—Correct.

41,101. Could you tell us any instance of a crofter having been threatened for offering potato land to cottars?—I believe there was a notice sent to the crofters, prohibiting them from giving land to cottars, or grazing for their cattle.

41,102. What is Sir John's object in doing that, do you know?—I believe, myself, that he was getting no rent from the cottars, and Sir John knew well that most of them had cattle.

41,103. I suppose he wanted to discourage their remaining on the land at all?—Quite so.

41,104. Now, about these two vacant crofts,—it never occurred to you, I suppose, to make a personal applica-

Lochmaddy, North Uist.

Archibald Macdonald.

tion to Sir John for either of these vacant crofts?—No.

41,105. Are you perfectly certain that Sir John would not give you one of the crofts if you applied for it?—Oh, I am not quite positive about that. I never asked him for a croft; I asked for a stance for a house. I don't know what he would say as to a croft, but he would not give me a stance.

41,106. Is the impression general among the cottars that they would not get land if they applied for it?—Yes.

41,107. What is the reason, in your opinion, why Sir John wants to discourage the settlement of crofters or cottars upon the island?—To cut it up and make farms.

41,108. Does he get more rent from the big farms than from the crofters?—I don't think so: if it were cut up into ordinary lots I myself believe that it would pay him better.

41,109. Do the crofters, as a rule, pay their rents punctually?—They do: of late years they pay at the July markets, those who don't pay at Martinmas.

41,110. In your opinion, does Sir John's management of his estate hinder generally the prosperity of the island?—To a certain extent it does.

41,111. He refuses sites for the building of cottages, and he discourages crofters and cottars in every way he can,—is that correct?—Quite correct. He also discouraged fishing, for I know myself, that not very long ago there were some fishermen who built huts very close to the shore near Lochmaddy here, and their huts were hurled down about their ears.

41,112. Do you know within what distance of high water mark they built the huts?—I cannot say.

41,113. But fishing at one time was pursued at Lochmaddy?—Yes, to a great extent. I have seen a great fishing done at Lochmaddy here, and many people getting plenty work among the fishing.

41,114. And has Sir John's refusal to grant sites for fishermen's houses anything to do with the cessation of fishing?—I believe it was the chief cause of the fishermen keeping away.

41,115. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton:—Is fishing the only local industry in this part of the country?—Generally it is.

41,116. Where are the fishermen whose huts were pulled down?—Not far from here: I cannot recollect the very place.

41,117. Where were their homes?—I believe they came from Harris.

41,118. They came here in a boat to fish?—Yes.

41,119. Was it for herring?—No, lobster fishing.

41,120. And for what period of the year would they remain in this part of the country?—These Harris people come generally in winter.

41,121. And stay for how long?—For some weeks, and in spring they come to fish.

41,122. The huts were simply temporary residences for a few weeks?—That is all.

41,123. Would they be within 100 yards of high water mark?—I cannot say what was the distance.

41,124. Who pulled them down?—I believe Sir John was there and his ground officer and others.

41,125. Is it a fact that Sir John pulled them down with his own hands?—Oh, I cannot say.

41,126. But the huts were pulled down?—Yes, the huts were pulled down.

41,127. You are a sheriff-officer, I think?—Yes.

41,128. Were you asked to serve eviction summonses upon fishermen in this part of the country who had houses in the neighbourhood of Lochmaddy here?—Yes.

41,129. How many?—I cannot say how many.

41,130. Where did they live?—On Loch Portan, on the opposite side of the loch there. I believe there were one or two there.

41,131. Had they land there?—No, I am not positive that the two had land.

41,132. Had they wives and families?—Yes, they had.

41,133. And comfortable houses?—Their houses were not extra comfortable, you know.

41,134. Were they as good as the average £3 crofter's house?—Just about the average.

41,135. At whose expense were the eviction summonses against them issued?—At the expense of Sir John.

41,136. By what did these families live?—They were fishing, and I believe they were occasionally in the employment of young Mr Orde. It was on his land.

41,137. But did they live mainly by the fishing?—Yes, they were working at it, going to the west coast and working at home again.

41,138. Had they a boat of their own?—I believe they had a small boat.

41,139. And had they herring nets?—I think they had.

41,140. Is it within your knowledge that they were making a fairly comfortable living?—They were doing as well as their neighbours, I know.

41,141. Do you know why they were evicted?—I cannot say what was the very cause.

41,142. But so far as you know, Sir John has by his actions been discouraging the prosecution of the fishing industry here?—Yes.

41,143. Has he gone the length of refusing a house to the Procurator-Fiscal? (Question disallowed.)

41,144. I bow to your decision. (To witness.) Do you know every crofting township in the island?—I know most of them.

41,145. How long have you been in the island?—Since I was born.

41,145A. Have the crofting townships been settled with a view that the crofters should have an opportunity of prosecuting the fishing industry? Have several of the crofting townships been put into a suitable place for following the fishing, or are the crofting townships in places that are not so suitable?—Most of the crofters are situated in places where they cannot get fish, the outlets are so difficult to get at.

41,146. The places of refuge for the protection of boats?—Yes.

41,147. Do you know the west end of Berneray?—Yes, very well.

41,148. Would that be a very suitable place for crofting fishing?—Yes, it would be a good station. Heisker again would be a good station.

41,149. Supposing the land that is in the tacksmen's hands were made available, would you propose to have it all divided into large crofts, or would you have it mostly divided with the view of giving a comfortable home to crofter fishermen?—I would approve of it being cut up into pieces suitable for those fishermen who could be placed near the shore, not large crofts.

41,150. You would put a large croft only in a place that was not convenient for the fishing?—Yes, and small crofts in a place from which fishing could be prosecuted.

41,151. And do you believe that the 200 cottars in the island, or the bulk of them, would be able to take up such holdings and to erect the buildings without any Government assistance,—that is to say, if they got the holdings on fair and equitable terms?—I believe they would: most of these crofters have cows, and many of them have a horse and cart, a cow, and some sheep.

41,152. Mr Gordon:—You mentioned once or twice in your evidence the island of Heisker?—Yes.

41,153. Is it not the case that that island is already peopled with crofters?—Oh, yes, but I mean for a fishing station.

41,154. Do the present inhabitants of Heisker not fish?—For lobsters, and do very well.

41,155. But you would not suggest that more people should be put on that small island?—No, unless they would get a site for houses.

41,156. You would suggest that Heisker should be made a fishing island?—Yes, along with Berneray and Lochmaddy.

41,157. It is the south end of the island of Berneray that you refer to?—Yes.

41,158. How is that south end at present occupied?—It is in the hands of a tenant just now.

ochmaddy, orth Uist.

rchibald acdonald.

41,159. There is at present a fishing village or township on the north-east side of Berneray?—Yes.

41,160. You consider that to the west side of Berneray, and the island of Heisker and Lochmaddy, are the three best fishing stations of North Uist?—Yes, Loch Efort might turn out to be a very good station too, because there is good water,—boats could come in at low tide as well as high tide.

41,161. It is a harbour that can be approached at any state of the tide?—Yes.

41,162. How are the people doing who are on the south side there?—Ordinarily: some are better off than others.

41,163. But they are fairly successful as fishermen?—Yes.

41,164. Mr Munro.—You spoke of temporary huts erected by fishermen. Were these huts used for the purpose of drying nets, or storing the implements of their calling; or were they used as more permanent dwellings?—Dwellings over night.

41,165. Not intended to remain permanently?—No, but only for a certain time,—six or eight weeks. Perhaps the men would go home over Sunday.

41,166. The erections were quite of a temporary character?—Yes.

41,167. And used chiefly for drying nets and keeping-sails, &c.?—Yes.

41,168. Did you ever hear it stated, as a matter of law, that a fisherman was entitled to erect any temporary structure for the purposes you have specified on any unoccupied or uncultivated land within a distance of 100 yards from high water mark?—I think I heard of it.

41,169. Might I suggest to you that you should make the inquiry in the proper quarter to satisfy yourself.

onald acdonald.

DONALD MACDONALD, Crofter, Illeray, North Uist (62).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

41,170. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

41,171. How many crofts are there in the township of Illeray?—Sixteen.

41,172. And how many crofters?—There are three vacant crofts.

41,173. Are any of the crofts divided?—No.

41,174. Are there any cottars in the township?—Yes, four or five.

41,175. Have they any stock?—Some of them have.

41,176. Do they keep their stock on the crofts?—Yes.

41,177. What size of a croft have you?—I am not sure.

41,178. What stock have you?—One cow, two horses, and a stirk.

41,179. Any sheep?—About a dozen sheep.

41,180. What rent do you pay for that?—£4, 5s.

41,181. Is your croft about an average in the township?—Yes.

41,182. Is there a general desire for larger holdings among the crofters of Illeray?—Yes, they would require that; the tide has swept away a great part of the land.

41,183. What occupation do they follow for a livelihood, besides working on their crofts?—Some members of the family go south,—the young men go to the militia and elsewhere.

41,184. How do you employ your time?—I work on the high roads, and at odd jobs, when I am not engaged on the croft.

41,185. What size of a croft would you like?—I would require two such as I have, for it is bad land.

41,186. Do you think that if half the crofters were removed from the township of Illeray, the other half would have sufficient land?—They would be very much better off than they are.

41,187. Would they be willing to move to other crofts if they got them?—Yes, quite willing if they got better crofts.

41,188. Is there any land in your neighbourhood that you would consider suitable for new holdings?—Yes. Lochmaddy, North Uist.

41,189. Where?—There are three crofts in the township. Donald Macdonald.

41,190. In whose occupation are they at present?—In the hands of the proprietor.

41,191. How do they come to be vacant?—One of the tenants went to America, and the other died.

41,192. And what became of the third?—One of them had two crofts.

41,193. Are there buildings on these crofts?—Yes.

41,194. And are they also vacant?—They have fallen into ruins.

41,195. Is there any other land that you can suggest as suitable?—Not near us; we are surrounded by crofting townships.

41,196. Do you know the four crofts that were spoken of by the previous witness, two in Illeray and two in Kirkibost?—Yes, I know them. They are about two miles from us.

41,197. Do you think they would make good holdings?—As good as any other crofts that I know.

41,198. Has anybody applied for these vacant crofts to your knowledge?—I have heard that they were applied for, but I cannot say with certainty. But there is one croft in Illeray that was applied for and refused.

41,199. Who applied for it?—Donald Macdonald, Illeray, and he could not get it from the proprietor. Five other tenants of Illeray also applied to the Commission for it, but have not got it yet.

41,200. Was any reason given by the proprietor for refusing to give it to Donald Macdonald?—I am not aware.

41,201. And there is no other land in your neighbourhood suitable for crofting?—No.

41,202. What sort of land is the island of Kirkibost?—Good land, sandy soil; machair land.

41,203. How is it occupied at present?—By Roderick Macaulay, Tighary.

41,204. Does he live upon it?—No, he lives in Tighary.

41,205. Would that island be suitable for crofter holdings?—Yes, very good.

41,206. Is there water upon it?—Yes.

41,207. There is another small island there?—Yes, the island of Vorogay: that is the croft of which I spoke, for which five crofters applied.

41,208. And you think both these islands would make suitable ground for these holdings?—Yes, very good; very much better than those we occupy.

41,209. Do you know the land of Paiblesgarry?—Yes.

41,210. Does it form at present a part of the farm of Balranald?—Yes.

41,211. Would it be suitable for new holdings?—They were the best crofts in the island, when it was cut up into crofts.

41,212. Is the land at present under crop?—Yes.

41,213. It is laboured as part of the farm?—Yes.

DONALD MACCORQUODALE, Cottar, Illeray, North Uist (57). Donald Maccorquodale.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

41,214. Mr Gordon.—Are you a cottar?—Yes.

41,215. Did you hear the evidence given by the preceding witnesses?—Yes.

41,216. Do you agree with it?—Yes.

41,217. Have you anything further to add from your own knowledge?—Perhaps I might, if it had not been that time is so limited.

41,218. Let us hear what you have got to say?—I have only to speak about the way in which we cottars have been kept so low for such a length of time. We were not allowed anything at all except what we worked for.

41,219. Have you any stock?—Yes.

41,220. How many?—I keep two cows and a horse and a few sheep.

Lochmaddy, North Uist.

Donald Maccorquodale.

41,221. Do you keep them on the crofters' land?—Yes.

41,222. How do you occupy yourself and your horse?—I do some tillage.

41,223. To whom?—For myself.

41,224. On whose land do you do the tillage if you have no land?—I get small pieces from the crofters here and there through the township.

41,225. Do you pay them anything for it?—No, they don't take anything for what they give me.

41,226. What special complaint have you, then, if you get land from other people?—I would rather have some land for which I could pay, so that I might call it my own.

41,227. You would like to get a croft?—Yes.

41,228. What size of croft would you like?—I would be content with very little, and I would take a good deal, as much as I could possibly work, so long as the Lord gives me health.

41,229. Could you build a house on a croft if you got one?—We would have built houses long before now had we been permitted. It is a great disgrace to a Christian country such as we are, to think that any one possessed of a horse or cow should be obliged to house them in the same house with himself. We were prohibited from erecting any accommodation in the shape of sheds or outhouses of any description.

41,230. Mr Munro.—Do I understand you to say that you were obliged to house your horse and cow with yourself, because you were prevented by the landlord from erecting suitable outhouses?—Because we were not allowed to erect suitable buildings. I was prevented by Sir John, and others acting for him.

41,231. Mr Donald Macrae, Plockton.—Are you aware that Sir John Orde has interdicted even a crofter widow from building a byre for her stock?—Yes, I know it very well.

41,232. And she had to appear in the Sheriff Court to fight for her rights?—Yes.

41,233. Is it a fact that he put this widow, who was a crofter, to the expense of employing a law agent and leading evidence in the Sheriff Court to fight out her right to build a byre in order to house her cattle outside her own dwelling-house?—Yes, that is a fact.

41,234. Is it a fact that this widow had a son and a daughter living in the house, and that she was obliged previously to house the cattle in a room 16 feet long by 12 feet wide, in which the whole family lived, and that she had to tether the horse to the end of the bed?—We heard that said.

41,235. Do you know a woman in Cnoc-an-torrain who was a cottar and who ventured to marry a man of the name of Sergeant Macdonald?—Yes.

41,236. Did Sir John institute eviction proceedings against this cottar immediately on her marrying the old sergeant?—It was a young woman whom the sergeant married, and, whenever he did marry, Sir John took steps to get the house cleared. He summoned the sergeant to leave the house; he got a charge eight days after the summons was given, and the sergeant thought at the expiry of eight days that people would come to evict him out of the house. Macdonald saw many more strange faces and fiercer faces than were possible to be seen in North Uist, and he was quite prepared for them.

41,237. Had he to defend his young wife that day with the old sword of Balaclava?—I believe it was the fear of the sword that kept them back.

41,238. And is it a fact that Sergeant Macdonald, after fighting for his country for 30 years, was refused a site in his native land by Sir John?—I believe he was refused.

41,239. After going through the whole Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny?—Yes, he pays £1 of rent for the house stance.

41,240. He was one of the "Thin Red Line," was he not?—He was for three years buying horses in the artillery.

41,241. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—You have been telling us of the proprietor interdicting a crofter from building a byre?—He would not allow any of them to erect a byre without his own permission.

Lochmaddy, North Uist.

Donald Maccorquodale.

41,242. You told us that he tried to interdict by process of law a crofter widow from building a byre?—Yes.

41,243. Do you know on what grounds he thought of interdicting her?—I don't know, unless it was that his permission was not asked.

41,244. Do you know whether it was that the proposed house was too good for the holding?—I don't know: perhaps Sir John may not have known of it till the latter end.

41,245. But he did take proceedings against her for trying to build a byre separate from the dwelling-house?—Yes, he did; but the byre was eventually built. When Sir John came to the island and saw the house he gave her permission to build it.

41,246. Was it Sir John who give her permission to build it?—Yes, latterly, I think.

41,247. Did Sir John fight the case in Court to the end?—I believe those representing him were fighting the case in the Court.

41,248. Then you are not accurate in saying it was the estate who gave her permission. Did she not get the permission from the Sheriff?—I think she first got permission from the Sheriff.

41,249. Do you think the Sheriff's permission would not be sufficient?—I think that if the law of the land would not allow it the Sheriff would not permit it to be done.

41,250. And after the law of the land gave her permission, do you think it was necessary that she should get permission from the proprietor?—It seems that is the case.

41,251. Is that the opinion in Uist,—that Sir John is above the law of the land?—I cannot say, but perhaps in some instances his word may be above the law of the land, though known to the generality of people.

ALEXANDER MACLEAN, Cottar, Claddach Carinish (62). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

Alexander Maclean.

41,252. Mr Gordon.—Have you any land along with your house?—No.

41,253. Have you any stock?—I have got one cow, a stirk, and a few sheep.

41,254. Are there more cottars besides yourself in the township?—Four others.

41,255. Have the others any stock?—Yes.

41,256. Do you graze your stock on the lands of the township?—Yes.

41,257. Do you pay any rent to the crofters for the grazing?—No.

41,258. Would you like to get a croft?—Yes.

41,259. Did you hear the evidence given by the previous witnesses?—Yes.

41,260. Do you agree with what they said?—I have nothing to say against anything I heard.

41,261. You concur with all you have heard?—Yes, there is one vacant place that I did not hear mentioned.

41,262. What is the name of it?—Kallin.

41,263. Is it near your township?—Yes, quite near.

41,264. Is it an old crofting township?—There were crofters in Liernish, but there was only a herd in Kallin, together with a few fishermen.

41,265. Kallin is on the island of Grimsay?—Yes.

41,266. How many crofters do you remember being at Liernish?—There were five originally, but I remember only three.

41,267. Do you remember seeing them there?—Yes.

41,268. But you never saw crofters in Kallin?—No.

41,269. Do you think these places would make suitable new holdings for crofters?—Yes, they are some of the best places in the island, because they are near the fishing ground.

41,270. How is the land at Liernish at present occupied?—Balranald has it; it is attached to the hill of Eaval.

41,271. How is the old township of Kallin in Grimsay Island occupied?—Kallin is occupied by Captain Macdonald of Waternish, Skye.

41,272. Who occupies the island of Grimsay; is it not a crofter township?—It is all occupied by crofters.

41,273. Is Kallin upon an island then?—On the east of Grimsay: it is the port of Grimsay, where the steamer calls.

41,274. What extent of land does Captain Macdonald, Waternish, occupy there?—He has the whole of Ronay Island, and he pays a rent of £48, I believe, for what he has in Grimsay at Kallin. [The Secretary.—£42 is the figure in the Valuation Roll.]

41,275. Does the steamer call at Kallin?—Yes.

41,276. Rev. Mr Maccallum.—Had the Grimsay crofters ever possession of Kallin?—I am not aware; not since I recollect.

41,277. Is there a farm-house on it?—Not now, there was a house there.

41,278. When did it fall into the occupation of Captain Macdonald?—About 12 years ago.

41,279. Did the crofters apply for it, or think of applying for it then?—I don't know what they thought, but, at all events, they did not apply for it.

41,280. Is it your opinion that they would be willing to take it now?—That they would.

41,281. Ben Eaval is tenanted by Balranald, I think?—Yes, and Burrival adjacent to it. There were people in Burrival also.

41,282. That is on the south side of Loch Efort?—Yes.

41,283. When did they leave Burrival?—Over 40 years ago.

41,284. Is that a suitable place for a settlement, do you think?—Yes, for a small settlement it would be as good as any place on the island.

41,285. Is there a farm-house on the farm of Eaval?—Only a shepherd's house.

41,286. Is there arable land at the house?—Yes.

41,287. Was that ever tenanted by crofters?—There were crofters there long, long ago; two or three, I think.

WIDOW MARGARET ROBERTSON or MACDONALD, MRS MARGARET MORRISON or MACDONALD, and MISS MARGARET FRASER, Cottars, Claddach Illeray, North Uist.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

41,288. Mr Gordon.—I understand you wish to give evidence? [Widow Macdonald].—Yes, if you please. It is a piece of land that I would like.

41,289. Are you the widow of Archibald Macdonald?—Yes.

41,290. Was he a crofter?—No, a cottar.

41,291. In what township did he live?—In Claddach Illeray.

41,292. Do you still occupy the house there?—Yes.

41,293. How many cottars are in Claddach Illeray?—Seven, altogether.

41,294. Are your two companions the wives of other cottars?—Yes; Margaret Fraser is not a cottar's wife. She is the guardian of a family, and is considered a cottar.

41,295. And do you all wish to get crofts?—Yes.

41,296. Were you in the Court during the forenoon? [Mrs Macdonald].—Yes.

41,297. Did you hear the evidence given by the other witnesses?—Yes, but we did not hear any word about ourselves, and I think our names were omitted from the paper that was sent in.

41,298. There may not be much harm done to you after all, because we have no power to assign land to any person: the purpose of this inquiry is to ascertain if there is a demand for land, and whether there is any land that can be got in this neighbourhood. Now, we have heard a great deal of evidence to-day regarding the desire on the part of the crofters and cottars to get new or enlarged holdings, and they also told us where, in North Uist, they thought new holdings could be got. If you have anything further to tell us we shall be very glad to hear you.—There are two crofts beside us which we are willing to take if we can get them. Lochmaddy, North Uist.

41,299. We may tell whether we think they are suitable places for new holdings, but you understand that we cannot give the crofts: we have not even the same power of enlarging holdings that the Crofters Commission has. We have simply to report to Her Majesty whether there is any available land in this part of the country suitable for crofters and cottars?—We would be very glad to get a piece somewhere near to our houses. Indeed, we would be glad to get a piece from one acre and upwards in any part of Inverness-shire. Widow Margaret Robertson or Macdonald, Mrs Margaret Morrison or Macdonald, and Miss Margaret Fraser.

41,300. There is land in your township which is now unoccupied, and which you think would be suitable for crofts? [Widow Macdonald].—Yes, there is suitable land near us.

41,301. We heard of two crofts at the west of Claddach Illeray, and other two or three crofts formerly occupied by the late doctor at Kirkibost. Now, is there any other land in your neighbourhood besides these two places that you consider suitable for crofts?—We know of none but these three vacant crofts, except a croft at Clachan-a'-ghenip, now in the hands of the proprietor.

41,302. We also heard that there was the island of Kirkibost occupied by Mr Roderick Macaulay?—Yes.

41,303. Is there any other place that you know of in that quarter? [Mrs Macdonald].—The outrun belonging to the crofters could be cut up.

41,304. We are not allowed to touch that: we are distinctly prohibited from interfering with crofters' lands. Have any of you ladies applied to the estate for these vacant crofts you speak of?—No, we did not, because we thought there was no use doing that.

JOHN CAMERON, Claddach Kirkibost, North Uist (60). John Cameron.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

41,305. Mr Gordon.—Are you a crofter or a cottar?—A cottar.

41,306. Did you hear the evidence given by the other witnesses?—Yes.

41,307. Do you concur in what they stated?—Yes.

41,308. Have you anything further to add for yourself?—I was made to leave the house I occupied last year.

41,309. Are you not still residing in Kirkibost?—Yes, I still live at Claddach Kirkibost.

41,310. But not in the house you formerly occupied?—No, in another house.

41,311. Why were you obliged to leave your house?—So as to clear the croft for Roderick Macaulay. My people always lived on that croft.

41,312. Which of the crofts was it you occupied?—The croft beside the doctor's place.

41,313. Is that croft at present vacant?—Yes. It was fenced all round, so that I could not bring peats or water to the house, and I had to leave it. I lived in the house for 60 years.

41,314. Were you warned out of the house?—Yes, by the sheriff-officer. I was only given 14 days to clear from the house, or else it would be pulled down about my head.

41,315. Was there any reason given for putting you out?—To clear the croft for Macaulay. I offered them any rent they liked to ask for a house and a bit of land, but I could not get it.

41,316. Did you apply for the croft from which you had been turned out?—I applied for it several times, but never got it.

41,317. To whom did you apply?—I applied for it to Sir John direct and to his factor; and not only that croft, but any other place, or the stance for a house, offering to pay for it, but I could not get it.

41,318. Mr Donald Macrae, Balallan Cottage, Plockton.—Do you know an old neighbour of yours of the name of Angus Macinnes?—Yes.

41,319. Had he land at one time?—His father had land.

41,320. Did the family lose the land?—Yes.

Lochmaddy, North Uist.
John Cameron.

41,321. How was that?—I cannot say for certain, it was so long ago.

41,322. Has that man been a long time a cottar like yourself?—Since I have known him.

41,323. Was he paying rent for the house stance?—I am not aware.

41,324. How did the estate deal with him?—They put him out of the house.

41,325. By an eviction process?—I think it was by a summary process.

41,326. The man was turned out of the house?—Yes.

41,327. Where did he go to thereafter?—He built a small bothy outside the marsh, on the moorland: nobody ever saw the like of it.

41,328. Had he a family with him?—Yes.

41,329. Did they live in that bothy?—Yes, and still live there.

41,330. Was there an attempt made to evict you out of there?—Yes, several times.

41,331. You have not an inch of land?—No.

Archibald Macdonald.

ARCHIBALD MACDONALD, Cottar, Carinish (about 60).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

41,332. Mr Gordon.—Have you a written statement?—Yes.

CARINISH, NORTH UIST.
25th June 1894.

My Lords, I, Archibald Macdonald, cottar, Carinish, have been chosen by the cottars of Carinish to speak as one of the witnesses for them.

As I cannot speak English very well, I have written down on this paper what I have to say concerning myself and the other cottars, and beg to lay it before my Lords.
